A number of special inspections have been made at the request of the Bureau by officers representing the War Department and sending their reports to it.

In apportioning amongst the officers of the Bureau the work to be performed, it was considered necessary to the proper organization of this office, and believed to be in aid of the speedy dispatch of business, to establish a department of inspection.

To the officer assigned to this department were habitually referred all questions of the character hereinbefore indicated. The complication of the conscript service, growing out of the special legislation of Congress and its close connection with all the various branches of the general service, originated many important questions affecting the practical operation of the enrolling department, which were referred to the Bureau for solution. These questions were of such frequent reference by the officers of conscription as to suggest the assignment in the Bureau of an officer familiar with the working of the system to the duty of giving it constant supervision, that imperfections might be amended, irregularities checked, and such improvements introduced as the necessities of the service called for.

These duties have always been performed by Lieutenant-Colonel Lay except when it was necessary to charge him with some special inspection or other cognate duties, requiring him to make journeys in any of the States.

His absence for some weeks of service in the field during the past summer was permitted, because at that time every officer and private who could be spared from the offices in Richmond were supposed to be necessary to its immediate defense.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,

Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF CONFEDERATE STATES,

September 12, 1864.

Respectfully referred to His Excellency the President.

BRAXTON BRAGG,

General.

[Second indorsement.]

SEPTEMBER 12, 1864.

Returned to General Bragg.

The explanation, if understood, applies to a state of case in which a body of officers would be assigned to duty as inspectors for the Conscript Bureau. This is not practicable, if it be desirable. The post of inspector-general for a bureau is not provided for.

The list of officers which was submitted to show the employment of certain officers in the Conscript Bureau at Richmond presents cases not within the laws and rules governing in such cases and will be presented to the Adjutant-General for the proper action.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

[Third indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF CONFEDERATE STATES,
September 19, 1864.

Respectfully referred to Adjutant and Inspector General.

See remarks of the President. The list of officers referred to was sent by the President to the War Department and has not been again received at this office.*

BRAXTON BRAGG,
General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., September 5, 1864.

Hon. B. H. HILL:

DEAR SIR: Owing to the withdrawal of so many men from South-western Georgia, hitherto the Egypt whence our supplies of subsistence for man and beast have been most largely drawn, and a growing disinclination to sell to the Government at schedule rates for our currency, very serious embarrassments are retarding the collection and delivery of supplies in that quarter at the depots and on the railroads. Extraordinary efforts are now specially necessary to maintain even scant supplies for the armies of both Generals Lee and Hood. Your well-known influence and high position induce me, therefore, to request that, if you can make it at all compatible with your convenience and engagements, you would visit that portion of the State, and by converse and addresses impress on the people the absolute necessity of furnishing and pressing forward the supplies in their possession. When men are wanting on the plantations to make deliveries surely there, as has been so often done in Virginia, the patriotic women (wives and daughters of planters at home) will undertake the duty of expediting deliveries, taking receipts and ordering teams, &c., to transport. Our great difficulty now, I am informed, is that, as might naturally have been expected, the plantations near the lines of road having been exhausted, it is now necessary supplies should be hauled for longer distances. This is fortunately the season of the year when teams can be best spared, and I am sanguine, if the people could be duly impressed with the indispensable necessity of forwarding, the requisite transportation to the railroads could be furnished. Railroad transportation, I am pleased to say, can be commanded, and surely the people will not allow their armies to be dispersed and their homes overrun and spoiled rather than deliver of their means and use their unemployed teams. You can, I am sure, rouse them to a sense of their danger and their duty.

Most truly, yours,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

(Same to Hon. H. V. Johnson, Milledgeville, Ga.)

SPECIAL ORDERS, {	ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 210. }	Richmond, September 5, 1864.
*        *        *	*        *        *

XXIV. The Fourteenth Alabama Battalion Partisan Rangers, Lieut. Col. James C. Malone, jr., and the Nineteenth Alabama

* For list referred to see p. 610.

Battalion Cavalry, Lieut. Col. Z. Thomason, are hereby consolidated, and will constitute the Ninth Regiment Alabama Cavalry.

* * * * *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR.]

SUBSISTENCE BUREAU,
September 5, 1864.

When enacting laws for impressment Congress could not have expected impressing officers as a class to be competent to settle the meaning of the words "value or just compensation," since jurists and political economists have been unable to determine on a definition or principle of ascertaining the just value of an article. Under these circumstances Congress enacted that commissioners, jointly chosen by the Confederate and State Executives, should at intervals fix the value of commodities, as the best mode of settling what was just compensation and thus fulfilling the constitutional requirement in cases of impressment.

The schedules fixed by these boards for the respective States monthly were objected to by certain parties, and the objection sustained, on the ground that value at the time of an impressment could not be determined by rates fixed anteriorly; consequently, in any case of impressment, whether of property in the hands of speculators or producers, the appraisement by neighbors selected by both parties is required; and either party, if not satisfied with the award, can appeal to the joint commissioners. In cases where one-half of the meat which a party had secured for the subsistence of those dependent on him was impressed, in accordance with the law promulgated in General Orders, No. 39, the necessity of promptly supplying him with an equivalent settled the principle that just compensation required the local cost of the article, and such appraisement by neighbors mutually selected, was made final without appeal.

Whenever the local appraisement of a man's surplus exceeds the price fixed by the last schedule of the commissioners in the State by an amount more than to be understood by any superiority of the special articles to the ordinary standard, and no extraordinary changes in the condition of the country have occurred since the last schedule was fixed, then the impressing officer is advised to appeal from the local appraisement to the commissioners as the legally appointed tribunal to settle value, and as in the order of reason the most competent, they having been constantly studying the circumstances which might modify conclusions on this mooted question.

When a party refuses to give information to an impressing agent who exhibits his credentials, the officer shall apply to the officer in charge of the nearest reserve organization, who will be required to enable him to examine into the stock of supplies in the possession of the party refusing information.

When notice of impressment has been given, and the business is only awaiting settlement, if the holder instead of retaining it for the Government refuses to deliver it, or disposes of it otherwise, then the same reserve force shall be invoked and the impressed property seized, or an equal quantity taken from the party, on the ground that he has not alienated what was the Government's, but what he considered his own.

Officers will proceed to impress all the surplus available as rapidly as they can.

Bonded agriculturists are as much in the service as they would have been if not conditionally exempted.

Whenever one of these is found bartering any of his surplus, or selling any to others than the Government or families of officers and soldiers, or at rates other than those prescribed, or is not strictly devoting his whole attention to the production of supplies, evidence of the fact must be at once furnished to the appropriate enrolling officer, and the name of the party and the enrolling officer sent to the Bureau of Conscription. The district attorney shall be furnished with the information preliminary to a prosecution of the offender on his bond.

Officers will also ascertain from the bonded farmers with whom they deal the amount of meat they have contracted to deliver, and how much surplus subsistence they have, and see that one-half goes to the Government.

The Secretary of War will direct that the orders to the enrolling officers and commandants of reserves be given; also that directions to the district attorneys be sent to prosecute promptly all who have not fulfilled the terms of their bonds.

If any man liable to military service who has not been detailed or exempted from such service for any purpose whatever is found engaged in speculation in articles of army subsistence, or engaged in any other business prejudicial to the interests of the Government, it is your duty as one of its officers promptly to report him.

L. B. NORTHROP.

GENERAL ORDERS, }	ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 71. }	Richmond, Va., September 6, 1864.

I. Leaves of absence may be granted by commandants of conscripts to medical officers on conscript duty and employed surgeons, members of examining boards for conscripts, for a period of seven days. If longer leave is desired the application must be referred to the Surgeon-General. If approved by him, leave may be granted by commandants.

II. Paragraph I, General Orders, No. 69, current series, is thus amended:

Purchases of corn, oats, and forage from detailed persons will be made by officers of the Quartermaster's Department, and their powers in respect to such purchases will be the same as those given to the Commissary Department.

III. General Orders, No. 75, 1863, is hereby repealed. The extra pay of men detailed for duty in the several departments in the field will hereafter be regulated according to paragraph 882, Army Regulations.

IV. Physicians employed by contract, whose whole time is given to the public service, will receive the pay and allowances of assistant surgeons.

V. Paragraph V, General Orders, No. 59, current series, is so amended as to authorize generals commanding reserve forces in the respective States to give orders that will carry transportation.

VI. Officers holding appointments in the general staff as assistant adjutants and inspectors general, quartermasters and assistant quartermasters, commissaries and assistant commissaries, surgeons and assistant surgeons, will report by letter to this office with the least delay practicable, setting forth their rank, corps, position, and present assignment to duty, and by what authority assigned; and changes which may hereafter take place in their assignments will in like manner be immediately reported by them to this office. A non-compliance with this order will subject the officer concerned to a discharge from the service.

VII. Paragraphs III and V, General Orders, No. 34, current series, are thus amended:

If the Board find the soldier fit for duty in any department of the service it will not retire him immediately, but will forward their certificate of disability and the form of retirement, signed by the Board, through the Headquarters of the Army to this office for its approval. If the soldier be absent from his command the certificate and form may be forwarded directly to the Adjutant and Inspector General.

VIII. Commanders of departments and armies are prohibited from granting leaves of absence to officers who report directly to the bureaus to which they respectively belong.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., September 6, 1864.

Maj. CORNELIUS BOYLE,
Gordonsville, Va.:

SIR: I beg leave to invite your attention to the inclosed copy of a letter* from Governor Smith, containing suggestions relative to the transportation of supplies for individuals, neighborhoods, and merchants of the State, and to inform you that these suggestions are concurred in and adopted by the Department.

By order of Secretary of War:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES,
Richmond, September 7, 1864.

His Excellency President DAVIS,
Richmond:

MR. PRESIDENT: I send you a copy of my last inspection report of the conscript service in Georgia.† These reports have all been sent to the War Department as received. Though quite defective and especially wanting in details by which errors could be corrected, they develop a startling state of our affairs in our conscript service. The want of results, too, of which General Lee complained to you is calculated to confirm this conclusion. From Alabama and Mississippi the accounts, as far as received, are equally unsatisfactory. Stern, rigid administration can correct the evil; nothing else will. A complete renovation of the Bureau and its ramifications will be indispensable. These were my impressions when I commanded an army. They are General Lee's now, and the reports confirm our conclusions.

* See August 31, p. 615.

† Not found.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

BRAXTON BRAGG,

General.

[Indorsement.]

SEPTEMBER 12, 1864.

General Preston for perusal and remarks with a view to remedy.

J. D.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 212. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, September 7, 1864.

* * * * *

XXXI. The chief of the Signal Corps will at once report to the Bureau of Conscription the names of all the employés of the Signal Corps who are not members of any existing organization, that they may be enrolled and detailed for the performance of the duties upon which they are now engaged.

* * * * *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

[SEPTEMBER 7, 1864.—For Milton to Davis, in relation to raising troops for the defense of Florida, and inclosing address to the people of the State (July 30, 1864), and General Orders, Nos. 11 and 14 (July 30 and Sept. 2, 1864), see Series I, Vol. LIII, p. 370.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

Richmond, September 8, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War:

SIR: Proposals have recently been made to the President and accepted by him for the emigration to our country of large numbers of Polish exiles, as well as for some hundreds of Scotchmen who are disposed to take part in our struggle.

I have accordingly sent instructions to Europe under which a passage to our country via Matamoras will be afforded to all able-bodied men who desire to emigrate to the Confederacy, and further instructions have been sent to Mr. Richard Fitzpatrick, our commercial agent at Matamoras, to forward them to Texas and probably to Brownsville.

The instructions are that all such as may choose to volunteer in our service will have an acquittance for the passage money; all others will be compelled to pay the price of the passage, and will then be in the condition of other residents of the Confederacy, and subject to its laws, which require all residents to aid in the defense of the country.

Promise has been given that those Poles who volunteer will be allowed to organize themselves into companies, battalions, and regiments, and elect their officers in the first instance, and that they will, if possible, be kept in one corps, and organized into Polish brigades and divisions, if their numbers are sufficient.

My purpose in now addressing you is to request that you will give such information and issue such orders to the military authorities in the Trans-Mississippi District as will secure a proper reception of these emigrants when forwarded from Matamoras by Mr. Fitzpatrick, as well as a faithful observance of the promises held out to them.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. P. BENJAMIN,
Secretary of State.

[First indorsement.]

SEPTEMBER 10, 1864.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

Let a copy of this letter be sent to General E. K. Smith, with instructions to conform his actions to the arrangements communicated. Ask acknowledgment, and till received continue to send duplicates by your couriers.

J. A. S.,
Secretary.

[Second indorsement.]

File. Copy sent General Kirby Smith September 15, 1864.

J. W. R[IELY],
Assistant Adjutant-General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, September 8, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I beg to hand you copy of the statement which I had the pleasure to lay before you some days since showing the amount of funds appropriated by Congress for the support of the Army for the half year ending June 30, 1864, and also the amounts appropriated for each bureau under the War Department, with the relative proportion which each bureau will be entitled to draw from Treasury according to the ratio of appropriations, assuming the issue to be $50,000,000 monthly. To this statement I have attached a list showing the amount asked for by this department, and statement by dates and amounts of the sums placed to the credit of the officers and agents, and which upon examination I regret to say will exhibit a very large and alarming deficiency in the sum supplied, the effect of which if continued will paralyze its efficiency. This statement is submitted, therefore, in the hope that you will at once adopt measures to insure in future the issue of funds adequate to the wants of the department and in ratio with the appropriation as made by Congress.

Amounts appropriated by Congress to meet the expenditures of the various bureaus of the War Department for six months, from January 1 to June 30, 1864, viz:

Quartermaster-General's Department.....		$320,028,745
Subsistence Department.....	$57,988,000
Ordnance Department.....	23,000,000
Medical Department.....	15,420,000
Engineer Department.....	10,000,000
Niter and Mining Bureau.....	9,500,000
		115,908,000
Total War Department.....		435,936,745

On the 17th of February, 1864, when the above appropriation became available, the following balances were on the books of the Treasury to the credit of the departments, being balance of appropriations for half year ending 31st of December, 1863, viz:

Quartermaster-General's Department.....	$384,800.66
Subsistence Department.....	65,033,739.38
Ordnance Department.....	29,245.14
Medical Department.....	14,500.25
Engineer Department.....	19,454.10
Niter and Mining Bureau.....	1,599,842.32
Total.....	67,081,081.85

If these balances be added to the appropriations first named then there will be subject to the draft, viz:

Quartermaster-General's Department.....	$320,413,045.66
Subsistence Department.....	$123,021,739.31
Ordnance Department.....	23,029,248.14
Medical Department.....	15,434,500.25
Engineer Department.....	10,019,434.10
Niter and Mining Bureau.....	11,099,842.32
	182,604,784.12

Appropriations, including balances..... 503,017,829.78

The last two statements are not essential to my purpose, which is to show the Secretary the proportion of remittances monthly to which each bureau is entitled, taking the appropriations made by Congress as the guide and the amounts to be issued monthly by the Treasury as the sum to be desired. Under this view the departments will be entitled to receive monthly, as follows:

Quartermaster-General's Department.....	$36,705,869.51
Subsistence Department.....	6,650,964.92
Ordnance Department.....	2,637,997.40
Medical Department.....	1,768,605.21
Engineer Department.....	1,146,955.39
Niter and Mining Bureau.....	1,089,607.62
Total.....	50,000,000.05

The above being the largest sum the Secretary of the Treasury authorized to be paid monthly as per his letter of the 4th of April, 1864.

In conformity with the above instructions the Quartermaster-General submitted requisitions for the following amounts, viz:

April.....	$28,045,744.19
May.....	32,378,000.00
June.....	7,192,681.00
July.....	41,972,562.30
August.....	21,033,113.45
Total.....	130,622,478.94

Of this sum there has been signed by the Secretary of the Treasury, viz:

April.....	$10,730,500.00
May.....	8,062,244.19
June.....	28,041,000.00
July.....	20,615,059.00
August.....	26,186,543.80
Total.....	93,635,346.99

Leaving unsigned in Treasury Department $36,987,131.95.

Restricting the issue of funds by the Treasury to $50,000,000 per month, then, according to the ratio of appropriation, say $36,705,-869.52, the Quartermaster-General was entitled to receive from 1st of April, 1863, $183,529,347.55 to 31st of August, inclusive.

Deduct amount actually asked for same period.....	$132,622,478.94
Drawn for less than entitled to by .....	52,906,868.61

Again the Quartermaster-General was entitled to draw for same period .....	183,529,347.55
Now deduct the amount actually signed by the Secretary of the Treasury for same time.....	93,635,346.99

Leaving him entitled to draw.....	89,894,000.56
-----------------------------------	---------------

It will be seen by the foregoing figures that this Bureau has not received anything like the proportion allotted to it by Congress, and the want of the funds due it is fast bringing this branch of the Government into discredit. The embarrassment is daily growing more serious.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, SUBSISTENCE DEPT.,
Richmond, September 8, 1864.

General S. COOPER,
Adj. and Insp. Gen. C. S. Army, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: In reply to circular of July 1, 1864, from your office, I have the honor respectfully to report that the law and orders have been entirely complied with by this Bureau. On the day of the publication of General Orders, No. 26, promulgating the act of Congress approved February 17, 1864, entitled "An act to organize forces to serve during the war," the circular of which a copy is herewith inclosed was issued from this Bureau with the approval of the Honorable Secretary of War. It was not expected that many men would be sent back to the Army, for the enrolling officers throughout the country had been for months before active in this matter, and in consequence of instructions from this Bureau its officers had already returned all who could be given up without detriment to the public service. On the 27th of June a circular was sent to the chief commissaries of the States directing them to send in at once lists of the men returned to the Army since April 10. After the receipt of your circular of July 1 this order was repeated by telegraph. These reports, in consequence of difficulties of communication, have been received but lately. The number of men returned to the Army in the States on this side of the Mississippi River is 293. The rolls of them are on file in this Bureau and will be forwarded to you if desired. I deem it proper to add that since the issue of the instructions of the Secretary of War requiring the certificate of the chief of bureau as to the necessity for the detail of any conscript, the certificate has in all cases been furnished; and since blanks have been furnished by the Bureau of Conscription, the descriptive lists required have been filled up so far as possible. It is, however, respectfully submitted that these descriptive lists could be more easily and accurately filled up by the local enrolling officer at the time of delivering the details. On inquiry at the Bureau of Conscription no information could be obtained as to the number of men who had been relieved from duty with staff officers at posts and turned over to the enrolling officers, nor did it appear that there existed any means of securing such information. In consideration of this fact it is respectfully asked on what ground the statement was made that this military bureau had not complied with the requirements of the law. It is not improper to add, as showing the entire compliance of the Commissary-General with the spirit as well as the letter of the law, that immediately after the enactment of the conscription law all able-bodied clerks in his own office were discharged and their places supplied with disabled soldiers and conscripts. I respectfully request that this report may be forwarded to His Excellency the President, by whose direction the circular was issued.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. B. NORTHROP,
Commissary-General.

[Inclosure.]

BUREAU OF SUBSISTENCE,
Richmond, March 1, 1864.

MAJOR: In respect to the apprehended inconvenience and disorder consequent on the effects of the law relating to the character of the employés hereafter to be allowed in our department, I have to say that it is not to be expected that an officer is going to violate that law, which is to be enforced with such a penalty, but that he will to the utmost of his ability endeavor to comply with it; and that when it is impossible to substitute fitting men, and that the alternative is to destroy the success of his operations and the working of his machinery, then on such timely representation by him it will be incumbent on the Executive, through his deputy, the Secretary of War, to extend the period beyond the 10th of April (the limit now fixed) to a more remote period, and to allow the retention of indispensable men. The Executive or Secretary will thus show that all efforts have been made by him and his subordinates to observe the law to the utmost extent that is possible consistent with his paramount duty, which is to furnish munitions of war and defend the country and keep the Army in the field. It is no time to give up and say that ruin will follow on the removal of our trained men. Let us all do our best to comply with the law, and call on the War Department to do its part as the cases are presented. Instructions for your action conformable to the above have been given to sustain you. I deem it proper to state what we have a right to expect.

L. B. NORTHROP,
Commissary-General.

Approved.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

CIRCULAR } CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
No. 30. } WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., September 9, 1864.

Commandants of conscripts will instruct county enrolling officers to proceed diligently, with the aid of the temporary boards, to make a complete registration of every white male resident in their respective counties between the ages of seventeen and fifty years not actually serving in the Army in the field or with the reserves.

The name, age, occupation, physical condition of the persons registered, together with the ground of exemption or detail, or other reason for not being in active military service, will be stated in these registers. Special care will be taken in stating distinctly, though briefly, the causes which prevent the persons from being sent to the Army, and not to omit any person from the registration not serving in the Army in the field or with the reserves. These registers must be forwarded to the Bureau before the 15th of October next. To accomplish the work in due time enrolling officers and temporary boards are enjoined to use the utmost vigor and diligence. The information to be thus furnished is regarded as of great importance, and the service must be accurately as well as promptly performed.

Another and separate register will be at the same time prepared and forwarded of all youths in each county who will attain the age of seventeen years during the next twelve months. In this last-named register will be stated the months when these youths will attain the age designated.

By command of Brig. Gen. John S. Preston, superintendent:

C. B. DUFFIELD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, September 9, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: In obedience to your order of reference on the inclosed paper,* I have the honor to report:

First. The first item of General Bragg's indorsement is as follows:

An able-bodied colonel has for two years done office duty, whilst his regiment has been on hard field service in the Army of Virginia. The duty could be as well performed by a disabled officer, of whom we have so many. In that event this colonel might see a little field service yet before the war is over and learn something of the rules of discipline and respect for his superiors, of which he appears to be much in need from the inclosed copy of a letter recently addressed to this office.

Col. T. P. August, Fifteenth Virginia Regiment, was wounded at the battle of Malvern Hill, July 1, 1862. Before he had reported for duty after that wound he became the subject of a pre-existing disease, which was exacerbated by active service, and which incapacitated him for service in the field. He was assigned in January, 1863, as commandant of conscripts for the State of North Carolina. He has been in the conscription service since that date, never having been at any time capable of field duty. His present condition is indicated by the accompanying surgeon's certificate. It has been his condition within my personal knowledge since November, 1863, the date of his assignment to duty in the Bureau at Richmond. I have regarded him as extremely liable to die at any moment from the effects of the disease which caused his assignment. He is not physically competent to one hour's service at the head of his regiment, and never will be.

Colonel August is a lawyer of eminent ability and of high repute in the State of Virginia. He is an officer of distinguished gallantry, shot down at the head of his regiment, leading them in an assault on the breastworks at Malvern Hill. The comment on the letter of Colonel August is not deemed a proper subject for remarks by a subordinate officer.

* See Lay to Bragg August 29, p. 609.

In the duties with which he has been charged in this Bureau he has exhibited a zeal, earnestness, and intelligence which have been of eminent advantage to its operations. With his skill, acquired by two years' experience, his great industry, and intelligence, I am confident at this period of our struggle his place could not be fully supplied in the department to which he is allotted—that of acting upon applications for agricultural exemptions and details and investigating and reporting on the law and evidence of the thousands of cases submitted to the Bureau.

Second. The second item is:

The officer charged with the duty of general inspection does not seem to devote much time to it. He has been in this city since March, except when absent as a volunteer on General Beauregard's staff for a short time. I have called for the reports of his inspections, but received none.

The officer charged with the duty of general inspection is Lieutenant-Colonel Lay, and he has devoted his whole time to that duty, except when, with commendable patriotism, he asked permission to go to the army for a time as a volunteer aide to General Beauregard. It was at the time when every employé of the Government in Richmond who could be spared was called to aid in its defense. His duties as general inspector demand his presence at the Bureau continuously, except when sent on special inspection. The inspection department of the Bureau is not more distinct in its functions than that of any other department. It is the assignment of an officer to the charge of such matters as seem pertinent to inspection service. He makes no formal reports, but is in daily conference with the superintendent, his work forming portions of the current business of the Bureau. Besides this, this officer participates in much of the general business of the Bureau.

Third. The third item is:

The duties assigned Lieutenant Goldthwaite seem to be too important to be intrusted to so young a man without experience, and could better be performed by some older and good soldier disabled by wounds.

The duties assigned to Lieutenant Goldthwaite are of the gravest importance, and I am confident there is not an officer in the service more competent to perform them. He is twenty-four years of age, thoroughly educated, by profession a lawyer, and a man of very remarkable intellectual endowments. His earnest zeal, his untiring industry, his high and lucid intellect, fit him most admirably for the duties of examining into and deciding the important and intricate matter of general details of which he has charge. They are not matters of military law or usage, but of personal right and public necessity. His function is to examine and report for the action of the superintendent, under the instructions of the Secretary of War.

Fourth. The general allegation of the indorsement is that the organization is "defective and inefficient."

It is not properly within my province to attempt a refutation of this allegation. The organization was instituted by the Secretary of War in December, 1862, for the purpose of executing functions devolved on him by law. It has been continued since as a part of the War Office, under the immediate supervision of the Secretary, with a few unsubstantial and merely nominal changes.

I have recommended certain radical changes in the suggestion that some of the officers should be selected and commissioned for this duty, and nominal changes in the adjustment of the rank and gradation of the officers attached to the Bureau. These suggestions and others were submitted to Congress in the forms of bills for the organization of the conscription department and were not adopted, but the organization left as the Secretary of War had established it.

If there is inefficiency in the organization it arises solely from the defects I have alluded to, and not from the principle on which it is based. That principle is simply that the recruiting of the armies should be placed under organizations separate and distinct from the command of the armies in the field. Every departure from this principle has proved detrimental to the service, and has seriously and disastrously impeded the execution of the conscription laws and the maintenance of the conscription policy of the Government. The acts of Congress of April and October, 1862, and February, 1864, do not mean merely the gathering and enlistment of men, but they mean the selection from certain classes of citizens of those who, in the judgment of the law and Executive, can be spared from the necessary industrial pursuits to go into the armies. And it is to make this selection by close and enlightened investigation into the whole condition of the country, in view of the public necessity, that the Secretary of War, with consummate skill, organized a system of partly military and partly civil tribunals. It is regular, orderly, and in perfect consonance with the sentiment of our people and the genius of our institutions, and has a peculiar adaptation to the existing public exigency.

This Bureau is but one tribunal in the ascending scale which reaches through it and the Secretary of War up to the President. The legally defined relations of the citizens to the military service and the development and maintenance of the resources of the country are submitted to these tribunals. In my judgment the system has done more to fill the armies and at the same time to maintain the resources of the country than any other which can be devised. If adhered to, the slight defects in the organization of this Bureau are easily remedied by the changes I have ventured to suggest. If the recruiting of the armies is placed under the control of the States or of military commanders it will fail, and the effort will be disastrous to the whole conscription policy of the Government.

It is alleged that the existing defects and inefficiency of this Bureau "explain, to a great extent, the invariable reports of inspectors that the duty of putting men in the Army is retarded by the want of prompt action on applications and appeals." If it is meant by these reports that there is want of prompt action in this Bureau on applications and appeals the reports are simply untrue. I make the assertion, without qualification, that there is no department of the Government in which applications and appeals are discharged with the promptness and dispatch that they are in this Bureau. I doubt if these inspectors can cite a case in which the lack of such prompt action by this Bureau as is warranted by the circumstances has retarded the duty of putting men in the Army. The assertion is based on uninformed conjecture. Officers who are totally ignorant of the grave and solemn duties devolved on the conscription authorities—duties embracing the entire sphere of the civil, social, and military economy of the citizen and the Government; ascertaining, developing, and maintaining the military capabilities of the country for the defense of the public liberty and preservation of social order; investigating and deciding personal and civil rights—are sent to inspect and report upon the organization for and the administration of these duties. It does not seem reasonable to predicate competency for this service of uninformed officers temporarily assigned to it. In the present case they have certainly failed to report correctly.

It is cited, in further proof of the defective and inefficient organization of this Bureau, that there have been three acting superintendents of this Bureau within a few days. The superintendent was absent by leave of the Secretary of War—his first leave since August, 1861. Colonel August, the acting superintendent, was ill in bed of the disease which causes his assignment to office duty. Lieut. Col. Lay, the officer next in rank, was accidentally absent two or three days with his sick family, and the papers thus happened to be signed by the executive officer of the Bureau, Captain Duffield. I cannot think the inference fairly deducible from this purely accidental, temporary, and very unusual condition of the office.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

[Inclosure.]

OFFICE MED. EX. BOARD, "PRIVATE QUARTERS,"

Richmond, September 8, 1864.

We certify that we have carefully examined Col. T. P. August, Fifteenth Virginia Infantry, Corse's brigade, and find him suffering with organic stricture of the urethra, with very great enlargement of the prostate gland and consequent irritation of bladder and kidneys, which have probably existed for four or five years, and within the last twelve months all attempts to introduce an instrument into the bladder have failed. In consequence of these affections we believe him totally and permanently disabled for field service and only capable of light duty.

O. A. CRENSHAW,
Surgeon, Provisional Army, C. S.
JAMES BOLTON,
Surgeon, Provisional Army, C. S.
WM. S. SCOTT,
Surgeon, Provisional Army, C. S.

Camp guards, supporting force, &c., in conscript service in the several States.

	Officers.	Non-commissioned officers.	Privates.	Total.
VIRGINIA.
Camp guard .....	4	17	186	207
Disabled soldiers assigned under paragraph V, General Orders, No. 96, 1862. ....		12	64	76
Conscripts assigned under section 8, act of Congress approved February 17, 1864, unfit for field service. ....			1,003	1,003
Conscripts (able-bodied), 18 and 45. ....			17	17
Conscripts (reserves) .....			131	131
Total .....	4	29	1,401	1,434

Camp guards, supporting force, &c.—Continued.

	Officers.	Non-commissioned officers.	Privates.	Total.
NORTH CAROLINA.
Camp guard .....			65	65
Two companies organized under section 3, paragraph XIX, Bureau of Conscription, Circular No. 8 (composed of reserves and men unfit for field service).....	8	16	178	202
Disabled soldiers assigned under paragraph V, General Orders, No. 96, 1862.....			8	8
Total.....	8	16	251	275
SOUTH CAROLINA.
Camp guard .....			72	72
Disabled soldiers assigned under paragraph V, General Orders, No. 96, 1862.....	4	21	106	131
Conscripts assigned under section 8, unfit for field service.....			38	38
Total.....	4	21	216	241
GEORGIA.
Camp guard .....		12	110	122
Six companies organized under section 3, paragraph XIX, Circular No. 8, Bureau of Conscription (composed of reserves and men unfit for field service).....	24	50	394	468
Disabled soldiers, paragraph V, General Orders, No. 96, 1862.....	2	4	16	22
Total.....	26	66	520	612
ALABAMA.
Six companies. These companies were organized by General Pillow, but all persons between 18 and 45 fit for duty have been taken out.....	21	47	356	425
MISSISSIPPI.
Camp guard .....	4	10	54	68
Two companies composed of reserves and men unfit for field duty, by section 3, paragraph XIX, Bureau of Conscription, Circular No. 8.....	8	18	124	150
Total.....	12	28	178	218
EAST TENNESSEE AND KENTUCKY.
Camp guard .....			39	39
Supporting force, unfit for field service.....			15	15
Total.....			54	54

SEPTEMBER 9, 1864.

RICHMOND, VA., September 10, 1864.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:

My son, Custis B. Jones, is employing his leisure hours on statistical estimates of the men and resources of the Confederate States, a labor he likes. I take the liberty of sending you one of them, which at least indicates his confidence in our ability to continue the defense, &c.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

J. B. JONES.

[First indorsement.]

Respectfully forwarded to the War Department for file.

BURTON N. HARRISON,

Private Secretary.

[Second indorsement.]

In these tables consideration is not taken of the mortality occasioned by the casualties of the war. That mortality cannot be exactly ascertained in consequence of the absence of reports.

It is probable that for the four years it would average 50,000 per annum.

There are in captivity some 55,000 of our troops, and the permanently disabled probably amount to 50,000.

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va.

OUR AVAILABLE MEN.

The following calculations in reference to the available military strength of certain States of the Confederacy are based upon the census report of 1850. The States in regard to which statistics have been omitted are either wholly or chiefly within the enemy's power and can scarcely be considered open to the introduction of any conscription law or organized system of recruiting:

TABLE 1.—White males between the ages of fifteen and fifty in the year 1850.

States.	Whites.	Males between 15 and 50.
Virginia .....	894,800	212,686
North Carolina .....	553,028	125,851
South Carolina .....	274,563	64,313
Georgia .....	521,572	120,262
Florida .....	47,203	12,750
Alabama .....	426,514	101,746
Mississippi .....	295,718	73,450
Total .....	3,013,398	711,058

It appears from this that the male population between the ages of fifteen and fifty in the above-named States comprised in 1850 seven-thirtieths of their entire population. Upon the supposition that this is a constant ratio is based the estimate of the number of males between the ages of fifteen and fifty in 1860, as contained in the following table.

The State populations in Table No. 2 are taken from newspaper extracts from the unpublished census in 1860, and are official.

TABLE NO. 2.—White males between fifteen and fifty in 1860.

States.	Whites.	Males between 15 and 50 (about).
Virginia .....	1,097,873	.....
North Carolina .....	679,965	.....
South Carolina .....	308,160	.....
Georgia .....	615,336	.....
Florida .....	81,885	.....
Alabama .....	520,444	.....
Mississippi .....	407,551	.....
Total .....	3,711,220	864,000

The table below gives an estimate of the present population on the supposition that population doubles itself once in forty years. The natural increase for one year would then be one-fortieth, and for four years four-fortieths or one-tenth:

TABLE NO. 3.—White males between fifteen and fifty in 1864 in the States named in the preceding tables.

	Estimated.
Total whites .....	4,000,000
Males between fifteen and fifty .....	934,000

From the preceding estimate of the total white population at least 500,000 must be deducted on account of the enemy's occupation of Western Virginia, North Alabama, and sections of North Carolina, &c. We would then have something over 800,000 as the number of males between the ages of fifteen and fifty in the seven States named. If there be a deduction of 25 per cent. for those between the ages of fifteen and seventeen, casualties of war, &c., there would still remain 600,000 in these seven States available for military purposes at the present time. But probably this deduction would be more than balanced by the number of troops which have been obtained from States in the possession of the enemy and by the influx of refugees from those regions.

---

[SEPTEMBER 10, 1864.—For Brown to Hood, withdrawing the militia of Georgia from the command of General Hood, see Series I, Vol. XXXIX, Part II, p. 826, and for Brown's address to the militia composing the First Division, see Series I, Vol. LII, Part II, p. 735.]

---

SAINT CATHERINES, CANADA WEST,
September 12, 1864.

Hon. J. P. BENJAMIN,

Secretary of State Confed. States of America, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: I addressed you on the 11th of August last, in explanation of the circumstances inducing, attending, and following the correspondence of Mr. Holcombe and myself with the Hon. Horace Greeley. Subsequent events have confirmed my opinion that we lost nothing and gained much by that correspondence. It has at least formed an issue between Lincoln and the South, in which all her people should join with all their might and means. Even his Northern opponents believed, up to the meeting of the Chicago Convention, that the same issue would be decided against him by the people of the United States in November next. All of the many intelligent men from the United States with whom I conversed agreed in declaring that it had given a stronger impetus to the peace party of the North than all other causes combined, and had greatly reduced the strength of the war party. They thought that not even a majority of the Republicans would sustain Lincoln's ultimatum, laid down as his rescript, "To whom it may concern." Indeed, Judge Black stated to us that Stanton admitted to him that it was a grave blunder, and would defeat Lincoln unless he could countervail it by some demonstration of his willingness to accept other terms; in other words, to restore the Union as it was. Judge Black wished to know if Mr. Thompson would go to Washington to discuss the terms of peace, and proceed thence to Richmond, saying that Mr. Stanton desired him to do so, and would send him a safe-conduct for that purpose. I doubt not that Judge Black came at the instance of Mr. Stanton.

Mr. William C. Templeton—professedly an acquaintance of the President, a planter in the Mississippi bottoms and a temporary resident of New Jersey, and reputedly a man of wealth before the war—has been here, representing that C. G. Baylor is in New York and was at the Chicago Convention, claiming to be a peace commissioner from the State of Georgia, duly accredited by Governor Brown, and urging an armistice and convention of States. Templeton wishes to see Mr. Thompson and to urge him to accept a safe-conduct to Washington, which Baylor was authorized to say would be furnished, with a view of arranging such preliminaries for peace. Templeton has gone to Toronto to see Mr. Thompson on the subject. I had no acquaintance with Mr. Templeton before meeting him here. I have known Mr. Baylor well enough not to place implicit reliance upon his statements. Still, as he is walking abroad in New York and traveling ad libitum in the United States, I believe he has been to Washington and has the authority he claims from there. I do not credit his being sent out by Governor Brown.

Templeton said Baylor objected to his communicating the above facts to me, because I was identified with the Davis dynasty, and not likely to agree to any terms of peace that would be unacceptable to the President.

You may have remarked that the New York Times maintains, as by authority, that the rescript declares one mode of making peace, but not the only one. The abler organs of the Administration seize this suggestion and hold it up in vindication of Lincoln from the charge that he is waging war to abolish slavery, and will not agree to peace until that end is achieved. Mr. Seward, too, in his late speech at Auburn, N. Y., intimates that slavery is no longer an issue of the war, and that it will not be interfered with after peace is declared. These and other facts indicate that Lincoln is dissatisfied with the issue he has made with the South and fears its decision.

I am told that his purpose is to try to show that the Confederate Government will not entertain a proposition for peace that does not embrace a distinct recognition of the Confederate States, thereby expecting to change the issue from war for abolition to war for the Union. He thinks a majority of the Northern people will oppose him on the issue he has made, but may support him on that he desires to make. It is thought that he will send commissioners to Richmond in order to develop the ultimatum of our Government.

If he does, it seems to me our true policy is not to make such development, or receive commissioners unless they come duly accredited to make peace, and in that event to demand their conditions and respond to them without suggesting ours. It is well enough to let the North and European nations believe that reconstruction is not impossible. It will inflame the spirit of peace in the North and will encourage the disposition of England and France to recognize and treat with us.

Most of our true friends from the Chicago Convention whom I saw thought it would be very unwise in the South to do anything tending to the defeat of McClellan. They argued thus: "Peace may be made with him on terms you will accept." At all events, he is committed by the platform to cease hostilities and to try negotiations. That is a great concession from him and the war Democracy. An armistice will inevitably result in peace. The war cannot be renewed if once stopped, even for a short time. The North is satisfied that war cannot restore the Union and will destroy their own liberties and independence if prosecuted much longer.

If McClellan be elected the real indebtedness of the Government will be exposed, for his own sake and to damn the Republicans. The war must stop when that is known.

(Judge Black says it is not now less than five thousand millions, and such is the common opinion expressed to me.)

Again, your showing a preference for McClellan will aid him, increase the desire and disposition for peace in the North, and will foster the revolutionary spirit in the Northwest in case of Lincoln's election—which may be effected by force or fraud.

The platform means peace, unconditionally; Vallandigham and Weller framed it. It is recognized as satisfactory by nearly all the delegates at the convention and by the New York News and other peace papers. McClellan will be under the control of the true peace men. Horatio, or T. H. Seymour, is to be Secretary of State; Vallandigham, Secretary of War. McClellan is privately pledged to make peace even at the expense of separation, if the South cannot be induced to reconstruct any common government.

They also assure me that the speeches and the prevailing sentiment of the people at Chicago were for peace unconditionally, and this was the impression of the escaped prisoners there—of whom there were near seventy—with whom I have conversed. They say McClellan was nominated for his availability.

On the other hand, some of our friends expressed a hope that Lincoln will be elected on these grounds:

That McClellan has at West Point and Ticonderoga declared for war till the Union is restored, and can accept peace only with reunion; that he can raise an army and money to carry on the war, but Lincoln cannot; that the Republicans will sustain him in making war, and in addition to them many Democrats; that he will infuse new life, hopes, and vigor into the war party; that foreign nations will wait longer on him than on Lincoln before intervening or recognizing the South; that the platform is in accordance with McClellan's speeches and does not commit him to peace, except on the basis of Union; that Vallandigham betrayed them for the promise of a seat in McClellan's Cabinet; that Lincoln's election will produce revolution in the Northwest—McClellan's will not.

Such are the arguments briefly stated of the peace men who support or who oppose McClellan's election.

Perhaps our true policy is to keep our own counsels, withhold any further declaration of purpose, and let the so-called peace party of the North have no excuse for laying its defeat at our door, if Lincoln should be re-elected. By declaring for Lincoln rather than McClellan, we may divide the friends of the latter into a position of hostility to us as implacable and bitter as that of the Republicans. Yet since reading McClellan's letter of acceptance I see reason for preferring him to Lincoln.

I am induced to think, from the intimations of the peace papers and of individuals, that there will be a considerable minority of the Democracy of the North who will not vote for McClellan, and that they may put up some other candidate. His nomination has not been greeted as cordially as was anticipated, and the Republicans are evidently in better spirits than they were before the convention at Chicago. Perhaps the fall of Forts Gaines and Morgan and of Atlanta may have caused the apparent change of feeling in the North. It is thought those events caused McClellan to ignore the platform or the construction given it by the unconditional peace men in his letter of acceptance. I remember that Doctor Mackay said, during his visit here, about three weeks since, that the Northern people were as unstable and capricious as spoiled children, and that although a large majority seemed resolved on peace, the capture of Richmond or Atlanta would cause most of them to renew their shouts for war. Certainly they are greatly encouraged by those captures and seem persuaded that the end of the "rebellion" is near at hand.

The Republican papers now urge Lincoln to employ all of his Navy, if necessary, to seal up the port of Wilmington, which they say will cut us off from all foreign supplies and soon exhaust our means for carrying on the war.

You may look with confidence to an attack on Fort Fisher ere long. I have been frequently asked by men of Southern birth, residing in the North, whose desire for our independence I do not doubt, whether we could support an army for six months after the port of Wilmington was sealed.

Upon the whole, I am confirmed in the opinion I entertained and often expressed before coming here—that the peace feeling of the North fluctuates with the vicissitudes of the war, increasing with their reverses and diminishing with ours. They will not consent to peace without reunion while they believe they can subjugate us. As to revolution in the Northwest, or anywhere in the United States, I am growing skeptical. The men who gave us strongest assurances of the purpose of the "Sons of Liberty" to rush to arms if any other illegal arrest was made, or any other abuse of private rights committed, are now in prison or fugitives in Canada. Their houses have been broken open, their arms and private papers seized, and other wrongs done them, without exciting anything more than a feeble protest from their friends. The people who would resist such outrages need a leader, and I fear they will not find one. Many of them would join our Army if they could get to it; but they may be forced into that of our enemy. They would resist the draft if they were not deterred by the large police force that is sent to enforce it.

I am assured by those who have been on the Ohio River and the roads leading across it that recruits for the army of Sherman are being sent forward daily. Lincoln will exert his utmost power to sustain Sherman and Grant in their present positions in order to insure his re-election. He knows that a great disaster to either of them would defeat him.

Mr. Thompson will, I presume, explain how the plans for the release of the prisoners failed. He took that matter under his peculiar and almost exclusive control, and I knew scarcely anything of it until everything was determined save the time of execution.

Mr. Holcombe will probably carry this communication to you, and can explain more fully than I can do on paper our operations here. He has remained here at the instance and request of Mr. Thompson and myself to await the result of the enterprise alluded to above. He has co-operated with us earnestly and actively in all our efforts and has sometimes expended the public money in his hands to promote the objects of our mission. Indeed, I am indebted to him for most of the money which I have used; but Mr. Thompson has, since Mr. Sanders was started to Richmond, put in my hands all the funds I asked for and more than I shall probably employ.

When Mr. Holcombe left the result of the measures for the release of our prisoners was not known, and, on that account, he transferred to me the balance of money on deposit to his credit in the bank at this place, that I might use it in affording those who had escaped, or might escape, the necessary transportation to Wilmington. He left here at the instance of Mr. Thompson and myself, for reasons which he will explain.

I have the honor, &c.,

C. C. CLAY, JR.

CIRCULAR } CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
No. 31. } WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., September 14, 1864.

Commandants of conscripts will forthwith order an examination by the medical boards of all non-commissioned officers, privates, and employés in the enrolling service. All such as are ascertained to be fit for field service will thereupon be immediately relieved from duty and returned to their respective commands, or if unassigned conscripts, will be sent to the field under existing regulations.

The requirements of the service forbid the retention in the department of conscription of men capable of performing active service in the field. The superintendent desires that this order be promptly executed, and will regard any attempt by the officers of conscription to evade it by retaining able-bodied men in the enrolling service as a grave dereliction of duty.

Commandants of conscripts will also order an examination by the medical boards of all officers assigned to duty in the conscript department of their respective States, and make report of the status of all such as may be ascertained to be fit for field service, particularly stating therein the name and rank of said officers, and whether the commands to which they belonged have been consolidated with others, or have been disbanded, or have their military organization unchanged.

By command of Brig. Gen. John S. Preston, superintendent:

C. B. DUFFIELD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, September 14, 1864.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS,
President of the Confederation:

SIR: I have the honor to report on the inclosed paper referred to me by Your Excellency "for perusal and remarks with a view to remedy."*

To vindicate Colonel Browne from the aspersions of General Bragg I will have the reports of that officer forwarded to you as soon as they can be consolidated for easier reference. The violent denunciation of the service in charge of Colonel Browne is avowed to be made on defective reports, wanting in those attributes which are necessary for the correction of errors. They are perhaps the reports of ignorant and prejudiced persons sent rather as detectives than as military inspectors. The "accounts from Mississippi and Alabama" are very probably of a like character and credibility, and, together with those from Georgia, are regarded by General Bragg as of sufficient importance to warrant the recommendation to the President that the only remedy is the expulsion from the service of all the officers on duty in this Bureau in these words: "A complete renovation of the Bureau and its ramifications will be indispensable."

* See Bragg to Davis September 7, p. 624.

General Bragg states that when he commanded an army these were his impressions. These impressions of General Bragg were then expressed in the form of an earnest, cordial, and emphatic approval of and active aid to the system instituted in Alabama and Mississippi by General Pillow. That system had employed in those two States over 1,000 officers and over 6,000 men, and as from June, 1863, to January, 1864 (when it was abolished), it did not send one man to the Army of Northern Virginia, it is not presumable General Lee would concur in General Bragg's impressions as to the policy of re-establishing it. Perhaps General Bragg himself would hesitate to recommend that (maintain the proportion throughout the Confederacy) 6,000 officers and 36,000 men should be detached from the Army to do the work of conscription.

The shorter mode of attempting the remedy is the one proposed by General Bragg—its efficiency must be proved by the result.

I therefore respectfully recommend that in pursuance of General Bragg's advice you order "a complete renovation of the Bureau and its ramifications." As the first step toward this renovation and the one evidently aimed at, and most acceptable to General Bragg—indeed, perhaps meeting the whole purpose of his statement and recommendations—I have asked this day instant relief as superintendent of the Bureau, and forwarded the resignation of that high commission you bestowed on me three months ago, after nine months daily observation of my administration of that Bureau—for the efficient renovation of which my ignominious expulsion is now demanded by General Bragg. My commission, and the prompt and unanimous confirmation of it by the Senate, after my reports and my system of administration had been thoroughly discussed and sifted by Congress, is a sufficient vindication from denunciations based on avowedly imperfect and uninformed reports. And I fear it will scarcely be found after the change that a great public policy will be effectively administered simply by expelling a few officers from service and renovating a Bureau.

I venture to suggest that the sudden removal of the officers on duty in the Bureau might be detrimental to the public service. They are familiar with the service, which is somewhat intricate, and have been but my instruments in the condemned system. They will still work patriotically under other auspices.

Having thus adopted and, to the extent I can control it, carried out General Bragg's remedy for the evils of the conscription service, I need not offer any further suggestions concerning it.

I have the honor to be, Mr. President, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., September 14, 1864.

Hon. W. N. H. SMITH,
Murfreesborough, N. C.:

SIR: I have received your letter calling attention to the mischievous and demoralizing effects of the traffic in cotton initiated by the Commissary Bureau and carried on across and beyond the Chowan River. In reply I have the honor to say that the Department cannot concur in thinking the evils as stated by you as resulting to the extent supposed from the trade established by the Commissary-General, and its results have really been so satisfactory in affording supplies that I am not, without further developments and inquiries, prepared to prohibit its continuance.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
 No. 72. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., September 15, 1864.

Private letters or communications relative to military marches and operations are frequently mischievous in design, and their publication generally injurious to the military service. They are, therefore, strictly forbidden; and any officer or soldier, or other person serving with the armies of the Confederate States in the field, who shall be found guilty of making such communication for publication, or placing the writing beyond his control, so that it finds its way to the press before one month after the termination of the campaign to which it relates, shall be punished, according to the degree of his offense, by the sentence of a court-martial.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, SUBSISTENCE BUREAU,
Richmond, September 15, 1864.

The following have been adopted as the regulations governing officers of the Subsistence Department in the issuing, receiving, and shipping of subsistence stores:

An officer issuing stores shall deliver or transmit promptly to the receiving officer an exact list of them in duplicate invoices, stating the number of packages and the gross, tare, and net weight. He shall see that the gross, tare, and net weight are distinctly marked on each package. He shall see that the number of packages and gross, tare, and net weight are distinctly marked on the transportation invoice, waybill, or bill of lading. He shall take from the quartermaster or railroad agent in charge of transportation duplicate receipts corresponding with the transportation invoice. If he fails to receive from the receiving commissary a receipt corresponding with the invoice forwarded to that officer, he shall forward to this Bureau, with his provision return, one of the duplicate receipts of the quartermaster or railroad agent as evidence that the shipment was made. If the forwarding commissary fails to pursue this course he shall be held responsible for any loss or damage sustained, unless it can be proven that the loss or damage resulted from no negligence on his part.

The receiving officer shall return promptly to the issuing officer duplicate receipts for such amounts as are actually received by him.

If the officer to whom stores are forwarded has reason to believe them miscarried, he shall promptly inform the issuing officer, the quartermaster, or railroad agent whose duty it was to forward the stores, and the bureau of the department to which the property appertains.

When stores received do not correspond in amount or quality with the invoice, they will be examined by a board of survey; or if that is impracticable, he shall take the certificate of one or more commissioned officers; or if that is impracticable, he shall take the affidavit of one or more disinterested parties as to the condition of the stores when received and the amount of loss sustained, and this report will be communicated to the proper bureau, to the issuing commissary, to the quartermaster or railroad agent forwarding the stores, and to the officer authorized to pay the transportation account. If the receiving officer fails to pursue this course he shall be held responsible for the full amount of the shipment. Damages recovered from the carrier or other party liable will be refunded to the proper department.

Commissaries will, when large shipments are made in succession, cause each package to be marked in such a manner as will enable the receiving officer to distinguish the different shipments, and will notify him of the particular mark.

By direction of the Commissary-General:

S. B. BREWER,

Major and Commissary of Subsistence.

CIRCULAR.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., September 15, 1864.

The circular issued from this office on September 1, 1863, regulating the transportation of public stores is hereby revoked and this circular will be adopted in its stead.

It will be the duty of each quartermaster to require one of his clerks to superintend the receipt and forwarding of all supplies consigned to him, for which he will furnish transportation, on the accompanying form only, over the road running from his post to the connecting road, this form, or bill of lading, being the order for transportation, waybill, and receipt, upon which the railroad is to collect its freight charges, and no other voucher will be accepted for through freight. The bills of lading to be signed in quadruplicate by the receiving road, two to be turned over to the consignor (thus doing away with the necessity of an exchange of receipts between the shipping quartermaster and the consignor, and enabling the consignor to settle his accounts directly with the Auditor by producing the railroad receipts), one to be retained by the railroad, and the other to be forwarded to the next quartermaster to whom the receiving road is required to deliver, which being done he will sign the receipt upon their bill of lading, showing the number of packages received, whether in good or bad order, and, if any, how many are missing, and furnish the connecting road with a separate set of bills for goods shipped and receipted for by it, and so on to destination.

If any damage or loss occurs the extent and money value will be agreed upon between the quartermaster receiving and a representative of the railroad company, or in the event of their disagreeing these two parties shall call in a third, whose decision shall be subject to the approval of the Quartermaster-General, and the amount of damage or loss shall be expressed on the voucher retained by the railroad company.

This at once fixes the loss and damage, if any, upon the responsible party, prevents a suspension of vouchers, and simplifies payments.

When loss or damage is determined a copy of the voucher, with indorsement showing the same, must be immediately forwarded to the quartermaster auditing the accounts of the responsible road.

The stores must be turned over to the shipping quartermaster upon duplicate invoices, one to be retained by the shipping quartermaster as his authority for furnishing transportation and the other to be forwarded by him with the stores and in charge of the conductors of trains, that each forwarding officer may indorse on the same the number of packages lost or missing, and thereby enable the consignee at once to account for the whole shipment.

It will be the duty of the consignor to send duplicate invoices to the consignee apprising him of the shipment by this department.

Vouchers for local transportation to intermediate points where there is no quartermaster or other authorized officer or agent to receipt for stores will be given as heretofore.

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

[Form of bill of lading.]

GOVERNMENT TRANSPORTATION.

No. —.

Shipped, in good order and condition, by ———, quartermaster, C. S. Army, on the ——— Railroad, at ———, the following stores, viz:

Date.	Articles.	Marks.	Weight.	Original consignor.	Ultimate consignee.	Ultimate destination.

The property of the Confederate States, being marked and numbered as above, and are to be delivered in the like good order and condition, at ——— to the connecting ——— Railroad, unto ———, quartermaster, or his assigns, his or their receipt upon this bill for the same being required to complete the evidence of delivery.

In witness whereof the agent of said ——— Railroad hath affirmed to four bills of lading, all of this tenor and date, one of which being accomplished the others to stand void.

Dated at ———, this ——— day of ———, 186—.

Agent, ——— Railroad Company.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., September 15, 1864.
Maj. Gen. HOWELL COBB,
Commanding Reserves in Georgia:

GENERAL: The condition of the currency of the Confederate States and the cupidity of many of the producers of provisions compel the military authorities to resort to impressment as a means to provide for the immediate wants of the Army, and to accumulate stores for their prospective supply. The authority for this is contained in the acts of Congress published in Orders No. 37, of the series of 1863; Orders No. 30 and Orders No. 39, of the current series, and in the regulations accompanying these acts, and contained in these orders.

The Department regards the act of impressment as an appropriation of the property for the use of the Confederacy, and that it is the duty of the owner, his agent, or bailee to co-operate frankly in the measures necessary to adjust the price and for the transfer of the property to the Confederate officers. Congress has supposed that there would be none so regardless of his public duty in this period of calamity and danger as to oppose or frustrate these measures. It has, however, sometimes happened that this expectation has been disappointed, and that concealment, evasion, and clandestine removal of the property impressed have been resorted to to defeat impressment.

The Department instructs you that whenever an officer of one of the departments of supply, who is authorized to make impressments under the orders of this Department, shall certify to you that a citizen refuses to give information of the supplies liable to impressment that he may have in his possession; that he conceals or removes such property, or that he withholds the property and refuses to take suitable measures under the acts of Congress and regulations for the adjustment of the price, to furnish the necessary military assistance, and to make the impressment operative and effectual.

The Department admonishes you to see that the force employed is no larger than is strictly necessary; that the proceeding be conducted with the caution and care that would mark the execution of civil process; that the owner be informed and advised by you or your officers of his duty and yours in the matter intrusted to you, and that moderation, good temper, and firmness should characterize your actions under this order.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

(Same to General J. L. Kemper, in Virginia; General James Chesnut, in South Carolina; General T. H. Holmes, in North Carolina; General Withers, in Alabama, and General Brandon, in Mississippi.)

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES,
Richmond, September 15, 1864.

Lieut. Gen. RICHARD TAYLOR,
Meridian, Miss.:

GENERAL: By direction of General Bragg I herewith inclose unofficial report of Capt. Samuel S. Harris, assistant adjutant-general, for your information.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
ROBT. STRANGE,
Major and Aide-de-Camp.

[Inclosure.]

JACKSON, MISS., September 7, 1864.

General BRAXTON BRAGG,
Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: In the course of the tour of inspection made by Maj. B. F. Jones and myself in the State of Mississippi many facts relating to the condition of this portion of the country have presented themselves and are of sufficient importance, I think, to merit your particular attention. In pursuance of your verbal instructions given to me at Montgomery I respectfully ask leave to lay them before you in an unofficial communication.

The condition of Mississippi is truly deplorable in many respects, and the necessity for radical and thorough reforms in the administration of military affairs has everywhere suggested itself. The mass of the people are corrupted and demoralized, and in those regions of the State which lie contiguous to the enemy the disgraceful fact of subjugation is almost completed. In addition to this I believe that the administration of military affairs in some portions of the State has been unfortunate and little calculated to repress the growing evils which abound everywhere. The causes of the demoralization of the people are few and simple, but it must be admitted that they have been singularly effective. Of the natural and unavoidable discouragement produced by the presence of the enemy upon the minds of the people at home I shall say nothing. The chief cause of the present condition of the State, however, is the irregular and unlawful traffic with the enemy that has subsisted for many months and that still goes on with undiminished vigor. There are few persons along our military frontier who have not sold cotton to the enemy. Part of this cotton trade has been authorized by the Government under various contracts. Of the gross evils that have grown out of these I need not speak, as Major Jones has already enlarged upon them.

Another branch of this cotton trade has been carried on under authority from department and district commanders, which I believe to have been wholly unauthorized by the authorities at Richmond. For instance, Colonel Goodman, of this State, now holds a contract entered into between himself and Lieut. Gen. S. D. Lee, the terms of which grant Goodman the right to use Government cotton in exchange for supplies. There are others of the same character approved and authorized by department headquarters.

District commanders have also taken part in this all-engrossing matter. During a long interview which I had yesterday with Brig. Gen. Wirt Adams I was informed by him that he had entered into a contract with one J. J. Smylie to procure certain supplies for his own command. General Adams believes that he has competent authority for this. In this I believe he is mistaken. His only authority, I think, has emanated from department headquarters. I need not suggest the impropriety of allowing such contracts to continue. They demoralize the people, and what is worse still the army, too, and produce no results beneficial to the cause.

General Adams has granted to a few individuals in his district permission to carry private cotton through the lines for the purpose of obtaining supplies. The object of General Adams was undoubtedly a humane one and his motives have been pure, I do not doubt; but the evils that result from such a course are pernicious in the extreme. The dignity and character of our officers and army have been grossly detracted from by rumors of corruption, and the granting of every permit of this character has encouraged all kinds of injurious reports and slanders to be propagated and believed. As a natural consequence the unauthorized sale of cotton to the enemy has been greatly encouraged, few citizens hesitating to assume a privilege which they conceive to have been granted by favoritism to a few. In regard to these irregular and unauthorized transactions with the enemy, and also in relation to irregular permits granted by General Adams, I have the honor to refer you to the inclosed papers, marked Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4. They are the only evidence that is attainable and are entitled to consideration. They certainly prove this fact, if no more, that the administration of affairs here has not been of such a nature as to escape animadversion and even suspicion. For these reasons I respectfully recommend that such instructions be issued to department and district commanders as will prohibit them from authorizing any kind of intercourse with the enemy that is not specially authorized by the authorities at Richmond.

The opinion is widely spread, even among military men, that gross and criminal collusion exists between some of these contractors and cotton agents and the Yankee authorities, and that most of the raids made by the enemy in this portion of the State are made for the specific purpose of carrying off the cotton which said contractors, &c., have placed at convenient places along their route. In illustration of this General Adams told me of a case, the facts of which are these:

Some soi-disant French citizens at Yazoo City entered into a contract with Lieutenant-General Lee to furnish certain supplies in exchange for cotton. One hundred and twenty-nine bales of this cotton were sent to Yazoo City to await the arrival of the supplies that were due on a certain day. On the very day on which these supplies were to have reached Yazoo City a large force of the enemy moved out to that point with the evident purpose of seizing the cotton, and this was done at the instigation of the above-named French contractors, who boasted that they would thus get the cotton without the necessity of paying for it. Fortunately the cotton was destroyed by General Adams. There is no doubt, however, that the same thing has often been done in the State, and many times, with entire success.

It may be asked why the system of unauthorized blockade-running, already alluded to, has not been suppressed by the military authorities. The main reason I believe to be this: Along our lines there are many companies of "independent scouts," who have occupied their present positions and discharged their present duties so long that they have become notoriously corrupt and inefficient. They have their price, and the blockade-runners know well how to pay it. "A pair of boots and a bottle of whisky" will scarcely ever fail, I am informed, to secure a passage for a load of cotton through the lines. Nor does this apply to "independent scouts" alone. The practice of detaching companies of cavalry and keeping them on duty along the line as scouts for a long time is productive of precisely the same results. In relation to this I respectfully ask your attention to the inclosed papers.

In view of these evils—and I cannot overdraw them—I respectfully suggest that all companies of "independent scouts" be abrogated, and that these commands be placed upon the same footing as other commands in the field, and that in future commanding officers be required to change the scouts and pickets in their front at least once in every two weeks, making regular details for the purpose.

The effects of this cotton trade with the enemy can hardly be estimated or understood by one who has not witnessed them. The fact is that cotton, instead of contributing to our strength, has been the greatest element of our weakness here. Yankee gold is fast accomplishing what Yankee arms could never achieve—the subjugation of this people. I seriously believe that we would have been far better off to-day if all the cotton in this department had been destroyed two years ago, and it may yet be necessary for our authorities to illustrate their determination to prosecute to a successful termination this war for our independence, by applying the torch to all the cotton that remains. Many complaints from officers and others have reached me of what is termed the culpable misconduct of some of Mr. De Bow's agents in this State. This "Cotton Loan Agency" has been a mammoth affair in this State, and many abuses and corruptions may have existed without the knowledge of its chief, Mr. De Bow. I respectfully recommend that a thorough inspection and investigation of all its operations be ordered by you.

I respectfully ask your attention to the condition of many of the military posts in this department. Most of the post commanders that I have visited have been badly instructed in the duties of their positions, because the orders and instructions intended for their governance are rarely or never sent to them from department headquarters. I have visited many of these officers who have never received or seen a single order from the Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, and are consequently entirely ignorant of the many important duties enjoined therein. It would seem from this that great negligence exists somewhere. I am forced to the conviction that the administration of this department has hitherto been exceedingly loose and inefficient. An active, energetic, and efficient department commander is greatly needed to bring order out of chaos and to infuse life and vigor into the routine of department business. Such an officer, unencumbered for a time at least by all merely local duties, might soon rescue a productive and important portion of the Confederacy from the many abuses which now oppress and injure it.

In conclusion of this report and at the conclusion, too, of our duties in this State, I trust that the considerations which are urged below will not be considered superfluous and impertinent. In a department like this the duties of an inspector are not only great, but continuous. In order to accomplish the results desired his inspections should not only be minute, but should be repeated at intervals in order to insure the suppression of evils. In fact, the presence of an inspector is necessary almost all the time. The many reasons which support this will suggest themselves at once to you. In view of this I respectfully suggest that a permanent inspector or inspectors be assigned to a certain geographical or military district, composed of not more than two States, whose duty it shall be to accomplish such inspections as you may direct under such instructions and discretion as you may see fit to intrust. The many contracts in this department, and the importance of the quartermaster's and subsistence departments in the States of Alabama and Mississippi, demand the constant presence of an active and energetic inspector at all times. If such a view meets your approbation, I respectfully beg leave to recommend Maj. B. F. Jones for that duty. It is but an act of simple justice for me to give my official testimony to the singular fidelity and efficiency with which he has discharged his duties on this tour of inspection.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

SAM. S. HARRIS,

Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Sub-inclosure No. 1.]

Extract from report of provost-marshal at Raymond for the month of August, 1864.

* * * * *

There is a considerable trade going on between this part of the country and Vicksburg. Blockade-runners still continue to carry through cotton to that place. The scouts on Big Black are apparently very inefficient in the checking of illicit trade with the enemy.

Captain Martin commands the line from Messinger's Ferry to Grand Gulf, and a great many think that blockade-running is winked at by him, and everybody complains of him and blames General Adams for continuing him in command, accounting for his supposed leniency toward Captain Martin on the grounds that he is General Adams' nephew. Be that as it may, cotton continues to go through the lines. Several lots have passed through upon General Adams' passes. One of 140 bales for the asylum, another for Government of seventy bales, and a man named Boone took through seven or eight loads, supposed to be on his own account, about the 1st of the present month. Citizens carry cotton into Vicksburg occasionally, whether with or without his pass am unable to say, but they are generally termed "Adams' pets."

Our scouts soon become demoralized. In many instances the promise of a hat or pair of new boots is a sufficient bribe to buy their permission to pass cotton or anything else through the lines. Time to make the acquaintance of the scouts seems to be all that blockade-runners require.

W. H. OLDHAM,
Captain and Provost-Marshal.

[Sub-inclosure No. 2.]

ENROLLING OFFICE, HINDS COUNTY,
Jackson, Miss., August 9, 1864.

Maj. M. F. BERRY,
Enrolling Officer, 6th Conscription Dist., Enterprise, Miss.:

MAJOR: I have the honor to submit the following statement in regard to R. L. Boone, whose application for exemption I forwarded to your headquarters yesterday, with the statement that the applicant would be sent forward: Yesterday evening I had Boone notified that he must report at this office this morning prepared to go to Enterprise, and gave my guard instructions to arrest him if he failed to comply. (This was before I received your telegram of yesterday.) During the night or this morning Boone started to the enemy's lines, or Vicksburg, with sixteen bales of cotton. When my guard arrested him he produced a permit from General Wirt Adams, granted under authority of Secretary of War, to carry to and exchange with the enemy some thirty bales of cotton for bagging rope and stationery, and also produced permission to pass all guards and pickets unmolested. My guards, thinking they were obliged to obey this order from General Adams, allowed Boone to pass, and I presume that he has gone on to Big Black or Vicksburg.

This will show why Boone has not been sent to Enterprise.

Very respectfully, yours,

JO. H. MILLER,
Enrolling Officer, Hinds County.

[Sub-inclosure No. 3.]

JULY 28, 1864.

I learned this evening from reliable sources that Captain Martin, commanding the line from Messinger's Ferry to Grand Gulf, has been and is at this time allowing cotton to be carried into the enemy's lines. Furthermore, I learned that Captain Martin himself had been transporting cotton across Black lines for the purpose of trading with the enemy.

For evidence you will apply to J. D. Goodwin, Auburn, Hinds County, Miss.

B. S. WHITE,
Lieutenant, Commanding Scouts.

[Sub-inclosure No. 4.]

POST CANTON, MISS., August 22, 1864.

Captain HARRIS,
Inspector:

CAPTAIN: In reply to your inquiry about blockade-running I will state: On or about May 20 I seized a wagon loaded with cotton bound for Vicksburg. On examination I found the parties in possession of papers signed by Brig. Gen. Wirt Adams, allowing them the privilege of carrying the cotton to Vicksburg. I at once presented the said papers to General Adams to know if they were correct. He replied that they were and ordered me to release them.

In regard to A. D. Sheldon, he is at this time absent and I cannot furnish you with a copy of his orders. Inclosed you will find statement of Lieutenant Chilton, enrolling officer for this county, which, in my opinion, is entirely correct.*

I most respectfully call your attention to the condition of the scouts in our immediate front. They are badly demoralized, to say the least of them. Citizens report to me daily that they can go into enemy's lines at the expense of a bottle of whisky or a pair of boots. To my certain knowledge their outfit consists mostly of blockade goods. I am not able to account for this unless they trade directly with the enemy or through the citizens. This being the case, I think a change of scouts would be very beneficial and aid greatly in suppressing trading with the enemy.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. N. ARCHER,
Captain, Commanding Post.

[Sub-inclosure No. 5.]

DISTRICT ENROLLING OFFICE,
Canton, August 22, 1864.

Capt. J. N. ARCHER,
Commanding Post, Canton, Miss.:

CAPTAIN: Owing to the growing evil in this district of blockade-running and the consequent demoralization of the inhabitants, and the few instances in which such parties are brought before the authorities, it is thought that the scouts, whose duty it is to guard against such violations of the law, must have become to a great extent demoralized and particeps criminis with the persons engaged in unlawful trade with the enemy.

As an officer of the Confederate Government desirous of seeing this evil checked, I would suggest that the scouts now serving here be removed at least once a month, and in this connection I would state that I am organizing a company from men between forty-five and fifty years of age, of planters loyal and true to the Government, who are willing to mount and equip themselves and to perform police in addition to conscript duty in the Yazoo Valley.

---

* See sub-inclosure No. 6, p. 651.

I would respectfully suggest through you that this company be assigned to this service, as I am fully satisfied from the character of the men composing it that they would in all instances execute a rigid enforcement of the law without favor to any one, and thus to some extent secure the end so much desired.

I am, captain, with respect, your obedient servant,

J. D. UPTON,

Maj. and Dist. Enr. Officer, Comdg. Fifth Dist. of Mississippi.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS POST,

Canton, August 22, 1864.

Approved.

Respectfully forwarded to Captain Harris, special inspector for Department of Mississippi, Alabama, and East Louisiana, and attention asked to within statement of facts in connection with report from this office.

J. N. ARCHER,

Captain, Commanding Post.

[Sub-inclosure No. 6.]

DISTRICT ENROLLING OFFICE,

Canton, August 22, 1864.

Capt. J. N. ARCHER,

Commanding Post, Canton, Miss.:

CAPTAIN: I respectfully submit the following report in case of A. D. Sheldon, a citizen of this place and an employé of the Mississippi Central Railroad:

Upon assuming the duties of enrolling officer at this place in April last I immediately inspected his papers, in order to determine his status, and was informed that he was an employé on the Mississippi Central Railroad, running from this place to Grenada, and that he was not then actually engaged on the railroad, being employed in carrying out a contract made by Colonel Goodman, president of the Mississippi Central Railroad, with the Confederate States of America for the purpose of bringing out goods from the enemy's lines in exchange for cotton, and exhibited to me a pass from Maj. Gen. S. D. Lee, approved by General Wirt Adams, instructing all guards and pickets to pass him through our lines at all times until further orders, a copy of which is at this time impracticable to furnish, said A. D. Sheldon being absent.

I wrote to Colonel Goodman, the president of the railroad, in order to satisfy myself more fully as to the truth of the foregoing statements, and in a subsequent conversation had with him they were fully sustained.

Mr. Sheldon was reported through this office, in conformance with the requirements of the law, on the monthly reports of the railroad made to the commandant for Mississippi, and now holds his exemption papers as an employé of aforesaid road.

Respectfully submitted.

C. N. CHILTON,

Lieutenant and Enrolling Officer.

COLUMBIA, September 15, 1864.

[President JEFFERSON DAVIS:]

SIR: The circumstances of our present political condition will be the apology for this letter. A few moments will be as much of your time as I will consume, I am sure, because I write upon the best authority that a revocation or modification of the present details with the reserve forces of this State would put into the field from 8,000 to 10,000 men. I have the like authority for the belief that a proportionately larger force from the same sources in Georgia and North Carolina could be easily brought into the field. The three States undoubtedly could thus put into the field from 20,000 to 30,000 men. If to these will be added such forces as could be brought from Alabama and Mississippi, an army is at once created—an army which, with great deference to your better judgment, operating in and upon the rear of General Sherman, would wipe out the disaster of the loss of Atlanta in the glory of its recovery. These troops, finding a point of convergence sufficiently in the rear of General Sherman, so that their junction would be certain, might thus, with the army of General Hood in his front, convert the captor into the captive, and be the crowning triumph of a campaign which but for the disasters in Georgia would have been in all respects as remarkable as has ever been recorded.

It would be unnecessary for me to write to you of this, concerning which you are better informed than I can be, but it is of another matter connected with it, and of which I venture to make a suggestion. Such a movement as has been indicated would be assisted by the people of the States not included in the lists of detailed men or of the reserve force. I feel sure that concurrently with this the spirit of the people, in many places diverted if not downcast, could be vitalized and awakened; that their temper in some places, not sustained at the high point it reached in the commencement of our contest, could be brought back to what it was and an enthusiasm as deep and strong as that which introduced our revolution be now excited, and which when so excited would hasten it to a victorious conclusion. I believe that the difficulties which surround us could be converted into sources of strength and our dangers become the weapons of our deliverance. I have adverted to the temper (it may seem the indifference) which will be found with some, perhaps with many, and you may ask me how it is intended to overcome this moral atrophy. I am not apt to be seduced by an oversanguine expectation, but of this I am sure—with such an organization as has been referred to and a knowledge of the purposes for which it is intended, with the fact that they who were not bound to military service and would become united in this movement would not be required for the execution of the plan to be in the field for more than sixty or ninety days, it would be easy to excite and move large bodies of our people into this enterprise. It would be recognized as a campaign in which there would be no exemption, because there would be no compulsion—in which there should be no exemption, because they who were entitled to the exemption would discard it. We can preach the enterprise as they preached the crusade. We can preach the expulsion of the foe as we preached the disruption of the Union. I know those who will take up the torch and bear it, and I am sure that with the spirit which animates them their success will be certain. They will accept it as a holy calling, will suspend their duties and avocations, and I know will rouse themselves to a temper which will move them with irresistible force upon their invaders. It is easy to show all that an enterprise full of glory is also most conducive to our prosperity, and that a few hours of danger would gain a lifetime of security. If the movement required the complete suspension of all details, it would seem as if the occasion would more than justify it. But it need not be so. It would not be so. A portion of the detailed force, the least useful in the field, might be left. And who would weigh the consequences of a partial suspension of the operations of these details with the advantage which would result from placing them in the field and welding them together in one compact mass, giving life and hope to the army of General Hood, sustaining the cause of the Confederacy with this gallant, if sorely pressed, army, and with it a general who will fall unless he can retrieve his losses, which the popular judgment will ever confound with his faults.

I will not venture to press the matter further than to say that for its successful achievement it requires one whose skill and ability are acknowledged, and that the extent of the draft upon the detail should be left to the sound discretion of the officers to whose hands the movement is committed.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

A. G. MAGRATH.

---

BUREAU OF SUBSISTENCE,

Richmond, September 15, 1864.

Col. L. B. NORTHPROP,

Commissary-General:

COLONEL: I beg leave to call your attention to the fact that we are without fifteen days' supply of meat in this city for the subsistence of General Lee's army and other troops, employés, &c., dependent upon us; nor have we an accumulation in any of the States upon which to draw in the future. The collection of meat from all sources during the past thirty days would not subsist the Army of Northern Virginia for one week, the operations of the department having been seriously interfered with from the want of adequate means with which to purchase, liquidate accrued indebtedness, and thus restore public confidence, so seriously impaired in many sections of the Confederacy from our past inability to comply with obligations and from the financial policy heretofore pursued.

The impressment act has signally failed in affording the relief that was anticipated, simply because payment is required to be made when the law is enforced, a clause which practically nullifies it, since our restricted means will not enable us to offer currency, and the mass of the people refuse to accept the 6 per cent. certificates and non-taxable bonds, although our officers have been instructed to make every effort to induce their acceptance, believing it obligatory upon us to aid the Treasury in every practicable way. In all the States impressments are evaded by every means which ingenuity can suggest, and in some openly resisted. In North Carolina our receipts are insignificant, and in Georgia and Alabama we are unable to purchase corn for want of money, which necessitates the consumption of our limited stock of flour, so desirable to preserve for active campaigning. In Virginia the meat supply has been exhausted, but it is believed that considerable cattle and bacon are yet to be had in Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi, provided the necessary funds are at our command.

Within thirty days the Army of Tennessee will have consumed the present supply of meat. Our officers in all of the States are fully alive to the interests of the department, but the difficulties which beset them are insurmountable, and must receive due consideration in connection with the present condition of the commissariat.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. B. FRENCH,

Major and Commissary of Subsistence.

CIRCULAR )

No. 32. )

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., September 16, 1864.

The following rules are adopted for the payment of the extra compensation to detailed non-commissioned officers and privates of the Army and of conscripts in the service of this Bureau at all points out of Richmond:

I. All such detailed men will receive their regular pay, rations, and other allowances as if actually on field duty.

II. In addition to their pay, &c., each detailed man shall receive $1 per day as extra-duty pay proper, to be paid for each day of such extra-duty labor.

III. As extra compensation for extraordinary skill, labor, and industry on the part of any detailed man, there shall be paid for each day on which service is actually rendered as follows: For first-class clerks, $2 per day; for second-class clerks, $1 per day. Provided, that when any detailed clerk receives his allowances in kind (as at hospitals), he shall be paid only 25 cents per day and no more, either as extra-duty pay proper or otherwise.

IV. In case of a detailed man being employed as a mechanic, he shall be paid such extra compensation for extraordinary skill, labor, and industry as may be allowed to detailed men similarly employed in the quartermaster's department at the same place, or the nearest post thereto, and which may be fixed under General Orders, No. 66, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, current series.

V. Commutation to detailed men or conscripts before assignment will be allowed at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of all allowances for fuel, quarters, and straw.

VI. These rates are to take effect from and after the 1st day of August, 1864.

By order of Brigadier-General Preston, superintendent:

C. B. DUFFIELD,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES OF VIRGINIA,

Richmond, September 16, 1864.

General S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General:

GENERAL: I have the honor to forward herewith the muster-rolls of the reserve forces of Virginia which have been organized up to this time. The muster-rolls contain the names of 13,072 officers and men. They show that the reserve forces of Virginia, already organized, are composed of 144 companies, averaging 90 men to the company. They are already divided into five brigades under temporary brigade commanders, embracing nineteen regiments and battalions, besides detached companies. These brigades have an average of 2,600 men each.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. L. KEMPER,
Brigadier-General.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, DEPT. OF JUSTICE,
Richmond, Va., September 16, 1864.

Governor Z. B. VANCE,
Raleigh, N. C.:

DEAR SIR: Your letter of 1st instant reached here during my absence on a brief visit to North Carolina, whence I returned only yesterday. I avail myself of the earliest opportunity to reply. I do not understand your letter as asking of me an official opinion as to the legality of the position assumed by the War Department asserting the right of the President and denying that of the Governor to appoint the officers of the regiments known as the "State troops" of North Carolina. Indeed, under the law and the uniform practice of this Department I am forbidden to give such an opinion except upon the requirement of the President or the Secretary of War. I must therefore content myself with explaining to you that view of the law which has governed the War Department in its late action. You are mistaken in supposing that the right of the President to appoint the officers of these troops is claimed under the conscription acts, or either of them. It is derived from a higher source, and is considered not as a right simply, but as an imperative duty.

I have not examined particularly into the history of these requirements, but am informed at the Adjutant-General's Office that they were received into the service of the Confederate States under the general authority of the act "To make further provisions for the public defense," approved 11th of May, 1861. The Constitution recognizes but two classes of troops in the service of the Confederate States, to wit, the Army of the Confederate States and the militia. The appointment of the officers of the latter is reserved to the States; but the officers of "the Army," like all other officers of the Confederate Government, are required to be appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate. This difference in the mode of appointing officers gave rise early in the war to a very important question—that is, in which of these two classes are volunteers and troops furnished by the different States to be embraced.

In August, 1861, Mr. Benjamin, then Attorney-General, gave an official opinion that troops furnished by the States upon a requisition of the Confederate Government were militia and their officers were to be appointed under the State laws. Under the authority of this opinion and the belief that it covered the case of the North Carolina State troops, the appointment of the officers of those troops was yielded to the Governor.

In August, 1862, the case of troops raised and organized under the State laws and received into the service of the Confederate States under the said act of 11th of May, 1861, was presented to Mr. Attorney-General Watts for his opinion and he declared, officially, that such troops are a part of "the Army of the Confederate States," and all vacancies among their officers are to be filled by appointment of the President, with the consent of the Senate. I send you a copy of so much of the opinion as relates to this point.

This view of the law, declared in this opinion, has been adopted by the Secretary of War upon the case of vacancies in the North Carolina State troops being directly presented to him. He feels that he is imperatively bound by the Constitution that the appointments should be made by the President, and that he has no discretion any longer to acquiesce in an arrangement made by his predecessor under what he believes and what has since been declared to be an erroneous construction of the law.

This brief synopsis, with the copy of Mr. Watts' opinion, will advise you of the reasons by which the War Department has been governed and enable you to judge of their validity. I express no opinion myself, being, as I have said, precluded from so doing by the rules of my office.

Very respectfully, yours, &c.,

GEORGE DAVIS.

[Inclosure.]

Assuming that these regiments and legion were received into the Confederate service under the act of the 11th of May, 1861, as organized bodies, the question is still, how are vacancies in the offices to be filled? This act expressly declares that volunteer forces accepted under it shall be organized in accordance with and subject to all the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for the public defense." The fifth section of the latter act declares that the officers of companies, squadrons, battalions, and regiments "shall be appointed in the manner prescribed by law in the several States to which they shall severally belong, but when inspected, mustered, and received into the service of the Confederate States, said troops shall be regarded in all respects as a part of the Army of the Confederate States, according to the terms of their respective enlistments."

It is distinctly declared that the appointment of the officers of companies, squadrons, battalions, and regiments shall be according to the law of the States from which they come. This may well be done if "in raising armies" Congress can constitutionally authorize the reception of organized companies, battalions, and regiments as well as the enlistment of single individuals. As Congress is unrestricted in this respect in the mode of raising armies, I have no doubt this can be done. But when such troops are received into the service of the Confederate States and are then to be regarded in all respects as a part of the Army of the Confederate States, the mode for the appointment of officers declared in the Constitution must prevail.

The officers afterward appointed for the companies, battalions, and regiments are officers of the Confederate States. The Constitution, in the second clause of second section, second article, declares that the President "shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers of the Confederate States whose appointments are not otherwise provided for and which shall be established by law. But Congress may by law vest the appointment of such inferior officers as they may think proper in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of the Departments."

When these troops became a part of the Army of the Confederate States, Congress not having vested the appointment of the officers in the President alone, or otherwise provided for such appointment, the vacancies can only be filled by the President's nomination and appointment by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, as provided in the ninth section of the act "For the establishment and organization of the Army of the Confederate States."

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, POST-OFFICE DEPT.,

Richmond, September 17, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War:

SIR: The inclosed papers are respectfully returned.

The only class of persons in the service of this Department which should make any noteworthy deduction from the military force is the mail contractors and drivers of post-coaches and hacks, who are exempted under the law of April 14, 1863. The whole number of mail contractors in the Confederate States on the 7th of December, 1863, was 1,253. Of these, those in the States of Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Texas entered into contracts in the spring of the year 1862, before the passage of the first law of conscription, up to which time such contracts were not sought to secure exemption, and from the 23d of September, 1862, the date of the approval of the first law of conscription, to the 14th of April, 1863, the date of the law exempting contractors and drivers, these classes were liable to enrollment in the Army. The time for the receipt of bids for contracts in the remaining States, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida, terminated on the 1st of May, 1863, so soon after the passage of the law of April 14 as to prevent the publication and notice of the existence of this law in considerable portions of these States, so as to enable parties to make bids in view of it. From these facts I infer that the number of persons who originally submitted bids to keep out of the military service cannot be large; and I am sustained in this view by the fact that up to the 7th of December last but 147 contracts had been let to persons for nominal considerations.

One hundred and five additional contracts at nominal rates have been made since that date in cases when existing contractors have been put into the military service, or for other reasons have abandoned the postal service. I cannot tell the number of persons engaged as mail contractors who would otherwise be liable to military service, but suppose it cannot at most exceed 500, and it may fall much below that number. And I do not think the number exempted as drivers can be as great as the number of exempt contractors on account of the very limited number of routes on which the mails are carried in coaches or hacks.

It is a question of policy whether the legislation on this subject should be so changed as to disallow these exemptions. I have supposed that to do so with our present currency would render it impracticable to keep up the postal service, and that it would be better to spare the number of men necessary from the Army than to let it go down, or become so embarrassed as to produce discontent in the Army and country by rendering the ordinary means of postal communication impracticable. I fear that the loss of the means of such communication would cause more men to desert in a short time than are required to keep the service up. But if you think it best to take the views of the President and Cabinet on this question, and they should think differently, I will do all I can to keep up the service without the aid of exemptions.

In this connection I beg to call your attention to the portion of my report of December 7, 1863, above referred to, extending from page 6 to 10, under the head of "Contract Bureau," herewith inclosed,* from which you will perceive that the Department was unable to obtain bids for contracts to carry on the postal service without exemption to the contractors from military service.

There should be no diminution from the military force on account of postmasters. Those postmasters not appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate are not exempt, and the number appointed by the President does not exceed 100, and of this class he has steadily refused to appoint persons liable to military service. So that if the enrolling officers do their duty little or nothing can be lost to the Army by postmasters.

There are a few clerks in the larger class of post-offices whom it has been very desirable for the Department to retain on account of their special knowledge and experience. But I believe in an indorsement I sent you some time past I suggested that some thirty-five of these would cover all I thought indispensable, and even these we might after a little be able to dispense with if the postmasters can be induced to proper vigilance in instructing others.

There may be a few route agents in the service of this Department who would be liable to military service, but the number is very small, if there are any, as I have refused to appoint any one to these duties who is liable to military service since the passage of the first law of conscription.

I desire no exemptions for this Department which it is practicable to get along without, and you shall have my cheerful co-operation in everything which will augment our armies.

The case of Leftwich, of this city, referred to by General Lee, arose out of a recent contract on a route extending from Macon to Monticello, Ga. (not Alabama), forty-five miles in length. The former contractor was arrested and put into the military service contrary to law. The route was one of such importance that the postmasters on it and the special agent of the Department requested a renewal of the service, and it was readvertised on the 16th of March, 1864, and Leftwich being the lowest bidder, the contract was awarded to him on the 27th of May, 1864, for a merely nominal consideration, and I am informed it is costing him at the rate of $6,000 a year to have the service performed.

In relation to the other case mentioned by General Lee, I would say that the post-office at Mechanicsville, in Louisa County, Va., is what we call a special office, and this Department makes no contracts with carriers to supply that class of offices with mails. It merely consents to give so much out of the proceeds of the office for supplying it with the mails, and the carriers having no contracts are not exempt from military service, so that the carrier who supplies the Mechanicsville office is not exempt from military service on that account.

This Department is not even furnished with the names of such carriers except as they come to the Auditor's Office from quarter to quarter. From the last return in the Auditor's Office the name of the carrier who supplies the office at Mechanicsville is James M. Michie.

---

* Omitted.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN H. REAGAN,
Postmaster-General.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,

September 7, 1864.

Capt. H. C. THORBURN:

You will obey the writ in the case of Thomas Vaden and proceed with him on to-morrow morning's train to Richmond. You will see Mr. Aylett and report the facts to him.

As I understand the matter Thomas Vaden since his enlistment has been elected justice of the peace for Chesterfield County and on this bases his claim to a discharge from service. There is no provision of law requiring discharge in such a case. The act of Congress approved 17th of February, 1864, provides for the exemption of such State officers as the Governor of a State shall certify to be necessary for the proper administration of the State government. This, however, does not operate to discharge from the service those already enlisted. It is not that there shall be discharged from service those whom the Governor of a State may deem necessary for the proper administration of the government, but that all such shall be exempt from enrollment, &c.; that is, of course, those not in the service at the time of the passage of the bill. This man Vaden is clearly liable to perform service in his present company during the war by the requirements of the second section of the bill published in General Orders, No. 26, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, current series.

By a law of Congress, published in General Orders, No. 48, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, of 1863, it is obligatory upon the Department to accept the resignation of officers and to discharge enlisted men when elected to certain positions in the civil government. It does not, however, relate to the case under discussion. Justices of the peace are not enumerated in the list of offices in the law referred to.

By previous laws a Senator or a Representative, &c., was exempt from service; but those laws did not discharge a man from the service who was elected to fill the position of Senator or Representative. It was therefore necessary to make this special enactment (General Orders, No. 48, 1863) requiring discharge from service under such circumstances. So it will be necessary to enact a bill to require the discharge of those elected justices of the peace before the claim of Vaden can be pronounced valid.

The Secretary of War had previously decided many similar cases adversely to the applicants (see that of H. D. Stevens, Company D, Fifteenth Virginia Infantry, by indorsement of J. A. Campbell, Assistant Secretary of War, 20th of August, 1864). You will on your return report the decision of the court.

By order of General Lee:

W. H. TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,
ORDNANCE AND COMMISSARY TRAIN, ARTY., THIRD CORPS,
September 9, 1864.

Lieut. Col. W. H. TAYLOR,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Army of Northern Virginia:

SIR: In obedience to your order of the 7th instant I went to Richmond yesterday in the habeas corpus case of Thomas Vaden, jr., and in the absence of Mr. Aylett presented your letter of instructions to Messrs. Sands and Neeson, who were acting in his place, and stated to them all the facts in my knowledge with regard to the case. They informed me that several similar cases have been decided in favor of the applicants for discharge after having been fully argued by Colonel August and Mr. Neeson, and that an appeal had been taken to the court of appeals. After a hearing in the case of Vaden the judge decided to discharge him from the service. An appeal will also be taken in his case.

I was accompanied to Richmond by Lieutenant Fry, of Utterback's battery, the company to which Vaden belonged, who gave all the assistance in his power in protecting the interests of the Government in this case.

I have the honor to be, major, with much respect, your obedient servant,

H. C. THORBURN,
Captain and Assistant Quartermaster.

[Indorsement.]

GENERAL: A man claims discharge having been elected justice of the peace. Judge Meredith issues writ of habeas corpus and discharges him. I can see no provision of law for it. Plenty of your able-bodied fellows will be elected magistrates and thus get out of service. With enrolling officers to exempt and detail and judges to discharge we are in a sad way.

W. H. T.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
September 10, 1864.

Honorable SECRETARY OF WAR,
Richmond:

SIR: I have the honor to call your attention to the inclosed papers* with the hope that something may be done to correct the evil they disclose. The drain upon the strength of the Army by exemption of civil officers, postmasters, clerks, and mail carriers, added to the details made for other purposes, is more than it can bear. I suppose there is no remedy for this particular case but a reversal of the decision of Judge Meredith, or if that failed, a change of the law. If that be necessary I trust you will bring it to the attention of Congress at its next meeting. A large number of able-bodied men are taken from the Army or kept out of it as mail contractors. In many instances these contracts are made for the sole purpose of evading service in the Army.

The case of one Leftwich, of Richmond, has been reported to me as a flagrant instance of this kind. He has a contract to convey the mails on an unimportant route in Alabama. He resides in Richmond, where he is carrying on his business, and has never seen his route, as I am informed. Yet the court discharged him. I cannot believe that there was any necessity for the award of this contract to Leftwich, and have no doubt that the Post-Office Department was imposed upon.

---

*See inclosures Nos. 1 and 2, next, ante.

Another instance has been reported to me of a young man in Louisa County, whose name I cannot now recall, but who obtained a contract to carry the mail from the obscure post-office of Mechanicsville, near Gordonsville, and was discharged the service. He is the son of wealthy parents, and I am told remains at home and employs some one else to carry the mail. I suppose it is in the power of the Post-Office Department to prevent these abuses and even to annul such fraudulent contracts where they exist. Perhaps if the attention of the Postmaster-General were called to the subject some slight increase of our depleted ranks might be secured.

I am constrained to say that while it is important that all the interests of the people should be regarded by the Government their preservation from subjugation is the greatest of all, and in my opinion the emergency requires the sacrifice of every other consideration to the vital question of the public safety.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. E. LEE.

[Indorsement.]

SEPTEMBER 14, 1864.

Respectfully submitted for the consideration of the Honorable Postmaster-General, whose particular attention is invoked at the suggestion of General Lee to the within earnest letter of that distinguished general, to a matter perhaps within the power of the Honorable Postmaster-General to correct.

J. A. SEDDON.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 221. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, September 17, 1864.

* * * * *

VII. Maj. Theophilus Steele, of Seventh Kentucky Cavalry, is assigned to duty with Col. R. J. Breekinridge, Provisional Army, C. S., for recruiting service in Kentucky, and will report accordingly.

* * * * *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., September 17, 1864.

Whereas, by the will of George Mendenhall, of North Carolina, lately deceased, which has been established in the supreme court of North Carolina, certain slaves were emancipated upon the condition that they be removed from that State beyond the Confederate States; and whereas, the executrix has applied for license to remove fourteen slaves mentioned and comprehended in the said will, viz, Abram, aged sixty or sixty-five; his wife, aged fifty, and their children, Frank and Comelia; Jacob and his wife, aged about fifty, and their daughter, Louisa, and Abney Anderson and his wife; Jupiter, Perry, and Adam, and the wife of Perry:

Permission is given for the removal of these persons from North Carolina to the lines of the United States whenever it can be done with the sanction of the military commander through whose lines they are to pass.

This permission to remain in force until the 1st of January next.

By order of Secretary of War:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

SEPTEMBER 21, 1864.

MEMORANDUM.—Mrs. Mendenhall, in addition to the colored persons mentioned in the passport heretofore given at this Department, may send to the United States the woman, Amy Allston, under similar conditions as are expressed in the passport before referred to.

By order of Secretary of War:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

SANDY GROVE, NEAR BARTOW POST-OFFICE, GA.,
September 18, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 5th instant, improperly mailed to Milledgeville, was forwarded to me and received yesterday. I feel very deeply the importance of the object which it seeks to accomplish, and would gladly do anything in my power to aid you. But, my dear sir, it is useless to make an effort to induce the people generally to part with their surplus at schedule prices. Wheat is worth in all our markets from $15 to $25 and $30 per bushel; corn, $10 to $15, and bacon, $3.50 to $4 per pound. Compared with these figures the schedule prices are simply absurd. I have known for weeks that you could not get supplies in Georgia in sufficient quantities at these prices, and several weeks ago I addressed a letter* to the Secretary of the Treasury, which I authorized him to show you. If you have not seen it I would be glad if you would call on him for it. It will put you fully in possession of my poor opinions on this subject. My opinion is that you should entirely disregard the schedule prices and authorize your agents to buy supplies at any price, and should the planters refuse to sell impress peremptorily at prices approximating the market value. It is idle to expect to feed our armies at the prices fixed by commissioners. It is wrong in principle and policy to compel citizens to part with their property at mere nominal rates. It will discourage production to a fatal degree and produce deep and widespread discontent toward the Government. Our producing territory is now so circumscribed that it will require great skill and industry to compel it to yield the requisite supplies under the most stimulating encouragement of remunerating prices. It will utterly fail to do so if the planters feel that they are to pay heavy taxes, State and Confederate, whilst the earnings of their labor are to be wrested from them at prices which will not remunerate.

*See Johnson to Trenholm August 16, p. 594.

I know that the reply to all this is that it will swell the public debt to a ruinous figure. Not so. The Government has the power of taxation. It can bring back to the Treasury what it disburses. And at last the great means of sustaining the currency is by adopting such legislation as will create a demand for it. High taxation will do this. Nothing else will. High prices will justify as well as necessitate high taxes. The right of impressment is unquestionable; but it should not be resorted to except from necessity. Nor should the Government pursue a course which creates that necessity. The policy of maximums will always create and continue that necessity. Impressment should be resorted to when the citizens refuse to sell for just compensation; that is, he should be compelled to sell, but beyond that the Government should not go. It should not compel sale at a price fixed far below the market value. It can impress, but it has no right to fix prices. The Constitution declares that compensation should be just. Is it just to take wheat and corn and bacon at schedule prices when these articles in market will readily command twice as much? I repeat, I would advise the abandonment of this whole schedule arrangement. I would impress provisions in every case where the planter refused to sell at market value. Do this and you will feed the armies, the people will be contented, and if the expenditure is great bring it back by taxation. Create a demand for Confederate money and it will appreciate. Keep down redundancy by the joint operation of taxation and the sale of bonds. I throw out these suggestions in no spirit of complaint. You know I am a friend to the Administration, and I trust I feel an honest and deep interest in the success of our struggle. It is far beyond dollars and cents. As a citizen, I am willing to submit to any sacrifice, as are thousands of others, but in what I have said I am prompted by a deep conviction that it is for the public good. Let not the Government stop to count dollars and cents when our existence is at stake. Feed the Army at any price. It will be part of the price of liberty. The people will pay the debt. If they refuse the Government will be free from censure, and they will but prove unworthy the boon of independence and good government. This can never be.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully, your obedient servant,
HERSCHEL V. JOHNSON.

[First indorsement.]

SEPTEMBER 26, 1864.

Respectfully referred to the Honorable Secretary of the Treasury.

I dissent in toto, but submit for consideration and as an indication of the sentiment in Georgia.

J. A. S.,
Secretary.

[Second indorsement.]

SEPTEMBER 29, 1864.

Respectfully returned to the Honorable Secretary of War with thanks, and accompanied by the letter referred to by Hon. Mr. Johnson.* This was answered on the 8th September, but no copy was kept of the reply.

G. A. TRENHOLM,
Secretary of the Treasury.

---

* See Johnson to Trenholm August 16, p. 594.

GREENVILLE, September 18, 1864.

Hon. G. A. TRENHOLM,

Richmond, Va.:

DEAR SIR: Should it be deemed desirable, I could aid the Government to prepare and keep open a new port or ports which it would tax the powers of any enemy to take from us or to close. To do this would require fewer men and less means than are necessary for the defense of any of our ports with which I am acquainted. Quality more than quantity would be required, and many a man not fit for general field service would be just the man for this work.

If our military authorities wish, I will go to Richmond; should my thoughts be favorably considered, they could then use me, or others, to carry out the plan. I may also be of some service otherwise to General Bragg, for since I lost my regiment at the reorganization I have examined much of our coast and the interior of our State, also the mountain region above us, all of which may form but a part of one whole in the coming defense of our country against Sherman.

You may know little of me as a military man, but if you think it worth while to bring this to the consideration of General Bragg you can say that I served in Florida on the staff of a West Point graduate in 1836, and from that time to this I have studied as one does for a profession, and this with no view to personal ends, but that I might serve my country. If General Bragg knows that more than ten years ago I so interested Captain Cullum and Mr. Boutelle as to get them to examine with me the entire grounds and waters around Charleston with a view to their defense, he will understand that I must have had some thoughts on such subjects.

As Colonel Harris (engineer) has been with me several times over ground that I have studied, he can say whether it may be worth the time of General Bragg (and I know what his time is worth) to listen to my proposition.

General Gilmer has also been with me over ground that I had devoted much attention to (the Edisto and Branchville country), and he can say what he thinks. Colonel Gorgas, of the Ordnance, knew me in Charleston, and may have an opinion. I only mention these things that you may not be required to say anything for me which you do not yourself know.

You can, I think, say that I am honest and earnest, and I say that I want nothing from the Government, but only seek to aid it.

Yours, very respectfully,

LEWIS M. HATCH,

For the present, Greenville, S. C.

If they want to see me, and you do not deem it indelicate, you might ask for such an order as would give me transportation. I would pay my other expenses; but in this as you think best.

[Indorsement.]

SEPTEMBER 24, 1864.

Respectfully referred to General Bragg. Colonel Hatch is a gentleman of much practical knowledge in the matter to which his letter relates, and of great energy and perseverance.

G. A. TRENHOLM.

I think he ought to have stated where the ports are to which he refers.

CONSCRIPT OFFICE,
Richmond, September 19, 1864.

Capt. C. B. DUFFIELD,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Bureau of Conscription:

CAPTAIN: The orders for the enrollment and assignment of free negroes have been carried out as effectually as could be done under the circumstances. Many deserted and otherwise evaded the officers. This class, like absconding men from the Army and those liable to conscription, required to be forced into service by an active and efficient guard. General Orders, No. 26, current series, has withdrawn all the assistance which could be relied on, and not one in twenty "light-duty" men can be made efficient as a guard. These remarks are made preliminary to a report which I desire to submit upon several communications referred to this office recently, but which will be returned with report and explanation for the information of the several military bureaus.

For the want of efficient and informed officers and the required number of clerks, reports and consolidated returns cannot be made as promptly as desired, and for that reason it will be some time before a complete return of the enrollment and assignment of free negroes is made; but the Bureau is assured that no time will be spared in forwarding promptly all the returns due from this office. Upon a general examination of the returns of the enrolling officers it is manifest that all the labor of this class which could well be has been withdrawn from the agricultural districts.

The Niter and Mining Bureau desires every one that can be found. Colonel Corley, chief quartermaster Army of Northern Virginia, calls for 500, and the Engineer Bureau makes a requisition for a large force on the line of the Richmond and Danville and the South Side Railroads. General Walker, commanding the defenses on the Richmond and Danville Railroad, also calls for assistance from this class. The officers of the Quartermaster's Department collecting forage in the Valley have received assistance, but are demanding more. Maj. J. G. Paxton, in charge of extensive operations for the Quartermaster's Department at Lynchburg and in the Piedmont counties, is asking for aid. All the demands are pressing and of the most vital importance, and the number required by the officers making the requisitions for them approximates, if it does not exceed, the whole number of free negroes within the military lines of the prescribed ages. I have deemed it advisable to submit these facts, in order that the Bureau may be informed of the impossibility of supplying the existing demands, and I would further respectfully suggest, if it meets the approbation of the superintendent, that the statements herein contained may be submitted to the War Department or the bureaus requiring the labor. I have already replied to General Walker and to the local quartermasters, but suppose the Engineer Bureau and the chief quartermaster of the Army of Northern Virginia are not informed.

Enrolling officers will be instructed to continue without any abatement of zeal or effort to forward every man of every class for duty, but I regret to say, for the want of responsible guards, I am apprehensive many will elude their vigilance.

Attention is respectfully invited to the inclosed copy of circular issued from this office September 7, requiring full and accurate returns from enrolling officers of the disposition made of this class of persons; also copy of instructions to enrolling officers to meet, if possible, the requisitions of General Gilmer.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. C. SHIELDS,

Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

CIRCULAR }
No. 60. }

CONSCRIPT OFFICE,
Richmond, September 7, 1864.

I. You will send in at once a full and perfect list of all male free negroes who have been enrolled in your district up to the 1st of September, giving descriptive list according to form in each case, whether accepted by medical board, and when and where assigned; if unassigned, state reasons. Receipts for these assignments must accompany this report unless already sent in. Many officers have failed to make any report whatever of this enrollment, or else have made it very imperfectly, and it will be impossible for an intelligible return to be sent up from this office unless district officers will give this order their special attention.

II. A separate report is likewise required of all negro slaves who have been impressed up to 1st of September, with descriptive lists and receipts, owner's name and residence.

By order of Lieut. Col. J. C. Shields, commandant:

JAS. H. BINFORD,

Lieutenant and Adjutant.

(To District Enrolling Officers.)

[Inclosure No. 2.]

QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT,
Gordonsville, September 12, 1864.

Col. JOHN C. PORTER:

(Through Maj. W. B. Richards.)

I have been informed that there are a number of free negroes now in Culpeper liable to conscription, and who are kept out merely by applications for detail made by some of their friends in Culpeper. These applications of course are only intended to delay the execution of the law, and are not even expected to be granted. And being without anything like a competent force to carry on the work necessary to save the large amount of Government forage thrown on my hands, and unable to procure negroes other than by impressment, I respectfully request that you send me an order upon Lieut. William C. Graves, enrolling officer for Culpeper, for the same.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EUSTACE GIBSON,

Captain and Assistant Quartermaster.

[First indorsement.]

QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,
Gordonsville, September 12, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded to Col. J. C. Porter.

Captain Gibson has charge of the forage department here. His duties are very heavy. I am unable to supply him with labor in consequence of the desertion of free negroes recently supplied to me.

W. B. RICHARDS, JR.,

Major and Post Quartermaster.

[Second indorsement.]

ENROLLING OFFICE, EIGHTH DISTRICT,
Orange Court-House, September 14, 1864.

Respectfully referred to the commandant to know if the free negroes of Culpeper, if there be any liable to duty, can be turned over to Captain Gibson.

J. C. PORTER,
Colonel and Enrolling Officer Eighth District.

[Third indorsement.]

CONSCRIPT OFFICE,
Richmond, September 20, 1864.

Respectfully referred to the Bureau of Conscription.

This application under instructions of the Bureau can be disposed of at this office. The necessity for this labor in Culpeper and other counties recently coming again into our military lines to enable the Quartermaster's Department to collect forage presents reasons as urgent as the necessity made apparent in Colonel Corley's application to secure fuel for the same army for which the forage is intended. After securing the forage a transfer of the force to obtain fuel would be judicious, but it is believed that nearly all will desert if transferred from their own sections.

Unless otherwise instructed I will turn them over for a limited time to the Quartermaster's Department for the collection of forage in the section referred to.

J. C. SHIELDS,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

CONSCRIPT OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., September 19, 1864.

Lieut. J. E. HEATH,
Enrolling Officer Fourth Congressional District:

LIEUTENANT: The commandant directs that you furnish this office with an immediate report in compliance with Circular No. 60, current series, from this office, and that you report any free negroes in your district not yet assigned to Capt. W. G. Bender, Engineer Corps, at High Bridge, South Side Railroad, furnishing descriptive lists and taking receipts, to be forwarded to this office.

I am, lieutenant, very respectfully, &c.,

M. B. LANGHORNE,
Lieutenant and Acting Adjutant.

[Inclosure No. 4.]

CONSCRIPT OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., September 19, 1864.

Capt. R. S. HENLEY,
Enrolling Officer Fifth Congressional District:

CAPTAIN: The commandant directs that you furnish this office with an immediate report in compliance with Circular No. 60, current series, from this office, and that you report any free negroes in your district not yet assigned to Lieut. J. D. Hunter, Engineer Bureau, at Wolf Trap Station, Richmond and Danville Railroad, furnishing descriptive lists and taking receipts, to be forwarded to this office.

I am, captain, very respectfully,

M. B. LANGHORNE,
Lieutenant and Acting Adjutant.

[Inclosure No. 5.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, ENGINEER BUREAU,
Richmond, Va., September 14, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond:

SIR: I have the honor to make the following statement and recommendations thereon for your consideration and action:

Capt. W. G. Bender, Engineers, in charge of the defenses on the Richmond and Danville and South Side Railroads, reports great deficiency of labor on the works now progressing at and near the various bridges on those roads, and particularly on the fortifications at the High Bridge over the Appomattox River, and the Banister River bridge. At the former there are only some thirty negroes, all free, and with that force it would require four months to complete the works contemplated at that point. At the latter point there will be, after the 15th of the present month, only about twenty-five free negroes. This Bureau attaches much importance to the defensive works along that line of railroad, and would respectfully urge the necessity of pressing them forward to completion.

Captain Bender, the engineer in charge, is informed that there is a number of free negroes still in the counties adjoining the points to be fortified, and is very desirous of securing their services on the works. I therefore have the honor to request that the Bureau of Conscription be directed to conscribe for this purpose the free negroes liable to enrollment from nine counties named herein, and that they be assigned to labor as follows, to wit: Those from the counties of Appomattox, Prince Edward, Amelia, Buckingham, and Cumberland, to be ordered to report to Capt. W. G. Bender, Engineers, or to T. M. Hewitt, assistant engineer at High Bridge. Those from Charlotte, Lunenburg, Mecklenburg, and Halifax to report to Lieut. J. D. Hunter, Engineers, at Wolf Trap Station, Banister River. If the labor of the free negroes liable to conscription in those counties can be obtained it will, to a great extent, insure the speedy completion of the defenses at those points.

I would also respectfully request, should the foregoing meet your approval, that the enrolling officers who conscribe the free negroes be directed to furnish to each negro at the time of enrollment a descriptive list, filled out in the usual form; this is desired in order to obviate much difficulty which continually arises in determining the pay and allowances due to these negroes. It will enable the officer under whose charge they labor to give to each, when he is dismissed, a statement showing up to what time they have been paid and what allowances they have received, for the information of those under whom they may next serve; this list to be deposited in the hands of the officer in charge, to be returned by him at the expiration of time of service, with payments made and clothing issued indorsed on each.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. GILMER,
Major-General and Chief Engineer Bureau.

[First indorsement.]

SEPTEMBER 14, 1864.

CONSCRIPTION BUREAU:

The recommendations of this letter are approved and will be carried out. To every negro enrolled a descriptive list should be given by the officer and he enjoined to keep it as necessary to enable him to receive his pay.

J. A. S.

[Second indorsement.]

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, September 16, 1864.

Respectfully referred to Lieutenant-Colonel Shields for attention in compliance with the indorsement of the Secretary of War.

By order of General Preston:

THOMAS PINCKNEY,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Third indorsement.]

CONSCRIPT OFFICE,
Richmond, September 20, 1864.

Respectfully returned to the Bureau of Conscription.

In a communication forwarded to the Bureau yesterday will be found all the information which can be given, and will enable General Gilmer to see that but a limited amount of labor can be procured from this class. The order of the Honorable Secretary of War has been communicated to the proper officers, as will appear by inclosures in the communication referred to.

J. C. SHIELDS,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

---

HDQRS. ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Tallahassee, September 19, 1864.

His Excellency JOHN MILTON,
Governor of Florida:

SIR: I have the honor to report that there have been organized and commissioned thirty-nine companies of State troops, embracing an aggregate of 2,780 men. Of this number 1,450 are mounted and 1,330 infantry.

I have the honor to be, Governor, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HUGH ARCHER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., September 19, 1864.

Maj. Gen. SAMUEL JONES,
Commanding, &c., Charleston, S. C.:

GENERAL: Your letter with regard to communications between yourself, the alleged Prussian consul, and General Foster, of the Federal Army, were referred to the Honorable Secretary of State, to whose cognizance the subject, as relating to foreigners, seemed most appropriately to belong.* After consideration he has addressed to the alleged consul a letter, of which I inclose a copy and to which I invite your attention.* Should any similar communication from the same party, or any other person representing himself as charged with consular powers from any neutral nation, be addressed to you, it would be advisable for you before replying, or in any manner impliedly acknowledging the relations, to refer the subject for information as to the authority of the party.

---

* For other correspondence on this subject, see Series I, Vol. XXXV, Part II, pp. 242, 243, 264.

In reference to the foreigners who left Georgia under the orders of Governor Brown, it cannot be permitted that they should pass to or hold communication with the enemy. They are entitled and will be permitted to leave any of our ports for their own or any neutral country, but not to sail direct to the United States. It should be explained to them that the laws of war and of nations preclude such privileges as communicating with the enemy, and that whatever difficulties or expenses, beyond the ordinary fare of passage to neutral ports, are in no wise attributable to the action of our Government or authorities, but are due solely to the illegal blockade of the enemy and its toleration by neutral nations. As suggested by the Honorable Secretary of State, it may be well doubted whether the authority of the Governor of Georgia extended to the act of expulsion, and whether those parties having the privilege of free recourse to the courts were under the necessity of leaving their abodes in that State. Their condition, however, resulting from their yielding obedience to the mandate of the Governor excites sympathy and consideration. The Department will offer such ameliorations and relief as it can within the province of its powers. Any of these parties willing to take service as laborers and employés in the works of the Government may be employed at fair wages, and you are authorized to send such to the superintendents and workshops of the departments. Of course, as far as conveniently may be, you will prefer those within or nearest to your department. To others who may wish to go abroad passports and such facilities as can be consistently rendered will be given by you.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

CIRCULAR LETTER.]

RICHMOND, VA., September 19, 1864.

His Excellency M. L. BONHAM,

Governor of the State of South Carolina, Columbia:

SIR: I have the honor to call your attention to a matter of public interest, in which the harmony of action between the State and Confederate governments is essential to the public welfare.

In some of the States executive proclamations have been issued requiring all aliens within their limits to render military service or to depart from the State within a specified period. The language of these proclamations has been so general as to admit of no exceptions, and their effect has been in some instances to alarm alien mechanics and laborers employed in the Confederate workshops and factories, to induce them to abandon their employment, and to demand passports in order to return to their country.

Skilled workmen, experts in various mechanical pursuits, indispensable in the foundries, laboratories, arsenals, machine-shops, and factories, have been engaged in Europe under contracts which guarantee to them immunity from the obligation of bearing arms, and many immigrants are now on their way to the Confederacy on the faith of these contracts.

---

* Not found.

It is not doubted that the Governors of the several States who have issued such proclamations entertained no intention of interfering with mechanics and workmen in the Confederate military service. Men who are employed in manufacturing and preparing munitions of war and military supplies are as effectively engaged in the defense of the country, and should be as free from interference by the State authorities as the soldiers in the field. But the failure to indicate in the proclamations already issued that such men as are thus employed in the Confederate service are not intended to be embraced within the terms of the proclamation has already given rise to the abandonment of work indispensable to the Army.

I have therefore respectfully to request that in all cases where such proclamations have been or may hereafter be issued, the necessary notice be given that they do not apply to this class of aliens.

In addressing to you this communication it is my purpose carefully to avoid raising any question that could produce a conflict between the General and State governments, and I therefore refrain from the expression of an opinion on the constitutionality of such exercise of power as is involved in these proclamations. It may not, however, be improper to invoke your consideration of the policy of banishing from our country at a time when the services of every man are particularly valuable such aliens as have not acquired the residence which would subject them to military service, but who are willing to serve their country as artisans during the war. It is plain that the labor of all such as are usefully employed in the Confederate workshops, factories, and laboratories must be performed by some one, and if these undomiciled foreigners are driven away their places must be supplied (if indeed they could be supplied at all) by men detailed from the Army; and the action of the State authorities would thus result in an effect precisely the reverse from that intended by them; it would diminish instead of increasing the strength of the armies. Those aliens even who are laboring elsewhere than in the service of the Government are efficiently aiding our cause by services of great value in furnishing to our people many necessary articles, such as shoes, clothing, machinery, agricultural implements, and the like, which it is now so difficult to obtain from abroad.

It is submitted that sound policy would require us to encourage during the war rather than prohibit the residence of such persons among us, even though they are not available for service in the field.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

(Same to Governor Vance, of North Carolina; Watts, of Alabama; Brown, of Georgia; Smith, of Virginia, and Milton, of Florida.)

---

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,

Raleigh, September 19, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War:

SIR: The State of North Carolina has contracts with nearly all the cotton and woolen mills within her borders for a certain per cent.

of their productions. I have imported material and machinery for them, and so far have supplied our troops with their fabrics at half the price paid by Confederate agents. General Lawton has, however, conceived the idea that the whole business of this State supplying her own troops must be broken up, no doubt for the reason that it is done better and cheaper than it could be done by him. Accordingly, details for hands in the factories have been refused and they are being sent to camp, unless they will break their contracts with the State and enter into others with General Lawton. I am in receipt of a letter announcing the suspension of an extensive factory this morning for that cause.

I presume from the way in which I was treated about running the blockade, and the many impediments thrown in the way of the State quartermaster's department generally, that General Lawton's attempt to seize the whole business receives the countenance of the Confederate Administration. If so, I would be glad to have it honestly avowed. If the Confederate and State governments are reduced to the disreputable position of scheming against each other and of oppressing whenever one may happen to have the power over the other, I want to understand it when my time comes.

North Carolina long ago made a contract with the Confederate States to furnish her own troops in the field, and to enable her to do this it was agreed that her own resources should be surrendered to her own agents. Notwithstanding, this was immediately disregarded and we have had to contend with Confederate agents in every market for every article, yet it is our boast and pride that we have nobly fulfilled the contract. It does not suit our convenience or notions of duty toward our soldiers to surrender everything now to Mr. Lawton and allow him to seize our mills by force after all that we have done to keep them up; nor have we ever refused to loan the surplus to the Confederate States after supplying our own troops.

I will not undertake to show the impolicy of such a course, the millions saved the Confederacy by the enterprise of the State, the comfort added to the hard lot of our soldiers, nor any considerations of that character.

But I beg you to pause before permitting General Lawton to oust North Carolina of her resources to clothe her troops in this manner. It will not be submitted to by,

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Z. B. VANCE.

[Indorsement.]

SEPTEMBER 23, 1864.

Referred to the Quartermaster-General for consideration and report on this extraordinary letter.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary.

---

[SEPTEMBER 21, 1864.—For Special Orders, No. 224 (paragraph XLII), Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, directing the impressment of 5,000 slaves in the State of Virginia for service in the Army of Northern Virginia for the term of thirty days, see Series I, Vol. XLII, Part II, p. 1268.]

RICHMOND, September 21, 1864.

COLIN J. McRAE,

Paris:

At the instance of the Secretary of the Treasury estimates have recently been submitted of the wants of the various bureaus abroad in sterling for a period of six months. After crediting on the estimate of this Bureau what it was thought could reasonably be expected under existing contracts, there remained the sum of £395,000. For this it is understood a warrant will issue in your favor, by which the funds will be made available as they may accumulate, through the sales of cotton, or bonds, or from any other sources. In this connection I can only commend Major Ferguson and the important interests of this department to a continuance of the favorable regard you have extended to both in the past. The diminished resources of the country make this department more than ever dependent upon the foreign supply, especially in connection with the articles of leather, stationery, and woolen materials of every description, all of which are required by this branch of the service in large quantities. I have also instructed Major Ferguson in regard to machinery required for the manufacture of blankets and field transportation. I doubt not that the Treasury Department, aided by the arrangement recently effected by you with Collie & Co., will be able to meet this foreign demand.

Major Waller has been instructed to suspend further purchases in the islands. Major Ferguson, it is thought, can buy to more advantage in the English market, especially on the score of quality. Owing to recent charges and the division of the proceeds of cotton to you, Major Waller is now heavily in debt and without any expectation of payment save through you. He probably owes over £30,000, exclusive of his purchases from Mr. Austin, for which he was authorized by you to draw at four months. I have instructed him to report the exact amount to you, and I must ask, out of a fair regard for the credit of the Government, that you extend to him all the facilities in your power to close up these old transactions. Some of the creditors are already a little impatient.

Should Mr. Sharp require some £500 more to complete his purchases please let him have it.

The Davis and Fitzhugh contract expires at an early day. In the meantime the deliveries will be subjected to a careful inspection. Can you arrange in any way to secure an inspection in England by Major Ferguson? I much prefer deliveries under the Rosenberg contract, and hope that they may not be superseded by the supposed advantages of the Davis and Fitzhugh contract. It was not contemplated that this department should be charged with the pay, &c., of officers abroad, as no provision was made for the payment; still, a warrant is forwarded to you at your request for £839 11s. 4d. to close your account.

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

RICHMOND, September 21, 1864.

Maj. J. B. FERGUSON,

Quartermaster :

(Care Fraser, Trenholm & Co., Liverpool.)

SIR: Major Waller has just been directed to suspend purchases in the islands. As all the funds now provided by the Treasury Department are realized through Mr. McRae, it is preferred that you should expend the same, as every assurance is felt that you will be able in dealing with the manufacturers themselves to purchase better material and at lower prices. Provision, however, will have to be made for Major Waller's debts, amounting, it is thought, to over £30,000. For this he must look to Mr. McRae, and you will please give him any assistance in your power to close up the past. You ask that cotton may be shipped to you, so that you may realize on the same through the firm of Gilliat & Co. All shipments on account of the bureaux separately have ceased. All cotton now goes out on account of the Treasury Department and the proceeds pass to the credit of Mr. McRae.

At the instance of the Secretary of the Treasury the several bureaux submitted estimates showing their wants in sterling for six months. The estimate of this department, after crediting the yield of existing contracts, was £395,000. It is understood that a warrant will issue for that amount in favor of Mr. McRae, by which the fund will be made available to you, as money may be realized by the sale of cotton or of bonds or from any other source.

You will continue to press forward your purchases as rapidly as possible. Should you experience no disappointment in the receipt of funds you will purchase liberally of material for officers' uniforms, of stationery, and leather. Let the last be of the very best quality, and include harness, upper, and sole. You need not contract for blue cloth for pants, as the gray makes up to more advantage. You had also better purchase woolen cloths, or flannels, or felt hats in lieu of socks, as we can manufacture the latter from cotton yarn. A cheap and serviceable felt hat would be very acceptable to the Army. In other respects you are fully advised as to its winter wants, and will continue to purchase and ship, as heretofore, of the best quality of blankets, bluchers, and gray cloths, with a fair proportion of trimming.

Should Mr. Sharp require more funds to complete his purchases, aid him in getting the same from Mr. McRae. The latter advises that you have received all of the warrant sent you for £85,000.

What about the cotton sent to Major Huse by the Thorburn line?

A. R. LAWTON,

Quartermaster-General.

RICHMOND, September 21, 1864.

Maj. R. P. WALLER,

Saint George, Bermuda :

SIR: I have just written to you fully in regard to suspending further purchases in the islands, and the provision made for the payment of your present indebtedness at Nassau. I think it advisable to be more explicit on one point. Do not on the authority received from Mr. McRae purchase further of the stock held by Mr. Samuel Austin. I was willing at one time to take the whole lot, valued at some £40,000, payable in cotton, but if they are to be paid for by Mr. McRae in sterling, I much prefer to leave the expenditure of all such means to Major Ferguson. Major Cameron, at Wilmington, has occasion to inspect at times supplies delivered under the "Davis and Fitzhugh contract." Most if not all their deliveries have been purchased in the islands. Please send to Major Cameron some samples of the goods those markets afford, with advices from time to time as to the prices current; it will aid his judgment. Any special information you may glean touching purchases under that contract will be acceptable.

Did you ever purchase in Nassau all the articles on the list carried out by Mr. Thomas Sharp, which you assumed to purchase, and for which purpose the sum of £500 was retained by you out of his draft? If not, inform that he may provide the same.

Recent occurrences make unnecessary any instructions in regard to shipments via and from Havana to Mobile. In shipping to Wilmington do all you can to secure first-class vessels in point of speed and reliable management, as that goes far to insure the cargoes. The heavy shipment made by you in the steamer Owl arrived safely and is now in quarantine at Wilmington.

There can be no risk in sending forward your accounts, as you hold quadruplicate vouchers. In regard to your own account, about which you inquire, you can charge that up for the time you have been in the islands, with commutation for quarters and fuel at the rates prescribed by the Secretary of War. Sea transportation to Nassau you can charge up at its actual cost to you in gold.

Please report at an early day to what extent and on what terms leather of the best quality, harness, upper, and sole, can be purchased in the islands. It is thought it may be drawn advantageously from Nova Scotia. How will that market compare with the European?

A. R. LAWTON,

Quartermaster-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 73. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., September 22, 1864.

I. The generals of reserves will hereafter control the enrolling officers and conduct the business of conscription and enrollment in their respective States, under the direction of the Secretary of War, through the Conscript Bureau.

II. Commandants of conscripts and of camps of instruction will be under the direction of the generals of reserves.

III. As soon as practicable all officers and men now employed in the enrolling service, whether as enrolling officers, conscript guards, clerks, or otherwise, except such as are retired or assigned to light duty by the medical boards, will be relieved by details from the reserve forces and sent to the field.

IV. All applications for exemption and detail will be transmitted, through the generals of reserves, to the superintendent of the Bureau of Conscription for decision. The office of Congressional district enrolling officer is abolished, and communications from local enrolling officers will be transmitted through the commandants of conscripts to the generals of reserves. An officer may be assigned to duty in each Congressional district by the generals of reserves as inspector of conscription.

V. The reports required to be furnished the Bureau of Conscription by paragraph X, General Orders, No. 57, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, current series, are often defective and incomplete—failing to give the county in which the man resides, where it is supposed he may be found, or such other information as may lead to his prompt arrest. The attention of regimental and company officers is especially directed to the terms of that order and their compliance therewith required. Only those men who have deserted or are absent from their commands without proper authority should be reported, and when all men so absent have been reported, it will be only necessary to report those who subsequently absolve themselves, until a return of the action taken by the enrolling officer is received, by the officer reporting such desertion or absence.

VI. Paragraph II, General Orders, No. 67, current series, is amended by striking out the words "will not be molested without a special order," and inserting the following language, "will be allowed to retain it on showing such right."

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

SPECIAL ORDERS, }	ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 225. }	Richmond, September 22, 1864.
*        *        *	*        *        *

III. The ten companies composing the organization known as Pickett's regiment Alabama cavalry, Roddey's command, will constitute the Tenth Regiment Alabama Cavalry, the field officers of which will be appointed by the War Department.

*        *        *        *        *        *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

C. S. ARMORY, Richmond, September 22, 1864.

Col. J. GORGAS,
Chief of Ordnance:

COLONEL: I beg to present for your information a list of rifle muskets manufactured North, and their places of manufacture:

Springfield U. S. rifle, manufactured at Springfield, Mass.

Philadelphia U. S. rifle, manufactured at Philadelphia, Pa.

Bridesburg U. S. rifle, manufactured at Bridesburg, Pa.

Park, Snow & Co. U. S. rifle, manufactured at Meriden, Conn.

Colt U. S. rifle, manufactured at Hartford, Conn.

Whitney U. S. rifle, manufactured at Whitneyville, Conn.

Wm. Muir & Co. U. S. rifle, manufactured at Windsor Locks, Conn.

Norwich U. S. rifle, manufactured at Norwich, Conn.

L. G. & Y. U. S. rifle, manufactured at Windsor, Vt.

Providence Tool Company U. S. rifle, manufactured at Providence, R. I.

E. Robinson U. S. rifle, manufactured at New York.

U. A. Co. U. S. rifle, manufactured at New York.

Remington U. S. rifle, manufactured at Ilion, N. Y.

Watertown U. S. rifle, manufactured at Watertown, Mass.

Wm. Mason U. S. rifle, manufactured at Taunton, Mass.
Eagleville Company U. S. rifle, manufactured at place not known.
Norfolk U. S. rifle, manufactured at Norfolk, Va.

Among the old arms received in this armory for repairs during the current month I have noticed the above arms from a variety of manufacturing establishments, all of them made after the U. S. '55 model and all interchanging with the Richmond rifle musket except in lock-plate and mainspring, which have been altered in the Northern arms.

I suppose there are in the North (including breech-loading) not less than thirty-eight armories, all on a large scale, and their total product probably will not fall short of 5,000 arms per day.

I am, colonel, your very obedient servant,

S. ADAMS,
Master Armorer.

[First indorsement.]

OCTOBER 16, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded to the President for notice.

This paper exhibits a most marked contrast to our own condition in this respect. We are not making an average of 100 arms per day in the Confederacy, though we have machinery enough to make 300 (including pistols), and would soon have the workmen if they could remain undisturbed.

I cannot help thinking that the policy of the War Department ought to be modified so far as to appropriate to this duty 500 or 600 men liable to military duty. This, with the exempts, would form a sufficient force. It would be necessary to relieve them from all military duty and attach them permanently to this duty.

J. GORGAS,
Chief of Ordnance.

[Second indorsement.]

OCTOBER 18, 1864.

Secretary of War for examination and report.*

J. D.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 226. } Richmond, September 23, 1864.

* * * * *

XXIV. The Third Battalion Local Defense Troops having been increased to ten companies, will from this day be known as the Third Regiment Local Defense Troops.

* * * * *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, DISTRICT OF NEW ORLEANS,
Tangipahoa, La., September 23, 1864.

Hon. G. A. TRENHOLM,
Secretary of the Treasury, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of instruction of the 12th ultimo, together with the letter of A. G.

* In this connection see Special Orders, No. 228 (paragraph IV), Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, Series I, Vol. XLII, Part II, p. 1293.

Semmes, to which my special attention was directed. Although the Government appears to be indebted for the information contained in the letter of Mr. S. to his failure in procuring one of the lucrative contracts to which he refers, and though the forces cited were imperfectly understood and stated, the latter expresses the general complaint and dissatisfaction of those who from loyalty or inability have not participated in this contraband traffic. This population may be divided into three classes: Those who have been directly or indirectly concerned in this trade; those who desire to do so, but are unable, and those who abstain from considerations of loyalty and respect for law, the latter being an honored but almost invisible minority. In my correspondence with the Department for nearly two years past I have repeatedly and more explicitly stated all these facts. In the note referring the letter of Mr. Semmes to you, Mr. Seddon remarks:

Probably the best mode of preventing the trade would be to establish along the military frontier collecting districts, and to instruct the collectors to exert all their powers to prohibit the trade and to call upon the military for assistance.

The first suggestion is impracticable, because it implies the establishment of a line of pickets by this department on the whole frontier. The second is precisely what I have been aiming to do—that is, making the military pickets auxiliary to this department, but which it will require an order from the Secretary of War direct to put in practice. I have from the beginning called upon the military to do this without effect.

In regard to the disposal of the cotton belonging to the Government I know of none in this locality, and being ignorant of its wants or policy I do not feel warranted in expressing any opinion entitled to weight or consideration. Should, however, further reflection or an interview with General Hodge give me any strong convictions on the subject I will venture to submit them.

In regard to the exchange of sugar produced near the Mississippi for the commissary east of Pearl River, it seems to me it will be a difficult matter and can only be done by seizure and impressment, as the sugar, if left to the laws of trade, would find its natural market in New Orleans, unless the Government could prevent the greater attraction of offering its cotton in exchange. I think, too, the amount within our reach must be very small, as a sort of retributive fatality seems to have followed the cultivation of plantations by peonage, or hired freedmen, within or near the lines of the enemy. Last year those who hired plantations to cultivate sugar met with heavy losses, and this year, with the tempting prospects of high prices, they rushed madly into cotton, which the army worm, particularly on the alluvial lands, has literally swept from the face of the earth, in some instances hundreds of acres scarce making a bale.

In relation to trade with the enemy, I have not only endeavored to enforce the law of February 6, 1864, but the law of May 19, 1862, by incessant remonstrance and notification to the military authorities, and I can truly say that my organization, however much it has failed to cover the whole ground, has been the principal barrier to this trade, in proof of which I beg leave to refer to my letters of the 13th and 27th of November, 1863, and accompanying report.

Though at that time I could, by the mere moral force of my office, stop a whole train of wagons, to such an extent has the demoralization increased that the same attempt now would probably endanger my life. No law or regulation can be enforced except by the exhibition of military power.

On hearing that General Hodge had assumed the command of the district I addressed a letter to him, copy of which is inclosed, marked A, at the same time inclosing to him copy of your letter to me of August 2, 1864, and yet under date of the 13th instant a permit was issued, as per copy inclosed, marked B, in which no objection to procure a clearance from this office or to pay the export duty is expressed, nor has any import duty been paid on any goods furnished by these contractors. It is also to be noted in relation to this permit that if wagons carrying cotton under it do not meet a picket, or the picket fails to indorse it, an unlimited amount may be carried out under a permit to export a few bales, and I am credibly informed that cotton is now being hauled in every direction to the lines of the enemy.

I do not refer to these facts to complain of General Hodge, but to exculpate myself from any want of vigilance or remissness in the discharge of my duty. I am bound to presume that General Hodge is acting according to his instructions, or that he is doing all he can to enforce the law on this subject, and that if he is unable to do so it is because the accumulated tendency to traffic on an extended border, restrained, as it were, only by a long and leaky levee, has at length culminated in a crevasse which it is impossible to check or control until the cotton has all flowed out, which is perhaps the best thing that could happen, if happen it must.

It is extremely difficult in the exercise of a "benevolent discretion" to bend the right lines of the law to individual cases. The frontier or border classes are here considered rather the favored ones, for though alternately protected and raided on by both parties, they are said to be repaid an hundredfold as the intermediaries in the exaggerated profits of this border traffic; and as it is not the really worthy and needy who are the first to partake of these beneficent provisions of the Government, if I may be permitted a homely illustration, it is like attempting to feed a weakly pig at the common trough, who is likely to perish before his lusty fellows become sufficiently gorged to give him room. If I was invested to-day with the authority to give permits to ship a few bales of cotton to all who should prove themselves in want, there is hardly a man, woman, or child in this district who would not prove, by moral and legal evidence, that they required it—the poor to satisfy absolute wants, the affluent to supply the vacuum created by impressments and voluntary or compulsory hospitality.

I duly appreciate your kind offer to approve my nomination of a deputy collector should the business of my department require it, but I think all that it is possible or practicable to do may be done by inspectors of the revenue, whom I have appointed and suspended from time to time as occasion required.

I have endeavored to administer my office without unnecessary parade or expense. All the additional service I may need would be mostly itinerary, when the party would be subjected to great privations and hard fare, to which I could not with propriety invite the gentlemen you have suggested.

It is, moreover, very difficult for a stranger out of the Army to subsist here, and I have only been able to do so by a small farming interest I had near here before the war and the services of a few servants.

Since writing the foregoing a party who had a load of cotton seized by my orders placed in my hands Special Orders, No. 11, of September 11, 1864, of General Hodge, a copy of which is herewith inclosed, marked C, under which the authority for moving is claimed.

This order may be in accordance with a policy of the War Department which it is not my province to question, but I respectfully submit that if "no restrictions are to be placed on the transit or removal of property of any kind within the military lines of this command, and no citizen is to be molested in any disposition as to locality he desires to make of his property," this department ought not to be held responsible for any infractions of the law prohibiting the transportation of cotton toward the lines of the enemy, though I shall continue to exert all the efforts in my power to enforce the laws and regulations as enjoined upon me.

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant.

F. H. HATCH,
Collector.

[First indorsement.]

OCTOBER 1, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

Respectfully referred to Honorable Secretary of War, and his co-operation earnestly requested in the efforts to arrest this unlawful traffic. The orders of General Hodge, if not attended with some safeguards, will reopen the door wide for all the irregularities hitherto so loudly complained of. I would respectfully recommend that orders, such as that marked B, should embody a condition that the cotton should be allowed to pass only when it is indorsed upon the order by an officer of the customs that the export duty has been paid; and that no payment should be made to contractors for goods except upon the exhibition of a certificate from the collector that the import duties have been paid. I respectfully request that instructions to this effect may be sent to General Hodge.

G. A. TRENHOLM,
Secretary of the Treasury.

[Second indorsement.]

OCTOBER 16, 1864.

Let a letter be written to General Hodge suggesting that the duties on cotton exported under the contracts of the Department or commanders, and the goods imported, should all be required to pay duties, and that his action should secure such course.

J. A. S.

[Third indorsement.]

Honorable SECRETARY OF WAR:

I do not think that the officers in command in Mississippi or on the Gulf of Mexico can be trusted to regulate the cotton trade. I would not allow them to grant permission even for the purpose of collecting supplies. Experience has shown that they cannot or will not manage the matter judiciously, and there are pernicious and extensive consequences from bad management—

[Incomplete.]

[Inclosures.]

A.

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, DISTRICT OF NEW ORLEANS,

Tangipahoa, La., September 4, 1864.

Brig. Gen. GEORGE B. HODGE,

Comdg. Dist. of Southwest Miss. and East La., Clinton, La.:

GENERAL: I have the pleasure to inclose herewith copy of a letter just received from the Secretary of the Treasury clearly defining the law relative to the exemption of articles from import duty. This has always been my opinion and the policy I have endeavored to carry out, but hitherto have been unable to do so for the want of that cordial and active co-operation on the part of the military authorities alike expected by the Government and commanded by the public interests. The reason for that indisposition to aid this department it is, perhaps, not my province to determine, but I sincerely trust that under your administration of the district this will be remedied, though I am quite sensible of its demoralized condition and the herculean and almost impossible task before you.

In a condition of war I am dependent almost solely upon the military for protection and aid in the discharge of my official duties and to enable me to execute the laws and to carry out the instructions of the Treasury Department. I have respectfully to request that you will instruct all officers in your district appointed to receive dutiable articles furnished by army contractors to take possession of such goods and the invoices accompanying and to forward the invoices under seal to this office or to an officer of this department, but not to release or accept delivery of the goods until a certificate is furnished from this department certifying that the duties have been paid. This course I regard as alike important to the interests of your department and mine, in view of the fact that large quantities of inferior goods are being introduced, likely to be palmed off on the Government or sold on speculation, without paying the duties established by law.

In this connection permit me to suggest that for convenience and protection this department should be under the supervision of one inspector, lest goods rejected at one point should be received at another, a thing which I have reason to believe has already been done. Major Ravesies, assigned to local work at Osyka, would be a most suitable officer to take the general charge of this business. He is capable and reliable.

I have also to request that you will instruct all officers and soldiers of your command to seize and report to this department all merchandise brought into this district on which the duties have not been paid.

If military permits are granted to export cotton, I beg that you will continue the practice heretofore adopted of first requiring a certificate from this office that the export duties have been paid.

Tendering you that cordial co-operation which should characterize the relations between officers of co-ordinate branches of the public service,

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. H. HATCH,
Collector.

B.

HDQRS. SOUTHWEST MISSISSIPPI AND EAST LOUISIANA,
Liberty, September 13, 1864.

Thompson, Thayer, and Adams, having contracted with the officers of the Confederate States Government to deliver certain supplies, and having delivered supplies to the amount of $6,239.29, as evinced by the receipt of the agent of Capt. A. C. Herndon, chief quartermaster of this district, and said goods having been approved and passed by the board of officers appointed to inspect and appraise the same, the said Thompson, Thayer, and Adams are permitted to pass through the lines forty-six bales of cotton of their own property, with the understanding that upon the return of Captain Herndon from department headquarters they will obtain from him a requisition for the same number of bales upon the produce loan agent of the Confederate States Government. The pickets will pass that amount of cotton, but each officer commanding a picket through which said cotton passes will indorse on this permit the number of bales passed, and they will be careful to see that only forty-six bales pass, and the officers passing the last lot will return this permit to these headquarters.

By order Brigadier-General Hodge:

N. T. N. ROBINSON,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

C.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
 No. 11. }

HDQRS. DISTRICT OF HOMOCHITTO,
Liberty, Miss., September 11, 1864.

* * * * *

5. The military officers of this district are reminded that no restrictions are to be imposed upon the transit or removal of property within the military lines of this command. No citizen will be molested in any disposition as to locality he desires to make of his property, except in attempts to pass it through the lines in the direction of the enemy. Where cotton or tobacco is found under circumstances which create a reasonable suspicion that it is to be illegally passed over to the enemy it will, in accordance to the laws of Congress and the orders of the War Department, be seized and turned over to the nearest Confederate States district marshal.

* * * * *

By order:

GEO. B. HODGE,
Brigadier-General.

---

SURGEON-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., September 23, 1864.

Surg. RICHARD POTTS,
Medical Purveyor, Montgomery, Ala.:

SIR: You are directed to purchase for the use of the Medical Department all the apple brandy that can be obtained in your district at a price not to exceed $35 per gallon, and as much less as possible. You will instruct your purchasing agents to make it appear that they are buying on private account. It is believed if it were known that the Government was the purchaser the price would be materially enhanced.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. P. MOORE,
Surgeon-General C. S. Army.

RICHMOND, VA., September 23, 1864.

Brig. Gen. G. B. HODGE,
Liberty, via Summit, Miss.:

I have no power to authorize such trade with the enemy.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

RICHMOND, September 23, 1864.

Mr. THOMAS SHARP,
Bonded Agent, Quartermaster's Department:
(Care J. B. Ferguson, Manchester, England.)

SIR: Your report in regard to the progress made in purchasing machinery for the manufacture of army shoes has been received. I am gratified to see that you have succeeded in purchasing so fairly with the means at your command, and your investment in the machinery for making sewed shoes, favored as they are in the French service, is approved. I hope all will come safely in. Be careful to assort the machinery and divide it in shipment, and in forwarding the same be sure to secure from Bermuda some in the fastest vessels. Let it be marked so that its character can be readily ascertained, and forward invoices in advance, so that the freight can be distributed from Wilmington. Be sure that the articles, for the purchase of which Major Waller retained £500 of your money, are had, and should you need an addition to your present means to secure them or other desirable pieces of machinery do not hesitate to call upon Major Ferguson or Mr. McRae for it. You should by all means send in a liberal supply of shoemakers' tools for field use and shoemakers' findings. In this connection I will add that Major Ferguson has been written to to purchase leather. The receipt of this machinery will increase the consumption of that material, and it becomes important to secure some from abroad, especially as it can be had thoroughly tanned. Your experience may aid Major Ferguson in the purchase, and it would be well for you to bring a large lot of carefully selected leather in with you.

The machinery for the manufacture of blankets should be secured by all means. To cover risk of passage and to increase the production for which you have estimated, four sets had better be purchased. At a cost of £2,300 each it will prove an excellent investment, and they will serve to make the Confederacy independent of the foreign market and of the contingencies of the blockade. The value of this machinery will be enhanced if a knowledge of the process of extracting wool from rags, which you state has proved a success, can be had on reasonable terms. Submit this matter to Major Ferguson, and between you the authority is conferred to purchase this knowledge at a fair price, or to secure, if need be, the services of the party to whom you refer as cognizant of the process, provided, of course, the latter involves no extravagance. Any process by which from one ton of rags half a ton of wool can be extracted at a cost of 1 pence a pound will prove of great value to the Confederacy.

As wool is scarce in the Confederacy, it will be better to purchase but one machine for the manufacture of blankets, unless the process referred to can be had and be relied upon to increase the quantity.

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

RICHMOND, September 23, 1864.

Maj. J. B. FERGUSON,

Quartermaster, Manchester, England:

SIR: I have just written to Mr. Thomas Sharp fully upon the subject of machinery for the manufacture of blankets. He has been directed to confer with you, and you will please do all you can to arrange for its purchase. You must exercise your discretion in connection with making available the process of extracting wool from rags. If it has proved a success in England it will be of great practical value here. It may even be of service in the manufacture of cloth.

I inclose for your information and action, should circumstances permit, requisitions for articles needed by the field transportation branch of this department and by the Signal Corps, for the wants of which I am expected to provide. As time goes on and you see that the estimate referred to in my last communication is in a fair way to be responded to, you will endeavor to provide the articles called for, and in the event of making shipments you will be particular to advise this office respecting the same, and in a manner that will enable it to identify the supplies, and so control their destination from Wilmington.

In referring as I did in my previous communication to the advantage of purchasing all gray cloths instead of part blue, I included material for soldiers as well as officers.

The necessities of officers are so great that there is no necessity to purchase the first quality of cloth. The question has become one rather of quantity, due regard being had to wearing properties. The same is to some extent true of stationery. If any material economy can be effected and so the quantity of purchase increased by buying a plain but serviceable article, it had better be done. A further saving as to stationery may be effected by purchasing letter paper, full note size.

A few thousand yards of officers' cloth—say 5,000—and a limited quantity of stationery, each of superior quality, might be sent in for special purposes. Some water-proof material will be acceptable, and there is no article more serviceable to the Army for fall and winter wear than the flannel or worsted shirts, or the material for their manufacture.

The water-proof material must be postponed to an abundant supply of woolen goods, as also must the inclosed requisition.*

A. R. LAWTON,

Quartermaster-General.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,

Raleigh, September 23, 1864.

His Excellency Governor M. L. BONHAM,

Columbia, S. C.:

DEAR SIR: The Legislatures of the various States will soon be in session. It will become them to take such steps in aid of the common cause as the perilous and straightened condition of the country demands. The great evil of desertion must be broken up, if possible; provision must be made to feed the poor, and the feeble and desponding must be encouraged and inspired with hope; and, beyond all else, men must be sent to the armies of Generals Lee and Hood. To find how and where to get these men is the great object of inquiry. Large numbers, no doubt, are in the various departments of the Confederate Government who could be sent to the field and their places filled by non-combatants. It will be for the Confederate Government to look after these. There are also numbers engaged in the various State departments who might be spared. And there is yet a large class of State officers in all the States withheld from service, not only on account of the necessity for them in administering the governments, but also because the principle of States sovereignty rendered it improper to allow the Confederate Government to conscript them. This latter class I suppose to be quite numerous in all the States, and could there be a way prescribed to put at least a portion of them into service without injuring the efficiency of the State governments, and without infringing upon the rights of the States and their dignity as sovereigns, they would constitute quite a material re-enforcement to our hard-pressed armies. It seems indeed desirable beyond doubt. However, it is especially desirable that action on this and all kindred matters should be uniform, or as nearly so as possible. It would avoid much discontent for every man to know that he was required to do only that which every one else has to do, and that the burdens of the war are fairly distributed. In order to attain this uniformity, as well as to consult on any other matter of possible concern which might present itself, I beg leave respectfully to suggest a meeting of all the Southern Executives on this side of the Mississippi at some such point as Augusta, Ga., during the coming month of October, when and where some general plan of action might be agreed upon for the relief of the country, and recommended to our several Legislatures. Should such a suggestion meet with favor at your hands, I would be greatly pleased to hear from you in regard to the time and place of meeting. Any time, so far as I can now see, will suit me, and any place within three days' travel by rail.

* Not found.

I am, Governor, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Z. B. VANCE.

(Letters of the same tenor with the preceding one were to-day sent to the Governors of Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Virginia.)

---

[SEPTEMBER 24, 25, and 28, 1864.—For correspondence between Whiting and Vance, in relation to the organization of North Carolina troops for the defense of Wilmington, &c., see Series I, Vol. XLII, Part II, pp. 1282, 1289, 1300.]

---

[SEPTEMBER 25, 1864.—For General Orders, No. 75, Trans-Mississippi Department, placing the Reserve Corps under control of the superintendent of the Conscription Bureau, see Series I, Vol. XLI, Part III, p. 955.]

---

GENERAL ORDERS,	}	CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
		WAR DEPARTMENT,
No. 75.		ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE, Richmond, Va., September 26, 1864.

I. The troops raised under the act of Congress approved February 17, 1864, styled "Reserves," constitute a peculiar force, auxiliary to, but in a measure distinct from, the more permanent army, and are exclusively under the orders of the general officers assigned to their command in theseveral States, subject to the following modifications:

When a commander of active forces requires the reserves as re-enforcements, application will be made to the Secretary of War, or directly to the general commanding the reserves; and when reserves are assigned in pursuance of such application to a district, department, or army commander they become, during the period of such assignment, subject to his control to the extent that he alone will direct their military movements, determine all applications for furlough, and be responsible for their being furnished with the necessary supplies, equipments, &c.; but questions appertaining to their permanent organization into companies, battalions, and regiments, the grant of discharges, details, &c., will at all times be determined by the general commanding reserves.

When reserves are assigned to the active forces by the War Department its order will be necessary for their recall; but when transferred by the general commanding reserves he may recall them at his discretion, the orders therefor being transmitted through the commander of the district, department, or army in which such reserves may be serving; but if their detention be deemed by him indispensable he shall immediately submit the question to this office for the decision of the War Department, in the meantime retaining the reserves affected by such orders.

During the assignment of reserves with the active forces the commanding officer will have punctually transmitted to the general commanding reserves a monthly return of such reserve troops, similar to that required by paragraph 445, Army Regulations, to be made to the Adjutant and Inspector General.

Whenever reserves are serving with active forces no discrimination in the issue of rations and supplies of camp equipage between the two classes of troops will be permitted.

II. The following prices, being the average of late schedules established by commissioners for the States east of the Mississippi River, with cost of transportation included, will be charged for subsistence stores sold to officers under the act of February 17, 1864, and amendments, in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and East Louisiana until further orders:

Bacon, $2.50 per pound; fresh beef, 70 cents per pound; flour, $40 per barrel; corn-meal, $4.50 per bushel of 50 pounds; rice, 30 cents per pound; peas, $6.50 per bushel of 60 pounds; sugar, $3 per pound; coffee, $6 per pound; candles, $3.25 per pound; soap, $1 per pound; vinegar, $2.50 per gallon; molasses, $10 per gallon; salt, 30 cents per pound.

III. Non-commissioned officers and privates are allowed rations for their own use, but this privilege does not authorize the sale or other disposition of them. If it is impracticable to use the ration, commutation may be drawn in lieu thereof.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

SURGEON-GENERAL'S OFFICE,

Richmond, Va., September 26, 1864.

Surg. W. A. CARRINGTON,
Medical Director, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: It has been ascertained that the ashes from wheat straw is an excellent substitute for oak-wood ashes for the manufacture of soap. You are instructed so to inform the surgeons in charge of hospitals under your jurisdiction, and to direct them that whenever wheat straw becomes no longer fit for use in the hospitals to have it collected and burned and the ashes used for the manufacture of soap. It is not always practicable to procure oak wood for this purpose, and the present method of obtaining lye is suggested not only as a matter of convenience, but also as a great saving to the Government.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. P. MOORE,
Surgeon-General C. S. Army.

SEPTEMBER 26, 1864.

Honorable SECRETARY OF WAR:

Some time in November, 1863, I promised to let Mr. J. P. H. Campbell have twenty barrels corn for his own use, but in February, when I came to deliver it, I found that I could not spare more than half the quantity, having sold to Government and to families of soldiers in the Army at Government price as much as I could spare, and then proposed to let him have oats or wheat of this year's crop to make up deficiency, but having executed my bond in May to the Government as an exempted farmer a doubt arose as to my right to dispose of the grain in the manner agreed upon, and I am not only willing but prefer to deliver the grain, if not inconsistent with my obligations to the Government, and will [do] so when relieved.

GEORGE TYLER.

[First indorsement.]

COMMISSARY-GENERAL:

Presented by Mr. Campbell, whose address is Panola Station, Caroline County, Va. Mr. Campbell is the gentleman to whom Mr. Tyler was under contract and represents his want of the forage as extreme. It was sold to him at Government prices.

R. G. H. KEAN.

[Second indorsement.]

OCTOBER 3, 1864.

Respectfully referred to chief commissary of subsistence for Virginia for reply.

By order of Commissary-General of Subsistence:

T. U. DUDLEY, JR.,
Captain and Assistant Commissary of Subsistence.

[Third indorsement.]

OFFICE CHIEF COM. OF SUBSISTENCE FOR VIRGINIA,

Richmond, October 4, 1864.

Respectfully returned through Commissary-General of Subsistence, disapproved as contrary to the law of Congress and the bond of the party, which requires the party "to sell the marketable surplus of grain and other provisions now (then) on hand and which he may raise from year to year, &c.," to the Government and soldiers' families at schedule prices.

B. P. NOLAND,
Major and Chief Commissary of Subsistence for Virginia.

[Fourth indorsement.]

BUREAU OF SUBSISTENCE,
Richmond, October 8, 1864.

Respectfully returned to Secretary of War, calling attention to indorsement of Major Noland, which is approved.

L. B. NORTHROP,
Commissary-General of Subsistence.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., September 27, 1864.

Lieut. Gen. R. TAYLOR,
Commanding, Meridian, Miss.:

GENERAL: A number of inspection reports have brought to my notice the existence of very great irregularity and abuse in the administration of your department, and that a reform is imperatively required. These reports refer to facts and circumstances which arose long previous to your assumption of the command of the department, and the consequences from which it will scarcely be in your power wholly to remove. The most important of the matters referred to is the illegal traffic and intercourse with the enemy, and the disloyalty and disaffection that have ensued from it.

Congress as early as 1861 prohibited the export of cotton except through Confederate ports, and afterward tobacco, rice, sugar, naval and military stores were made subject to the same regulations.

In February last all trade in these articles beyond the Confederacy was prohibited except under special regulations to be made by the President, and any trade carried on or attempted contrary to, or not in conformity with, the regulations subjected the property to seizure and forfeiture, together with the vessels or vehicles employed in the transport of the articles and the slaves and animals that might be used as instruments for the purpose. The regulations of the President require, as a condition for the exportation of these articles, that a license shall be obtained from the collector of the district from which the export is to be made, upon an application to him according to the regulations and upon compliance with conditions imposed in them.

The duties of the military commanders in respect to these laws are exhibited in Orders No. 43, of the current series, in which the provisions of the act are sufficiently set forth. The inspection reports show that it has been the habit of the officers of the department to grant licenses to trade with the ports and posts of the enemy, and that the community at large have been seduced by the example into doing the same thing, in total violation or disregard of the acts of Congress. They show that there are a number of impostors—men professing to be agents of the Government or licensed by some of its officers to conduct this trade—and that as a consequence of this licentiousness the patriotism and public spirit of the community have seriously diminished. In fact, only one or two contracts for special supplies have been made with the sanction of the Department, and such have, it is believed, expired by their limitation.

The Department expects of you to disabuse the minds of all the officers and soldiers in the army in reference to the legality of this trade. It should be prohibited at once; the guilty parties, if officers, should be brought to trial.

Orders No. 43 will show you the duties of the commanding general in respect to all unlicensed transactions.

The Treasury Department has appointed Mr. Clapp as its general agent, and he can inform you whether any, and if any, what, transactions are carried on with the license of the Government.

A second source of abuse is the manner in which private property has been taken, upon the pretense that it is for the public use. The power to take private property for public use is conferred by Congress in the acts concerning impressments. It is a power to be exercised only in cases of necessity and according to law.

The general commanding a department can direct an impressment of property for public use, and this Department has conferred the same power upon the chiefs of the bureaus of supply by the authority of the law. In either case the power should be executed under specific orders, and by officers accountable for the property taken.

In the State of Mississippi officers of every grade and of every arm have gone through the State without special orders, without money, gathering up property where they could find it, refusing payment, neglecting to ascertain or adjust the price, leaving insufficient evidence of their acts, and in most of the cases rendering to none of the departments of supply, nor to the department commanders, any account of these acts or authority for their acts.

The most scandalous outrages have been practiced upon the citizens of that State by the lawless conduct of subaltern officers. A special source of grievance is the formation of cavalry bands by the impressment of horses for the purpose. The general orders of the Department prohibit this. The Department anticipates from your action a correction of these abuses.

The same reports exhibit as a source of disorder the existence in the State of a large number of organized, undisciplined bands, composed of men who are evading military service by their connection with these. The Department has long ago abandoned the habit of granting licenses to individuals to raise military commands. All that have at any time been granted and that have not been fulfilled are now inoperative.

There is nothing to interfere with the operation of the conscription laws. It empowers you to reduce into order and organization the various detached companies that may have been legally raised and are completed for service, and such as are not in that state should be disbanded, and those who are liable to conscription should be conscribed.

Intimately connected with the matters of illegal and unauthorized organizations is that of the deserting from the Army. It is said that there is a constant flux of the military population of this side of the Mississippi to the west of the river, and that a very large number of absentees from the Army have found shelter in Mississippi.

The present condition of the service is such as to awaken the most serious concern. At a time when the wants of the country require every man to be at his post, a fatal laxity in the discipline of our armies has become manifest. The highest military crime, desertion, is committed almost with impunity. There does not appear on the part of a deserter to be any difficulty in obtaining shelter in any section of the country, or even in a different portion of the Army from that in which he is serving. Your attention is called particularly to this subject from the fact that the reports to the Department show that deserters and absentees from the Army without leave abound in that State.

The same reports show that in a number of the cavalry regiments in service in Mississippi the discipline is lax, and that the number of absentees is unusually large. The reports show the general condition of that arm of the service to be unsatisfactory.

Circumstances in the history of the war in Mississippi furnish an explanation for the matter of these reports; but such a condition of disorganization and derangement cannot long exist without producing the most mischievous consequences. Some of the abuses can be removed and some of the consequences repaired.

A firm, steady, and considerate administration would in a short time inspire confidence and inaugurate authority. The Department cannot too strongly invoke your co-operation and aid in producing these results.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, September 28, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: Governor Vance in this truly "extraordinary" letter* specifies three grounds of complaint against this department:

First. Interference with his factories by the revocation of details.

Second. Impediments thrown in the way of the State in connection with running the blockade.

Third. Interference generally with the operations of the quartermaster's department of the State.

In regard to the first, it is enough for me to say that the power to grant and make details rests with another and an independent bureau. What its action has been I am not even advised, and the complaint from Governor Vance first informed me of any change in its practice. That action has resulted, no doubt, from the earnest desire felt by the authorities of the Confederate States to place, for the present emergency at least, as many men as possible in the ranks, and was not prompted by me.

Respecting the second, I may say as much. The control of that subject is also in other hands, and to what Governor Vance alludes I am, as you are well aware, even now wholly ignorant. This Bureau has no authority in the premises, and it has never made to either the War Department or to Lieutenant-Colonel Bayne, in charge of the Bureau of Foreign Supply, a single suggestion affecting, however remotely, the interest of the State of North Carolina.

Touching the third complaint, I must go more into detail. The reflections cast by Governor Vance upon this department call for it, as does a sense of duty to the service at large.

* See September 19, p. 671.

Governor Vance states that North Carolina made a contract to furnish her own troops in the field, and that to enable her to do so it was agreed that the resources of the State should be left to her management. He then adds that this understanding was immediately disregarded by the action of competing Confederate agencies, but that it is still his boast and pride that the State authorities have nobly fulfilled their contract. I respectfully but confidently submit that an impartial statement of the whole case will show that there is no occasion for the indulgence on his part of either pride or boasting. I know of no agreement by which the resources of the State of North Carolina were dedicated to the exclusive benefit of the troops therefrom. This department at an early period of the war agreed that in consideration North Carolina clothed her soldiers, and to the extent only that she did so, the commutation money due the soldiers should be drawn by the State. When payment of commutation was abolished, in October, 1862, it was further agreed that the State should be paid certain prices for all the clothing she furnished. In each case it was contemplated that State action should come in as auxiliary to the efforts of this Bureau, and not to supplant them. It resulted, however, otherwise. State agencies gradually encroached until at last, while all the other States of the Confederacy were contributing generously to the common cause, North Carolina alone husbanded her resources for North Carolina troops. The injustice of this was felt sorely, and a full appreciation of the delicate relations of the States and Confederate Government, coupled with an earnest desire to avoid all perplexing questions between them, alone restrained this Bureau from protesting against the existing arrangement. That injustice is manifest in connection, too, with the factories, from the following statistics:

In the State of South Carolina there are 9 factories, in Georgia 36 (5 now destroyed by the enemy and others in peril), in Alabama 9, in Florida 1, in Mississippi 1, and in Virginia 26; aggregate 80. The production of these on Government account is inadequate and the deficiency is now increased by the want of raw material in Virginia. In North Carolina alone there are some 40 factories, woolen and cotton, from not one of which has this Bureau realized for years past a single yard of material for the service at large. All has been reserved and expended in the manufacture of clothing for North Carolina troops and in relieving the necessities of the home population by sales at low prices of material secured at low prices in consideration of invaluable details granted by the Confederate States. This condition of things, too, was aggravated by the action of the authorities of North Carolina in drawing material from other States. Wool was drawn from Virginia and leather from States to the south of it, and both leather and wool in considerable quantities from the trans-Mississippi country. Feeling the hardship of this the department sought relief by proposing early in 1862 that the whole arrangement should be abrogated. This was not accepted. It then proposed that all clothing manufactured by the State should be turned over for general issue, engaging to supply in the first instance North Carolina troops to any extent their necessities might require. This was also refused. The result has been that, while at times Confederate soldiers from other States have suffered for supplies, North Carolina soldiers have been amply supplied and the State has held large quantities of clothing in reserve. Governor Vance has made both the matter of boast in recent speeches. This clothing accumulated not only at Raleigh in bulk, but in smaller quantities in the distributing depots of the State. Less than one month ago General Gardner, as commandant of this post, brought to the attention of this Bureau the fact that a large lot of clothing—several thousand suits—were stored in this city. On inquiry it proved to be as was supposed—North Carolina clothing that had been there over a year.

Governor Vance says that he has never refused to loan supplies. He was never approached on that subject but once. In December last, when this department was straitened for supplies by reason of its heavy losses at sea and the unexpected demands upon it to meet the wants of General Longstreet's army in East Tennessee, and at a time, too, when its woolen material had run so low that the clothing factory at this point had to suspend work, Governor Vance was appealed to for aid, but he extended none. At that time the North Carolina troops were all clad and a surplus was reported on hand sufficient for the entire year of 1864.

Some 10,000 suits of clothing turned over by Governor Vance to such Confederate officers as he elected to serve, and 10,000 more turned over within a few months past to this department for general issue, make the total advances extended by the State within the past three years. I am safe in saying these will not cover the issues that had to be made to North Carolina troops within the same period from Confederate States supplies to meet the exigencies of field service.

It is suggested that a sense of duty to the soldiers of North Carolina will not permit Governor Vance to surrender everything to this department. It would be difficult for him to show that as much was ever asked by me, though encouraged to it by the example of all other State authorities within the limits of the Confederacy. With him the department has asked but little and obtained less. It would have been and is now content that he should receive one-third of the production of the factories for North Carolina soldiers exclusively, asking only that it may receive a like proportion for the benefit of soldiers from all sections of the Confederacy.

The importations of the State from abroad being additions to the resources of the country and the result of credit and management on the part of the State have always been conceded as the subject of special appropriation; but can there be aught else than injustice in a system that devotes the entire product of a single State—that, too, one rich in resources—to the sole benefit of the troops therefrom? What under it is to become of troops that have no home resources to rely on—of the troops from Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Louisiana, and the distant regions of Texas, Arkansas, and Missouri?

Our cause is a common one, our soldiers struggle for it in common, and I submit what the country affords should be freely shared in common.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

---

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Columbia, September 28, 1864.

His Excellency Z. B. VANCE,

Governor of North Carolina:

DEAR SIR: I have received your letter proposing a meeting at Augusta, Ga., of the Governors of the Southern States during the coming month of October, with a view of securing some uniformity of action for filling the ranks of our Army, and your proposition meets my entire approval. Augusta is a very suitable place, and possibly the most central for us all. The day should be as early as practicable, but the danger in making it so is that we will not have present the Governors west of the Mississippi. This, I fear, will not be practicable under two months, which would be too late for the approaching sessions of our Legislatures, that of this State meeting on the fourth Monday in November next. In assenting to your proposition it is proper that I should state that in South Carolina no persons are reserved to the State, but all have gone into Confederate service from the classes of militia officers, magistrates, deputy clerks, and deputy sheriffs, except in one or two cases where the Confederate Government has detailed them or exempted them, and several other classes, all of which classes I have understood in several of the States have been reserved by the States or by the Executives thereof. Whilst I think each State should have a permanent force of its own, as matters now stand it is better that every one who can be spared should go into the Confederate service; but the most important thing now to be done, in my judgment, to fill our ranks and secure the greatest harmony and satisfaction among our people is placing in service the army of efficient officials and detailed men scattered through the Confederacy, whose duties can as well or better be performed by inferior men, disabled officers and soldiers, citizens exempted by Confederate law from service in the field, and persons over fifty years of age.

Very respectfully and truly, yours,

M. L. BONHAM.

AUGUSTA, September 29, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War:

SIR: The idea may or may not have been presented to you of employing negroes in the Army as soldiers in this way: Promise them (those employed) freedom when the war is over. Compensate the owners, of course, by interest-bearing bonds. All the able-bodied men might be used certainly as effectively as the Yankees use them against us. Let the negroes fight negroes and he will show much more courage than when opposed to white men. Confront them with Yankee negroes and place bayonets behind them.

The institution of slavery would still be maintained by the retention of boys, women, and exempted or detailed men (negroes), the lives of our fellow-citizens to some extent preserved, and provisions sufficient still produced by this efficient portion of our society. My name would add nothing. I hope your practical mind will adopt the suggestion, though anonymous. Our bleeding country requires a quick and stringent remedy. Don't stop for forms.

Very respectfully, &c.,

A NATIVE GEORGIAN.

After the war the negroes (enfranchised) might be colonized—say in Mexico, if practicable, or Central America.

[Indorsement.]

OCTOBER 6, 1864.

Noted. If all the white men capable of bearing arms are put in the field it would be as large a draft as a community could continuously sustain, and whites are better soldiers than negroes. For war, when existence is staked, the best material should be used.

J. A. S.,
Secretary.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 232. } Richmond, September 30, 1864.
* * * * *

VI. Capt. E. T. D. Myers, Engineer Corps, Provisional Army, C. S., is hereby assigned with Col. C. F. M. Garnett and Lieut. Col. Minor Meriwether in the commission for the collection and distribution of railroad iron, and in addition to his duties as such will be charged from time to time, under the direction of the Engineer Bureau, with the duplication of railroad bridges and the repair and reconstruction of railroads injured or destroyed by the enemy and judged necessary for the transportation of troops and supplies.

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., September 30, 1864.
General M. J. WRIGHT,
Macon, Ga.:

The enlistment of Irish and other foreign prisoners, as proposed, is sanctioned.*

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

CHARLESTON, September 30, 1864.
Hon. J. A. SEDDON:

About 260 prisoners, foreigners, at Florence have volunteered for our service. In consultation with General Beauregard I recommend and ask that Maj. Henry Bryan, assistant adjutant-general, and Capt. J. H. Brooks, of Nelson's battalion, Hagood's brigade, be ordered to Florence without delay to organize them into a battalion. Many others may be obtained. I will await your instructions before taking any other steps in matter.

SAM. JONES,
Major-General.

[Indorsement.]

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

Order these two officers to report to General Jones for the purpose indicated. In sending the order transferring Captain Brooks, explain to his superior officer the purpose for which his services are required.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

* This in reply to Wright, of September 29, 1864, reporting that a number of Catholic Irish prisoners, 1,000 or more, desired to enlist in the Confederate service, and asking "Shall it be done?" The paper is not found, but the foregoing purport is taken from the War Department telegrams-received book.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, NITER AND MINING BUREAU,
Richmond, [October 1, 1864].

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to submit for your information four tabulated statements, covering the operations of the Government niter and mining service during the current year: Exhibit A, niter production and importation; Exhibit B, nitriaries; Exhibit C, iron and general mining service; Exhibit D, officers and their assignment.

Since the date of the last annual report the events of the war have borne with especial severity upon the mining service. Ten large iron furnaces in Virginia, all but three in Tennessee, all in Georgia, and four in Alabama, have been burned or lost, and with them many forges, foundries, and rolling-mills. The Ducktown Copper Mines are still in hostile occupation. Important niter works in Virginia, Georgia, and Upper Alabama have been repeatedly destroyed and workmen killed and captured.

The Bureau effort has consequently been one of incessant reconstruction as well as production. With your authority, all accessible works so destroyed have been rebuilt at Government cost, and of the larger furnaces several are either in or about resuming blast. Also, under your orders the reconstruction of smelting furnaces for copper and lead has been commenced in more interior localities, the Petersburg works having finally come under fire. In connection with these works of reconstruction examinations of interior ore beds have been persistently continued as points of last resort, with a view, also, of obtaining valuable mineral information. Notwithstanding all difficulties, military and financial, the more important requisitions of the Army for niter, the metals and mineral products charged to this Bureau, have been promptly met, and for the Navy all requisitions of niter and nearly all in the metals and coal. For iron, the Secretary of the Navy has on several occasions, after the loss of important iron works, waived his own requisitions, on the appeal of the Bureau; and in the same connection it is my duty to acknowledge the co-operation of naval officers in many important points connected with the mining service.

The home production of niter has progressed more favorably than was expected—increased results from the better training of workmen offsetting losses from acts of the enemy. It will be seen from the niter exhibit sheet that this production until recently exceeded the importation. In the nitriaries the accumulation of nitrous material has gone so far that superintendents have been directed to give special attention to enriching and preparing the earths for results. Laboratory analyses and practical tests already indicate general results proportionally (time considered) in advance of the French nitriaries as recorded by Dumas and Barruel, but to omit no possible source of information, arrangements have been made for an inspection and direct comparison with the most approved European works. In this connection attention is asked to the fact that the artificial production of niter in Europe ends in preparing, during three years of manipulation, earths which contain a smaller percentage of the nitrates than the earths of our own caves and mineral deposits. These deposits are to the present war what the nitrous accumulations of ages in old cities were to France in 1793. In both countries nitriaries are expedients of last resort. To collect the requisite animal matter they must be located at or very near large towns, and where the nitrates mature, potash and fuel must be brought to them in large quantities. In mountain work, with manual labor about the same, and with the cost of production much less—less even than importation—the distant transportation of fuel and potash is avoided. It has consequently been the aim of the Bureau to work to the last our natural deposits, at times within the enemy's lines, and to examine carefully for new deposits in every possible locality. In North Carolina this experimental work has been attended with a success altogether unlooked for by scientific men, as will appear in the niter exhibit A.

With this allusion to the wants of a branch of the mining service very much misunderstood, the attention of the Department is respectfully and very earnestly asked to the question of labor for the mining operations. Upon this depends the campaign supplies of the metals and of niter for 1865. Furnaces, machinery, smelting works, tools, and working sites have all been prepared. Workmen have been procured and trained, but many of them have been withdrawn—for temporary service it is to be trusted. Upon their early return, as soon as circumstances permit, hang grave consequences.

The entire force heretofore employed in the Government niter and mining service east of the Mississippi River has been as follows:

	From 18 to 45.	Over 45 or dis- abled.	Negro.
Iron and mining.....	2, 813	205	4, 301
Nitriaries .....	38	14	581
Niter production .....	1, 690	146	823
Total .....	4, 041	365	5, 705

With the exception of the Carolina force, which is recruited from a class impracticable for military service, the employment of white laborers between eighteen and forty-five in the niter service is due partly to the frontier character of the work and partly to the necessity of a considerable proportion of trained or expert workmen. Whenever exempt labor could be substituted it has been done rigidly and conscientiously. All clerical labor that can be is done by disabled men or by females. This is stated to give full force to a comparison of the aggregate of our own mining and niter labor with the labor employed by the enemy on corresponding work connected with the war, as well as can be ascertained, and it is as follows: In the Confederate States ———. In the United States over 80,000.

If the campaign of 1865 is conducted on the same scale with the present, our own laboring force must not only be maintained but must be increased, or the Army will contend at fearful disadvantage with the superior equipment of the enemy.

The attention of the Department is also requested to the necessity of stopping the departure from the country of trained workmen and mechanics, while the Government is importing workmen at great cost from Europe. Several hundred excellent mechanics have gone to the enemy during the past few months from interior pressure. Prompt action is respectfully suggested, either by legislation or by general orders, encouraging, inviting, and protecting skilled mechanical labor.

The military organization of the niter workmen has been attended with gratifying results. Assembled rapidly on call, they go into action on their own ground and with home instincts fresh upon them, and under these influences they have invariably done well. Two hundred of these men under their superintendent, Maj. James F. Jones, fought in line of battle at Mount Hope and were noticed for good conduct. Their loss was 9 killed and 16 wounded. The force from three of the Virginia districts fought at Saltville with the detailed men and were again noticed for good conduct; casualties not yet received. The Tennessee force has served for some weeks under General Vaughn. And from Upper Alabama reports equally favorable have been received from the frontier men under Capt. William Gabbett, who have been frequently called from their work to resist hostile incursions.

The danger over, these men return to their work generally unaffected by camp habits; and clothing and feeding each one himself soon again returns each his quota of niter. One regiment and a half of niter workmen cover all details from the Potomac to the Mississippi and insure a full supply of ammunition for our armies in the field. To break up this organization will be to inflict a double blow on the service.

TRANS-MISSISSIPPI SERVICE.

No recent detailed reports have been received from this department. The general results, however, are satisfactory. In niter the local production exceeds the present requisitions. In iron the production is increasing. Three high furnaces are in blast and two more under construction; also forges and probably one rolling-mill. Funds and workmen have been sent from this side as far as possibly can be spared; lead, copper, and sulphur have been supplied as called for, and copperas from local production.

In the general operations of the Bureau the military pressure of the last two years has permitted only incidentally mineral exploration and experimental examination in labor-saving machinery. Valuable notes, however, are preserved for future reference. In this connection it may be mentioned that zinc has been smelted within the Confederate States. That experiments on the Bessemer process are in progress, and that the exploration for coal suitable for iron furnaces is continued in Virginia upon the plan directed by the Secretary of the Navy.

In closing I take pleasure in commending to the attention of the Department individual efforts of the several officers of the corps as presented in their returns upon the inclosed exhibit sheets.

I also desire to acknowledge specially to the Department the aid constantly extended to this service by the chief and officers of ordnance and of the Bureau of Foreign Supplies.

Very respectfully,

I. M. ST. JOHN,
Colonel and Chief of Bureau.

A.—C. S. Niter and Mining Bureau, return of niter, &c., to September 30, 1864.

Number.	State.	Officer in charge.	Force em- ployed.		Niter deliveries (in pounds).										Expenditures.
			Whites.	Slaves or free negroes.	During present quarter.				Aggregate deliveries to date.						During pres- ent quar- ter, a		Total.
					Exempts.	Non-exempts.	Government works.		Contractors.		Total.	Government works.	Contractors.	Total.
							Caves.	Deposits.	Caves.	Deposits.					Caves.	Deposits.
1	Virginia	Prof. D. K. Tuttle.	20	240	20				21,380	1,754	23,134	2,903	1,461	52,271	69,716	126,351	$7,882.90	$90,835.13	$98,718.03
2	do	William A. Jones <sup>b</sup>							4,764			3,460	2,957	2,354	4,137	12,909	12,198.01	4,722.62	16,920.63
3	do	Capt. R. C. Morton.	8	112	10				19,300	24,064	4,656	17,987	10,700	83,221	116,564	20,054.50	71,242.17	91,286.67
4	do	James B. Noyes.	8	70	10				5,493								33,634.51	6,641.01	40,275.51
4 <sup>1</sup>	do	Maj. James F. Jones.	45	204	7			1,537	3,204	1,216	18,567	24,524	32,656	14,088	27,105	30,738	33,670.42	130,824.59	164,495.01
5	North Carolina.	Maj. C. R. Barney.	37	463	25				1,925								33,670.42	130,824.59	164,495.01
6	South Carolina.	Prof. F. S. Holmes and John Le Conte.	11	11	244							16,014			222,898	238,907	17,687.55	146,296.13	163,983.68
7	Tennessee	Maj. T. J. Finnie.		101					2,910	5,819	8,729				91,747	98,560	2,886.66	129,440.27	132,326.96
8	Tennessee and Georgia.	Capt. F. H. Smith.														85,706
9	Upper Alabama.	Capt. William Gabbett.	17	278	88												207,265.66	30,711.51	237,977.17
10	Lower Alabama.	W. H. C. Price.	72	506													10,134.76	16,036.38	26,171.14
12	Florida.	Lieut. C. H. Latrobe.	2
14	Georgia.	Henry P. Farrow.	3	117	330												6,158.92
	Texas and Ar- kansas.	Maj. Isaac Road and Capt. R. H. Temple.															408,905

<sup>a</sup> The officers being in the field, returns have not been made to September 30, 1864.—H. F. Reardon, captain and disbursing officer.

Made in Virginia and Tennessee, but not delivered to date of report, 13,000 pounds.

Total amount produced

1,735,531<sup>1</sup>

1,720,072

Grand total

Respectfully submitted.

3,455,603<sup>1</sup>

I. M. ST. JOHN.

Colonel and Chief of Bureau.

<sup>b</sup> Consolidated.

B.—Exhibit sheet of C. S. nitrariæ up to latest dates.

Location.	Labor.				Stock.			Sheds.		Beds.			Analyses.		Cost. b			Remarks.
	Superintendent.	Assistant superintendent and foreman.	White.	Negro.	Total.	Horses.	Mules.	Wagons and carts.	Number.	Covered surface (in superficial feet).	Number.	Contents (in cubic feet).	Composition. a	100 pounds contain on an average equivalent of niter—	Niter to 1 cubic foot.	Total expenditures.	Equated to peace prices.		Cost per cubic foot, present rates.	Cost per cubic foot, peace prices.
Augusta, Ga.	1	2	65	67	132	3	10	13	12	54,000	231	164,375	.....	8.14	5.70	Oz.	$51,506.23	$17,168.74	$0.31	$0.10
Tallahassee, Fla.	1	1	122	122	244	5	5	2	3	77,820	77	30,000	.....	3.70	3.04	Oz.	10,060.00	3,353.33	.33	.11
Columbia, S. C.	1	1	122	122	244	12	13	10	10	45,000	284	110,000	.....	6.88	5.62	Oz.	108,933.76	36,311.25	.99	.33
Ashley Ferry	1	1	30	30	60	1	1	1	6	14,850	5	45,000	.....	.....	.....	Oz.	25,767.48	8,589.16	.57	.19
Cooper River	1	1	4	4	8	1	1	2	3	13,500	6	40,000	.....	8.1	5.4	Oz.	11,910.56	3,970.18	.29	.09
Charleston beds	1	1	35	35	70	3	16	16	24	28,800	169	98,725	.....	8.00	5.72	Oz.	27,358.05	9,119.35	.27	.09
Selma, Ala.	1	1	28	28	56	1	28	12	11	46,875	28	106,000	.....	3.87	2.70	Oz.	43,831.76	14,643.90	.41	.13
Mobile, Ala.	1	1	2	2	4	2	2	8	2	18,000	.....	100,000	.....	2.24	2.57	Oz.	35,614.20	13,745.50	.35	.13
Tallahassee, Ala.	1	1	8	8	16	2	4	4	2	9,600	2	45,000	.....	.....	.....	Oz.	17,569.03	6,864.89	.39	.15
Tuscaloosa, Ala.	1	1	24	24	48	5	5	5	3	22,500	152	72,000	.....	4.24	3.30	Oz.	27,510.33	9,976.20	.38	.13
Montgomery	1	1	60	60	120	25	15	16	16	48,000	56	124,000	.....	3.12	2.18	Oz.	51,748.33	16,895.02	.41	.13
Columbus, Ga.	1	1	13	13	26	7	4	8	8	18,000	56	60,000	.....	6.29	4.27	Oz.	21,930.22	9,338.01	.36	.15
Richmond	1	1	61	61	122	8	12	19	12	58,320	.....	256,210	.....	6.29	4.27	Oz.	84,518.06	28,172.63	.33	.11

a Bureau rule, one-third lime or ashes, one-third ammoniacal matter, and one-third other matter.

b The cost per cubic foot includes all charges of construction, &c.

The laboratory analyses, as above quoted, are checked by leaching or working the earths as in the final manufacture. These checks indicate results within 15 to 20 per cent. of average laboratory analyses. The average age of the beds in the C. S. nitrariæ is from twenty-seven months at Columbia to sixteen months at Talladega. Some scientific authorities give as high as 8.6 ounces to the cubic foot in beds thirty-six months of age as the maximum yield of French nitrariæ. Baruel and Dumas, however, place the average at near 4 ounces. The maximum yield of the Swedish and Prussian nitrariæ, noted in Europe for their success is also placed at 4 ounces to the cubic foot for the same period by Dumas. If due allowance be made for the difference in age, better results may be confidently claimed for the C. S. nitrariæ.

Cave earths average about 6 to 12 ounces to a cubic foot; in plantation earths the average is from 2 to 4 ounces. The 238,907 pounds North Carolina niter have been obtained from earths averaging about 3 ounces per cubic foot. In the several nitrariæ potash and fuel are being collected to guard against contingencies, but true policy demands that the nitrariæ should be held as a last reserve, being secure from ordinary accidents and especially fire.

I. M. ST. JOHN,
Colonel and Chief of Bureau.

C.—C. S. Niter and Mining Bureau—Iron return from January 1, 1863, to September 30, 1864.

State.	Force employed.			Returns of iron received by Bureau officers (in tons).										Remarks.
	White.	Slaves and free negroes.		Receipts during first, second, and third quarters, 1864.							Total receipts to date.
		Reserves.	Conscripts.	Pig (2,240 pounds).	Bloom (2,000 pounds).	Rolled (2,000 pounds).	Hammered (2,000 pounds).	Skelp (2,000 pounds).	Scrap (2,240 pounds).	Pig (2,240 pounds).	Bloom (2,000 pounds).	Rolled (2,000 pounds).	Hammered (2,000 pounds).		Skelp (2,000 pounds).	Scrap (2,240 pounds).
Virginia.....	96	814	941	1,285.0	128.7	152.3	51.5	1	228.6	6,896.7	403.8	1,943.5	59.6	7.4	839	Maj. John Ellicott, Maj. J. Ellicott and Captain Brenizer, Capt. A. Green. James T. Pettit, W. R. Hunt in charge of division. Lieut. Col. James T. Pettit, Maj. T. J. Finnie, T. G. Clemson and Capt. G. M. Helm.
North Carolina.....	22	398	623	602.0	284.5		86.0			909.0	569.6		141.6
South Carolina.....				20.0		150.0				20.0		150.0
Alabama.....	35	454	2,288	4,866.0	22.0	1,047.7	7.6			10,230.1	22.0	2,124.7	28.2
Georgia a.....												485.4			200
Mississippi.....
Tennessee.....		269		43.4		8.9	40.0			30.1		8.9	40.0
Trans-Mississippi b.....		104	342							245.0
Total.....				6,796.4	435.2	1,358.9	185.1	1	228.6	18,330.9	995.4	4,712.5	269.4	7.4	1,039
a. Destroyed

<sup>a</sup> Destroyed.<sup>b</sup> Returns not received. Three furnaces in blast.

A large portion of the Virginia conscript force was for a long time in the lines of the enemy, being cut off by their advance down the Valley while the furnaces were in blast. Ten of the furnaces having been burned, much of this force is still employed on reconstruction.

OTHER METALS.

Metal.	From whence obtained.	Pounds.
Copper a .....	Chiefly from Ducktown Mines, Tenn., now in hands of enemy .....	746, 805
Lead .....	From Union Lead Mines, Wytheville, Va., and Silver Hill Mines, N. C. ....	1, 610, 264
	From Trans-Mississippi Department:	360, 587
	Pig lead (scrap and Mexican included with Arkansas lead) .....	537, 228
	Scrap lead, collected .....	2, 508, 079
	Total amount produced in Confederate States .....	1, 368, 125
	Imported 19,575 pigs, averaging about 75 pounds each .....	3, 876, 204

a Amount of imported copper so small no entry is made.

SULPHUR.—The sulphur supply still holds out, but to guard against fire and other contingencies sulphur furnaces are continued on a small scale with deliveries at present averaging about 4,000 pounds per month.

ZINC.—Furnace was in operation at Petersburg; works suspended because of proximity of enemy.

SULPHURIC ACID.—Sulphuric acid chambers are in operation at Charlotte, N. C., with average yield of from 4,000 to 5,000 pounds per month.

Respectfully submitted.

I. M. ST. JOHN,
Colonel and Chief of Bureau.

D.—Return of officers of the niter and mining service, September 30, 1864.

Name and rank.	Where stationed.	Assignment.
Col. I. M. St. John .....	Richmond .....	Chief of Bureau.
Lieut. Col. Richard Morton .....	do .....	In charge of niter and general mining service, Virginia, North Carolina, and Tennessee.
Lieut. Col. W. R. Hunt .....	Selma, Ala. ....	In charge of iron service, Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi.
Maj. Isaac Read .....	San Antonio, Tex. ....	In charge of niter and general mining service, Trans-Mississippi Department.
Maj. John Ellicott .....	Richmond .....	Iron service and Government furnaces, Virginia and North Carolina.
Maj. T. J. Finnie .....	Wytheville, Va. ....	Niter and Mining District No. 7, West Virginia and East Tennessee.
Maj. James F. Jones .....	Staunton, Va. ....	Niter and Mining Districts No. 4, Valley of Virginia.
Maj. C. R. Barney .....	Greensborough, N. C. ....	Niter and Mining District No. 5, North Carolina.
Capt. F. H. Smith .....	Montgomery, Ala. ....	Iron service, assistant to Colonel Hunt.
Capt. William Gabbett .....	Blue Mountain, Ala. ....	Niter and Mining Districts Nos. 8 and 9, Upper Alabama and Tennessee.
Capt. R. H. Temple .....	San Antonio, Tex. ....	Mexican niter.
Capt. H. F. Reardon .....	Richmond .....	Disbursing officer and in charge of contracts.
Capt. R. C. Morton .....	Fincastle, Va. ....	Niter and Mining District No. 3, West Virginia.
Capt. John W. Pearce .....	Jonesborough, Tenn. ....	Niter and Mining District No. 7, assistant to Major Finnie.
Capt. B. A. Stovall .....	In the field .....	Georgia and Upper Alabama, assistant to Captain Gabbett.
Capt. S. Chalaron .....	Richmond .....	Nitriaries and foreign correspondence.
Capt. J. R. Hale .....	In the field .....	Georgia.
Lieut. R. L. Sprigg .....	Rio Frio, Tex. ....	Assistant to Major Read.
Lieut. Ed. Harrison .....	San Antonio, Tex. ....	Do.
Lieut. J. A. Higgason .....	Killed or captured .....
Lieut. J. H. Matthews .....	Columbus, Miss. ....	Assistant to Professor Price.
ON DETACHED SERVICE.
Lieut. J. C. Clemson .....	Captured .....
SCIENTIFIC ARM OF CORPS.
T. G. Clemson .....	Shreveport, La. ....	Supervisor of mines, Trans-Mississippi Department.
N. A. Pratt .....	Augusta, Ga. ....	Bureau chemist.
Joseph Le Conte .....	Columbia, S. C. ....	Consulting chemist.
D. K. Tuttle .....	Abingdon, Va. ....	Superintendent Niter and Mining Districts Nos. 1 and 2 and lead mines.
W. H. C. Price .....	Montgomery, Ala. ....	Superintendent Niter and Mining District No. 10, Alabama.
F. S. Holmes .....	Charleston, S. C. ....	Superintendent Niter and Mining District No. 6, South Carolina.
John Le Conte .....	Columbia, S. C. ....	Superintendent Niter and Mining District No. 6, South Carolina.
Edmund Harrison .....	Near Richmond .....	Superintendent nitriaries in Virginia.
R. B. Gorsuch .....	Selma, Ala. ....	Inspector of mines and furnaces.

Respectfully submitted.

I. M. ST. JOHN,
Colonel and Chief of Bureau.

PARIS, AVENUE GABRIEL 48,
October [1], 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: Our last was of July 7 (No. 6), advising you that an arbitration had been ordered relative to the accounts of Messrs. Isaac, Campbell & Co., and that an adjourned interview between Mr. McRae and Mr. Saul Isaac was to take place the following week. We have now to add that that interview was without favorable result, as was also a preliminary arrangement entered into between Mr. Isaac and Major Huse, which the latter thought would lead to a settlement on terms which we could approve.

These efforts to settle by compromise have resulted only in loss of time, and the solicitors have been instructed to proceed with the arbitration without further delay. We regret this, as we fear from the various conversations with the solicitors that an arbitrator will decide the Austrian rifle item against the Government, in consequence of the failure of Major Huse to give the notice required in the contract.

The general holiday enjoyed by gentlemen of the legal profession in England during the months of August and September has prevented any further progress being made up to this date.

We have had no answer from you to our dispatch No. 5, of March 17, but we understand from Major Huse that he has received from home an official communication indorsing his conduct. It was not our intention in that dispatch to clear him from blame, but to relieve him from any charge of collusion, and to place before you the difficulties he had had to encounter, and the good he had done and tried to do as palliative or offsets against his errors and mistakes. If our dispatch conveys more than this to your mind it has gone further than we intended. We wished to keep from speaking too severely of his mistakes, because of the difficulties of his position, but not to indorse or overlook them.

In the accounts submitted by Major Huse there appeared, as per report of Ball, Quilter & Co., a balance against him to August 14, 1863, of £2,215 14s. 2d. from moneys drawn here. We have no data upon which to express any opinion in his accounts since that date. It would seem to us advisable, however, that Major Huse be instructed to submit his accounts since 14th of August, 1863. If this is done, the parties authorized to make the investigation, as well as Major Huse, should be formally instructed as to the wishes of the Government. We would suggest also that some additional allowance over his pay, commutation, &c., be made to cover the expenses he has been compelled to incur for the performance of his duty and the support of his family, in which, from all we can learn, he has not been extravagant.

With much respect, your obedient servants,

C. J. McRAE.

M. H. BLOODGOOD.

[First indorsement.]

DECEMBER 8, 1864.

Returned for consideration. Major Huse has received no official indorsement from this Department.

J. A. S.

[Second indorsement.]

DECEMBER 29, 1864.

Ordnance Bureau for notice.

J. A. S.,
Secretary of War.

[Third indorsement.]

ORDNANCE BUREAU,
December 29, 1864.

Respectfully returned to the Honorable Secretary of War.

The following indorsement of the Honorable Secretary of War appears on letter of Major Huse of March 12 to the Bureau, and referred to the Honorable Secretary April 20:

All the communications from Messrs. McRae and Bloodgood, official and unofficial, acquit Major Huse of any charge of intentional error and of any malfeasance of any kind, and testify to his zeal, energy, and personal honor.

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

J. GORGAS,
Chief of Ordnance.

[Fourth indorsement.]

DECEMBER 30, 1864.

SECRETARY OF WAR:

The correspondence of Messrs. McRae and Bloodgood acquitted Major Huse of intentional error and malfeasance, and testified to his zeal, energy, and honor in April last. But the papers since the date of that letter, while exonerating Major Huse from any criminality or dishonor, diminish materially the character given to him as an efficient and capable officer. They attribute to his failure to give notices and to his facility in his dealings with Isaac, Campbell & Co. large losses, and their estimate is that his merits and demerits being considered, that upon the whole he is not a subject for severe censure. My indorsement was made upon early reports and correspondence, and I have been advised that in the progress of the investigation their judgment has been modified.

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

[Fifth indorsement.]

DECEMBER 31, 1864.

For conference with Assistant Secretary.

J. A. S.

SCHEDULE No. 13.

OFFICE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR IMPRESSMENT, La Grange, Ga., October 1, 1864.

In accordance with the act of Congress to regulate impressments, the following schedule of prices for produce and army supplies at the places of impressment or purchase is agreed upon and published by the Board of Commissioners for the State of Georgia, to continue in force until the 1st day of December, 1864, unless sooner altered:

Articles and quality.	Description.	Quantity.	Price.
Apples .....	Dried .....	Per bushel of 28 pounds .....	$3. 50
Axes .....	With handles .....	Each .....	7. 00
Do. ....	Hand .....	Average .....	6. 00
Bacon .....	Sides .....	Per pound .....	1. 50
Do. ....	Hams .....	do .....	1. 25
Do. ....	Shoulders .....	do .....	1. 15
Beans .....	.....	Per bushel of 60 pounds .....	3. 00
Beef-cattle .....	.....	Per pound, gross .....	. 26
Brandy .....	Peach or apple .....	Per gallon .....	3. 50
Barrels .....	Flour .....	Each .....	3. 00
Do. ....	Molasses, 40 gallons .....	do .....	5. 00
Bricks .....	.....	Per thousand .....	25. 00
Chains .....	Trace .....	Per pair .....	7. 00
Corn .....	Shelled .....	Per bushel of 56 pounds .....	2. 25
Do. ....	Unshelled .....	Per bushel of 70 pounds .....	2. 13
Corn-meal .....	.....	Per bushel of 48 pounds .....	2. 25
Coffee .....	Rio .....	Per pound .....	6. 00
Candles .....	Tallow .....	do .....	1. 88
Flour .....	Superfine .....	Per barrel of 196 pounds .....	30. 00
Do. ....	Fine .....	do .....	22. 50
Fodder .....	Baled .....	Per cwt. ....	2. 25

Articles and quality.	Description.	Quantity.	Price.
Fodder	Unbaled	Per cwt.	$2. 05
Hogs, fat	Net	do	75. 00
Do.	Gross	do	60. 00
Hogs, unfatted	do	do	52. 50
Hay	Native grass, baled	do	2. 25
Do.	Native grass, unbaled	do	2. 00
Do.	Timothy or clover, baled	do	3. 00
Do.	Timothy or clover, unbaled	do	2. 75
Hides, good	Dry	Per pound	1. 88
Do.	Green	do	. 94
Horses	First-class artillery		750. 00
Do.	Second-class artillery		600. 00
Do.	Third-class artillery		450. 00
Do.	First-class cavalry
Do.	Second-class cavalry
Do.	Third-class cavalry
Iron	Pig, Nos. 1, 2, 3, average	Per gross ton	110. 00
Do.	Square or round	Per net ton	450. 00
Do.	Flat or band	do	400. 00
Do.	Hoop	do	550. 00
Do.	Boiler plate	do	625. 00
Do.	Serviceable railroad T	Per gross ton	210. 00
Do.	Unserviceable railroad T	do	100. 00
Do.	Trap rail railroad T	do	150. 00
Jeans, country		Per yard	10. 00
Kettles	Camp, iron	Per pound	1. 50
Lard		do	1. 31
Leather	Harness	do	3. 75
Do.	Sole	do	3. 75
Do.	Upper	do	4. 50
Lumber	Square	Per 1,000 feet	40. 00
Do.	Rough edge	do	20. 00
Molasses	Cuba cane	Per gallon	6. 00
Do.	Chinese cane	do	3. 00
Mules	First class	Each	600. 00
Do.	Second class	do	525. 00
Do.	Third class	do	375. 00
Oats	Baled	Per cwt.	1. 88
Do.	Unbaled	do	1. 69
Do.	Shelled	Per bushel of 34 pounds	1. 88
Onions		Per bushel	5. 00
Potatoes	Irish	do	4. 00
Do.	Sweet	Per bushel of 60 pounds	1. 75
Peas		Per bushel	3. 00
Peaches	Dried, peeled	Per bushel of 38 pounds	5. 00
Pans	Mess, sheet iron	Per pound	1. 50
Rye		Per bushel of 56 pounds	3. 75
Rice		Per pound	. 20
Sugar, brown	Common	do	1. 75
Do.	Fair	do	1. 90
Do.	Fully fair	do	2. 00
Do.	Prime	do	2. 55
Do.	Strictly prime	do	2. 50
Do.	Choice	do	2. 80
Do.	Extra choice	do	3. 00
Do.	Clarified	do	3. 50
Sugar, white	do	do	4. 00
Salt		Per bushel of 58 pounds	7. 50
Socks	Woolen	Per pair	2. 00
Do.	Cotton	do	1. 50
Soap	Hard	Per pound	. 75
Do.	Soft	do	. 37 $\frac{1}{2}$
Shoes	Army	Per pair	15. 00
Shovels		Per dozen	80. 00
Spades		do	80. 00
Sheep	Sheared	Each	15. 00
Do.	Unsheared	do	20. 00
Shucks	Baled	Per cwt.	1. 50
Do.	Unbaled	do	1. 25
Tallow		Per pound	1. 31
Tea	Black	do	10. 00
Do.	Green	do	15. 00
Vinegar	Cider	Per gallon	1. 50
Do.	Manufactured	do	. 60
Wheat		Per bushel	5. 63
Wheat straw	Baled	Per cwt.	1. 00
Do.	Unbaled	do	. 75
Whisky		Per gallon	3. 50
Wool	Washed	Per pound	4. 00
Do.	Unwashed	do	3. 00
Wagons	Wooden axle, 4-horse	Each	350. 00
Do.	Iron axle, 4-horse	do	450. 00
Do.	Wooden axle, 2-horse	do	250. 00
Do.	Iron axle, 2-horse	do	350. 00

LABOR.

	Unit.	Price.
Hauling .....	Per cwt. per mile .....	$0.05
Hire of 2-horse team, wagon, and driver:
Rations furnished by owner .....	Per day .....	10.00
Rations furnished by Government .....	do .....	7.00
Hire of 4-horse team, wagon, and driver:
Rations furnished by owner .....	Per day .....	12.50
Rations furnished by Government .....	do .....	9.00
Hire of 6-horse team, wagon, and driver:
Rations furnished by owner .....	do .....	15.00
Rations furnished by Government .....	do .....	11.00
Hire of laborer:
Rations furnished by owner .....	do .....	2.00
Rations furnished by Government .....	do .....	1.50
Do .....	Per month .....	25.00
Rations and clothing furnished by the Government .....	do .....	15.00
Hire of mechanics for mechanical purposes, rations and clothing furnished by Government.	do .....	30.00
Pasturage .....	Per head .....	1.50

N. B.—The following articles are to be paid for under act of Congress regulating manufactures, to wit: Woolen cloths, drills, flannels, hats, Osnaburgs, domestics, shirtings and stripes, sacking, and tent cloth.

All purchasing agents are expected strictly to adhere to the above schedule prices; otherwise they will be reported.

JNO. E. MORGAN,
U. B. WILKINSON,
Commissioners.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Milledgeville, October 1, 1864.

His Excellency Z. B. VANCE:

DEAR SIR: Your communication of 23d of September came to this office by last mail.

While your remarks in reference to State officers are not applicable to this State, where every officer, civil and military, who can possibly be spared and keep the State government in existence, is and for months past has been in military service as part of the militia of the State, they may be, and probably are, applicable to other States.

The questions you present for consideration are grave ones and are well worthy of a consultation on the part of the Governors of the respective States.

It will therefore afford me great pleasure to meet you and the other Governors at such time and place as may be agreed upon. As the Legislature of this State meets the first Thursday in November, and as it is important that I be at home for a few days prior to the meeting to prepare for the session, I respectfully suggest that the meeting be held in Augusta on the 17th of this month. As your letter will probably be received by each before this reaches you, it may be easy to learn by telegraph whether this time will be agreeable. If not, I will, if in my power, conform to the wish and convenience of others.

I do not know where to send the letter you inclosed for Governor Caruthers, of Tennessee. I have sent it to Brig. Gen. M. J. Wright, of Tennessee, who commands the post at Macon, in this State, with request that he forward. It is probably not known to you that Governor Caruthers has never been inaugurated, and that Governor Isham G. Harris is still the Governor of Tennessee. His address is Macon, care of General Wright, who, I believe, is his brother-in-law.*

I am, very truly, &c.,

JOSEPH E. BROWN.

JACKSON, October 2, 1864.

Hon. JEFFERSON DAVIS:

DEAR SIR: I suggest a plan to obtain the return of deserters. The present policy is a failure. Coercion but perpetuates the evil. Good soldiers sent after bad ones not only fail to secure the recreant, but become worthless themselves. The "supporting force," as it is termed, is a nuisance to the people and a deception to the Government. I believe something, at least, may be done by promise and persuasion if judiciously applied. Our State literally swarms with deserters. In my own county, as I know, and in many others, as I am informed, they appeared at the polls in the late election in armed bodies and defied arrest. Ignorance of the consequences involved in our struggle, a hopelessness of success, a dread of the punishment due to their offenses, and pecuniary inability to defray the cost of reaching their commands, I have been brought to believe, prevent many from rejoining the Army. I need not detail the facts which have brought me to this conclusion. I suggest that you appoint certain men in each State who shall address the absentees from the Army specially, giving ample notice of the time and place; that such persons shall be unattended by any armed force, which fact shall be made known, and the further assurance given that no absentee who shall attend such meeting shall in any way be disturbed during the day of such attendance; that such persons be authorized in your name to deliver to each absentee who will return a special pardon for all past offenses. A general proclamation of amnesty is distrusted by the more ignorant and timid. Numbers never hear of it. It involves no direct and individual action or discharge; but the presence of an agent at a certain time in each county, with the authority of your name to place a pardon in every deserter's hand who reports, would impart a pointed, practical sense of safety to the recipient with which published generalities can never impress him. The time preceding the arrival of such an ambassador, after notice of his coming, would be employed in earnest discussion among the people, which would become more intense as the hour of his arrival drew near.

If, by the power of persuasion and the promise of immediate pardon, a deserter should declare his willingness to return to his command, let the agent be further authorized to furnish such soldier with an order for transportation by public conveyances, so as to enable him to reach the Army.

Such a policy, I believe, will result in much good, and will cost the Government nothing save the transportation of those who return to the Army, and that, I presume, we are very willing to pay.

The character, public and private, of the men to whom this delicate duty should be assigned is, of course, of the highest importance. It is also one of great labor and anxiety, which few men will accept and faithfully perform. Constant riding and speaking, especially on such a topic, from day to day, as you are aware, is no mere recreation. But I am not willing to suggest for others what I would not accept myself. Apart from the hope of doing some good for the "great cause," I should enter upon such a labor with the most extreme reluctance. Money could not tempt me to assume it. I suppose myself to be as fit an instrument for such a work as many men in our State. If, therefore, you see proper to entertain the suggestion and deem it advisable to assign me a portion of the labor, I am subject to your order. I will perform it as well as I can. On one point my policy fails as an immediate resort. The season approaches when such gatherings of the people cannot be obtained. My own health would not bear the rigors of such a campaign in the winter. Early next spring would be most advisable.

*A mistake. General M. J. Wright was not related to Governor I. G. Harris.

As I do not trouble you often with letters, let me avail myself of this opportunity to make some other suggestions. The present system of giving men a surgeon's certificate of inability to enter the field, but recommending them "for light duty," is a farce. No such men are ever so employed, and it is almost impossible they can be. I speak in general terms. Such persons obtain a certificate, report to some camp, and are there furloughed—some for one time, some for another, and some indefinitely. Various departments are required to employ such men and to discharge employes capable of active service. How and where are they to obtain them? There is no person or place to whom or at which they can apply. Consequently they retain the able-bodied men, because they cannot discharge them until others are obtained. This is more than a pretext which would suffice for most officials to retain their friends and favorites. It is a valid excuse. These "light-duty" men prefer to be no-duty men. They are permitted to remain at home in comfort, attend to their business, make money, and if required occasionally to report to camp, are sure to look sick enough for ten minutes to be sent back. Let this class of men be kept in camp; let a register be kept of their ages, diseases, and capacities, and then require all officers to apply to the commanders of these camps for such peculiar assistants as they may need. The excuse now so glibly offered by officials for keeping hearty men around them would be silenced. Again, the "light-duty" men, rather than thus be kept in camp, would ferret out places occupied by able men and cause them to be sent to the field. The evil, I assure you, is a very great one.

I suggest another matter with more diffidence. The subject of the consolidation of companies and regiments was much discussed in Congress while I was there, but nothing, I believe, was ever done in relation to it. State pride, old flags, &c., prevented it. The very small number to which various organizations have been reduced, rendering the position of officers ridiculous, has caused many of them to submit to be ousted from their commands by consolidation without complaint. But the form of orders to such commands is necessarily complex and subjects the Army, officers and men, to uncertainty and confusion. Again, under this tacit deprivation of officers of their commands, the country is filled with supernumeraries who either do nothing or who are assigned to duties which older and feebler men could perform. Cannot such men be forced to the ranks? I think so. The trouble now is that these men cannot be divested of their offices so long as those offices exist. An office is property, and so long as it exists you cannot turn out the legal occupant and put in another person, nor can you impose upon him another duty inconsistent with his discharge of the duties of his office; therefore, as the matter now stands, you cannot conscript as soldiers supernumerary officers. But another principle is as equally well settled, viz, that an office may be abolished and the officer as a mere adjunct is extinguished with it. If, therefore, a law could be passed declaring all offices under that of colonel, inclusive, abolished, all such officers would at once sink into the character of citizens. To prevent the evil of such a law of course another would have to precede, pari passu, authorizing the consolidation of companies and regiments and providing their officers in such manner as might be deemed best. To declare the oldest officers in date or commission officers of the consolidated organizations would perhaps be most expedient. The details of such a measure are, I think, not difficult to adjust. Upon such consolidation all officers not retained would be liable to conscription—and they ought to be. To hope that they will organize themselves into companies is delusive. They had rather do nothing. I offered a bill to abolish the office of second junior lieutenant everywhere. It was defeated. Can that officer not be spared? Such a step would add at least 3,000 men to the ranks.

Again, the pardoning power, as exercised by commanding generals over the sentences of military courts, demands some restriction. My observation and experience enable me to speak with some confidence. To convict a soldier of any offense, who has social position, friends, and influence, is but a mockery of form. When I entered upon my present duties I resolved to perform them firmly and sternly. I have done so. With the view of awakening among the soldiers a just dread of the court, I urged the infliction of emphatic punishment upon the first offenders arraigned as the best means of securing discipline and preventing crime. They were thus punished and the sentences ordered to be read on three several days before their regiments. Among them were two young men of family and fortune, who were defended by able counsel; both of them barely escaped conviction for desertion, but were found guilty of absence without leave. Active measures were immediately taken to have them pardoned, and in a few days they were both parading the streets with their friends. Several poor, plain men, who could not pay counsel nor provide petitions and affidavits, convicted at the same time, are now undergoing punishment. It is a shame in the eyes of justice and fairly engenders the most hostile and unhappy spirit among the poor men of the Army. No general should be permitted to entertain an application for pardon or the mitigation of a sentence until the papers upon which such application is based have been submitted to the court pronouncing the sentence for its indorsement. If the evil can be remedied by order I suggest that it be issued.

One word more: and in this, at least, I can claim sincerity if not sagacity. I cannot see why myself and all officers similarly situated, when absent from the field, should be entitled to draw commutation for rooms if quarters are not furnished; nor why colonels should have commutation for five, captains for three, &c. If quarters adequate to the duty required cannot be furnished and the officer obtains them, let the cost, if reasonable, be paid by the Government. A half dozen officers on duty at a post all live in same house, pay a trifle, and each obtains commutation for the whole house. It virtually adds to the pay of men who live in houses, above those who suffer the danger and discomfort of the field. This is not right, some way, though I don't know enough about such matters intelligently to suggest a remedy.

The infernal hydra of reconstruction is again stirring its envenomed heads in our State. If disasters intervene between this time and next autumn, you may anticipate a contest in Mississippi which will tax the powers and pain the souls of the "good men and true." Of those who "would count all things but loss" in the absorbing interest of that struggle, I can number in our State but a "Spartan band," whilst the timid, the traitor, and the time-server are "legion."

May the Almighty impart to you His wisdom, and nerve you with His strength in the discharge of the solemn trust committed to your keeping by a confiding people.

Your friend,

JAMES PHELAN.

[First indorsement.]

NOVEMBER 8, 1864.

Adjutant-General for remarks, &c.

J. D.

[Second indorsement.]

NOVEMBER 22, 1864.

Respectfully returned to the President.

I have been prevented from making my remarks on the within suggestions of the Hon. Mr. Phelan at an earlier day by the press of other official and important matters. I highly approve his suggestions, and believe if they are carried out with the spirit in which he has inaugurated them they will prove highly beneficial to the cause and be the means of filling our Army with recruits, which will enable us to cope with the hordes of the enemy on the most favorable terms for the benefit of that cause. But this may not be done except by the free-will offering of the most influential and distinguished men of the South, "without money and without price." If they will come forward in the spirit of patriotism for the noble cause in which they are equally concerned with those who are fighting the battles of the Confederacy and will freely give their aid to that cause, much good may be accomplished, and we may then by their efforts and the blessing of God secure our independence.

The Government has no pecuniary means to appropriate to this object, and if it had they should not be expected from it by those who are willing to do the work. All that can be expected, reasonably, is that it should give a willing consent to the measures proposed.

S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General.

ENTERPRISE, October 2, 1864.

(Received 4th.)

General S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General:

The following communication has been received from Governor Clark:

The State of Mississippi has to defend herself in future. For this defense I promise to secure volunteers for six months without regard to age, if mustered into service previous to enrollment or conscription. I have no doubt of my right to them as troops of war of the States. The commandant of the State addressed General Preston on the subject on 25th August, but has had no reply.

As this insures a conflict with the State authorities I desire your instructions.

W. L. BRANDON,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES, SOUTH CAROLINA,
Columbia, October 3, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

DEAR SIR: Induced by the conviction, which I believe impresses your own mind, that we have now imperative need in the field for every man who is able to bear arms, and that such need is likely to continue for another campaign at least, I feel assured you will pardon me for any suggestion I may make in reference to the subject. In my opinion there are several sources within our reach from which an appreciable force can be readily obtained. They will be found, first, in the class of able-bodied overseers of conscript age throughout the country. By the law of 1863 planters, &c., were permitted to purchase from the Government overseers liable to and fit for service. In this class there certainly are many. The time of such exemption has, perhaps, nearly expired, but still it may be well to issue an order directing the generals of reserves in the several States to have these overseers enrolled and sent to the field at the earliest day practicable.

The same rule and order might be applied to a second class, namely, those who, under the act of Congress, 17th of February, 1864, contracted for overseers by giving bonds for meat, &c. The only exceptions I would make in this class would be in cases of farmers, soles, persons over seventy years of age, and those actually in service in the field. I think justice and the public necessity would require such exceptions. It is not necessary that I should elaborate this opinion by any argument.

There is also a third class, which would embrace the Quartermaster's and Commissary Departments. It appears to me that in these departments all the labor that is merely clerical may be done by women, and other descriptions of labor might be performed by disabled men, of whom there are a great number, thus obtaining a considerable force of able-bodied men for the field, while at the same time you do an act of charity and justice to a number of destitute and unprovided females and men who have worthily become proper objects of the public care.

It seems to me to be now absolutely necessary to evoke in the speediest and most effectual manner possible the entire resources and strength of every State in the Confederacy. This, I am persuaded by reason and experience, cannot be done under the existing organization and arrangements of the Commissary and Quartermaster's Departments, no matter how much genius, good sense, and integrity may exist in their respective heads. They are too far from the scene of operations to possess that fullness of knowledge which is necessary to enable them to act with the particularity and efficiency which the necessity of the occasion requires. The field is too wide for suggestions of appointments and for immediate control by the central power. Departmental organization, naturally that of the States, under authority of the Secretary of War, and accountable to the respective heads at Richmond, is essential. If you think the subject worth further consideration I will submit details of the plan which I have in view, and the reasons for its adoption.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES CHESNUT, JR.,
Brigadier-General.

[Indorsement.]

OCTOBER 20, 1864.

Recent orders seek, by a rough but rapid surgery, to meet the evil. I hope they will, if properly enforced, meet most of these suggestions, but I would be very happy to have the benefit more fully of your counsel, and invite the communication of the plan to which you refer.

J. A. S.

SURGEON-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., October 3, 1864.

Surg. R. POTTS,
Medical Purveyor, Montgomery, Ala.:

SIR: It has been reported to this office that sorghum seed is a good substitute for grain in the manufacture of whisky. You are instructed to purchase a sufficient quantity to give it a trial, and report to this office the quantity of liquor obtained from one bushel of seed; also its quality and the price paid for the seed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. P. MOORE,
Surgeon-General C. S. Army.

GENERAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 76. } Richmond, October 5, 1864.

I. All details heretofore granted under authority of the War Department to persons between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years are revoked, and all such detailed men, together with those within the said ages who hold furloughs or temporary exemptions by reason of pending applications for details, will be promptly assembled at the camps of instruction and appropriately assigned among the armies for service, except that men detailed and now actually employed in manufacturing, providing, collecting, and forwarding munitions and other indispensable supplies for the Army and Navy, or in work indispensable to military operations, will be continued in their present employments until their details shall be revised.

II. The heads of departments and chiefs of bureaus will, within the next twenty days, forward to the generals of reserves lists of all detailed men in their employment in the several States, specially distinguishing and certifying those who are experts and those absolutely indispensable for the performance of the above-mentioned Government work and business; and all detailed employes not so certified within the prescribed period will, upon the expiration thereof, be forthwith assigned to the Army.

III. All persons called out by this order who claim exemption on account of physical disability will be examined by select medical boards after their arrival at the camps of instruction.

IV. All men found for light duty, who are unassigned, will at once report to the camps of instruction under the penalty of being forthwith assigned to the active forces.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 237. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, October 6, 1864.

* * * * *

III. Col. Thomas S. Rhett, Provisional Army, C. S., now on special service abroad, will without delay return to the Confederate States and report to Col. J. Gorgas, Chief of Ordnance, C. S. Army.

* * * * *

X. Col. W. R. Gause, Third Missouri Infantry, will proceed with least practicable delay to the State of Missouri and report to Maj. Gen. S. Price for the purpose of raising troops in that State, or such other assignment as may be directed by General Price.

* * * * *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR }
No. 33. }

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., October 7, 1864.

By General Orders, No. 76, current series, all details heretofore granted under authority of the War Department through this Bureau to persons between the ages of eighteen and forty-five are unconditionally revoked, and by said general order all such persons now under such details are required to report in person forthwith to such camps of instruction of the respective States as may be designated for assignment by the generals commanding the reserve forces to military service.*

Under this order all farmers, planters, mechanics, and others holding details by authority of the War Department or of local conscription officers are required forthwith to repair to the camps of instruction.

Officers engaged in the conscription service are required promptly and with inexorable vigor to withdraw all such details as are herein indicated and move the persons hitherto detailed to the camps of instruction for assignment to service. No appeals from this order will be entertained by the Secretary of War unless approved and forwarded through this Bureau by the generals commanding the reserve forces.

Applicants for detail will not be furloughed during the pendency of their applications, but will be assigned to the Army.

Circular No. 8, Bureau of Conscription, March 18, 1864, having been rendered nugatory by subsequent general orders from the Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, is hereby revoked.

By command of the Secretary of War:

C. B. DUFFIELD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

* A full paragraph of this circular is so mutilated in the only copy in possession of the War Department that it is impossible to publish it.

HEADQUARTERS GLENN'S CAVALRY,
Greensborough, Ga., October 7, 1864.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS,
Richmond, Va.:

MR. PRESIDENT: Upon recent application I have been authorized to raise a brigade of cavalry of reserves and non-conscripts in North Georgia. I have two regiments very nearly completed. There is no doubt I will succeed with them. They are being raised in the State east of Atlanta. There are a great number of soldiers belonging to commands raised in North Georgia now absent in that region who are there without leave, called deserters. I know from my influence with the citizens and soldiers in that region that I can induce hundreds of them to return to our service. I am not mistaken when I assert that I can bring more of them out than any other person. I am very anxious to do so. I will do so under any order that may be issued by the War Department or any authority that may be granted to accomplish the desired object. If I were permitted to announce that they would be reorganized as mounted infantry, and serve under me and in my brigade, I hazard nothing in saying that I can get a thousand or greater number to return to our service who will otherwise be lost to it. If I can't be permitted to retain them under me, I desire to bring them out so as to verify my assertion of influence with them. I would not have addressed you personally but for the fact that recent occurrences in the Army of Tennessee, resulting in my trial and removal from my position as colonel Thirty-sixth Georgia, would prejudice my statements as to my influence with the citizens and soldiers of North Georgia with the Secretary of War, who has not seen the testimonials from officers and soldiers, and from the citizens who reside in Upper Georgia, where I have been raised, and which I submitted to Your Excellency in the record in that case. The result of that case has not in the least impaired my influence with them. It is hard for them to believe that I would do wrong intentionally; besides, the recent desertion of the principal witness against me in presence of the enemy, then a private, but at the time of his desertion a lieutenant in Thirty-sixth Georgia, Thomas M. Lane, has made in my favor rather than against me. Please excuse this digression.

Hoping that you will give such directions in the premises as will authorize me to use my influence to get those of our soldiers to return in North Georgia who are there without leave,

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JESSE A. GLENN.

[First indorsement.]

Respectfully submitted, by direction of the President, to the Honorable Secretary of War for the proper attention.

BURTON N. HARRISON,
Private Secretary.

[Second indorsement.]

OCTOBER 19, 1864.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

Whence did this officer obtain his authority to raise a brigade of cavalry from the reserves in North Georgia? Let him be instructed that no authority can be granted him to recruit deserters or to compound with them otherwise than by encouraging them to return to their companies, and giving them a hope by voluntary return of being treated with leniency. If he can bring out any deserters he will do good service by forwarding them to their commands.

J. A. S.,
Secretary.

[OCTOBER 7, 1864.—For Cobb to Cooper, reporting measures taken to get men on detailed service into the field see Series I, Vol. XXXIX, Part III, p. 801.]

[OCTOBER 7, 1864.—For Beauregard to Davis, relating to settlement of matters between Governor Brown and General Cobb, relating to exempts and State militia, and action of President Davis and Secretary Seddon thereon, see Series I, Vol. XXXIX, Part III, p. 800.]

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 77. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, October 8, 1864.

The following will supersede General Orders, No. 76, present series, which are hereby revoked:

I. All details heretofore granted under authority of the War Department to persons between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years are hereby revoked; and all such detailed men, together with those within the said ages who hold furloughs or temporary exemptions by reasons of pending applications for detail, will be promptly assembled at the camps of instruction and appropriately assigned among the armies for service; except that men detailed and now actually employed as artisans, mechanics, or persons of scientific skill (and those detailed and now engaged in the manufacture, collection, and forwarding of indispensable supplies for the Army and Navy) will be continued in their present employments until their respective details be revised.

II. The heads of departments and chiefs of bureaus will immediately forward to the generals of reserves in the several States lists of all detailed men in their employment in the said States, certifying in each case of a person between eighteen and forty-five years those who are experts and absolutely indispensable for the public service, specifying the employment of each individual; and all detailed employes who are between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years not so certified within the prescribed period will be forthwith assigned to the Army. A duplicate of the above lists will at the same time be furnished to the Adjutant and Inspector General for the action of the Secretary of War.

III. All persons called out by these orders who claim exemption on account of physical disability will be examined by select medical boards at the camps of instruction.

IV. All men found fit for light duty, and who are unassigned, will at once report to the camps of instruction, under the penalty of being forthwith assigned to the active forces.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, October 8, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: The act of Congress passed February 17, 1864, provides for the enrollment of the free negroes, who are held liable to perform certain duties with the Army in hospitals, in work upon fortifications, &c. The Secretary of War is also authorized to employ 20,000 male slaves, by hire or impressment, for similar purposes, and all are to be provided with rations and clothing, under rules to be established by the War Department. As yet nothing has been done to execute this act, so far, at least, as it relates to clothing. I would respectfully suggest, therefore, in anticipation of same, that in the important items of blankets, shoes, and woolen garments each bureau be required to provide for the free negroes and slaves employed by it. The act does not put this burden upon the Quartermaster's Department, and calls recently made upon it preparatory to the coming winter show that it cannot safely assume it. Summer clothing and cotton pants, shirts, drawers, socks, and caps this department can supply, but in regard to the other articles it is simply reduced to this: Shall soldiers in the field be supplied, or shall these indispensable articles go to the negroes? To meet the present demand for men in the field, blankets, shoes, and woolen goods have to be drawn in large quantities from abroad. In procuring them from there it is only a question of money, and as each bureau has its fund abroad, can purchase there without the risk of competition, and enjoys equal facilities in all respects with this for bringing the supplies in, the arrangement proposed appears to be both expedient and just. There is now ample time to provide what is needed. The market at Nassau is overstocked with all the articles referred to, and in making purchases the services of either Mr. Heyliger or Major Waller can be availed of.

Your obedient servant,

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

[First indorsement.]

Quartermaster-General for conference.

J. A. S.

[Second indorsement.]

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, November 5, 1864.

Respectfully returned to the Secretary of War in accordance with his suggestion, with the following draught of the proposed general order:

1. When free negroes are enrolled or slaves are hired or impressed under the act of February 17, 1864, and assigned to service with the bureaus of the War Department, each bureau will pay the negroes so assigned upon the forms and in the same manner as other employés are now paid. The negroes enrolled will be paid $11 a month, and slaves hired or impressed schedule rates, as prescribed by the State commissioners.

2. Each bureau will also provide such negroes and all other employés in its service with the necessary woolen shirts, jackets, and pants, and blankets, overcoats, and shoes. Cotton pants, shirts, drawers, socks, and caps will be provided by the Quartermaster's Department on requisitions made quarterly, showing the number of the employés to be supplied, and submitted for the approval of the Quartermaster-General. In purchasing these supplies abroad any bureau may avail of the services of the purchasing quartermaster at Nassau or in England.

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

RICHMOND, October 8, 1864.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS,
President of the Confederate States:

DEAR SIR: I do not feel comfortable at being idle in times like these, and yet am not able to shoulder a gun in field service, or I would ere this have been with the brave battalion of my Maryland boys, who have shown such devotion under General Lee. To attempt to carry out the contemplated organization of the Maryland troops in the Valley would now be attended with more labor and with less results than in the spring, and for that and other reasons I think it best for the public interest not to press the matter at this time. My attention has frequently been called to the probable intention of the Government to organize a secret-service corps in connection with or to embrace the Signal Corps. If such be the case, and the matter is open, and you feel at liberty to intrust me with the command, I feel confident that I can render efficient service quite commensurate with the expenditure to be incurred. Should I fail to do so, or to come fully up to your expectation, you may rely upon it that I will promptly and voluntarily surrender the trust without waiting to have my commission revoked. My view would be to organize a full regiment of Marylanders not owing service to the Confederacy, not in service, many of whom I feel confident I can bring over the border to organize a corps of heavy artillery to be available on the Potomac, and thus by the activity and energy of the material I should embody I think the navigation of the Potomac by transports could be materially embarrassed at important moments, if deemed necessary by General Lee, and the communication between Grant and Washington, and also between that officer and his troops in the Valley, carried on principally by telegrams along the Potomac country, severed and interfered with, so as to make it comparatively useless when most needed. My relations with men on the other side, their sons being with me, and my knowledge of men and things up to the Canada line, would very materially facilitate such operations.

I do not, of course, know if the plans I suggest are within your province to have executed, but I beg respectfully to suggest them for your consideration. If anything of the kind is to be done, it would, of course, be desirable to enter upon it as soon as practicable.

I am, very respectfully, dear sir, your most obedient servant,
GEO. P. KANE.

[First indorsement.]

Secretary of War for remarks.

J. D.

[Second indorsement.]

OCTOBER 18, 1864.

Respectfully returned to the President.

I had not contemplated such organization for secret service in connection with the Signal Corps, supposing the latter fully engrossed in their legitimate duties. The organization of a regiment of Marylanders not liable to service would be very acceptable, but I should not recommend them to be used with heavy artillery on the Potomac, as I do not think they could maintain their positions there. They would certainly provoke attack, and might induce a destructive expedition into the Northern Neck of Virginia.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary.

[Third indorsement.]

OCTOBER 19, 1864.

So much of the plan as proposes to raise a regiment of Marylanders from men not in the service, and who do not owe service to the Confederate States, is approved. To arm them as heavy artillery would defeat the object in view, as they would then necessarily remain with an army by which they could be supported; heavy artillery being least of all arms qualified for separate operations. Either for the special service indicated or for service with other troops, according to their character, I would be glad to have such a regiment as is described within.

J. D.

[OCTOBER 8 and 29, 1864.—For Lee to Vance, in relation to getting the reserves of North Carolina into service, see Series I, Vol. XLII, Part III, pp. 1141, 1183.]

MERIDIAN, October 10, 1864.

SECRETARY OF WAR:

Shall I permit cotton in hands of Governors of States, and belonging to State governments, to pass lines in exchange for State supplies?

R. TAYLOR,
Lieutenant-General.

SPECIAL REQUISITION.

For ..... Five thousand dollars.

I certify on honor that the above requisition is correct and just, and that the money is absolutely necessary for the public service, made so by the following circumstances, to wit: It is needed to purchase supplies for the comfort and subsistence of the sick and wounded in Walker Hospital, Columbus, Ga., under my charge.

CARLISLE TERRY,
Surgeon, Provisional Army, C. S.

Received at Columbus, Ga., this 10th day of October, 1864, of Capt. J. H. Graybill, assistant commissary of subsistence, the sum of $5,000 in full of the above requisition, to be charged against Walker Hospital fund.

[First indorsement.]

OFFICE POST COMMISSARY,
Columbus, October 10, 1864.

Respectfully returned to Surg. C. Terry.

I have no funds for hospitals or for any other purposes. The district commissary has made repeated efforts to get funds from Richmond to supply this and other posts in his district, but thus far has received no funds.

Respectfully,

J. H. GRAYBILL,
Captain and Assistant Commissary of Subsistence.

[Second indorsement.]

OFFICE WALKER HOSPITAL,
October 10, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded.

Unless some arrangement can be made by which funds can be obtained for the purchase of comforts for sick and wounded in hospital great injury to public service and loss of many valuable lives must ensue. It is perfectly useless to attempt to treat such diseases as prevail most commonly among soldiers unless suitable diet can be provided, as a great proportion of the diseases arise from the exposure and diet of the camp. I have raised money for this hospital on my own personal security until I can do so no more. I forward this to relieve myself from responsibility on account of suffering which will ensue in my hospital and in hopes that if the case is presented to proper authority some remedy may be had.

CARLISLE TERRY,
Surgeon in Charge.

[Third indorsement.]

OFFICE MEDICAL DIRECTOR OF HOSPITALS,
Columbus, Ga., October 11, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded to the Surgeon-General.

Unless some remedy is applied soon the hospitals of this department will have to furlough all their inmates to secure for them appropriate diet. If the Treasury Department does not furnish the currency the sick and wounded cannot be fed.

S. H. STOUT,
Medical Director.

[Fourth indorsement.]

SURGEON-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
October 25, 1864.

Respectfully referred to the Secretary of War, requesting his perusal of these indorsements and urging that measures be adopted to enable surgeons in charge of hospitals to feed the sick and wounded. The evils resulting from a failure to supply them cannot be exaggerated.

S. P. MOORE,
Surgeon-General C. S. Army.

[Fifth indorsement.]

OCTOBER 27, 1864.

COMMISSARY-GENERAL:

Why cannot funds be furnished? The Secretary of the Treasury honors requisitions now.

J. A. S.,
Secretary.

[Sixth indorsement.]

Respectfully returned to the Honorable Secretary of War.

Money has been sent Major Allen, commissary of subsistence, Columbus, Ga., which would have arrived in time to meet Doctor Terry's requisition but for the fact that no warrants were issued from the Treasury from September 7 to October 7.

As long as this Bureau has, as has been the case for several months, upward of $30,000,000 of unhonored requisitions there must be a delay of at least two months in supplying funds. The Honorable Secretary of War is urgently requested to remedy this evil if possible by enabling this Bureau to obtain more currency from the Treasury, the amount of non-taxable bonds and certificates of indebtedness issued to the Subsistence Bureau being [more] than that for all other bureaus of this Department combined. I had not been previously informed of the improved condition of the Treasury intimated by the indorsement of the Honorable Secretary of War.

L. B. NORTHROP,

Commissary-General of Subsistence.

[OCTOBER 10, 1864.—For Lee to Cooper, in relation to the operation of General Orders, No. 76 (see p. 712), in strengthening the armies in the field, see Series I, Vol. XLII, Part III, p. 1144.]

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 78. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, October 11, 1864.

I. The attention of officers and soldiers is specially directed to the thirty-fourth article of Army Regulations, and General Orders, No. 3, 1863. The rapidly increasing correspondence of the War Department demands that their requirements shall hereafter be strictly observed. A violation of them will subject the offender to prompt trial by court-martial. The regulations respecting military correspondence were made after long experience, and are indispensable to an intelligent and efficient discharge of business.

The remarks and opinions of intermediate commanders upon the subject-matter of each communication are important to the Department, and in all cases required. Opportunity must, therefore, be afforded for their expression; and all communications which are not forwarded through the prescribed channel will be invariably returned without other action than instructions to bring the party to trial for violation of orders.

Letter paper will be folded in three, and foolscap in four equal folds, parallel with the writing, and indorsed on the fold corresponding with the top of the sheet, thus:

Post or Station and Date of Letter.

.....
Name and Rank of Writer.
.....

.....
Analysis of Contents.
.....

The indorsement should be carefully made, so as to afford information of its contents at a glance, and to present only those points which are material and pertinent. This will leave ample space for subsequent indorsement. Commanders will return for completion all papers not so indorsed. The practice of wrapping communications with mere strips of paper for the purpose of indorsement, owing to their liability to be detached and lost, is prohibited.

II. Issuing commissaries will hereafter require from commissioned officers drawing rations a certificate that the same are for their own use.

III. Upon information received that any commissioned officer or soldier has sold the rations drawn by him he will thereafter not be allowed to draw rations, at any one time, for a greater period than three days.

IV. Furloughed officers and men other than those furloughed from hospitals will be allowed to draw, at the place where furloughed, rations for the number of days only that are required for their journey. Officers and men furloughed from hospitals will receive from the hospital commissary such number of rations, for the purpose of reaching their destination, as the surgeon in charge may direct. Furloughed men may be allowed commutation of rations for the time specified, in lieu of rations in kind, if they prefer it. After reaching their destination sick and wounded furloughed men not in hospitals may draw from the nearest post commissary rations in kind or commutation therefor for the period of five days at a time. Each issue made to furloughed men, or each payment, if commutation is allowed, will be indorsed on the furlough by the issuing officer.

V. Boards of examiners in general hospitals are directed not to furlough or discharge, or recommend for leave of absence, any soldier or officer who, on his admittance into hospital, could not show proper authority for his absence from his command. Officers or soldiers applying for admission into general hospitals who are not provided with proper authority for their absence from their commands will, if able to travel, not be admitted, but sent back to their commands. If unable to travel, such cases will be received into hospitals and their admittance reported to their respective commanding officers, and when sufficiently recovered they will be returned under guard to their commands.

VI. All communications to the Secretary of War or to this office from the generals commanding reserves pertaining to the matter of conscriptions or other duties hitherto devolved on the authorities of conscription must be addressed through the superintendent of the Bureau of Conscription.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Tallahassee, October 11, 1864.

His Excellency Z. B. VANCE,
Governor of North Carolina:

DEAR SIR: Yours 28th ultimo is before me. It arrived during my absence from here. The objects you purpose to accomplish by a convention of Governors are vastly important, and are cordially approved by me. I will at any time appointed meet you in convention at Augusta, Ga., or at any point more convenient and agreeable to others, when notified, if in my power to do so, but we are so constantly threatened with raids in different parts of the State that my presence here seems to be almost indispensable.

I have the honor to be, respectfully,

JOHN MILTON.

RALEIGH, October 11, 1864.

General B. BRAGG,
Richmond, Va.:

There is a meeting of Governors at Augusta on Monday, the 17th, to consult about how to spare more men for the service. I am very anxious to know what North Carolina has done in comparison with the other States. Can you furnish the information from the Adjutant-General's Office? If so, write me to Augusta, Ga.

Z. B. VANCE,
Governor.

[Indorsement.]

Without a very protracted and laborious research it is not possible to ascertain the number of men. The regiments from North Carolina were unusually full at the outset. There are in the Confederate service sixty-seven regiments, five battalions, and twelve unattached companies. Two State regiments are at present doing service under Confederate authority, but have not been transferred to Confederate service. Thus far nine battalions of reserves have been organized.

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
October 12, 1864.

Respectfully returned to General Bragg.
SAML. W. MELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Inclosed is a tabulated statement, which will furnish comparison with other States.*

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
October 11, 1864.

His Excellency WILLIAM SMITH,
Governor of Virginia:

SIR: I respectfully lay before you an important communication from Major-General Smith, superintendent of the Virginia Military Institute.

Very respectfully, your obedient,

WM. H. RICHARDSON,
Adjutant-General.

[Inclosure.]

HEADQUARTERS VIRGINIA MILITARY INSTITUTE,
October 8, 1864.

Maj. Gen. WILLIAM H. RICHARDSON,
Adjutant-General:

GENERAL: I have this moment seen Special Orders, No. 102, from the headquarters of the reserve forces, dated October 3, 1864, a copy of which I herewith inclose. The authority exercised by the Confederate authorities over the cadets of the Virginia Military Institute under these orders is directly in conflict with the instructions which I have received from the Governor of Virginia under your order of October 14, 1862, and of the special order given to me personally by His Excellency Governor Smith in June, 1864. I feel myself embarrassed in my duty under the circumstances which surround the case. I extract the closing paragraph of your order of October 14, 1862.

The Governor, in view of all these important facts, feels it to be incumbent upon him to direct the superintendent of the Virginia Military Institute not to surrender any cadet who may be claimed as a conscript by the Confederate authority until the constitutionality of the act of Congress called the conscript law shall have been tested, the legislative will of the State ascertained, or until further orders.

The authorities of the Virginia Military Institute have no disposition to withhold the cadets from the service of the country in this hour of its peril and need. They have promptly sanctioned their service without stint and at costly sacrifice of blood to the cause of this country. But the State through its military institute stands as a guardian, in her sovereign capacity, to these young soldiers, and it seems to be but just and proper that when their services are required in the field of battle they should be sent forth under the authority of the State whose servants they are, that the care and protection which have been assumed and promised to them may be rendered. Where thus rallied around the standard of the country, they will present an organized Virginia command, which may be extended to embrace many others who would promptly rally around the Virginia Military Institute, and by their efficiency render substantial service, without detriment to their morals.

If Special Orders, No. 102, be persisted in the organization of the Military Institute will be destroyed, and I apprehend the worst consequences to the individual members of the institute.

I remain, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

FRANCIS H. SMITH,

Brevet Major-General and Superintendent.

[Sub-inclosure.]

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 102. }

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES,

October 3, 1864.

The commencement of the next regular session of the Virginia Military Institute having been postponed until the 1st of November next, all cadets who are not under seventeen years of age and not already assigned to duty in the field by orders from the War Department or from these headquarters are hereby required to report without delay to Maj. T. G. Peyton, commandant of camp of instruction at Camp Lee, near Richmond, for immediate and temporary field service. Cadets under seventeen years of age are also earnestly invited to report at once for assignment to duty.

All furloughs and exemptions heretofore granted to cadets are, by command of the Secretary of War, revoked.

The cadets will be released from field service by or before the commencement of the session of the institute.

By command of Major-General Kemper:

R. H. CATLETT,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, October 12, 1864.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS:

SIR: In answer to your circular letter of a recent date respecting the foreigners in our midst, I have to say that I concur in the suggestion advanced by you. No laws have been passed in this State oppressive of this class of persons and no edict of expulsion has been or will be adopted.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
 Z. B. VANCE.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES,
Richmond, October 13, 1864.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:

MR. PRESIDENT: Your attention is respectfully asked to the inclosed copy of a letter from the Quartermaster-General to the Honorable Secretary of War. The original was referred to me for remarks, and was returned with the indorsement this copy bears.

That you may know the origin of this strange paper, I send also a copy of my letter to General Gardner, inclosing to him the inspection report referred to and calling his attention to the alleged violations of law. It will be seen my only instruction to him was to proceed "as the law requires in every case of infraction." After a careful reperusal of that letter, I can see nothing to retract and nothing to justify the errors, tone, and temper (not to say disrespect) displayed by the Quartermaster-General, so foreign to the usual deportment of that scrupulous and faithful officer. I am as unwilling to be thus thwarted in my efforts, under your orders, to see all men properly due there put into the Army as I am anxious to avoid these unusual and, as it appears to me, unmilitary arrangements by my inferiors. In a similar, but more marked case, where a subordinate officer of the Conscript Bureau, some two months since, addressed me a very disrespectful communication, I referred it to the Honorable Secretary of War, but as yet have no notice of any action. This case is therefore submitted to your consideration.

As these records are to constitute a part of the future history of the country, I feel sure you will appreciate my appeal to be relieved from an attitude so mortifying to my self-respect and so humiliating to my professional pride.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
 BRAXTON BRAGG,
General.

[Indorsement.]

NOVEMBER 6, 1864.

SECRETARY OF WAR:

The act referred to imposed a penalty and prescribed a duty. General Bragg but fulfilled an obligation to aid in the faithful execution of the law when he called the attention of the post commander to the reported violations of law, which it was the duty of that officer to restrain. The "post" quartermaster at Richmond bears to the commander of the post the relation of field quartermaster to the commander of an army. The Quartermaster-General was not expected and it would have been absurd to expect him to inspect every establishment in the Confederacy to ascertain whether his assistants kept men in employment contrary to the law cited, and there was no invasion of his rights in seeking to enforce the law by the means provided in the act. The reference of the complaint to General Bragg is no doubt the point which he describes as mortifying, &c.

For fear the originals may not have attracted your notice, I send the copies inclosed in the letter of General Bragg.

J. D.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES,
Richmond, September 16, 1864.

General WILLIAM M. GARDNER,
Commanding Post, Richmond:

GENERAL: Inclosed herewith is a copy of an inspection report of the officers of the Quartermaster's Department in Richmond. Your special attention is called to the following points developed by this report:

I. "Lieutenant-Colonel Cone, acting assistant quartermaster-general, has in his office an able-bodied conscript detailed as clerk." This is in direct violation of the eighth section of act approved February 17, 1864.

II. See case of Captain Barksdale. Why is it that the money he disburses, any more than in case of other quartermaster's, shall be kept in the Treasury beyond his control? This officer is on post duty and under your command.

III. Maj. C. M. Smith, assistant quartermaster. "There are in this office three able-bodied men detailed as clerks." See remarks on Lieutenant-Colonel Cone.

IV. Captain Weisiger, assistant quartermaster, has contracts with six persons, who, he says, were detailed by Secretary of War. Has two employés, both liable to conscription.

V. Captain Putney has 236 details, many of them irregular, and forty-two employés; does not say whether they are of conscript age. Your attention is necessary in this case.

VI. Captain Morfit, assistant quartermaster, "has one employé of conscript age."

VII. Captain Dugan, assistant quartermaster, should have his office at the hospitals. His station is not in the city and he is not entitled to commutation. Much complaint was made to me at these hospitals by the sick of being unable to see a quartermaster without walking into the city.

VIII. Captain Kemper, assistant quartermaster. Same as above.

IX. D. Rankin, quartermaster agent. By whom and when was he appointed? What age? Has a conscript without detail.

X. Captain Dorsey, assistant quartermaster. The details and employés should be examined to see if fit for duty.

XI. Maj. George F. Maynard, quartermaster. The large list of employés and details require scrutiny.

XII. Capt. O. F. Weisiger, assistant quartermaster. Details and employés should be examined.

XIII. Maj. J. C. Maynard, quartermaster. He employs over fifty men, as shown by his list—copy inclosed—in violation of law as above.

XIV. Major Ambler, assistant quartermaster. His office and employés require attention as above.

XV. Major Harvie, assistant quartermaster. Attention necessary to long list of illegal details.

XVI. Captain Claggett, assistant quartermaster, not being on any duty in the city, but with troops on the lines, should be quartered and have his office with them.

XVII. Captain Orgain, assistant quartermaster. Details and employés do not appear to be exempt.

XVIII. Captain West, assistant quartermaster, one of the paymasters Chimborazo Hospital. Lives in city. Has office in city. He must be where his duties are.

XIX. Major Bentley, assistant quartermaster. His list of details and employés needs attention.

XX. Major Webb, assistant quartermaster, one of the paymasters at hospitals, should be with his duties. Reports one detailed soldier unfit for duty November, 1863, but says nothing of his condition now.

XXI. Major Ferguson, assistant quartermaster. Details and employés not regular or according to law. See Colonel Cone.

XXII. Major Cary, assistant quartermaster. Paymaster of troops in hospitals. Should be stationed where his duties are.

XXIII. Major Parkhill, assistant quartermaster. One employé irregular and illegal. Others not properly detailed. These different quartermasters whose duties are connected with hospitals should all be assigned as per my order to General Ransom, and be required to reside at their posts. It is impossible any one man can do the duty assigned this officer at all the hospitals, and the consequence is neglect and great complaints.

XXIV. Captain Warren, assistant quartermaster. Details irregular and illegal. See remarks in case Lieutenant-Colonel Cone.

XXV. Captain Wood, assistant quartermaster. Details, &c., in violation of law, and require prompt attention. See case of Lieutenant-Colonel Cone.

XXVII. Major Johnston, assistant quartermaster, has one able-bodied conscript employed as clerk in violation of law. See case of Lieutenant-Colonel Cone.

XXX. Captain Morris, assistant quartermaster, has a detailed able-bodied conscript in violation of law.

XXXI. Major Archer, assistant quartermaster. Details and employés irregular and illegal. See case of Lieutenant-Colonel Cone.

XXXII. Captain Macmurdo, same as above.

The condition of the different offices of assistant quartermasters in Richmond requires your prompt attention under the ninth section of the law referred to, and you are desired to act as the law requires in every case of infraction. Arrest the guilty parties and send your charges up, that a court may be ordered for their trial.

A proper arrangement and reassignment would enable the department to dispense with at least ten of these officers.

After retaining the report and accompanying papers herewith sent as long as you desire, for information, please return them.

Very respectfully,

BRAXTON BRAGG,
General.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, September 26, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to submit for your consideration certain papers referred to this Bureau by Maj. J. C. Maynard, quartermaster, on duty in Richmond, and also certain papers received from Lieutenant-Colonel Cone and Capt. George A. Barksdale bearing upon the same general subject.

It is proper to state at once that the "inspections" on which these proceedings against the officers of this department are based were undertaken with my hearty concurrence; that every item of information sought from this Bureau, whether regular or irregular in form, was promptly furnished to facilitate the progress of inspection; that every question submitted to this Bureau by officers of this department (to many of whom the visits of inspectors were entirely new, and therefore their rights and powers unknown) was so decided as to open wide the doors for the entrance of the inspector, and to furnish him with every species of information necessary for a complete report.

Up to that point the interest felt by this Bureau in these inspections was fully recognized by General Bragg and his inspectors. The papers inclosed show that no reciprocal obligation has been acknowledged to furnish this Bureau with the important information thus desired, nor to claim its action or co-operation in correcting any abuses supposed to have been discovered by these inspections. But other means have been resorted to which I respectfully submit are in violation of Army Regulations, general orders of the War Department, the usages of the service, and the courtesies which prevail in such cases.

First. The laws and Army Regulations require a disbursing officer to deposit his money, "as far as possible," in one of the depositories of the Treasury, and to draw checks in favor of the person to whom payment is to be made, &c.

The inspector reports Captain Barksdale (whose office is within a "stone's throw" of the Treasury) because his money is "kept in the Treasury beyond his control," and General Bragg quotes this complaint in his letter to General Gardner in connection with instructions to "arrest the guilty parties," &c.

Second. General Orders, No. 15, 1863, requires that "where occasions may arise in military commands for charges against a disbursing officer of the Army, arrest will be stayed until a report of the facts in the case is duly made to the War Department through the office of the Adjutant and Inspector General, and the officer will continue to discharge his duties until the Department shall take proper measures for his relief from duty." General Bragg (in alluding to a large proportion of the quartermasters in Richmond) instructs General Gardner to "arrest the guilty parties and send your charges up, that a court may be ordered for their trial."

Third. General Bragg adopts the statement of the inspector, that the officer is guilty of a violation of law, and then this officer is called upon by General Gardner (who furnishes him with General Bragg's statement) to send up the necessary testimony to go before the court, which is to be ordered. In truth, an officer holding a commission in the Army, and intrusted by his Government with the disbursement of millions of money, is first pronounced guilty, then called on to plead to the indictment, and at the same time ordered to furnish any missing links in the testimony necessary to insure his conviction.

Fourth. It has been the policy of the War Department to place all officers of the general staff as much as possible under the control and supervision of the respective chiefs of bureaus to which they are attached, especially so in case of those departments having control of large disbursements and extensive workshops, in order that there may be more perfect system as well as mutual confidence and responsibility. This is shown, not only by the constant reference to these respective chiefs of all matters appertaining to their subordinate officers, but by a number of general orders and decisions of the War Department (several of which are herein inclosed) and even by the messages to Congress of His Excellency the President.

General Bragg now seeks to institute the most summary proceedings against a large number of quartermasters at the seat of Government—such proceedings as would stop suddenly the entire operations of this important branch of the War Department in the midst of the most pressing demands upon it that war has ever made, through the instrumentality of the commandant of the post, and without even a passing notice to the chief of the Bureau that these important events are about to transpire.

Fifth. General Bragg informs the commander of the post of Richmond (within the limits of which is the War Department and, of course, the Quartermaster-General's Office), and through him nearly every quartermaster in Richmond, that "a proper arrangement and reassignment of these officers would enable the department to dispense with at least ten of these officers." As it has been the invariable practice of the War Department to refer to this Bureau all proposals to assign officers of the Quartermaster's Department, and this statement of General Bragg's is so positive and specific, I respectfully ask that he be invited to indicate the "ten" officers whose services can be dispensed with, and the "proper arrangement" of the duties of the others which would accomplish this object. General statements can be made with but little cost or trouble, but so to distribute the duties of officers as to meet every emergency of the service—to secure the "right man in the right place"—I have found a most intricate problem to solve.

I will not further remark, sir, on the entire absence of courtesy to the chief of this Bureau by which all these proceedings are characterized, nor invoke the interposition of the Secretary of War in my behalf, content to believe that the measure of courtesy due is more capable of enforcement by good taste than Army Regulations. But in behalf of the officers of this department, who have been taught by the utterances of the President and the practices of the War Department to look to the chief of their Bureau for instruction as to their duties, I do make my appeal to a common superior, and ask that their duties and responsibilities be properly defined and protected. It is not matter of form, but of substance, to which I object. I respectfully submit:

First. That the quartermasters called upon are not under General Gardner's orders, and therefore General Bragg could not properly direct General Gardner to call on them for these reports, and the relations of these officers to the chief of this Bureau can be changed only by orders from the Adjutant-General's Office.

Second. That if the inspector's report was of any value, its statements being positive as to violations of law, and the officers having already furnished him with all the facts, there was as much presented in that report upon which to found charges as these officers could furnish; and that, waiving the question of General Gardner's right to call upon them, it is simply persecution and waste of time to call again and again for these statements.

Third. That if any further statements from these officers are necessary to insure their conviction they cannot be called on to assist the prosecutor in making out his case, after having been notified that they are "guilty" and must be tried by court-martial.

Fourth. That the manner in which these officers are approached as to the alleged illegality discovered by the inspector is not calculated to elevate the morale of the service. Instead of being properly confronted with the charges against them they are pursued more like culprits already condemned to punishment. As far as these officers are personally known to me, they are men of character and good repute, now in the discharge of important trusts, and have a right to be sensitive as to their fidelity and honor. I express no opinion as to guilt or innocence in any specific case, and shall be glad to see the trial go on whenever the prosecutor is ready. General Bragg cannot be more anxious to punish the guilty nor to send able-bodied men to the Army than I am, but I respectfully insist that this sweeping denunciation in advance of a large class of officers does not promote efficiency or secure correction.

Fifth. That these quartermasters having furnished to the inspector complete lists of their employes, and the Bureau of Conscription being now engaged in registering every man in Richmond (full information having been furnished them by this Bureau toward aiding in their work), the means of procuring all the testimony to convict "the guilty parties" are ample and within reach, without compelling any officer to "criminate himself."

In conclusion I respectfully protest that in making this appeal to the Secretary of War I seek not to shield any guilty man from punishment, but earnestly invite the most severe scrutiny into the character and transactions of all the officers of the department, many of whom are doubtless not without fault. I do ask, though, that the principles and practice of the War Department should not be set aside as against one class of officers and common right violated in order that reform may seem to move forward at a quicker pace.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. R. LAWTON,

Quartermaster-General.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES,

October 11, 1864.

Respectfully returned to the Honorable Secretary of War.

It appears to me that the Quartermaster-General has strangely misapprehended my action in the matter of which he complains, and still more strangely misconstrued and misapplied the law and regulations. By the ninth section of the act of February 17, 1864, "it shall be the duty of any district or department commander, upon proof by the oath of any credible person, that any such officer has violated this provision, immediately to relieve such officer from duty, and said commander shall take prompt measures to have him tried for such offense."

By General Orders, No. 48, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, 27th of May, 1864, paragraph VIII, this duty is also devolved on post commanders. Upon the receipt by me of an inspection report made by an officer duly ordered and authorized to make investigation into these matters, setting forth certain violations of the above-quoted law, the whole matter was referred to the proper commander; and my only action was simply to call his attention to the requirements of the law, the neglect of which forfeited his own commission.

It will be observed that my instructions to him refer not to the parties reported, but to the "guilty parties," thereby indicating that the inspection report sent him was not his guide, but for his "information."

It is apparent from the tenor of the remarks of the Quartermaster-General that he misapprehends to some extent the object of inspections as well as the exact military relations of the officers of his department stationed in and about Richmond. As the chief of the Bureau charged with the financial and property responsibility of his subordinates, it is conceded that information obtained by inspections should be furnished him; but when it comes to the military responsibility of these officers to their proper superiors—as in the case before us—I cannot concede his claim.

The error arises from the proximity of the officers to the chief of the Bureau, and the mixed duties (post and depot) improperly assigned them. The post quartermasters in Richmond are no more under the control of the Quartermaster-General, nor less under the control of the post commander, than are the same class of officers in Mobile or Galveston, and every attempt to make a distinction will only work confusion and disorder and result in inefficiency and irresponsibility. A copy of my letter to General Gardner is herewith inclosed.

BRAXTON BRAGG,
General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, SUBSISTENCE DEPT.,
Richmond, October 13, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War Confederate States of America:

SIR: I have the honor to call your attention to the fact that I have just received long and interesting reports from Major White and Major Munnerlyn of the results of the operations of the Cattle Battalion in Florida. These papers, though well worthy of your perusal and attention, are on account of their length not submitted to you. The services rendered by this battalion have been of the most important character. Operating in the only way possibly successful in such a country, but partially organized and equipped, it has guarded a line of over 300 miles in length, extending from the neighborhood of Lake Okeechobee to the upper portion of Lafayette County, affording a nucleus for the militia of that region. It has checked desertions and restored the confidence of the people. As an illustration of the fact, it is mentioned that citizens who had deserted their homes and property from fear of the enemy have since the organization of the battalion brought back their families. While doing such good service as soldiers, these men have been equally efficient in procuring subsistence for the Army. Operating in a country infested with traitors and deserters, extending from the Gulf to the Atlantic, they have brought out a large number of cattle which without their aid could not have been secured at all. The efficiency of this battalion, both as a guard of the country and as a means of procuring supplies, depends entirely upon the detailed men connected with it. They—a small number—have been selected with special reference to their fitness for the duties to be performed, and around them as a nucleus have been rallied a number of men whose services would otherwise be lost to the Confederacy.

Take away these detailed men and you destroy the battalion, virtually lose possession of the country, and certainly all the cattle in it. It is with confidence claimed that nowhere in the Confederacy can the services of these few detailed men be half so valuable as in the present organization, and therefore the Secretary is earnestly asked to give orders that they shall be exempted from the operations of General Orders, No. 77.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. B. NORTHROP,
Commissary-General.

[First indorsement.]

OCTOBER 14, 1864.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

The special service requires this battalion. Instruct commander of reserves in Florida they are specially excepted from Order No. 77.

J. A. S.

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, October 13, 1864.

Respectfully returned to the Secretary of War.*

Copies in full of Circulars Nos. 26 and 29, of which extracts alone have been brought to the notice of His Excellency, are inclosed.†

The consideration in connection with them of Circular No. 8‡ will remove the impression that Circular No. 29 destroys "the authority of the officer charged with supervising in each State the enrollment and assignment of recruits," and consideration of the reasons which led to the adoption of this system will, it is thought, go far toward modifying the opinion expressed "that it may well have led to the abuses so often represented to exist." It will be seen that judicial functions respecting details are exercised by the Bureau of Conscription under the immediate direction of the Secretary of War, whereas the authorities of conscriptions in the respective States are employed to furnish the information on which intelligent and discriminative action could be based, and to separate from the great mass of applications presented such only as will probably receive favorable consideration.

As full information was indispensable, it was made the duty of the local or county enrolling officer to whom applications were directed to be addressed to furnish the information, and to that officer properly should have been assigned the power to decide whether the application should be forwarded; but the responsibility was considered above the capacity, both moral and intellectual, of the great majority of the persons then filling such positions. Neither was it included in those of the commandant, because the delay in reaching his office would have been too great; and if delay was not provided for the social and industrial organization of the country would have been wholly deranged—when the least interference would have caused the most serious evils.

A medium was at hand in the person of the Congressional district enrolling officer, selected from those disposable because of their qualifications, and to them was intrusted the power to decide whether the applicant should continue at his work until action could be taken by the Secretary of War.

* The paper bearing this indorsement is not identified.

† See July 8 and August 9, pp. 534, 578.

‡ See p. 217.

To guard against erroneous action the right of appeal was given. For many reasons, principally because of the necessity created by the exhaustion produced by the war of discriminating between various necessities, and because of a want of confidence in the capacity of the officers making the decision, a proviso was added that in case of appeal the party should be allowed to remain at his work until final action. The practical effect was that appeals were taken merely to obtain delay. The evil was a serious one, and by direction of the Secretary of War Circular No. 26 was issued. It soon became evident that in guarding against delay other and still more serious evils had been created, such as the shutting up of manufactories, stopping mills, limiting the capacity of railroads for transportation, &c. As these became manifest the rigor of the circular was modified in several instances by special instructions, and at length, after several conferences with the acting superintendent, the Secretary of War directed the issue of Circular No. 29, which reintroduced the old system, with the exception of the objectionable proviso.

As the extracts referred by His Excellency purport to be official copies of those in the office of the commandant of conscripts for Georgia, it is deemed proper to state that the general system as above explained was not in operation in that State until the reception of Circular No. 29, and to give the reasons therefor. The officer assigned as commandant of the State was probably misled by the third paragraph of General Orders, No. 26.

As will be remembered, a more elaborate order than that issued was prepared, but it was considered preferable that more minute instructions should be issued in circular form from the Bureau of Conscription, which was accordingly done. The ambiguity is removed in paragraphs XIII and XV, Circular No. 8.

As the error could not be corrected without greatly increasing the already lengthy delay, and as the necessity for the immediate enforcement of the law was pressing, it was deemed prudent for a while not to notice it; besides, the want of administrative capacity in his predecessors, and of the individual and physical poverty of the material disposable for officers, made it advisable that the energetic officer just assigned as commandant should exercise immediate supervision until some degree of his own energy could be infused into his subordinates, and they become instructed as to their other duties.

When Circular No. 29 was issued a great change for the better had become manifest, and as other exception was unnecessary the system was made uniform.

The apparent departure from respectful form in issuing a revocation of a circular made by order of the Secretary of War, by a circular not so expressing his order, is explained by the fact that it was not customary to use that form. It was used in Circular No. 26 because of the gravity of the matter and because it changed the previous policy of the Bureau.

In No. 29 it was omitted entirely unintentionally simply by force of the custom indicated.

The acting superintendent, however, felt a perfect assurance that Circular No. 29 was in exact accordance with the Secretary's instructions.

J. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

ORDNANCE OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., October 13, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to present the following general view of the operations of my department for the year ending September 30, and of its present condition and prospects. I refer briefly to the more important branches of supply:

Small-arms.—The chief supply has been from importations, which, since the loss of the vessels belonging to this Bureau, have been very light, not to exceed, say, on this side of the Mississippi, 30,000 during the year included in this report. The number manufactured is about 20,000 instead of 50,000 to 60,000, as I anticipated. This reduced product is due to the interference of military operations, both of the enemy and our own. The captures have been about 45,000 and the losses about 30,000, leaving a gain of 15,000. The stock of arms in the arsenals is about the same as it was one year ago. If we place the diminution of our military force at 50,000 men (including reserves, local forces, militia, &c.), the aggregate of their figures (30,000 improved + 20,000 made + 15,000 captured + 50,000 less troops) 115,000 will represent the waste of arms during the year. About 20,000 are now on the way from Europe and 50,000 more have been ordered purchased. A further purchase of at least 50,000 will be necessary for the coming year unless the operations of the armories can be placed on a permanent footing by declaring all skilled mechanics engaged on them absolutely exempt from military duty, attaching them permanently to the Ordnance Department, and encouraging in every way the growth of this class of workmen. I cannot lay too much stress on the necessity for legislative action on this point in order to give assurance to the workmen.

Powder.—The mechanical means of the Bureau for the production are ample for a war conducted on any scale, and are so arranged as to be almost beyond casualty. The supply depends alone on that of saltpeter and sulphur, and for the present on the former. While we must still depend on importations as one chief source of supply of niter, it will be indispensable that the efforts of the Niter and Mining Bureau be sustained, in order that the home production may not be lessened. A certain force of white and black labor ought to be permanently assigned to this duty of procuring niter and sulphur and the other operations of the Niter and Mining Bureau.

Lead.—The expenditure of small-arm ammunition has been very heavy and has exhausted all our efforts to accumulate a supply of this precious material. I feel more uneasiness on this point than on all others. The requisitions have, however, been fully met through the energy of the Niter and Mining Bureau and our own exertions in gleaning the battle-fields.

Artillery.—The supply of field artillery has been adequate to the demand and the quality very good. The quality of the rifled ammunition is susceptible of improvement. From deficiency in the supply of copper the manufacture of bronze field pieces is suspended and an iron gun tightly banded substituted for the 12-pounder Napoleon, which gives entire satisfaction. Harness and equipments have not been deficient.

Cavalry.—Good cavalry arms are much needed. Here again the removal of an armory (for military reasons) and the want of workmen have crippled the Bureau. The sea-coast defenses have been supplied with a large number of 10 and 8 inch columbiads and some heavy rifled and banded guns. The want of transportation for iron and coal from Selma to Macon has paralyzed the operations of the foundry for heavy guns established at Macon.

I regret, too, that military operations about Richmond have prevented them from the casting of 12-inch guns, the preparations for which are now completed. A few guns of this caliber at Wilmington would have been of inestimable advantage in defense against monitors.

Mechanics, miners, artisans, &c.—While the Army have been well supplied during the past year, there are causes operating which will render future results less satisfactory. The chief of these is the diminution of skilled workmen. Without statistics I can only assure you that the number and quality of workmen have greatly fallen off since the middle of the year 1863. While two years ago it was difficult to get machinery, we have now a surplus and cannot get workmen to run it. This opens a most melancholy prospect and indicates an evil that cannot too soon be corrected. While we are importing workmen by twos they are leaving us by the hundred. I formerly reported to you that from Christmas, 1863, to May, 1864, fifty-five men left our (Government) workshops in Richmond. This may give a glimpse of the exodus. Nor is it that this class of men is disaffected or unpatriotic that they leave the country. When called on they have fought and fought well. Out of one battalion of, say, 200 workmen from the armory here 4 were killed or died of their wounds and some 8 or 10 wounded in a skirmish. But workmen will not fight and work both. This must be accepted as settled in their minds. I trust the policy of the War Department may be modified toward these men for the sake of results as to home production, and that legislative action will secure to these men exemption from military service while in the employ of the Government. I have heretofore urged that this Bureau and the Niter and Mining Bureau should have a definite number of mechanics, miners, and other skilled labor assigned to them, and that the usual bi-monthly returns be rendered by those bureaus for them, thus placing such force exclusively under the control of the chiefs of those bureaus. Considering the vital nature of the operations confided to these two bureaus, I again urge this proposition.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. GORGAS,
Chief of Ordnance.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 81. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, October 14, 1864.

I. Generals commanding reserves in the several States will without delay select and send officers, one to each Congressional district, empowered to summons and, after inspection, forward to the camps of instruction all persons holding certificates of permanent disability and such persons assigned to light duty as in his judgment appear likely to be adjudged qualified for active service. All such as may, upon examination, be pronounced by select medical boards so qualified will be assigned to duty in the field.

The inspectors of conscription may be charged with this additional duty in the absence of other suitable officers.

II. Paragraph I, General Orders, No. 77, current series, is amended by the insertion of "in the service of the Government" between the words "employed" and "as artisans," &c.

III. The details of such men, called out by General Orders, No. 77, current series, as are found by the proper medical boards to be unfit for field service may be revived, and similar details may be granted to light-duty men not heretofore detailed, at the discretion of the generals of reserves.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., October 14, 1864.

General R. TAYLOR,
Selma, Ala.:

Law does not allow trade in cotton with enemy by States any more than by individuals. Military are not required to enforce this law, but when military regulations require permits for cotton States cannot be excepted.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

---

At a meeting of the Governors of the States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi, held in Augusta, Ga., on Monday, the 17th day of October, 1864, Governor William Smith presiding, after a full, free, and harmonious consultation and interchange of counsel, the following among other views were expressed:

Resolved, That there is nothing in the present aspect of public affairs to cause any abatement in our zeal in the prosecution of the war to the accomplishment of a peace based on the independence of the Confederate States; and to give encouragement to our brave soldiers in the field and to strengthen the Confederate authorities in the pursuit of this end we will use our best exertions to increase the effective force of our armies.

Resolved, That the interests of each of our States are identical in the present struggle for self-government, and wisdom and true patriotism dictate that the military force of each should aid the others against invasion and subjugation, and for this purpose we will recommend to our several Legislatures to repeal all such laws as prohibit the Executives from sending their forces beyond their respective limits, in order that they may render temporary service wherever most urgently required.

Resolved, That, whilst it is our purpose to use every exertion to increase the strength and efficiency of our State and Confederate forces, we respectfully and earnestly request that the Confederate authorities will send to the field every able-bodied man, without exception, in any of its various departments whose places can be filled by either disabled officers and soldiers, senior reserves, or negroes, and dispense with the use of all provost and post guard except in important cities or localities where the presence of large bodies of troops make them necessary, and with all passport agents upon railroads not in the immediate vicinity of the armies, as we consider these agents an unnecessary annoyance to good citizens and of no possible benefit to the country.

Resolved, That we recommend our respective Legislatures to pass stringent laws for the arrest and return to their commands of all deserters and stragglers from the Confederate armies or State troops, and that it be made the special duty, under appropriate penalties, of all civil and military officers to arrest and deliver to the proper authorities all such delinquents.

And whereas, the public enemy, having proclaimed the freedom of our slaves, are forcing into their armies the able-bodied portion thereof, the more effectually to wage their cruel and bloody war against us: Therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the true policy and obvious duty of all slave-owners timely to remove their slaves from the line of the enemy's approach, and especially those able to bear arms, and when they shall fail to do so that it should be made the duty of the proper authorities to enforce the performance of this duty and to give to such owners all necessary assistance as far as practicable.

Resolved, That the course of the enemy in appropriating our slaves who happen to fall into their hands to purposes of war seems to justify a change of policy on our part, and whilst owners of slaves under the circumstances should freely yield them to their country, we recommend to our authorities, under proper regulations, to appropriate such part of them to the public service as may be required.

Resolved, That the States have the right to export such productions and to import such supplies as may be necessary for State use or for the comfort or support of their troops in service, upon any vessels owned or chartered by them, and that we request Congress at its next session to pass laws removing all restrictions which have been imposed by Confederate authorities upon such exports and imports by the States.

And lastly, we deem it not inappropriate to declare our firm and unalterable purpose, as we believe it to be that of our fellow-citizens, to maintain our right of self-government, to establish our independence, and to uphold the rights and sovereignty of the States or to perish in the attempt.

Resolved, That the chairman be requested to send a copy of these resolutions to His Excellency President Davis, one each to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to be laid before the respective bodies, and one to the Governor of each State in the Confederacy.

---

RICHMOND, VA., October 17, 1864.

Governor CHARLES CLARK,
Augusta, Ga.:

I much regret the necessity which prevented me from going as far as our State, and deprived me of the pleasure of seeing you. The spirit manifested in Mississippi has been a source of comfort and pride to me. Energy and united effort, added to the patriotic zeal so generally prevalent, give the best assurance of an early peace. I hope your convention will give additional power to the public defense and unanimity among the governments of the States on all matters of military policy.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, October 18, 1864.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS,
President of the Confederate States:

SIR: This morning you verbally informed me that it was not your purpose, in dictating General Orders, No. 73, and the subsequent general orders relating to the same matter, to charge the generals commanding reserves with the control and administration of conscription further than that they should exercise a vigilant supervision over the local officers in the performance of their duties; that such local officers, except the commandants of camps of instruction, should be furnished by them, and that they should also furnish such forces of the reserves as from time to time on occasion they might deem necessary to aid in the service of conscription and the arrest of deserters, &c., and that they should report all matters concerning these functions through the Bureau of Conscription. I further understood you to say that the investigation of all matter within the sphere of conscription service was to be made by the enrolling officers and forwarded to the Bureau as heretofore or through the generals of reserves for its decision under the instructions of the Secretary of War, and that the generals of reserves were not charged with the decision of any matter of conscription. This I understood embraced your purpose of the connection of the generals of reserves with the administration of conscription, and you remarked in connection with it that you had not selected those officers with the view of charging them with such duties. Practically, in several of the States, especially in Virginia, these orders are construed as transferring from this Bureau and the enrolling officers and placing in the hands of the generals commanding the reserves the whole matter of investigating and deciding all cases of conscription coming under the act of Congress and general orders. Knowing this to be at variance with your purposes, I venture most respectfully to recommend that you order instructions to be given in the proper quarters concerning the matter. I have the honor to inclose the series of general orders* the supposition and application of which has led to the erroneous construction of your purposes. I inclose also certain general orders* of the general commanding the reserves in Virginia indicating the assumption of the entire control of conscription under the general orders of the Adjutant and Inspector General.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, October 18, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to inclose you a copy of a note I have this day addressed to His Excellency the President.† It is proper for me to state the views of the President, as related in that note, were not expressed by my seeking, but were given incidentally at an interview sought by me for conference on other matters. It is also proper to state that I was aware of these views of the President when General Orders, No. 73, were issued, but on my return to Richmond after an absence of ten days, just subsequent to the issuing of those orders, I found a different construction placed upon them. Supposing I might be in error, I have cautiously refrained from any reference to the matter until the President himself should mention it. He having this day expressed these purposes in the presence of General Cooper, summoned specially to hear them, I feel myself at liberty to make the recommendation contained in my note.

* Not found as inclosures and not otherwise identified.    † See next, ante.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

BUREAU OF SUBSISTENCE,
Richmond, October 18, 1864.

Col. L. B. NORTHROP,
Commissary-General:

COLONEL: On the 28th of September Maj. S. B. French, then at Wilmington, N. C., on a tour of duty, wrote you a letter in reference to the contract of Messrs. Power, Low & Co. That contract was to have expired, and I presume did expire, by limitation on the 2d day of this month, and the purpose of that letter was to call your attention to the importance of making some arrangement by which the time of delivery of supplies under it could be so extended as to give your department the benefit of their services, at least until we could otherwise provide against the scarcity that now threatens the Army.

Ascertaining that Major French was to return in a short time after you referred that letter to me for report, and also that Major Reid, who has been specially charged with the superintendence of the delivery of commissary supplies at Wilmington, would be here shortly hereafter, I preferred waiting until by conference with them I could put you in complete possession of the facts of the case, which I now proceed to do.

First. It will be seen by the letter and accompanying memorandum of Maj. S. B. French, of this date, addressed to yourself (see paper A*), that, with the whole Confederacy completely exhausted of supplies, we have only meat rations for 300,000 men for twenty-five days. As we feed, by rough estimate, not less than that number, including prisoners, and we cannot expect to commence on the new hog crop before the 1st of January, the condition of the commissariat is well described by Major French as "alarming." Our supply must come from abroad if it be got at all; whereas at the islands Messrs. Crenshaw have large accumulations; as Power, Low & Co. have also a considerable amount awaiting shipment.

Second. But for this purpose these two lines are our only resource, as will appear from the letter and report of Major Reid, commissary of subsistence, of October 16, addressed to me (see paper B*). The report shows that for the moon running from August 19 to September 10 only five vessels out of seventeen brought in anything for the Subsistence Department, and of these five three were the vessels of Messrs. Power, Low & Co. I invite your particular attention to the list of vessels which this report contains.

In urging upon you, in view of all the above facts, to have the contract of this firm extended if you can do so, I do not think it necessary to attempt to meet the arguments which are used to establish the policy of blockade-running under the regulations of the War and Navy Departments. The system may be a good one and may not have had time to get into operation, or it may be bad; but it has failed altogether hitherto to supply the subsistence departments, for Major Reid reports the same state of things to have existed in previous moons as in that in which he reports. The reason is obvious. The second section of the regulations to carry into effect the act to impose regulations upon the foreign commerce of the Confederate States "requires vessels to return with a cargo consisting one-half of articles not prohibited by the laws of the Confederacy and the other half of such articles as the Government shall offer for shipment from such port at the rate of freight," &c.

Meat is a bulky article and will not pay, and hence blockade-runners will not bring it. The result is that the trade regulations so far have failed to bring subsistence, and if insisted on as the exclusive policy of the Government will effectually kill all importations of that character.

Nor can Messrs. Power, Low & Co. be expected to sail their vessels at present under those "regulations." The parties that now run under them need risk nothing but their keels, and cannot, in any event, risk more than half their cargo, and then in goods that will repay the risk. But Power, Low & Co. have bought their goods (which are of a different character from private cargoes), and take the whole risk of delivery and also of inspection.

Third. I have had a conversation with Mr. Low and he assures me, as I have before stated, that he has a large amount of stores at the islands awaiting shipment. These, with Messrs. Crenshaw's, are all that this department is advised of. The equity that he makes out for his concern is that they have those goods; that they did not expect a discontinuance of the contracts so soon, and think rather they had cause to expect a continuance of it as the condition of a bona fide and patriotic fulfillment; that there has been delay in building vessels which they could not prevent; that the quarantine at Wilmington has operated another delay, which has been still further extended by the increased strictness of the blockade. But whether they have an equity or not, and whether the regulations for running the blockade are politic or not in the long run, it is certain that you may get meat by extending the contract, and certain that you can get none by regulations at present.

A letter from Power, Low & Co., addressed to me, dated October 17, says:

As the Subsistence Department is greatly in want of supplies, and as an inducement for a renewal or extension of said contract, therefore we propose to place our ships Will-o'-the-Wisp, Night Hawk, and two others expected at the islands shortly under the control of said department, to bring in on each vessel from one-third to one-half weight capacity, so that a supply of stores can be safely and surely relied upon.

In this exigency, and with that pledge, I respectfully report to you that I consider the extension of their contract as an absolute necessity of the service.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

FRANK G. RUFFIN,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Commissary of Subsistence.

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES, MISSISSIPPI,
Enterprise, October 19, 1864.

General S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: I addressed a communication to His Excellency Governor Charles Clark on the 19th of September ultimo in regard to his General Orders, No. 39, calling into the State service for six months volunteers from the reserve classes and men of military age (viz, from eighteen to forty-five), and received for answer his communication dated 20th of September, which I telegraphed to the Department on the 2d of October, to which I have as yet received no reply. I have the honor now to inclose for your information of my actions in the premises both my note to the Governor and his reply.* This action of the Governor has virtually arrested the volunteer enrollment of the reserves and the conscription of the men of the military age. All are rushing into the State organization, greatly to the detriment of the service. It has come to my knowledge, unofficially, that the Governor alleges that he has an understanding with the War Department on the subject, and his action is sanctioned. Lieutenant-General Taylor stated to me that in an interview with Governor Clark he said to the Governor that it was a matter of no consequence who got these forces out so that they were placed under the command of the departmental commander. In consequence of this remark of the lieutenant-general, I have not interposed further in opposition to the Governor's proceedings, although I dissent from the general's views; for this organization will be a very weak one, composed of men who have been skulking from the service under the State laws. Amenable to their own courts-martial, composed of the same class of men, their decisions accord with the general feeling of the men and officers. No punishment inflicted and no discipline and order kept up, the men going and coming when they please, I fancy the organization will be but little better than an armed mob. As they are not amenable to the Confederate courts-martial, the generals cannot enforce discipline or order, and disaster and disgrace will result when they are brought into the field. These observations I most respectfully submit and ask your instructions.

I have the honor, general, to be, with great regard, your obedient servant,

W. L. BRANDON.

[First indorsement.]

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
November 7, 1864.

Respectfully submitted to the Secretary of War.

H. L. CLAY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Second indorsement.]

NOVEMBER 11, 1864.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY:

Will you prepare an appropriate letter explaining the laws and the obligations of the Department under it in relation to these militia?

J. A. SEDDON.

---

* Inclosures not found, but see Brandon to Cooper, October 2, p. 710.

GENERAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
 No. 82. } Richmond, October 20, 1864.

I. The Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance will, without delay, take measures to place in the field one-fifth of all the men employed in his department (including contractors and their employés) of the classes specified in General Orders, No. 77, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, current series. To this end he will direct the several officers in charge of arsenals, workshops, depots, &c., to turn over to the nearest enrolling officer, by list, showing their ages, occupation, and residence, such proportion of their employés (including contractors and employés under them) of the class above referred to as will constitute in the aggregate one-fifth of the whole number in the said classes, according to returns in his office of September 30, 1864. Duplicates of such list will be sent to the general of reserves of the States, and triplicates to the Chief of Ordnance. Three days are allowed for the execution of this order after its reception at any post or station of the Ordnance Department.

II. The chief of the Niter and Mining Bureau will turn over in like manner, on similar lists, one-fifth of all men of the classes specified in General Orders, No. 77, employed in iron, lead, copper, and coal mining, and in all service appertaining thereto, whether under officers of his Bureau or by contractors. Duplicate and triplicate lists to be furnished as above directed in the Ordnance Bureau, and will in like manner turn over one-fifth of all such men as are employed in the niter service. The period of three days, under the same conditions as above mentioned, are allowed for the execution of this order.

III. The list of persons directed in the foregoing sections to be turned over to the enrolling officer will be prepared at once on the reception of this order, and will be furnished to the said officers within three days, as above prescribed, by the various officers of each of the above bureaus having men under their charge, and every assistance will be rendered by the latter to the enrolling officers to carry out the intention of this order.

IV. So much of General Orders, No. 77, as relates to men employed in the two bureaus named above is hereby suspended, and the foregoing order will stand in lieu of all requirements under the former.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., October 20, 1864.

Brig. Gen. A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

GENERAL: I find that some inconvenience results from the competition of the several bureaus of this Department in the purchase of Federal currency, and in consequence I desire that all such purchases be made through one agent. I am informed that Captain Morfit, assistant quartermaster, from his position is required to buy a large amount of that currency, and to avoid the evils resulting from competition it is deemed judicious that all the bureaus shall employ him as their agent in procuring the Federal currency necessary to their operations.*

Very respectfully,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

(Same to Surg. Gen. S. P. Moore; Col. J. Gorgas, Chief of Ordnance; Robert Ould, esq., Agent of Exchange; Maj. Gen. J. F. Gilmer, chief Engineer Bureau; Col. I. M. St. John, chief Niter and Mining Bureau; Col. L. B. Northrop, Commissary-General.)

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, October 20, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to send you the inclosed paper for your inspection, and to ask its return.† General Orders, No. 73, were issued on the 22d of September. This is the first and with one exception the only paper received at this Bureau from the conscription service in Virginia since that date. From this fact and from the purport of the indorsement of General Kemper I infer that that officer regards the matter of conscription in Virginia as removed from the control of this Bureau. Regarding this Bureau as a part of the War Office designated by you for supervision, directing and controlling the matter of conscription in Virginia, as elsewhere, and finding that the general commanding reserve forces of Virginia apparently takes a different view, I beg, respectfully, to ask your instruction.

First. Are the operations of conscription for the State of Virginia to be continued under the supervision, direction, and control of the Bureau? If so, to what extent?

Second. Is the commandant of conscripts for Virginia (now Colonel Shields) and other enrolling officers to be held at the disposition of and their duties dictated by the general commanding reserves or by this Bureau?

Third. Are the cases of conscription and the matter heretofore considered and acted on by this Bureau to be continued to be so acted on, or is the whole policy and execution of conscription to be administered by the general commanding the reserves in Virginia, reserving this Bureau as the clerical channel between that officer and the Secretary of War?

As an accurate understanding on these points is rendered necessary to the public service by the failure to receive returns concerning the progress and manner of conscription in Virginia, I most respectfully ask your early instruction on the points submitted.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

SELMA, October 20, 1864.

Lieut. Gen. R. TAYLOR,
Comdg. Dept. Alabama, Mississippi, and East Louisiana:

GENERAL: I have read the letter of the president of Alabama and Tennessee Rivers Railroad and the indorsement thereon of General

* See also Special Orders, No. 251, paragraph IX, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, October 22, 1864, Series I, Vol. XLII, Part III, p. 1159.

† Inclosure not found and not otherwise identified.

Beauregard, directing the extension of that road from Blue Mountain to Jacksonville. The only sources from which iron can be obtained for this purpose are the Gainesville branch, the New Berne branch, and the Marion branch, of Alabama. Of these the Gainesville branch is the only one the Secretary of War has authorized me to remove. The iron will have to be brought by steamers down the Tombigbee River about 50 miles to Demopolis and carried by rail an average of 210 miles. If taken from the New Berne or Marion branch it will have to be carried about 170 miles, and an order from the commanding general given for their removal. To execute the work with dispatch will require two locomotives and thirty cars devoted exclusively to the work, and one of the locomotives must be capable of drawing twenty car-loads of iron, or it will require three locomotives. These must be subtracted from the present transportation of the road engaged in the carriage of army supplies. Can they be spared? The attempt to remove any of the three branches will probably be enjoined (the Gainesville branch least likely in this case), in which event we must await the process of dissolving it before the courts or take it by military force. The Secretary of War has decided that the general commanding is the judge of the necessity in such cases, and with him rests the seizure by force. These branches, especially the New Berne and Marion, penetrate a country which contributes large supplies of grain and meat to the Army, and unless the necessity is imperious, the removal may cause more danger than benefit. The labor for the execution of this work and the teams for hauling cross-ties will have to be impressed. I found it exceedingly difficult to hire labor, even at the most extravagant rates, for the railroad work near Demopolis, and the impressment of labor since the late heavy drafts for Mobile and other points has become doubly difficult. The distance from Blue Mountain to Gadsden, the point to which the supplies are hauled by wagon, is about twenty-seven miles, and from Jacksonville about twenty-two miles, a difference of only five miles. The question arises whether, in considering all these facts, the movements of our Army in that direction are not of such a transitory character and the necessity so temporary and the advantages so slight, comparatively, as to render the undertaking inexpedient at this time.

I make these suggestions, general, with great diffidence and respect, believing that they may not have occurred to General Beauregard. If you so order, I will proceed immediately with the work and execute it as rapidly as possible, giving my most earnest attention to its early completion. The Government will have to advance the money to pay for the work and iron, the company not having the means to do it, and the cost be retained from transportation accounts due from the Government to the company. This is ample to reimburse the Government, but the funds for the labor will be required in advance. The iron can be paid for in Richmond. I shall require about $25,000 to start with for contingencies. Can the quartermaster here supply it?

Very respectfully, yours,

MINOR MERIWETHER,
Lieutenant-Colonel of Engineers.

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, October 22, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

SIR: Perhaps it may aid to some extent the effort to adjust the confusion in the recruiting and conscription service to trace clearly the progress of those changes and innovations which culminated in this condition. Up to the 1st of May the system you had instituted was, under great difficulties and impediments, working smoothly and with satisfactory results, furnishing large and rapid accessions to the Army and administering the conscription law in all its requirements for the public service. The act of 17th of February had been critically analyzed and a just exposition of it issued in general orders, which were in rapid progress of execution. Slight, but necessary, modifications arose in this progress, but were adopted or waived without material change. About this time your conscription organization was charged with the organization of the reserve forces, and was proceeding to that work when general officers were assigned to the command of the reserves and the enrolling officers of the conscript service put under their orders to complete the reserve organization. Here at once arose a cause of confusion. The reserves were to be conscribed as other persons liable to military service; the conscript authorities were performing the duty; the generals took possession of their agencies and instituted other rules of action. In Virginia they were subjected to orders inconsistent with the duties prescribed by the conscript authorities, and my refusal to sanction those orders or to denounce the enrolling officers for alleged want of active execution of them constituted a grave offense to the general commanding and at once terminated cordial harmonious co-operation.

Almost contemporaneous with this, and in submission to the clamor of individuals or the conjectures of uninformed officers, a system of inspection of the enrolling service was attempted and much vague and unfounded misrepresentation made concerning it. At the same time a protracted and wasting campaign was weakening the armies by disaster and desertion. The three influences combined to cast suspicion on the efficacy of the conscript organization; inspectors reported corruption and inefficiency; the Army wasted, and generals of reserves were seeking to swell their muster-rolls. The silent, but sure, legal working of the conscription authority overcoming popular prejudice, the opposition of State Executives and judicial authorities, the weakness of its own agencies, the clamor of ignorant and interested officials, filling the ranks as far as the law allowed, was unappreciated, and a general order was issued giving the control and conduct of the business of conscription to the general commanding the reserves. From the fact that the general commanding the reserves of Virginia has his headquarters at Richmond and is in daily and direct communication with you, it has not been deemed necessary by him, acting under General Orders, No. 73, to confer with or in any form to communicate with the Bureau of Conscription concerning the matter of conscription. By that order the local conscription authorities have been placed under his orders and he has assumed final jurisdiction, so far as the Bureau is informed, over the whole matter in Virginia. Practically, the Bureau has not the semblance of connection with conscription in Virginia, except to the extent of referring papers concerning extraneous duties to the general commanding the reserves, or through him to the commandant of conscripts under his orders. The confusion, misapprehensions, and misunderstandings in the conscription service result solely from General Orders, No. 73, being construed in Virginia as transferring all control over or connection with that service from the Bureau of Conscription to the general commanding the reserve forces. My belief is that neither the President, you, nor any other competent authority ever intended such transfer. The experience in Alabama, Mississippi, and Florida was too recent and too sad to warrant a return to that fatal system. Trusting you will give due credit to one who by no possibility can have any other interest than the public service in submitting this statement, and humbly and earnestly recommending that you use the reserves to aid, not to control, conscription.

I am, with high and cordial respect, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,

Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

N. B.—I venture to offer a programme for a general order which may meet the case in hand.

---

[OCTOBER 22, 1864.—For Cobb to Seddon, relating to the arrangement between Governor Brown and General Beauregard with reference to the Georgia militia, see Series I, Vol. LII, Part II, p. 764.]

CIRCULAR {
No. 70. }

CONSCRIPT OFFICE,
Richmond, October 22, 1864.

In the execution of Circulars 66 and 69, current series, from this office, the following instructions are transmitted for your information and guidance:

SECTION 1. In aggregating the slaves of an owner from which an impressment is to be made in the ratio prescribed—namely, of one in five—you will include all able-bodied domestic or house servants between the ages specified, but no slave employed exclusively as a domestic or house servant will be taken as one of the impressed slaves.

SEC. 2. The term “slave” will be construed as applicable as well to female as to male servants, and all able-bodied female servants between the ages specified will be included in the aggregate of one’s slaves, care being taken, however, to impress in each case male slaves in fulfillment of the circulars above referred to.

SEC. 3. Whilst the orders governing impressments expressly prohibit the impressment of domestic or house servants and does not contemplate the impressment of females, it does not prohibit their being counted in the aggregate from which male slaves only will be impressed in the prescribed ratio.

SEC. 4. Enrolling officers are enjoined to execute these orders with diligence and promptness, particularly observing that the object, length of employment, and disposition made of the slave impressed under each circular is separate and distinct.

SEC. 5. The advisory boards will be charged with the execution of Circular 69 from this office in their respective counties, and the slaves impressed under said circular will be reported to Capt. W. H.

Fry, adjutant of the post at Camp Lee, furnishing in the case of each slave his appraised value, descriptive list, and name of owner.

By order of Lieut. Col. J. C. Shields, commandant:

JAS. H. BINFORD,
Lieutenant and Adjutant.

(To Local Enrolling Officers.)

SPECIAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 254. } Richmond, October 25, 1864.

* * * * *

VII. The organization of the First, Second, Third, Fourth, and Fifth Regiments of Georgia Reserves, as constituted by the order of Maj. Gen. Howell Cobb, commanding, &c., is hereby confirmed and made the action of the War Department. The organization of each of these regiments will date from the day on which its tenth company was mustered into service.

* * * * *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JOHN W. RIELY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, October 25, 1864.

General HOLMES:

DEAR SIR: Major Dowd informs me that you have instructed him that all applications for the detail of hands in factories working for the State must be submitted to Major Chisman. A portion of these applications have already received the approval of the regular conscript authorities, including yourself. The others I now inclose for your approbation also, and desire to accompany them with an explanation.

Though I have heretofore submitted to apply for details for the State as other parties, I deny the right of the Government to seize any person working for and in the employ of North Carolina in any department provided for by law. The Quartermaster-General, Lawton, has for a long time been endeavoring to force me to abandon the State's contract for furnishing its own troops, and every possible effort for this purpose has been resorted to. The last device was the attempt to conscribe the hands in all the factories which had contracts with the States and would not abandon them for Confederate contracts. More than one instance of an open and avowed attempt of this kind can be cited, long before the recent order revoking details. The order from Richmond directing these applications to be submitted to Major Chisman is, I have no doubt, a continuation of the same plan. I shall not submit to it. Whilst I am willing that every man shall go and everything stop at the decisive hour, I am not willing that General Lawton should break down the State of North Carolina in this way and deprive her of the power to clothe her armies in the field. Should these details therefore be unreasonably refused I shall have to try tilts with the Confederate Government.

Very respectfully, yours,

Z. B. VANCE.

[OCTOBER 27, 1864.—For Taylor to Beauregard, with reference to the militia laws of Alabama and the failure of the Legislature of that State to amend said laws; also referring to the status of the militia of Mississippi, see Series I, Vol. XXXIX, Part III, p. 855.]

AMERICAN HOTEL,
Richmond, October 28, 1864.

General PEMBERTON:

SIR: I had the honor to say to General Gardner by note yesterday that there were a number of Marylanders here, most of them old soldiers and exempts (all of them), who wish to render service as far as they are able, and that there are enough to work four guns of your permanent fortifications, perhaps a larger number, and thus relieve more active men whom you may require for other service. If you desire it, I will cheerfully raise a company of such men immediately and undertake to serve four guns of such a battery, and feel quite sure that the work will, if required, be faithfully done. I am not able to march about, and there are many of them holding positions which would make it necessary for them to be here except as duty required, but can be relied on when wanted. This, of course, to last only during the emergency existing.

Yours, respectfully,

GEO. P. KANE.

[First indorsement.]

HDQRS. ARTILLERY DEFENSES, DEPT. OF RICHMOND,
October 29, 1864.

Respectfully referred to the Honorable Secretary of War to know whether such a temporary organization as is proposed by Colonel Kane can be accepted for service with the artillery defenses.

J. C. PEMBERTON,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

[Second indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF RICHMOND,
October 31, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded.

The delay in getting the men together when required would probably make it too late for their services to be available. Could this difficulty be removed and Colonel Pemberton desires their service, I suppose they would be of advantage.

R. S. EWELL,
Lieutenant-General.

[Third indorsement.]

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
November 12, 1864.

The proposition by Mr. Kane is to form a company for local defense and special service in heavy artillery, with the special provision that it will not be employed elsewhere than in General Pemberton's lines, and then only in emergency, to be composed of Marylanders not liable to service. Respectfully submitted to the Secretary of War, recommended.

By order:

SAML. W. MELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Fourth indorsement.]

NOVEMBER 20, 1864.

Retained for conference with the President.

J. A. S.,
Secretary.

CIRCULAR.]

RICHMOND, October 31, 1864.

It has been frequently represented by officers of this department in charge of the collection of supplies, and who have acquired experience in the working of the system, that the present practice of the commissioners appointed for the several States under the impressment law in changing every two months the schedule prices of the articles of prime necessity, such as wheat, corn, &c., tends not only greatly to embarrass the collection of supplies but also creates great dissatisfaction, for the following reasons:

Very many citizens, either from the best motives or because they are more accessible to our armies by railroad or other transportation, sell their surplus or have it impressed at an early period, and for that reason at a lower price, while those who act on less patriotic impulses, or who, from accidental causes, are more remote and inaccessible, by retaining their surplus to a late period of the season obtain thereby the advantage of a change of the schedule prices and thus frequently a much larger price than those who sold earlier in the season. By this means a premium is given to withhold the supplies and fair cause of complaint afforded those citizens who, either from patriotic motives or for other reasons, have sent forward, or have been compelled to part with, their surplus at the lower price.

It is respectfully suggested to the commissioners of the States east of the Mississippi River that it would be much fairer to the citizens and of decided advantage to the Government to fix a price for the articles of prime necessity, at least for the harvest year, which should remain unchanged by them during that period. In fixing the price the commissioners might have reference to what, in their judgment, would be the price six months after the commencement of the harvest year, and when thus fixed might give assurance in the published schedule that it would not be increased.

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

(To H. K. Burgwyn, Garysburg, N. C.; Ro. V. Blackstock, Stocksville, N. C.; J. J. McRae, esq., Bucatunna, Miss.; W. W. Mason, Tuskegee, Ala.; John Finlayson, commissioner for Florida, Tallahassee, Fla.; G. D. Moore, Brookville, Miss.; Alfred M. Martin, Brighton, S. C.; U. B. Wilkinson, Newnan, Ga.; B. F. Perry, esq., Greenville, S. C.)

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., October 31, 1864.

Maj. Gen. HOWELL COBB,
Commanding, &c., Macon, Ga.:

GENERAL: I have received your letter of the 22d,* relative to the arrangement made between General Beauregard and Governor Brown in regard to the militia of Georgia. The course pursued in reference to the detailed men in the militia is approved, and considered under the circumstances the best line of action to be adopted. Should, however, the militia be recalled from active service the Confederate claim on the detailed men must be asserted.

* See Series I, Vol. LII, Part II, p. 764.

Very respectfully,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

GENERAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 83. } Richmond, Va., November 1, 1864.

I. All soldiers hereafter furloughed at department or army headquarters, or at hospitals, by reason of disability resulting from wounds or sickness, will rejoin their commands at the expiration of the time originally allowed, unless, in the opinion of a medical examining board, their condition is not such as to permit them to make the journey without serious detriment to their health. All now absent are required to return at the expiration of their present furloughs, except those unable to travel. The certificate required above will be promptly forwarded to the company commanders.

II. Generals commanding reserve forces in the several States are charged with the execution of this order. They will cause to be collected and forwarded without delay to their respective commands all men who come within the provisions of the preceding paragraph, that they may be discharged, retired, or assigned to active or light duty, as circumstances may justify.

III. Paragraph VII, General Orders, No. 48, current series, is thus amended:

Officers of the Quartermaster's Department failing to return the sacks in which grain is received from the quartermaster will be charged $3 for every one not returned.

IV. Paragraph I, General Orders, No. 74, 1862, is so modified as to require the enforcement of the conscript act in the Department of Southwestern Kentucky.

V. Candidates for appointment to the position of military storekeeper in the Ordnance Department will hereafter be subject to such examination, prior to appointment, as may be prescribed by the Chief of Ordnance.

VI. Commanders of cavalry regiments or battalions will require company commanders to keep a descriptive roll of all horses in their companies, noting all changes which are made amongst them by casualties or other causes, as they occur.

VII. Every horse borne upon the descriptive roll will be treated as public property, so long as forage and the 40 cents a day are drawn from the Government. No soldier will be permitted to ride his horse, except in the discharge of public duty, or to sell or exchange him, except to secure one more serviceable, such superiority to be determined and certified by the company officers present for duty, and the fact noted upon the descriptive roll. Such sales or exchanges, however, are strictly forbidden between cavalymen of the same or different commands.

VIII. Brigade inspectors, in making inspections, will examine these descriptive rolls, observing that they accurately describe the number and distinguishing marks of the horses. Where they discover horses to have been used for private purposes, or disposed of in violation of orders, they will note the facts upon the inspection report, with the names of the company commanders permitting it, and of the soldiers so offending, sending up charges against all, with the view to their trial by court-martial.

IX. Horses forfeited under the action of General Orders, Nos. 53 (act 26) and 55, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, of 1864, may be purchased, after appraisement, for the benefit of owners by deserving cavalymen who have lost their horses by the casualties of battle.

X. Inspectors will report on their "inspection reports," for transfer to the infantry, all men found dismounted through their own carelessness, or whose horses may have been rendered unserviceable by neglect or hard usage upon other than public service.

Descriptive roll of animals belonging to company —, regiment — brigade —, division —.

DESCRIPTION OF ANIMAL.

To whom horse belongs.	Height.	Color.	Distinguishing marks.	Mare.	Horse.	Remarks.
A. B .....	15 hds.	Sorrel..	Star in forehead, &c.

XI. The following is substituted for paragraph IV, General Orders, No. 73, current series, which is hereby revoked:

All applications for exemption and detail will be transmitted to the superintendent of the Bureau of Conscription for decision. The office of Congressional district enrolling officer is abolished, and reports and returns of the commandants of conscripts will be made to the Bureau of Conscription, and a copy of each will also be furnished to the generals of reserves. An officer may be assigned to duty in each Congressional district by the generals of reserves as inspector of conscription.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., November 1, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. C. SHIELDS,

Commandant of Conscripts, Richmond, Va.:

(Through Major-General Kemper, commanding reserves.)

SIR: The Secretary of War directs that all persons coming from the counties of Princess Anne and Norfolk and Norfolk City to enter the military service of the Confederacy be allowed unrestricted selection of the companies to which they may be respectively assigned.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES, VIRGINIA,
November 22, 1864.

Respectfully returned to the Bureau of Conscription.

Numerous orders and communications are being addressed by the Bureau to my subordinate, Colonel Shields, through myself; others, directly to Colonel Shields.

It is submitted that the Bureau cannot direct its orders to an officer expressly placed under my direction without contravening the orders of the War Department and the regulations of the Army in regard to correspondence.

All communications and orders affecting the business of conscription in this State should be addressed to the officer conducting that business, and not to any one of his subordinates.

J. L. KEMPER,
Major-General.

[Second indorsement.]

WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, November 29, 1864.

Respectfully transmitted to the Secretary of War, whose attention is invited to the fact that the order, the form of transmission of which is objected to, purports to be and is by order of the Secretary of War, and is sent through Major-General Kemper.

If the custom of armies be accepted as the interpretation of regulations, there is no violation of those regulations of courtesy or etiquette in addressing an order from the supreme authority to the officer who is to execute it, provided, as in this case, his immediate superiors are duly informed by transmitting the order through them.

Acting on this custom, this Bureau since its institution has daily transmitted papers through Generals Lee, Beauregard, Johnston, and others, and through the generals of reserves to officers under their orders. This is the first protest against the practice received at this Bureau.

It is believed the practice is customary in the field, and certainly that the largest portion of the correspondence of the War Department is so transmitted.

This Bureau entertains no desire and has manifested no purpose of passing by General Kemper in the promulgation of the orders of the Secretary of War. On the contrary, peculiar caution has been exercised in its correspondence with that officer to avoid departures from special courtesy—a caution not demanded by the tone of correspondence with generals of reserves in other States.

Under paragraph XI, General Orders, No. 83, this Bureau is not prepared to admit that the commandant of conscripts for the State of Virginia is the subordinate of the general of reserves. Under that paragraph the commandant is directly responsible to this Bureau in matters similar to that to which this paper refers. Instruction on this point respectfully asked.

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

CAMP IN INTRENCHED LINE,
Near Mobile, Ala., November 2, 1864.

General S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: We, the undersigned, were appointed a committee on the part of the officers and men of what was known as Lockhart's battalion, and now as the First Regiment Alabama Reserves, to prefer the following petition: That the regiment with its present organization be transferred to Provisional Army, C. S. We would not feel justified in presenting this petition if the companies of this organization had been organized and mustered into the service under the "act to organize a reserve corps." But inasmuch as eight companies were organized and mustered into the service by and with the authority of General Pillow before it was even known that the act referred to above was in contemplation, and inasmuch as the young men of this regiment voluntarily entered the service without regard to State lines months before, and many of them years before, they were liable to military duty, we feel that it is our duty and but justice to them to make every effort and employ all the means in our power to have the regiment with its present organization transferred to the Provisional Army, C. S. Relying on a general order from Brigadier-General Pillow, the then chief of the Bureau of Conscription in the States of Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi, that the boys entering these organizations (the companies the raising of which he had authorized) should not be conscribed, the officers proceeded to organize the several companies. By an order from Governor Watts these unattached companies were organized into a battalion by the election of field officers on application recommended by the Governor. The battalion organization was accepted by the War Department, and ordered (contrary to the expectation of all) to report to Major-General Withers as a part of the Reserve Corps of the State. Even then, relying on the ambiguity of the phrase "as a part of," and the assurance of the Governor that the intention of the War Department had been misapprehended by us, and that they will go organized as one body (that is, into the Confederate service), we went to the field believing that our gallant boys would never be troubled by conscription. Besides, the officer, acting in good faith, had as an inducement to them to enter the service assured those youths that they would never be conscribed. They entered the service voluntarily, and, as previously stated, before the enactment of the law establishing a Reserve Corps; they have cheerfully undergone the hardships incident to the service; they have braved the danger of battle, parts of four companies now being prisoners of war; they have acquired an esprit de corps, an attachment to their present organization, and we would respectfully submit that it would be a humiliation entirely unnecessary, and not demanded by the exigencies of the service, to subject them to the disgrace of conscription. We think it proved beyond doubt that the voluntary service of our enthusiastic young men, subjected to the requisite drill and discipline, is far superior to the unwilling service rendered by conscripts, and we therefore respectfully ask if the War Department can expect as efficient service from these young men when forced into other commands as it now has in a command to which they are attached? In addition to the above the officers (many of them wounded, and in part disabled men from the armies of Virginia and the Southwest) never for once entertained the idea that they were organizing a moving "camp of instruction" for the enrolling officer.

They further respectfully submit that they cannot hope to fill up the ranks of the regiment if depleted by continual drafts, nor can they expect to maintain that high standard of drill and discipline which they flatter themselves they have attained.

In consideration of the above facts, and without citing as precedents the reception of other regiments organized at and after the same time of our organization, we respectfully ask that the regiment be allowed to take its place in the Army of the Confederate States and be numbered in the regular series of the regiments from Alabama.

We are, general, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

D. E. HUGER,
Colonel.

J. L. DAVIDSON,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

JNO. W. PITTS,
Captain Company C.

J. L. WALTHALL,
Captain Company E.

W. C. WARD,
Captain Company A.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS RIGHT WING, DEFENSES OF MOBILE,
November 3, 1864.

Approved and respectfully forwarded.

B. M. THOMAS,
Brigadier-General.

[Second indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF THE GULF,
Mobile, November 4, 1864.

Approved and respectfully forwarded.

DABNEY H. MAURY,
Major-General, Commanding.

[Third indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVES, ALABAMA,
Montgomery, November 5, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded.

The two companies mentioned as added to the battalion to constitute the First Regiment were being raised under like orders with the other eight, but were not quite completed when the act of the 17th of February was passed. The date of actual organization constitutes the only difference. This regiment has certainly claims to consideration which cannot be preferred by any other portion of the reserves—the circumstances under which the companies were raised; their long service without pay; being officered by men of experience, eleven of whom have been wounded in the battles in Virginia; the assurances given them by high State officials and Confederate officers, and the heretofore quasi recognition of them by the Government in their retention in service from their organization. The morale of this regiment would be greatly strengthened by granting this petition, and good service can certainly be expected of it.

J. M. WITHERS,
Major-General, Commanding.

[Fourth indorsement.]

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT OF ALABAMA,
November 8, 1864.

At my instance this command was ordered by the President to be received with its organization, and it was required to report to General Withers. (See my letter of the 27th of April to President Davis.) In response to this letter the President directed the organization to remain. It would be injustice to the men and officers to permit any to be conscribed, especially when they wish to go into the service as organized. It would also violate the order of the President and do great harm, and produce great dissatisfaction with the best people of the State.

T. H. WATTS,
Governor of Alabama.

[Fifth indorsement.]

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
November 25, 1864.

Respectfully submitted to the Secretary of War.

Lockhart's battalion was composed originally of eight companies, consisting chiefly of youths under eighteen years of age. Nothing has been found in the correspondence of this office to authorize the impression that the members who became liable to conscription would not be assigned to organizations existing prior to 16th of April, 1862. A letter to Major-General Withers dated July 6, 1864, returned the muster-rolls of five companies, that the ages might be entered, and stated that if they were under eighteen they composed part of the reserves under his command, but that those under eighteen must not be mustered for general service, as they would, on attaining that age, become liable to assignment to companies organized prior to 16th of April, 1862. Another letter to General Withers dated July 11, 1864, authorized the retention of the officers between eighteen and forty-five, stating that it was an exceptional case. Major-General Withers has added to the eight companies two others, organized in like manner and from like material. He advises that the petition be granted and the present organization preserved. Governor Watts, of Alabama, urges the same view. The papers are submitted to the Secretary of War for instructions, inasmuch as the application is specially indorsed by the Governor of Alabama.

By order, &c.:

JNO. BLAIR HOGE,
*Assistant Adjutant-General.*STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, November 2, 1864.

General T. H. HOLMES:

GENERAL: In conformity with your request I inclose you a list* of the classes of persons whom I have claimed as necessary State officers and agents to be exempt from conscription, together with a copy of a joint resolution* of the Legislature as the authority for my claim. To these I only desire to add that I claim any and all persons in the actual employ of the State in any department where the law enjoins duties to be done which require the employment of such persons. Without such power to employ any needful agents no department of this Government could be carried on for a moment, and the State would be shorn of its sovereignty and crippled in all its operations. Since our conference on this subject you will have learned of the decision of our supreme court in Johnson vs. Mallett, in which it is laid down as law that my certificate in behalf of an officer is not material; that all officers and agents provided by the Constitution or the laws made in pursuance thereof are, without regard to any action of the Congress, exempt from conscription. I regard this as settling the whole question, and shall be governed by it accordingly. Feeling as deeply interested in the filling up of our armies as any one can be, I have only to say, in conclusion, that it shall be my purpose to aid you by filling, as far as possible, all the departments under my control with non-conscripts, and turning over all able-bodied men who can be spared.

---

* Not found.

Very respectfully, yours,

Z. B. VANCE.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVES, NORTH CAROLINA,
Raleigh, November 3, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded to Bureau of Conscription.

TH. H. HOLMES,
Lieutenant-General, Commanding.

[Second indorsement.]

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, November 8, 1864.

Respectfully referred to the Secretary of War for his information.

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

[Third indorsement.]

NOVEMBER 9, 1864.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY:

Have you seen or heard of the decision referred to? It would involve an awkward relation to these employés. I am bound, am I not, to act upon the conscript law without reference to these State decisions? and yet the result would be conflict. What do you advise?

J. A. S.,
Secretary.

[Fourth indorsement.]

SECRETARY OF WAR:

I have not seen the decision referred to, but it corresponds with one made by Chief Justice Pearson last spring, in the case of one Russell (I think that is the name), who was conscribed by General Whiting. Governor Vance presses the decision beyond its limits when he claims all the employés and agents, &c. The decision, in my opinion, is erroneous, as militating against that supremacy which the Constitution ordains in respect to the legislation of the Confederate States in the subjects committed to them.

Respectfully,

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, November 3, 1864.

The PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

SIR: The operations of the War Department since the date of my last report embrace in their scope the events of the present campaign, which at that time had not been fully opened, and which has not yet been brought to a close; also, the measures instituted for the increase, organization, equipment, and supply of the Army, under the laws adopted at the last session of the First Congress. The importance of the elections to occur within the United States during the present year, the condition of their finances, and a growing discontent among their people because of the duration of the war, induced a belief that their executive and military authorities would prosecute the campaign with extraordinary vigor and seek to render it decisive and final. Nor has this anticipation been disappointed. In the winter and spring the enemy collected a larger body of men than he had before assembled in the field, who were commanded by his favorite generals. His fleets were enlarged, and their armaments embraced all the improvements that naval architecture had discovered. His arms and equipments were of the most improved model, and whatever was required for the success of the campaign was supplied with lavish profusion. He opened the campaign by an attempt to obtain command over the States bordering on the Gulf of Mexico. He invaded Florida, set on foot an expedition to sweep through Mississippi and to effect the capture of Mobile, and he penetrated with formidable armies to the western limits of Louisiana to establish his dominion over that State. The success of these enterprises was expected to give him a firm hold upon these States and to enable him to concentrate all his energies upon the campaigns in Virginia and Georgia. But these invasions were defeated or repelled. My last report communicated the victories obtained in Florida and North Mississippi that relieved Alabama and Florida from the invader, and I have now to announce a series of brilliant triumphs obtained by our arms in Louisiana and Arkansas, commencing with the signal victories of Mansfield and Pleasant Hill, and extending into the interior of Missouri, where our victorious troops were at the date of our latest information. Almost the entire Trans-Mississippi Department enjoys security and repose, and the troops, long engaged with invaders there, may now, as in part they already are, be employed in formidable offensive operations. But the primary object of the enemy was to effect the capture of Richmond and the defeat and dispersion of the armies of Northern Virginia and Tennessee. He assembled his main army for this purpose in April last on the Rappahannock, under General Grant. Another was collected on the Peninsula, under command of General Butler, to co-operate on the south side of Richmond. A third was designed to penetrate to the James River through the Valley of Virginia, and the forces in Western Virginia and Kentucky were to cross the mountains and join it on its march.

It is believed that more than 200,000 troops were combined for the execution of this plan in April last, and that from 50,000 to 100,000 men have since been added as re-enforcements. The army of General Grant was met at the Wilderness on the 5th of May last and defeated; it was encountered with the same result at Spotsylvania Court-House, on the Po, the North Anna, and at Cold Harbor, after which it abandoned its march on Richmond and crossed the James River to form a junction with General Butler near Petersburg. This army of General Butler had landed on the south side of the James River, at Bermuda Hundred, early in May, to co-operate with the army of General Grant, which was expected to arrive before Richmond in a short time. On the 16th day of May this army met with a defeat at Drewry's Bluff, and was confined to its intrenchments from that time until it was joined by the army of General Grant.

The army of General Sigel, designated for the invasion of the Valley of Virginia, was defeated at New Market in May last, and the troops from Western Virginia driven from the valley of the upper Roanoke about the same time. At a later period these armies were united under General Hunter, and after a successful march up the Valley of Virginia, were encountered by General Early at Lynchburg and driven to the Ohio River. General Early, finding Washington City and Baltimore exposed, passed through the Valley, defeating all opposing forces, crossed into Maryland, and penetrated to the suburbs of Washington City and Baltimore. The cavalry raids of Sheridan and Wilson were defeated, and the attempts to permanently obstruct our communications have failed. The campaign projected by General Grant with such mighty preparation has been frustrated, and if he depended alone upon the means that were provided and were deemed to be superabundant, his failure would be absolute. But a proclamation has been made for the draft of 500,000 men by the President of the United States to recruit his defeated and dispirited army and we cannot yet claim security or quiet.

In the great central State of Georgia the campaign opened about the same time, but operations have been so far less favorable to our arms. Preparation had been there made early to meet with adequate forces, exceeding the relative disproportion which has usually existed with all our armies, and repel the enemy on the threshold of the State, but prudence or strategy led the general intrusted with the conduct of the campaign to prefer a retreating and defensive line of action. In consequence our forces, though not without, on several occasions, severely checking and punishing their adversaries, whenever venturing direct assault, were gradually maneuvered or pressed back toward Atlanta, the leading objective point of the campaign. When that important central point of union to various converging lines of communication had been nearly reached, and appeared about to be abandoned, a change was made in the commander, and a strenuous effort was made to hold and defend, by force of arms, this place, which had become more important in a political and moral than in a military view, from the significance the public of both sides had attached to its possession. It was bravely held for several weeks, and some successes, achieved with skill and valor, for a time seemed to assure to us its retention, when a hazardous movement of the enemy, which, with as much success to our arms as there was promptitude in seizing the occasion by our commander, must have caused his ruin, resulting in victory, compelled our evacuation of the city and its occupancy by the enemy. This was felt as a serious reverse, and caused some depression of feeling throughout the Confederacy, while it was hailed with unbounded acclamation and revived hopes by the enemy. For the time the loss of prestige and the political effects were unquestionably adverse to us, but results may show that its consequences were, on both sides, strangely misunderstood and exaggerated. It has liberated our army for offensive operations, while it has chained down our enemies to the tenure of a far inland position of no real strategical value since the breaking up of its railroad connections, in the midst of a hostile population, and to be sustained only by supplies drawn hundreds of miles by a single line of road. The opportunities presented by such a situation have been seized and used by our bold and enterprising leader with promptitude and energy. The communications of the enemy have been cut in many places. Our army is in his rear, and he, instead of resting securely behind the strong intrenchments of his recent capture, is forced to come forth to encounter his skillful adversary on ground of his choice and where defeat is ruin to the enemy, only reverse to us.

Meantime the necessity for concentration by the enemy of his scattered forces for the invasion of Georgia compelled the relaxation of the bonds which have restrained the patriotic desires of the loyal in Kentucky and Tennessee. In consequence, in different portions of both States, with the encouragement of some little aid from an officer or company of our Army, the people are organizing and arming in force to repel their oppressors and hold their own country. In fact, at this time we have possession of larger portions of both States than at any period since they were overrun by the enemy, and by the indignities and wrongs of their domination they have roused all loyal people to stern defiance and the resolve never to submit. Should disaster overtake the army invading Georgia, the uprising of the people behind him would probably be general, and the re-establishment of the permanent ascendancy of the Confederacy over those important and abundant States be fully secured.

Shortly after the fall of Atlanta a series of disasters befell our troops in the Valley of Virginia and contributed to the discouragement then existing. But when we consider the events of the entire campaign—the brilliant achievements of our armies in Florida, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Missouri; the long, arduous, and successful resistance made by the Army of Northern Virginia, in which every virtue of an army and the genius of consummate generalship have been displayed; the glorious defense of Petersburg and Richmond; the numerous successes that have crowned our arms in Maryland, Virginia, Georgia, South Carolina, and Mississippi; the adventurous, bold, and effective efforts of our cavalry under Hampton, Forrest, Lee, and others—we have cause for congratulation and rejoicing. We have resisted the mightiest of the efforts of our enemies; we have encountered and defeated his largest and best appointed armies; we have thwarted his best-laid plans; we have shown ourselves to be worthy of that separate and equal place among the nations of the earth, which is our birthright, and which has been unjustly withheld from us.

The superintendence of the measures for the increase, organization, equipment, supply, and movement of the Army is devolved upon this Department. The acts of Congress of April and September, 1862, "to make further provision for the public defense," and the act of Congress in February last "to organize forces to serve during the war," contain the authority of the Department and designate the means for maintaining the efficiency of the Army as to men. The war upon the part of the Confederacy being defensive the proportions it was to assume depended upon the character and extent of the means employed by the enemy for its prosecution. His scheme for the prosecution of the war was to overcome all opposition by the magnitude of his armies and the superiority of their supply and equipment. Referring to the census tables, he estimated the arms-bearing population of the Confederate States, accessible to their control in any form, to be less than 1,000,000 men. He determined to place forthwith in the military and naval service some 700,000, and thus to compel the Confederacy to put in requisition its entire strength; and since 1861 he has strained every nerve to maintain his armies at the same standard as to numbers. He has recruiting agencies throughout the continent of Europe, and he has enlisted from the negroes of this continent, it is said, some 200,000 soldiers. It is evident, therefore, that to carry on the contest the Confederacy was compelled to put its entire resources in requisition. The acts of Congress of 1862, before mentioned, contain the principle that in a struggle involving the being of a nation every citizen may be assigned to that position and to perform that duty in which he can render best service. The exemption acts of 1862 and 1863, which followed the acts of conscription, do not contradict this principle. They were designed to effect such an organization of the industry of the States as to enable us to defend ourselves with our own resources. Cut off from the commerce of the world, and destitute as we were at the beginning of the war of magazines and arsenals from which to draw supplies, it became apparent that our safety depended upon the activity and success with which our internal resources could be developed for use. There was an imperious necessity for a protection to manufacturing, mechanical, and mining enterprises, and for the devotion of agricultural industry to the production of subsistence for the Army and people. The exemption acts of 1862 and 1863 were liberal in the promotion of this policy, and the Confederacy has derived from them the most beneficial results. Notwithstanding the embarrassment and obstruction that follow upon the use of a depreciated currency, and that much of the territory of the Confederacy has undergone the devastation of war, an adequate supply of provisions has been obtained for the Army. The mobility of our armies has been maintained by the aid extended to railroads; the manufacturing establishments have supplied a large portion of the clothing for soldiers, and the mechanical, mining, and manufacturing industry employed upon the production of arms and munitions of war have enabled us to conduct our campaigns with security and confidence. We have been enabled to compete with a nation of artisans and mechanics, whose invention and skill have been stimulated by the munificent bounty of their Government. Nor were these results achieved by any sacrifice, nor even detriment to the claims of the armies in the field. The muster and pay rolls of the armies show that through the campaigns of 1862 and 1863, if any undue diminution is discernible, it was due to desertion and absenteeism more than to any deficiency in the recruiting system that had been adopted. But it cannot be disguised that the duration of this war for more than three years, and the unparalleled largeness of its proportions, and the sanguinary nature of the warfare, have become manifest in the official returns of our armies and of the recruiting service. The acts of Congress during the last winter contain admissions of the fact. They provide in no indistinct terms for the contingency that was anticipated shortly to occur, when the capacity of our people to contribute further recruits to the Army would be more heavily taxed than at any former period. The regulation that discharged a principal who had furnished a substitute was abrogated and the principal was required to return to the Army. The bureau service was curtailed in its efficiency by the withdrawal of men able to perform duty in the field and their places to be supplied by the disabled, feeble, and invalid. A large portion of the exemptions were repealed, and details were limited to cases of public necessity or State expediency or confined to experts and persons of skill and craft. The Department was unable to execute the law as soon as it was promulgated without deranging all branches of the service and seriously crippling the operations of the armies in the field. The dependence of those armies upon the departments of supply for efficiency and vigor is too intimate to allow of any abrupt or incautious disturbance of their operations. The reduction in their service to the standard required by the act of Congress was, however, progressing regularly in such mode as to assure against any shock or arrest to essential operations. But the urgency of the field service, the thinning of our own ranks under the casualties and sufferings of the campaign, and, above all, the call of the enemy for 500,000 recruits and the extraordinary efforts they were making to assemble overpowering hosts on every arena, but especially before and for the capture of our Capital, demanded that all available means should be promptly employed to increase the numbers and efficiency of our Army. It became necessary not only to expedite the removal to the Army of those whom the act referred to had proposed to withdraw from their employment in the administrative branches of the service, but also to extend the call to all others liable to conscription for active service. The late legislation of Congress, while subjecting classes before exempt to service, had given a large discretion of detail, and had manifested a desire for the liberal allowance of such, with a view to maintain the agriculture, manufactures, and industrial operations of the country. This discretion had been used as far as seemed, at the time, compatible with the demands of the active service, and had withheld for these important ends considerable numbers not exempt from our armies. It has been, in view of the forces mustered against us, deemed necessary to revoke all such details, and to enforce rigidly the laws of conscription limiting to men capable only of light duty and to reserves employment in the departments of the public service, and thus to liberate for the field all liable to such duty, except skilled artisans, experts, and men of science, and a few others actually indispensable for the maintenance and supply of the armies. By subjecting all others rigidly and promptly to the obligation of active service which the law imposes, it is believed very considerable re-enforcements of the most efficient material are being afforded to our armies. In addition, the law allowing the acquisition, even by impressment if necessary, of 20,000 able-bodied male slaves, for employment with the armies as teamsters, cooks, and the like, is being enforced, and the substitution of such will allow the recall to the ranks of many valuable men who have heretofore been detailed for such incidental service.

The reserves, too, consisting of those between seventeen and eighteen and those between forty-five and fifty years of age, have been organized under a commander for each State, and where the State has been invaded have been called into active service. They have been found an efficient force to supply guards to cities and public works, and for the large number of prisoners in our hands, and also as defenders of bridges, roads, and important points, and have thus liberated for the field many soldiers who must otherwise have been drawn from the active armies. On several occasions, too, portions of them have been thrown with the armies in the field as active auxiliaries. So far, whenever tried, they have exhibited the characteristic valor and aptitude of our people for military life, and have compared well with their veteran comrades in constancy and conduct.

These various measures, sanctioned by existing legislation, must materially increase and reinvigorate our depleted armies, but it is not to be disguised that they must still leave those armies relatively weak to encounter the hosts being summoned by the enemy for our subjugation. Signs of exhaustion and despair of success were, until some late unhappy reverses to our arms, plainly manifested by our malignant foes, and this is probably the last grand effort their means or resolution will allow for their war of aggression and conquest. It should be met and overcome by the early and full command of all our men and means, and for this additional legislation is required. It is my deliberate conviction, more than once expressed in former reports, that the policy of exemptions to those capable of military service is unwise, and that all men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five capable of bearing arms should, without distinction of occupation or profession, be subjected to service and called to the field. The few indispensable exceptions for the needs of society and the supply of the Army might be readily and more conveniently provided by details. Exemptions by classes necessarily cover many not actually demanded by society for the needs that, on the average, may have given plausibility to the exceptions, and such exceptions, besides inducing invidious feelings and dissatisfaction, compel a discrimination in the call for service which both delays and measurably defeats its full accomplishment. It is therefore urgently recommended that all exemptions except of officers actually essential to the conduct of the Confederate and State governments be abolished, and all of the military age, physically capable, without distinction or discrimination, be at once devoted to the sacred duty of defending their country in the field. They would probably constitute as large a draft for continuous service in the field as the interests of society would allow, but it is not doubted that, with the aid of our slaves, those beyond and below the ages prescribed for active service, with the large number of those fit only for light duty, and the partially disabled by service, would suffice adequately to maintain necessary production and supply, both for the armies and the people.

With a view to the increase of our armies in the field, the policy has been suggested, and has attracted some public attention, of enlisting our negro slaves as soldiers. No compunction could be felt in so using them, for deeply as the whites of the South are interested in repelling the invasion, and forever liberating themselves from the association or thralldom of our enemies, the negroes of the South are even more vitally concerned. With the whites it is a question of nationality, of honor, and property. With the negroes, in its dread issues in no distant future, it is a question of their existence as a race. The friendship of a people so selfish, cruel, and remorseless as our foes would be to the unhappy negro more fatal than to us their enmity. In contact with them, under their pretended freedom before the law, which in operation on an inferior race is but a license to greed and oppression, exposed to all the vices, without the providence of the civilized man, they must soon, in the language of a leader among their professed friends, "be trampled out as a sickly exotic" or wither away amid the blighting influences of debauchery, pauperism, crime, and disease. They have, besides, the homes they value, the families they love, and the masters they respect and depend on to defend and protect against the savagery and devastation of the enemy. No fear is entertained of their fidelity, for the feelings, as the interests of the great mass of the negroes have been conclusively manifested to be with their protectors and masters. Neither is it doubted that, under the leadership of those whites to whom they have been habituated and in whom they have confidence, they would exhibit more steadfastness and courage than they will ever attain as soldiers of the enemy. If any added incentive were required, from the supposed love of freedom natural to man, it might readily be afforded by the assurance of emancipation to all who conducted themselves with fidelity and courage during the war. For any such action it would, of course, require the concurring legislation of each State from the slave population of which the negro soldiers had been drawn, because to the States belong exclusively the determination of the relations which their colored population, or any part of them, shall hold. It is not doubted, however, should it be deemed expedient so to employ and reward slaves enlisted as soldiers, that the necessary legislation would be accorded, for there is no sacrifice of property or minor interests which would not be made by either our States or people to insure final separation from our hateful foes and the achievement of our liberty and independence. While it is encouraging to know this resource for further and future efforts is at our command, my own judgment does not yet either perceive the necessity or approve the policy of employing slaves in the higher duties of soldiers. They are confessedly inferior in all respects to our white citizens in the qualifications of the soldier, and I have thought we have within the military age as large a proportion of our whole population as will be required or can be advantageously employed in active military operations. If, then, the negro be employed in the war, the inferior is preferred to the superior agent for the work. In such a war as this, waged against foes bent with malignant persistence on our destruction, and for all that man holds priceless, the most vital work is that of the soldier, and for it wisdom and duty require the most fitting workmen. The superior instrumentalities should be preferred. It will not do, in my opinion, to risk our liberties and safety on the negro, while the white man may be called to the sacred duty of defense. For the present, it seems best to leave the subordinate labors of society to the negro, and to impose the highest, as now existing, on the superior class.

The reserves might remain, as now constituted, for service throughout each State; but, in addition, it would seem expedient that all other white males capable of bearing arms, in even local service, should be organized and armed, ready to maintain the police of the country and to resist, within the limits of their counties or some restricted district contiguous thereto, the actual raids or invasions of the enemy. No serious interruptions would thus be caused to their industrial avocations or their relations to society, and yet a greater degree of security and confidence and a universal sentiment of patriotic self-devotion would be secured. In the war waged by malignant foes, who aim not merely against our national existence but at the institutions of our social system, at the property and means of subsistence of all, and contemplate nothing less than desolation to the country and expulsion or extinction of its inhabitants, all, of whatever age, have both interest and duty compelling them to stand to arms in defense, according to the measure of their ability. The country should be as one great camp and the whole people arranged in the most efficient military organizations compatible with the maintenance of the necessary works and productions of society for unflinching resistance to the utmost extremity. The subjugation of a brave people so organized and resolved is an utter impossibility.

Some measures of legislation are believed to be expedient to maintain the number and increase the efficiency of the cavalry in the field. The policy of requiring the men to furnish their own horses was at all times doubtful, as while affording apparently an inducement to greater care of the animal, it interferes with discipline and impairs efficiency. It also causes, almost of necessity, the dismounting for long periods of those who, having lost horses, are unable to furnish them speedily or at all, and the absence, often on protracted furloughs, of the men who have sustained such losses to procure other horses. Under the weariness of protracted service and the eager longing for return home, which at times possesses even the best soldiers, this chance of a furlough is said to more than counteract the interest of ownership in the horse and to constitute a premium on neglect or the allowance of casualties to disable their animals. A worse consequence, perhaps, is the tendency and temptation of the system to induce plundering and irregular modes of supplying themselves by the men. Those mounted are aware of the constant liability to the loss of their animals and of the difficulty and expense of replacing them, and are under constant inducement to obtain reserve horses or the means of purchasing them. Those dismounted are even more strongly stimulated by the inconveniences of their position and the danger of being transferred to less acceptable branches of the service to provide themselves, even by illegitimate means. These inducements are all enhanced by the limited class of casualties for which the value of the horse lost is repaid under present law, and the delays and embarrassments encountered in affording proof and obtaining payment. Horses are paid for, too, only at the valuations assessed at the time they are taken into service, and with the fluctuations in the value of our currency and the enhancement of prices resulting from the increasing scarcity of the proper horses, the value repaid is generally grossly inadequate. If the present system is to continue, it is indispensable that there should be wider range to the casualties in which the value is repaid, more liberality in the assessment of value, and greater facilities for prompt payment.

The class of men who constitute our cavalry, while among the most spirited and active of our citizens, are yet generally, from previous independent habits of life, most difficult to discipline and subject to subordination. Entering immediately on service, they have enjoyed few opportunities of previous drill or training, and from the detached and often irregular service in which they are frequently employed, they are much removed from the restraints and responsibilities of large commands. They are but too apt, therefore, while individually gallant and enterprising, to be wanting in organization, in discipline, and in the efficiency and reliability which should belong to trained troops. Our cavalry have performed many achievements of valor and utility, but they have also, on occasions of great importance, shown want of vigilance or constancy and caused disaster. These defects are believed to spring, not from deficiencies in the men, but in the system of selection and of training. It is believed it would be wiser that the cavalry should gradually be constituted of men picked from the trained and veteran soldiers for their peculiar qualifications, and that these should be mounted and equipped at the public expense. It might be made a penalty for the loss of their horses, through neglect or any other than the inevitable casualties of war, that the men should be returned to the infantry service. This would probably be found more efficient than, under the present system, private ownership has proved to obviate neglect and secure due attention to the animals, while it would remove all inducement from self-interest to undue caution or escape under the legitimate hazards of war. There would be the certainty, too, that the men were trained and disciplined and habituated to fight as infantry, which in many instances our cavalry, from the nature of the country or the like tactics of the enemy, are compelled to do. It is not doubted that in this way the superiority of our cavalry over that of the enemy could be permanently established.

It has been more than once heretofore urged by the Department that to maintain the number and efficiency of our Army organizations it was essential there should be some power of reducing and consolidating them. The depletion of many of the organizations during the late wasting and bloody campaign has made this more than ever manifest. It is impossible adequately to recruit many of the reduced regiments and companies, especially those from the distant and trans-Mississippi States, and not a few are so thinned in their ranks as to cause despondency and inefficiency. There is necessarily, too, an undue proportion of officers to men, which adds to the expense while weakening the force of the Army. The evil is often so glaring that a remedy is obliged in some way to be applied. This is done, at the expense of subsequent embarrassments and confusion of legal rights, by the temporary union, by the authority of the general in the field, of fragmentary companies or regiments, or more legally, though indirectly, under the sanction of the Department, by the disbandment of some depleted organizations and the assignment, as by conscription, of the men to some other. In such case, however, there is no chance of selecting the best officers of both organizations, but there is the injustice of depriving all the officers, however meritorious, of the one disbanded of their commissions. It would evidently be much more just and beneficial to the service that the power should exist to consolidate the two and retain the best officers of each. It is recommended the power be granted.

It has been mentioned that for the organization and control of the reserves a commander has been assigned in each State. They constitute a peculiar and auxiliary force, which yet cannot, it is thought, be justly deemed an independent army. Hence an embarrassment results, which demands the correction of legislation. They are not entitled to order and revise the proceedings of courts-martial, nor if a military court, as is authorized by law for each State, should be appointed could they have it attached to their commands or review its decisions. As the reserves are necessarily rather deficient in order and training, the restraint and influence of such tribunals are specially necessary for their control and subordination. It is probably not necessary to give any military court, or revision of the decision of any established for the States respectively, as the power to appoint and revise the proceedings of courts-martial would suffice. Courts might then be constituted, to sit permanently, of disabled or invalid officers.

The condition of our gallant soldiers in the hands of the enemy continues to engage the solicitude and interest of the Department. The number of the captives on each side has been greatly swelled by the vicissitudes of the present fearful campaign, though the disproportion heretofore existing against us has been by our superior successes greatly reduced, if not entirely overcome. It has been the constant desire and effort of the Department to effect exchanges on any principle of equity, and the opportunity has never been lost to make this known to the enemy and to obtain his concurrence. The obligations of the cartel and the faith pledged to its observance have been repeatedly invoked, but in vain. To such demands intimations were conveyed that the enemy would only agree to an exchange of man for man. So long as the enemy held, as they claimed, a superiority in the number of captives, it was seen that this mode of exchange would leave the surplus of our captive soldiers in their hands without, for the time, any adequate check on the inhumanity and cruelty they have been ever prone to exhibit toward such captives. Still, as the preponderance of numbers steadily diminished confidence increased that the prospect of speedy captures would soon enable us to check or avenge their malignity. This consideration, in aid of the powerful incentives, even more of humanity and gratitude than of interest, that urged any practicable effort for the relief and release of our imprisoned soldiers, induced us to overlook alike our just rights under the cartel and apprehensions of the probable ill-treatment of the surplus that might remain in the power of our vindictive foes, and to propose exchange on the very terms intimated as acceptable of man for man. The offer only afforded another illustration of the hypocrisy, faithlessness, and inhumanity of the enemy, for it was soon made apparent that their professed willingness was but a pretext and a blind, and, while they expected the plan would not be acquiesced in, to conceal their own determination to make no general exchange. They have here and there consented to partial exchanges, generally effected between commanders in the field, but the Government appears to have deliberately adopted the remorseless and inhuman policy of enforcing the captivity, with all its attendant sufferings, of the prisoners on both sides during the war. They pay thus impliedly to our gallant soldiers the tribute of admitted superiority, while they exhibit to the unhappy victims from their Army their own ingratitude, perfidy, and cruelty. One of their favorite commanders has not even hesitated to avow, with utter disregard of the claims of their captive soldiers on their consideration and protection, that, as the terms of service of many had expired, they were not to be regarded as subjects of equal exchange. It likewise appears that, as they gloat over the idea of being able, by their blockade and devastation, to starve to submission a people whom they cannot subdue by arms, they calculate, in utter indifference to the sufferings that may be entailed on their own captive soldiers, on the supplies which must be furnished them as an effective drain on our limited resources. Could we, indeed, be so straitened as they delude themselves into believing, how fearful must they expect to be the privations and sufferings of their soldiers in our hands, since they could not expect us to starve our gallant soldiers or people to nourish the malignant invaders who had sought to inflict on us the worst ills of war and famine. These captives would of course be the first unhappy victims of the famine which the barbarous warfare of their Government may cause. While no such suffering has yet been entailed on them, but, on the contrary, they have, through the humanity of our Government, been provided as our own soldiers, yet such privations as they have had to share with them have been exaggerated by the enemy, in part from their delusive conceptions of our straitened condition, but more from the diligent invention of false tales, and have been made the pretext of wanton privations to our faithful soldiers in their hands. They compel sufferings to their own soldiers by their malignant outrages against civilized warfare, and then find in such excuse for visiting cruelty and starvation on our soldiers, to whom it is not pretended they could not easily afford all the comforts and subsistence due to captives in war. The ineffable baseness of such a course exceeds even its inhumanity, and for either it would be difficult to find a parallel in the history of civilized, much less Christian, nations.

It is gratifying to be able to state that since the foregoing was written a prospect has been afforded of ameliorating the condition of our captive soldiers. When all overtures to the Government of our enemies seemed vain, General Lee was instructed to make directly to General Grant a proposition that, without releasing either Government from the obligation of affording due provision to its captives, each should have the right of furnishing to its own prisoners in the possession of the other, under the direction of officers among them to be paroled for the purpose, such additional supplies of necessary articles as it might deem expedient to send. This was accepted, doubtless through the influence of the commanding general of the Federal armies, who, however profuse of the lives of his men in battle, could but have sympathy and interest for the imprisoned soldier. It is indicative of the remorseless policy of the hostile Government that such concessions to the claims of humanity should have been made sooner by the stern soldier in the field than by their statesmen in the Cabinet. As the liberty is afforded by the agreement, with commendable liberality, that supplies may be purchased in Northern cities, or sent to our soldiers in captivity directly from foreign ports, there can be but little delay or difficulty in affording to them all reasonable supplies for the alleviation of their unhappy state. This arrangement will be as gratifying to our Government and people as it is conformable to humanity and wise policy.

The report of our agent of exchange is submitted in connection with this subject. It will display the past course and present state of negotiations for exchange.*

The operations of the several administrative bureaus of the Department have been conducted with zeal, ability, and success, reflecting great credit on their several heads. They have had grievous difficulties and embarrassments to encounter from a depreciating currency, deficiencies of labor and materials, and straitened means of transportation and distribution. In addition, they have been constrained, by the stringent legislation of Congress, to relinquish their most active and experienced agents and employés and substitute them from the more infirm and aged classes. It was not practicable to do this immediately without a ruinous arrest of all the essential operations of production and supply for the Army; but the obligation has been steadily observed, and as the exigencies of the campaign made recruitment of our armies necessary, its execution has been hastened and enforced to the furthest point compatible with the preservation and continuance of indispensable works. Interferences of this kind are inevitably so prejudicial and disturbing that it is hoped a well-devised and permanent system of providing and retaining in continuous employment a sufficient number of artisans, experts, and laborers for all essential operations may be devised and established. Great misapprehension, it is believed, has prevailed in the public mind, both as to the number and class of persons who have constituted the agents and employés of the several bureaus, and much unmerited odium and invidiousness has been excited by the erroneous supposition that these bureaus have afforded a refuge and a shield from the legitimate claims of military service. The aim has been steadily enjoined, and, it is not doubted, in the main has been strictly observed, of engaging and retaining as few as possible of military age, and with rare exceptions it is confidently believed the men now employed are rendering more efficient service to the cause than they could do even in the field. It should be thoroughly understood that only in the last necessity will they again be summoned or disturbed. The best vindication to these bureaus is afforded by the results attained under all the impediments and embarrassments they have had to encounter. All essential supplies have been afforded, and neither manufacture nor production has so far materially diminished, notwithstanding the invasions and barbarous ravages of the enemy in many most important fields of operation. The Army has been subsisted, clothed, and provided in adequate measure, and there has never been deficiency of transportation, munitions, or supplies for all important operations.

* See Series II, Vol. VII, p. 1078.

Owing to the absence of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs on a visit in discharge of his duties to the Trans-Mississippi Department, his usual report cannot be submitted. Letters received from him by the Department give in the main satisfactory representations of the feelings and condition of the Indian nations. From other sources, too, intelligence has been received of gallant services which have been rendered by their warriors during the present campaign, and there is every reason to believe that at no time has prevailed among the nations a stronger feeling of amity and connection with the Confederate States.

Attention is invited to the accompanying estimates for the six months commencing January 1 and ending June 30, 1865, which, although large in the existing state of the currency, are not believed to exceed the demands of the service.

After the full exposition made in my last report of the embarrassments and obstructions experienced from the disordered condition of our currency, the impracticability of purchases without impressment, and the deficient means of transportation and distribution, it is not deemed necessary to repeat them. Attention, however, is specially invoked to them, as they continue with increased and increasing stringency, and remedial legislation in some important particulars is very desirable. The impressment acts require revision and amendment. There are not sufficient provisions against the removal of property after notice of impressment, nor against its concealment before or after, nor is the course prescribed in case of the refusal of the owner to appoint appraisers as contemplated by law. The law is, in brief, without adequate sanctions to insure respect and enforcement. Special provisions should be made for the impressment of iron from railroads. In order to maintain the more important roads, and sometimes to construct others demanded by imperious military considerations, it is absolutely necessary to withdraw from local or branch roads their rails and equipments. Although such necessity may be manifest and acknowledged by all, it is rare the proprietors of the special road whose property is thus sought to be appropriated are prepared to acquiesce in its selection for the sacrifice. Each local corporation finds abundant reasons for further delay or special exemption in its own case, and on them base justification of refusal to sell and the interposition of all possible legal obstructions to seizure by impressment. The machinery of the act is ill adapted to the settlement of the questions that arise on such impressment, and pretexts are readily found by the corporation for obtaining injunctions and suspending all action on the proverbially tedious proceedings of a suit in chancery. Local influences combine, too, to thwart and delay action, and more than once the gravest consequences to the Confederacy have been risked by inability, at the juncture, to overcome such impediments and command the required rails. The impressment of slaves, too, should be regulated so as to secure uniformity in collection and to relieve the authorities from dependence on the State agencies. These agencies do not generally operate with promptitude and efficiency, and sometimes prove frustrative or abortive.

Appointments have been made under the act of Congress approved June 14, 1864, "providing for the establishment and payment of claims for a certain description of property taken or informally impressed for the use of the Army." In many instances the agents selected have refused to accept, and it has been impracticable to secure others competent, in consequence of the wholly inadequate compensation offered, which will pay a fraction only of the expenses to be actually incurred. It is not probable the law can be executed by the period prescribed, the 1st of January next, and it should be continued with a more equitable remuneration to the agents.

During the last year a few persons have gone to the United States without permission from the Confederate authorities. Some of these have no design hostile to the Confederacy, but others leave as informers and as enemies. In some cases the act is treasonable, in others more venial. A law is necessary to punish the cases which do not amount to treason under existing laws.

An appropriation was made in February last for the payment for loss of slaves who have been impressed by the Confederate authorities or under State laws for the use of the Confederate Government, and while engaged in laboring on the public defenses have escaped to the enemy, or died, or contracted diseases which have after their discharge resulted fatally. The act of Congress did not provide for the mode of ascertaining these losses and for the withdrawal of the money from the Treasury. Besides the slaves impressed, there is a class of slaves who were received by contract and others under the act of Congress of the 17th February last, by the consent of the owner, upon the condition that the Confederate Government should indemnify for loss in cases similar to those mentioned in the appropriation bill above quoted. I recommend that an act be passed for the adjustment of all these claims, and that the mode of adjustment be prescribed.

In view of the more numerous uses to which negroes are being put, in connection with our armies, as well as of the proposition already considered of employing them as troops, it seems not inappropriate to examine the legislation and policy of our enemies in reference to the recruitment of their armies from the same race, and especially from our negro slaves. In July, 1862, the Congress of the United States passed their act "to suppress insurrection, to punish treason and rebellion, to seize and confiscate the property of rebels, and for other purposes." The traitors under this act are all those concerned in the war between the United States and the Confederate States. The persons attainted, and whose property was confiscated, are those who held any office of honor, or trust, or agency under the Confederate Government, or any of the States, or in any municipality, or who may be in anywise engaged or concerned in the armed rebellion to the authority of the United States. The liberation of their slaves was to be a consequence of their conviction, and the slaves of all such persons who might escape or desert, or might be captured, or who might fall within the places occupied by the arms of the United States, were, by the act of Congress, liberated. The President was authorized "to employ as many persons of African descent as he might deem necessary and proper for the suppression of the rebellion, and to organize and use them as he judged best for the public welfare." This act of Congress was followed by the proclamations of the President of the United States of the 22d September, 1862, and of the 1st of January, 1863, in the last of which he ordered and declared that "all persons held as slaves in designated States and parts of States are, and henceforward should be, free," and "that the Executive Government of the United States, including the military and naval authorities, will recognize and maintain their freedom." The enlistment of a large number of slaves within the Confederate States into the military service of the United States followed upon these acts. It was justly regarded by the Confederate Government as a departure from the usages of nations and an abandonment of the rules of civilized warfare. In the better times of the United States their Executive Government had stigmatized conduct similar, but far more venial, "as a warfare disclaiming all moral influence, and inflicting an outrage upon social order, and giving a shock to the very elements of humanity." "All belligerent nations," it declared, "can form alliances with the savage, the African, and the bloodhound; but what civilized nation has selected these auxiliaries in its hostilities?"

If there were any legal proposition that had the unanimous consent of that people it was that the Federal Government had no power to abolish slavery in any of the States. The proclamation of their President does not proceed from any authority derived from the Constitution, but upon the assumed power to extend martial law over the territory of the United States and the Confederate States. And the usurpation even extends beyond this, for martial law has reference to military operations and military relations. Its authority is temporary and abnormal, and deals with the events of a season; but this is an imperial edict, determining arbitrarily upon civil, social, and domestic institutions and relations for all time. For a term subsequent to the independence of the United States negro slavery was recognized among all the United States as a valid relation, and its commercial population participated in the profits of the African slave trade, under the laws of the Union, within the present century. The ratio upon which representation in one branch of their Congress and direct taxes are apportioned is adjusted upon a recognition of the existence of a race of bondsmen within the limits of the Union. Their highest judicial tribunal has determined that slavery and the slave trade are not contrary to the law of nations, and that the voluntary removal of slaves by a master to a State where slavery does not exist does not prevent the renewal of the relation between master and slave upon their return to the State of their origin or domicile. The diplomatic correspondence and the solemn treaties of the United States show reclamations for escaping slaves, abducted in time of war and peace, and the recognition of those claims by a foreign power, and the payment of indemnity for the use of the masters to the Federal Government. At this time the Constitution of the United States contains a stipulation for the return of slaves escaping to one State from their owner in another State upon his claim. The principle that a slave withdrawn from his master in war or peace, by desertion, capture, or other act not sanctioned by the law of the State, or the will of the master, does not change his condition within the State to which he belongs, or prevent the right of the master from attaching upon his recapture, is not an exceptional or limited one. The municipal laws of one State have no more authority nor recognition within the limits of another than it is compatible with the laws or policy of that State to allow. And it would be contrary to the universal usage and practice of nations for one nation to permit another, and that other an enemy, to abrogate, impair, or modify relations between classes or individuals of her population, in time of war, by any change in their resistance, forced or voluntary. The principle of the jus post liminium in regard to persons such as slaves, serfs, villains, deserters, or other persons to whom it is in any wise applicable has been uniformly applied on the continent of Europe, and as to slaves was the law of Athens and of Rome, and from their jurisprudence has passed into the laws of European nations.

The enlistment of slaves as a part of the Army of the United States had but a single object. The act of Congress and proclamations which authorized it were formed to destroy political government and civil society in the Confederate States. By declaring all officers and agents of Confederate, State, and municipal governments to be outlaws, incapable of holding or transferring property, and subject to ignominious banishment, and declaring slaves to be emancipated and suitable for service in their armies, they sought an entire overthrow of their social order, and determined this should be a war of massacres and confusions, and not the highest trial of right between the peoples. It had become a principle among Christian sovereigns that, however they might prosecute their quarrels and debates by arms and acts of hostility, and though they might seek the ruin and overthrow of the forces of the State, yet they would so direct their passions as to preserve the life and good name of each other. But from the beginning our enemy has prosecuted the war with murderous design to take the life and to destroy the fame of the peoples of the Confederate States. The crimes which determined the colonies to separate from Great Britain and to denounce her King as a tyrant unworthy to rule a free people are those which have been committed against us, under circumstances of tenfold atrocity in the existing war by our enemy. "He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people. He is at this time transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to complete the work of death and desolation and tyranny already begun, with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages. He has excited domestic insurrection among us." Private property is wantonly destroyed; female honor outraged; whole districts of unarmed and unresisting population are ravaged and laid waste; old men, helpless women, weak and feeble children, the infirm and superannuated slave population have been exposed to starvation and misery by the systematic, cruel, and persevering effort to destroy the food and raiment of an entire people. A war conducted on such principles, with such objects and by such alliances, involved, necessarily, the abandonment of all laws, usages, conventions, mitigating influences, or humanizing considerations and restraints. The enemy who adopts such a system proclaims in advance his desire, as well as his design, that the war shall become one for mutual extermination. In a contest with such an enemy the Confederacy may exercise a very liberal discretion in the employment of any agencies or instrumentalities that are within their reach for the public defense. Should, therefore, either policy or necessity dictate it the enlistment of slaves or any other population as auxiliaries would be entirely justified by the atrocities that we have suffered. It would be impossible to find any ally so unrestrained as the enemy against whom he would be employed.

Respectfully submitted.

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

ESTIMATES.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, October 8, 1864.

I estimate that there will be required for the incidental and contingent expenses of the Army during the six months commencing January 1, 1865, and ending June 30, 1865, the sum of $250,000.

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

Estimate for the War Department and its bureaus for the half year ending June 30, 1865.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

There are at present employed 260 clerks, but in consequence of the rapid increase of the business of the Government I would suggest that an appropriation be asked for the payment of at least 300. These, with the Secretary of War, Assistant Secretary, chief of bureau, disbursing clerk, and five messengers, will require, at the present rates paid, under the head of "Compensation of Secretary of War, Assistant Secretary, chief of bureau, clerks, messengers," &c., $615,750.

Under the present high charges I must suggest that the contingent fund be increased, viz, for incidental and contingent expenses of the War Department, $175,000.

Respectfully submitted.

ALFRED CHAPMAN,
Disbursing Clerk, War Department.

Approved.

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

Estimate for funds.

Time estimated for.	For what purpose.	Amount.
Six months commencing the 1st day of January and ending 30th day of June, 1865. For the fiscal year ..... For the use of the Adjutant and Inspector General's Department, C. S. Army.	Stationery of all kinds .....	$15,000
	Postage .....	7,000
	Telegraphing .....	8,000
	Carpenter's work .....	6,500
	Furniture .....	3,500
	Watchmen's salary .....	2,000
	Hire of porters .....	5,000
	Incidental and miscellaneous expenses .....	5,000
	Total .....	52,000

I certify on honor that the above estimate is correct and just, and that the funds are required to meet the contingent expenses of this office for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1865.

S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General.

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,

September 29, 1864.

Approved.

JAMES A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War.

A.

Estimate of the amount required by the Quartermaster's Department for disbursement for the public service of that department for six months, commencing January 1 and ending June 30, 1865.

REGULAR SUPPLIES.

First. For the regular supplies of the Quartermaster's Department, consisting of fuel for the officers, enlisted men, guard, hospital store-houses, and officers; of forage in kind for the horses, mules, and oxen of the Quartermaster's Department at the several posts and stations and with the armies in the field, and for the authorized number of officers' horses, horses for the several corps of artillery, including bedding for the animals; of straw for soldiers' bedding, and of stationery, including blank books for the Quartermaster's Department, certificates for discharged soldiers, blank forms for the Pay and Quartermaster's Departments, and for printing of division and department orders and reports:

Forage .....	$44, 649, 720. 00
Fuel .....	7, 272, 115. 00
Straw .....	2, 742, 292. 00
Stationery .....	1, 725, 900. 00

$56, 390, 027. 00

INCIDENTAL EXPENSES.

For the incidental expenses of the Quartermaster's Department, consisting of postage on letters and packages received and sent by officers of the Army on public service; expenses of courts-martial and courts of inquiry, including the additional compensation of judge-advocates, recorders, members, and witnesses, while on that service, under the act March 16, 1862; extra pay to soldiers employed under the direction of the Quartermaster's Department in the erection of barracks, quarters, store-houses, and hospitals; in the construction of roads and other constant labor for periods of not less than ten days, under the acts of August 4, 1854, and May 1, 1863, including those employed at division and department headquarters; expenses of expresses to and from the frontier posts and stations and armies in the field, of escorts to paymasters and other disbursing officers, and to trains where military escorts cannot be furnished; expenses of the interment of officers killed in battle or who may die when on duty in the field, or at the posts on the frontiers, or at other posts and places when ordered by the Secretary of War, and of non-commissioned officers and soldiers; authorized office furniture, hire of laborers in the Quartermaster's Department, including the hire of interpreters and guides for the Army; compensation to clerks of officers of the Quartermaster's Department; compensation of wagon and forage masters; for the apprehension of deserters and expenses incident to their pursuit; the purchase of traveling forges, blacksmiths' and shoeing tools, horse and mule shoes, and nails, iron and steel for shoeing, hire of veterinary surgeons, medicines for horses and mules, picket ropes, and for shoeing the horses of the corps named

8, 213, 160. 00

TRANSPORTATION OF OFFICERS' BAGGAGE.

For mileage or the allowance made to officers of the Army for the transportation of themselves and their baggage when traveling on duty without troops, escorts, or supplies.....	$500,000.00
---	--------------

TRANSPORTATION OF TROOPS AND SUPPLIES.

For transportation of the Army, including the baggage of the troops, when moving either by land or water; of clothing and camp and garrison equipage from the several depots to the troops in the field; of horse equipments and subsistence from the places of purchase and from the places of delivery under contracts to such places as the circumstances of the service may require them to be sent; of ordnance stores and small-arms from the foundries and armories to the arsenals, fortifications, frontier posts, and army depots; freights, wharfage, tolls, and ferriages; the purchase and hire of horses, mules, and oxen, and the purchase and repair of wagons, carts, and drays, and of ships and other sea-going vessels, and boats required for the transportation of supplies and for garrison purposes; for drayage and cartage at the several posts, hire of teamsters, transportation of funds for the Pay and other disbursing departments, the expense of sailing public transports on the various rivers, and for procuring water at such posts as, from their situation, require it to be brought from a distance, and for clearing roads, harbors, and rivers to the extent which may be required for the actual operations of the troops.....	62,067,483.33
--	---------------

BARRACKS AND QUARTERS.

For hire or commutation of quarters for officers on military duty; hire of quarters for the troops, of store-houses for the safe-keeping of military goods, of grounds for summer cantonments and for temporary frontier stations; rents and repairs of wharves for hutting troops, and for repairing, altering, and enlarging buildings at the established posts, and for the purchase of materials therefor .....	8,768,000.00
---	--------------

CLOTHING AND CAMP AND GARRISON EQUIPAGE.

For the purchase of the necessary materials for clothing and camp and garrison equipage, and for pay for labor, &c., necessary to the fabrication of the same .....	42,622,974.00
---	---------------

PROPERTY IMPRESSED.

To pay for property impressed into the service of the Confederate States under appraisement, and said property having either been lost or applied to the public service.....	1,000,000.00
--	--------------

HORSES KILLED.

To pay for horses of volunteers killed in battle, under act No. 48, section 7, and for which provision is to be made.....	2,000,000.00
---	--------------

PRISONERS OF WAR.

Hire of prisons for the safe-keeping of prisoners of war, offices, &c., act of May 21, 1861.....	500,000.00
--	------------

TAX IN KIND.

For the hire of clerks, agents, teamsters, laborers and employes, rent of offices and store-houses, purchase of material, labor for building store-houses, incidental expenses required in collecting and receiving the tax in kind.....	4,125,300.00
--	--------------

Total .....	186,186,944.33
-------------	----------------

FORM OF APPROPRIATION.

For service of the Quartermaster's Department..... $186,186,944.33

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond. October 8, 1864.

Approved.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

B.

Estimate of the amount required to pay the Army of the Confederate States for six months, from the 1st of January to the 30th of June, 1865.

ONE CORPS OF ARTILLERY.

1 colonel, $210 per month .....	$210
2 lieutenant-colonels, $185 per month .....	370
12 majors, $162 per month .....	1,944
40 captains, $140 per month .....	5,600
80 first lieutenants, $100 per month .....	8,000
40 second lieutenants, $90 per month .....	3,600
4 assistant quartermasters, $140 per month .....	560
4 assistant commissaries, $140 per month .....	560
4 surgeons, $162 per month .....	648
8 assistant surgeons, $110 per month .....	880
40 first sergeants, $27 per month .....	1,080
160 sergeants, $24 per month .....	3,840
160 corporals, $20 per month .....	3,200
80 buglers, $20 per month .....	1,600
40 farriers, $20 per month .....	800
40 blacksmiths, $20 per month .....	800
3,440 privates, $19 per month .....	65,360
4 quartermaster-sergeants, $28 per month .....	112
4 sergeant-majors, $28 per month .....	112
4 chief buglers, $28 per month .....	112
4 adjutants, $110 per month .....	440
Pay for one month .....	99,828
One corps for six months .....	598,968
Six corps for six months .....	$3,593,808

ONE REGIMENT OF CAVALRY.

1 colonel, $210 per month .....	$210
1 lieutenant-colonel, $185 per month .....	185
1 major, $162 per month .....	162
10 captains, $140 per month .....	1,400
10 first lieutenants, $100 per month .....	1,000
20 second lieutenants, $90 per month .....	1,800
1 surgeon, $162 per month .....	162
2 assistant surgeons, $110 per month .....	220
10 first sergeants, $27 per month .....	270
40 sergeants, $24 per month .....	960
40 corporals, $20 per month .....	800
20 buglers, $20 per month .....	400
10 farriers, $20 per month .....	200
10 blacksmiths, $20 per month .....	200
600 privates, $19 per month .....	11,400

1 quartermaster-sergeant, $28 per month	$28
1 sergeant-major, $28 per month	28
1 chief bugler, $28 per month	28
1 adjutant, $110 per month	110
1 assistant quartermaster, $140 per month	140
1 assistant commissary, $140 per month	140
40 cents per day for use and risk of horse one month	8,796

Pay for one regiment one month	28,639
Pay for one regiment six months	171,834

Pay for 104 regiments six months	$17,870,736
----------------------------------	--------------

ONE REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

1 colonel, $195 per month	$195
1 lieutenant-colonel, $170 per month	170
1 major, $150 per month	150
10 captains, $130 per month	1,300
10 first lieutenants, $90 per month	900
20 second lieutenants, $80 per month	1,600
1 surgeon, $162 per month	162
2 assistant surgeons, $110 per month	220
1 assistant quartermaster, $140 per month	140
1 assistant commissary, $140 per month	140
1 adjutant, $100 per month	100
1 sergeant-major, $28 per month	28
1 quartermaster-sergeant, $28 per month	28
1 principal musician, $28 per month	28
10 first sergeants, $24 per month	240
40 sergeants, $24 per month	960
40 corporals, $20 per month	800
20 musicians, $19 per month	380
600 privates, $18 per month	10,800
1 ensign, $90 per month	90

Pay for one month	18,461
Pay for six months	110,766

Pay for six months, 547 regiments	60,589,002
-----------------------------------	------------

FIELD AND STAFF.

200 generals, $500 per month	$100,000
400 aides-de-camp, $135 per month	54,000
163 brigade quartermasters, $162 per month	26,406
159 brigade commissaries, $162 per month	25,758
500 chaplains, $80 per month	40,000
73 cadets, $90 per month	6,570

Pay for one month	252,734
-------------------	---------

Pay for six months	1,516,404
--------------------	-----------

SIGNAL CORPS.

1 major, $150 per month	$150
10 captains, $130 per month	1,300
10 first lieutenants, $90 per month	900
10 second lieutenants, $80 per month	800
30 sergeants, $24 per month	720

Pay for one month	3,870
-------------------	-------

Pay for six months	23,220
--------------------	--------

RESERVES.

Same as one regiment of infantry:

Pay for one month .....	$18, 461
Pay for six months .....	110, 766
Pay for six months, 35 regiments .....	$3, 876, 810

PAY OF OFFICERS IN RICHMOND.

Pay of officers on duty in the office of the Adjutant and Inspector General's Department, Quartermaster-General's, Medical, Engineer, Ordnance, and Subsistence Departments in Richmond..... 210, 000

TAX IN KIND.

Pay of officers, &c., in receiving and collecting the tax in kind.....	1, 226, 418
Total.....	88, 906, 398

FORM OF APPROPRIATION.

Pay of officers and privates of the Army, volunteers, militia, &c .... 88, 906, 398

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., October 10, 1864.

Estimate of funds required for the purchase of subsistence stores and commissary property for six months ending June 30, 1865.

For rations for 400,000 men for 181 days, at $2.02375 per ration .....	$146, 519, 500
For six rations tobacco each for 400,000 men, at $2 .....	4, 800, 000
	151, 319, 500
There will be furnished from the tax in kind, subsistence worth, say.....	31, 319, 500
	120, 000, 000
Balance estimated to credit of the appropriation on January 1, 1865..	70, 000, 000
	50, 000, 000

Amount actually required to be appropriated by Congress, $50,000,000.

The balance ($70,000,000) is caused by the fact that this Bureau has been unable to obtain for the Army the full ration estimated for. Respectfully submitted.

L. B. NORTHROP,
Commissary-General of Subsistence.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, SUBSISTENCE DEPT.,
Richmond, Va., October 4, 1864.

Approved.

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

Estimated cost of 100 rations.

Rations.	Articles.	Quantity.	Price.	Amount.
60	Meal.....	75 pounds.....	$5 per bushel.....	$7.50
40	Flour.....	45 pounds.....	50 cents per pound.....	22.50
100	Salt.....	2 quarts.....	$5 per bushel.....	.31½
50	Beans.....	4 quarts.....	$6 per bushel.....	.75
50	Rice.....	5 pounds.....	30 cents per pound.....	1.50
100	Coffee.....	6 pounds.....	$5 per pound.....	30.00
100	Sugar.....	12 pounds.....	$3 per pound.....	36.00
100	Vinegar.....	4 quarts.....	$2.50 per gallon.....	2.50
100	Candles.....	1½ pounds.....	$3 per pound.....	4.50
100	Soap.....	4 pounds.....	$1 per pound.....	4.00
60	Bacon.....	20 pounds.....	$3 per pound.....	60.00
25	Beef.....	25 pounds.....	75 cents per pound.....	18.75
15	Sorghum.....	45 gills.....	$10 per gallon.....	14.06½
	Total.....			202.37½

Estimate for funds required for the Medical Department, C. S. Army, for the period of six months, commencing January 1, 1865, and ending June 30, 1865.

For purchase of medical and hospital supplies :

Medicines.....	$8,000,000
Instruments.....	200,000
Books for hospital and regimental records.....	100,000
Hospital stores.....	2,000,000
Bedding.....	2,000,000
Furniture, dressings, &c.....	2,000,000
	$14,300,000

For purchase of hospital clothing required by act of Congress approved September 27, 1862, entitled "An act to better provide for the sick and wounded in the Army in hospitals"..... 500,000

For purchase of 312,000 gallons alcoholic stimulants required for Medical Department, for medical and hospital purposes, for an army of 500,000 men..... 4,000,000

For establishment and support of military hospitals..... 100,000

For pay of private physicians employed by contract..... 250,000

For pay of nurses and cooks not enlisted or volunteer..... 350,000

For pay of hospital stewards..... 100,000

For pay of matrons, assistant matrons, and ward matrons..... 350,000

For pay of ward-masters..... 200,000

For pay of hospital laundresses..... 150,000

Total..... 20,300,000

S. P. MOORE,
Surgeon-General C. S. Army.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, SURGEON-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va.

Approved.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

Estimate of funds required by the Ordnance Department, C. S. Army, from January 1, 1865, to June 30, 1865.

For ordnance service in all its branches, $30,000,000, namely :

For service at arsenals, armories, and depots.....	$15,000,000
For purchase of ordnance and ordnance stores abroad.....	5,000,000
For purchase of ordnance and ordnance stores in the Confederacy.....	5,000,000
For service of the Trans-Mississippi Department.....	5,000,000

30,000,000

J. GORGAS,
Colonel and Chief of Ordnance.

Approved.

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

RICHMOND, *October 10, 1864.*Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to request that application may be made to Congress for an appropriation of $15,000,000, to be expended "for the purpose of making purchases of cotton, naval stores, and other produce, under the direction of the President, to meet the engagements of the Government, and to purchase necessary army, navy, and other supplies."

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOS. L. BAYNE,
Lieutenant-Colonel, in Charge of Cotton and Foreign Supplies.

Approved.

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, ENGINEER BUREAU,
Richmond, Va., October 27, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I respectfully request that the following may be inserted after the word "laws," in the estimate for loss of slaves, submitted by this office, "or voluntarily sent to the Confederate authorities, and accepted by them, without other special contract," which estimate will then read as follows:

Estimate for loss of slaves which have been impressed by Confederate authorities, or under State laws, or voluntarily sent to the Confederate authorities, and accepted by them, without other special contract, for the use of the Confederate Government, and while engaged in laboring on the public defenses or other public works have escaped to the enemy, or died, or contracted diseases which have, after their discharge, resulted fatally ..... $1,500,000

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. GILMER,
Major-General and Chief of Bureau.

Approved.

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

ENGINEER BUREAU, September 30, 1864.

Estimate for engineer service in all its branches, including the collection and distribution of railroad iron, for the six months commencing January 1 and ending June 30, 1865..... $10,000,000

J. F. GILMER,
Major-General and Chief Engineer Bureau.

Approved.

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

ENGINEER BUREAU, September 30, 1864.

Estimate for loss of slaves which have been impressed by Confederate authorities or under State laws for the use of the Confederate Government, and while engaged in laboring on the public defenses have escaped to the enemy, or died, or contracted diseases which have, after their discharge, resulted fatally ..... $1,500,000

J. F. GILMER,

Major-General and Chief Engineer Bureau.

Approved.

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

Estimate of funds required for niter and mining service for six months, commencing January 1 and ending June 30, 1865.

Niter .....	$2,500,000
Iron, cast and rolled .....	6,500,000
Lead .....	1,700,000
Copper .....	1,300,000
Other metals .....	500,000
Total required .....	12,500,000

Respectfully submitted.

I. M. ST. JOHN,
Colonel and Chief Bureau.

Approved.

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

Approximate estimate of the expenses of conscription and of the arrest and return of deserters and absentees and all the services assigned to the Bureau of Conscription, including pay of officers, supporting forces, mileage, postage, stationery, telegrams, office rents, fuel, and extraordinary and contingent expenses, in the States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Kentucky, Florida, and East Louisiana for six months, commencing January 1, 1865, and ending June 30, 1865.

Virginia .....	$257,828
North Carolina .....	325,365
South Carolina .....	197,828
Georgia .....	408,440
Alabama .....	408,440
Mississippi .....	408,440
Tennessee .....	100,000
Kentucky .....	100,000
Florida .....	100,000
East Louisiana .....	75,000
Bureau of Conscription at Richmond, Va .....	44,772
Grand total .....	2,426,114

JOHN S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

Approved.

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, November 3, 1864.

Hon. J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War:

SIR: At your suggestion I have collected all the matter concerning General Orders, No. 73, and have endeavored to organize the views of the President in the form of a general order. The effort to pare and patch No. 73 into administrative shape will only serve to confuse and retard the public service and carry us farther away from the Executive idea. The simplest form I can give the expression of that idea is, that the reserve forces are to be used to aid and enforce but not to direct or control conscription. To aid and enforce efficiently requires the right of supervision of inspection and report thereon. For efficient supervision and inspection, officers under the immediate orders of the chief of reserves are necessary. To avoid giving the direction and control of conscription to the chief of reserves and retain them in the Bureau of Conscription, it is necessary that the matter to be investigated, the mode of investigation, and the decision of the cases should be exclusively with the Bureau. The matter is indicated by law, the mode is the conscript organization heretofore instituted, and the instructions for its operations and the decision is to be made by the chief of that organization under the Secretary of War. Now, for this investigation and furnishing the means for decision, it is necessary that the agencies should be officers immediately and exclusively under the orders of the chief as representing the Secretary. I have endeavored to cover all this and give administrative expression to it in the form of a general order. I believe that form covers the President's purpose, and if adopted I am confident it can be executed promptly and with the best results to the public service.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

[Inclosure.]

SKETCH OF	}	CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
GENERAL ORDERS,		BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
No. —.		Richmond, Va., ———, 1864.

I. Paragraphs I, II, III, and IV, of General Orders, No. 73, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, current series, are hereby revoked.

II. Generals commanding reserves will hereafter supervise the conduct and proceedings of officers employed in the enrolling service in their respective States, and report the same through the Bureau of Conscription to the Secretary of War.

III. The office of Congressional district enrolling officer is abolished, and generals commanding reserves will assign to duty in each Congressional district an officer of the reserve force as inspector of conscription. Communications from local or county enrolling officers will be transmitted direct to the commandant of conscripts and by him to the Bureau of Conscription if the action of the Bureau is deemed necessary under regulations for decision of the matter.

IV. Generals commanding reserves will maintain a system of rigid inspection in the matter of conscription and report through the Bureau of Conscription to the Secretary of War.

V. Generals commanding reserves are especially charged with the arrest and return of all deserters and absentees from the Army, and in that service will employ their own forces and the enrolling officers of the respective States.

VI. So soon as practicable all officers and men now employed in the enrolling service, whether as enrolling officers, conscript guards, clerks, or otherwise, except such as are retired or assigned to light duty by the medical boards, will be relieved by details from the reserve forces and sent to the field. Generals of reserves will make such details upon the application of commandants of conscripts.

VII. All applications for the exemption or detail of men not actually assigned to active service, embraced in the act of February 14, 1864, "to organize forces for the war," or applications concerning any matter relating to conscription which by General Orders, No. 20, current series, have been charged upon the Bureau of Conscription, will be transmitted by commandants of conscripts to the Bureau of Conscription for final decision under instructions from the Secretary of War. Generals commanding reserves have no authority to act upon questions of exemptions under the law, or of the detail of unassigned persons between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, or of the detail of persons between the ages of seventeen and eighteen, and of forty-five and fifty years, who have not been incorporated with companies of reserves as actual members thereof. Duplicates of the returns made by the commandants of conscripts to the Bureau of Conscription will also be furnished by them to the generals of reserves.

VIII. Paragraph III, of General Orders, No. 81, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, current series, is amended so as to read as follows:

The details of such men, called out by General Orders, No. 77, current series, as are found to be unfit for the field service by the proper medical boards may be revived, and similar details may be granted to light-duty men not heretofore detailed by the Bureau of Conscription.

---

BUREAU OF SUBSISTENCE,
Richmond, November 4, 1864.

Col. L. B. NORTHPROP,
Commissary General of Subsistence:

SIR: On the 18th of October I addressed you a report on the matter of obtaining supplies from abroad. The cause of that report was a proposition contained in a letter of Maj. S. B. French on the propriety and importance of extending, so far as your Bureau was concerned, a contract with Messrs. Power, Low & Co. for bringing supplies from the islands to the port of Wilmington, which proposition you referred to me. In that report of October 18 I stated, on the authority of papers in the office, that we had then only meat rations for 300,000 men (which was about the number we were feeding) for twenty-five days. I also stated, on the authority of a letter from Major French to you, dated September 15, that "our supply of meat must come from abroad if it be got at all," and that there was meat at the islands in the hands of Messrs. Crenshaw, contractors, and also a certain unascertained amount in the hands of Messrs. Power, Low & Co., these being the only two parties from whom any meat could be expected so far as I knew. I further showed by a letter and report of Maj.

S. V. Reid that in the moon from August 24 to September 19 only five vessels out of seventeen had brought any subsistence for our armies, of which Messrs. Power, Low & Co. owned three, the fourth being Messrs. Crenshaw's, and the fifth, as it turns out, running from Halifax with the option of fish or ballast.

For these returns and other matters of argument set forth in the report I recommended that the contract with Messrs. Power, Low & Co. be extended, they having pledged themselves to devote one-third to one-half weight capacity of certainly five, and probably seven, vessels to the service of your department, and having been guaranteed by Colonel Bayne as the best, or among the best and most reliable contractors he had, whether as respects integrity or capacity to fulfill their contract.

On the same day, along with you, I waited on the Honorable Secretary of War and submitted the report to him. He objected to it, but referred it to Colonel Bayne. The next day I called on the Secretary and he said that he could not agree to the renewal or extension of the contract; but on my remarking that Major Bayne had authorized me to make or receive other proposals he referred me to him. I then saw Colonel Bayne, who, objecting to any payment in cotton, which had been the stipulation of Power, Low & Co.'s contract, authorized me to invite proposals from those gentlemen and to make any contract I might please with them, provided it was payable in sterling and not in cotton.

Subsequently, in company with Major French, I met and conversed with Colonel Bayne, who again authorized me to make any bargain I might please, payable in sterling, stating (and justly) that we knew the needs of our department better than he could do, and any contract we might make would be under our own official responsibility. Subsequently he made the remark to you that you might go as high as 1,000 per cent. on the cost of the articles.

Thinking it my duty to exhaust every effort to procure supplies from this source, I invited proposals from Messrs. Power, Low & Co., who in reply have this day submitted a triple proposition to run five or more vessels, as follows:

First. To devote one-third to one-half their weight capacity to subsistence, the balance to private account, at the rate of 600 per cent. on cost and charges (Government paying duties), payable in London sterling bills at $4.84 per pound, or in default of that, payment then in compressed cotton at 6 pence sterling per pound, on same terms as to payment and profit as the late Davis-Fitzhugh and Power contracts.

Second. To devote one-third to one-half weight capacity to subsistence and balance to quartermaster's stores, at 350 per cent. cost and charges and on same conditions as above.

Third. To renew the contract of Power, Low & Co., devoting same space to subsistence as above, with an engagement under offer first and second to take out half cargoes of cotton for Government at 5 pence sterling per pound.

I submitted this paper to Colonel Bayne to know if any one of the propositions made would meet his sanction, as it would have been useless to negotiate them until his assent could have been obtained, and urging his immediate attention to it within the next three days, as the state of the moon would allow no longer time, and the conditions of the commissariat made it vital that this moon should be availed of. To that paper Colonel Bayne returned the following indorsement:

NOVEMBER 3, 1864.

Respectfully returned to Colonel Northrop, Commissary-General. I do not think that either proposition should be accepted. The first is preferable for the Government. Under the regulations the Government has the right to load half of each vessel with such stores as it may desire to import, and under the instruction of the Secretary of War I will direct the loading of any proportion of commissary stores on each vessel that he may indicate. At present I have instructed Majors Walker and Heyliger to ship a good supply of meat on each vessel, and have requested the Commissary-General to supply them with funds to purchase meat. To supply our immediate and special demand for meat I would recommend that the Commissary-General fix some definitive price for all pork, beef, bacon, or coffee delivered within a specified time, paying for the same in sterling bills of $4.84.

The sterling can be provided upon his requisition to pay for all stores delivered. I consider myself instructed by the Secretaries of War and Treasury to make no more contracts payable in cotton at Wilmington or Charleston.

THOS. L. BAYNE,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

Bearing in mind that except about 300,000 pounds of meat (that is to say, about ten days' supply to Army of Northern Virginia) no more has reached port since 18th of October, I beg leave to observe—first, that it is “too late” to direct the loading of any proportion of commissary stores in each vessel that the Commissary-General may indicate, if it is to be done now for the first time, and second, that similar orders have been given both at Nassau and Bermuda without bringing in anything to the Bureau, though they were given by the Secretary of War more than a year ago and have been repeated at intervals from that time to the present.

It is true that Colonel Bayne requested you to supply Major Walker and Mr. Heyliger at Bermuda and Nassau, respectively, with funds to make purchases, and they were accordingly supplied—Major Heyliger with £17,500, who, I understand, reports that he cannot buy meat at Nassau, and Major Walker with £10,000, in return for which there has been sent three loads of dried codfish.

The recommendation that the Commissary-General fix some definite price on all pork, beef, bacon, or coffee “delivered within a specified time” cannot be adopted. What comes in must be subject to market rates, for to impress one cargo is to exclude all others of like character. But even if otherwise, to purchase imported provisions at market rates and impress domestic products by schedule would render it more difficult than now, if possible, to draw meat from its hiding places. And as with the market undisturbed by the schedule no meat has ever been brought in, it cannot be expected that it will come at less rates than a blockade-runner is willing to contract for beforehand. There is also another quite as serious objection, to be stated hereafter.

Whether this shall be the end of efforts in this direction, or rather in all directions, to get meat for our Army, especially the Army of Northern Virginia, is for you to say, and I write to ask your instructions in that respect. I cannot advise you, if I may have the right or be bound in duty to do it, to attempt it on any other basis of profit than the propositions of Messrs. Power, Low & Co., because I cannot imagine any other that can be accepted by bidders, and no other has been offered.

The expired contract of Power, Low & Co., I am bound to presume, was a fair and judicious contract at the time it was made, and the parties are stated by Colonel Bayne to have executed it fairly and liberally to the Government. That contract was for 50 per cent. profit on cost and charges, with payment in cotton at 6 pence per pound. I think it can be shown that the profits of a successful run under it were about 650 per cent., on which basis the profits on the offer of one-half to one-third weight capacity in bacon would require a profit of about 850 per cent. This present offer, then, is 200 per cent. less than its value a year ago, though the difficulties of the blockade have increased immensely, and cotton, owing to causes not necessary to state, has not advanced in a compensatory ratio. This rate, I am confident, is less than the average of blockaders' profits on successful ventures, and not too great for the risks, according to the laws that govern such enterprises. It is not probable, then, that any contract can be made by your Bureau on better terms, nor is it reasonable to expect it; for the proposition for 650 per cent., which Colonel Bayne thinks the most unfavorable of the series, to all of which he objects for relative exorbitancy, will make a less cost than we now pay in Confederate currency. This remits you to the plan of getting subsistence from abroad, under the regulations to carry into effect the act to impose regulations upon the foreign commerce of the Confederate [Confederacy], to provide for the public defense. But to this plan there are several vital objections. Experience proves that we cannot get subsistence in that way. It has been tried and it has failed. Since the adoption of these regulations by Mr. Memminger and Mr. Seddon, in March last, and their alteration by Mr. Trenholm and Mr. Seddon, August 3, nothing has been received, though the Secretary or Colonel Bayne has given several orders to have subsistence brought in.

This Bureau has no agents of its own at any foreign port, and has been unable to do anything through the agents of any other bureau or department. Responsible for its own funds, the effect of the regulations has been to place its money beyond its control in the hands of agents, who, from whatever cause, have hitherto failed to show any results of the expenditure. Were it otherwise, the vessels would not run under the regulations—certainly not in time to feed an army of the size of General Lee's, with only eighteen days' supply of meat on hand and living from hand to mouth. Very few vessels now run under the regulations. From August 19 to September 10 only three out of seventeen ran in under the regulations; in the last moon only six in nineteen came in, and of these last none brought in subsistence. Why they have not done so I have explained in my report of October 18.

If the Army is to be kept up to its present numbers, it will require at full rations 81,000,000 pounds of meat. Of this a very large part must come from abroad, and much of it, of necessity and in common prudence, is wanted instantly. The proposition of Power, Low & Co. presents the best, and, so far as I know, the only plan of an immediate supply, whilst the regulations offer nothing in the present, or, if we can judge by the past, in the future.

It cannot have escaped you that the foothold the enemy has lately gained in North Carolina by the recapture of Plymouth will necessarily limit the area from which we now draw a very considerable proportion of our supplies; and if Plymouth be made the base of military movements or occupation, it will increase the difficulties of working in that region. Of course it will render it more important for us to get supplies from abroad. How that can be done I do not now see, having exhausted every effort to have it done by this Bureau.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

FRANK G. RUFFIN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Commissary of Subsistence.

[Indorsement.]

OFFICE COMMISSARY-GENERAL OF SUBSISTENCE,
November 9, 1864.

Respectfully referred to the Secretary of War.

On the 19th ultimo I made an indorsement on a report urging the renewal of the contract of Power, Low & Co., with the object of getting a supply of meat otherwise unattainable. I feel pretty confident that, with all the agencies of the Government under its present policy and the efforts of this company superadded, a sufficiency of meat will not be obtained. This company has been most faithful in complying with its engagements.

At the suggestion of Colonel Bayne propositions have been made by it. The second is, in my judgment, highly advantageous, and in connection with my indorsement above referred to, show the importance of getting these vessels. I respectfully urge the adoption of proposition second.

L. B. NORTHROP,
Commissary-General of Subsistence.

WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, November 5, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: The act of Congress approved 17th of February, 1864, entitled an "Act to organize forces to serve during the war," required for its administration a system of conscription substantially, if not radically, different from that enforced under previous legislation on this subject. A careful and elaborate analysis of that act, combined with an enlightened observation of the necessities and military capabilities of the country, resulted in the issuing of General Orders, No. 26, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, March 1, 1864, and of Circular No. 8, of this Bureau, March 18, 1864. It was believed that the proper execution of these orders would insure the just, prompt, and vigorous administration of the policy and terms of the act of Congress. The character and extent of the duties imposed on this Bureau under these orders seemed to demand an improvement in the character and number of its agencies. Under previous legislation these duties were definitely and specifically prescribed by ascertained and understood limitations and responsibilities. By this act the whole execution of the military policy of the Congress and the decision of the vast matter of the "public necessities" was confined almost exclusively to the authorities of conscription acting under your immediate instruction, and constituting for that purpose a department of your office. To your discretion the Congress confided this matter, declaring itself incompetent to determine the mode of its administration, or, at least, that you and your officers could best adjust that mode; and yet, very strangely, you were restricted in the selection of those officers to classes notoriously unapt to furnish such as were fitted for the service. The intelligence, the activity, and the vigor of the country was carefully culled for the general service, and you were required to glean the exhausted field of its remnants and fragments for the agencies who are to decide what are the public necessities, what are the personal and civil rights of the citizens, and to execute the law applicable to these solemn functions. Wherever a vigorous and intelligent man was found engaged in their performance that same law peremptorily removed him. With this feeble material, so inappropriate to meet the grave questions I have indicated and so seemingly incompetent to overcome the opposition of constituted authorities, communities, and individuals, this Bureau set to work to collect, conscribe, and organize for military service the scattered and unwilling remnants of a war-wasted population. Its function was to create and maintain armies for the public defense and to preserve the social organisms of the country. I have examined the history of such proceedings in other countries and in other times, and do not hesitate to declare my belief that the results of the operations of conscription in the Confederate States exhibit a wisdom in devising the system and a vigor in its execution which have not been excelled and which, under the circumstances of the country, are very wonderful. In confirmation of this belief I have the honor to refer you to the tabular statements herewith submitted.*

Having then succeeded by the wise energy of the system in overcoming the weakness and inaptitude of the agencies employed and the grave impediments offered, this Bureau was suddenly checked in the successful work by the partial abandonment of that system and the proposed substitution therefor of the most noxious principle and the most dangerous agencies which can be applied to the creation and maintenance of armies for the public defense, for the determination of public necessity, or for the protection of personal right and the social economy. The first appearance of this change was manifested by an attempt to engraft upon your system a rude and undefined—merely military—inspection. In this fitful shadow I felt the coming storm and ventured to warn you of its danger. I had seen its efforts under the former acts of Congress; but foregone conclusion hastened its culmination, and I fear that conscription in the Confederate States may be destined to become nothing more than a ferocious and ignorant military outrage of public law and personal right, devastating the country and weakening the armies. The transfer to military commanders in the field and their immediate subordinates of the power to determine the public policy, and the means of enforcing their judgment in selecting the classes for military service and driving at will the individuals of those classes into the field, is fraught with such peril to the cause of the public defense and is so repulsive to a safe public sentiment that I am appalled with apprehension for the consequences. The fearful story of military conscription under Turkish rule in Egypt may be re-enacted in the Confederate States.

Five hundred thousand men have withered from Egypt in ten years under the blight and military conscription. It is not the loss of men caused by battle and disease, but when the Pasha's press gangs are out recruiting whole villages are deserted. The men fly to the deserts to escape service, and the wives and children follow to escape the vengeance of the baffled officer whose advancement depends on the length of his muster-roll; and when this man-catcher (this military officer) returns from the pursuit the villages and fields are desolate and the deserts are white with the bleached bones of women and children.

---

* Not found as inclosures.

Change names and you have military conscription in the Confederate States. In every instance in which the authority of conscription has been so transferred the service has suffered serious detriment; the industry of the country has been unduly disturbed, popular and constituted resistance has been aroused, and it has failed to bring men into the field, and the resumption of your former system has been forced upon you. In four States it was tried for eight months under the allied auspices of Generals Bragg and Johnston and the executive authorities of those States, with General Pillow and an army of 6,000 men as the agents. The failure in that case would have been ludicrous had it not been so expensive and so disastrous to the general service. Your unremitted efforts for ten months have scarcely remedied the evils of military conscription in Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, and Florida. Besides this experiment scores of commissions have been issued granting conscription authority, which after brief periods have been revoked, on the ground of failure and flagrant abuse. Notwithstanding this experience there has been proposed to be established on the reports of vague, incompetent, and mischievous military inspections and the uninformed conjectures or assertions of ignorant individuals a system of recruiting subversive of the whole policy of legal conscription. Its tendency is, and its results will be, to violate the law and all tried regulations, and to repudiate Government faith pledged under that law and those regulations, and to fail utterly in giving numbers or strength to the Army. The proposition for change has been procured mainly by the intrusion of a small and not very reputable system of police detection into the administration of a great national policy; the espionage of Vidocq to upset the schemes of Carnot with his "bureau for the public defense" and his "bureau for the public welfare;" the crimp and the press gang for the war minister and the magistrate; the public defense and the social economy to be determined by informers and administered by brute force, and infamy and incompetency imputed as the predicate attributes of bleeding martyrs to public liberty, who engage in the work of conscription because they have not saved from their unslain wounds blood enough for strength to perform any other service. It is by this system that the wasted and enfeebled people of the Confederacy are proposed to be dragged forth to the death grapple for their liberties. If adopted its fruit will be bitterness and failure.

While therefore I am forced to regard the transfer of conscription from the agencies heretofore charged with it into the hands of military commanders as abhorrent and futile, I have always deemed a certain amount of military force as necessary for the efficient administration of the law. I have uniformly and strenuously recommended the organization and use of such force under proper regulations. I have repeatedly asked for such force, submitting various forms for its creation and use. I specifically asked for such portion of the reserve forces as I deemed amply sufficient to be put under the orders of the conscription authorities both for conscription and extraneous duties devolved on those authorities. Under your permission I proceeded partially to organize such a force. It was declared to be too large and unnecessary, and yet in four months thereafter it was found absolutely necessary to place the entire reserve force on the duty of conscription. I asked for sixty companies; now perhaps sixty regiments are employed. The sixty companies would have done the work now charged on sixty regiments and in accordance with the law and civilized practice. Had it been allowed on the 1st of May to have one company of reserves in each Congressional district, there would not have been one recusant conscript or one deserter in ten now absent from the armies, and those companies would have been ready for the field, a drilled nucleus for the regiments of reserves; the recruiting of the armies would have been carried to the full extent of the capabilities of the country; the evils of lax discipline would have been prevented and cured, and the social economy so adjusted as to give the highest vigor and energy to the force and maintenance of the armies. The paper marked "Circular No. 55, of 1863," will exhibit the organization deemed sufficient for the enrollment and forwarding of conscripts. For the other duties devolved on the organization, such as the arrest of deserters and absentees, the management of details, the collection of slaves, &c., a small additional supporting force was asked and granted. (See Circular No. 8, of 1864.)

After the passage of the military bill of 17th of February, 1864, the duties of this organization became far more onerous, extended, and responsible. An immense breadth of discretion was given to the Executive and of course in part deputed to this Bureau. The entire service of investigation, report, and decision of exemptions and details was devolved on it. Additional agencies were asked but not granted. Besides these duties of conscription proper, the progress of an active and protracted campaign covering the Confederacy and the organization of the reserve forces increased the extraneous duties far beyond any previous calculations. To meet these a portion of the reserves, as I have stated, was asked and granted. Subsequent action, however, put the entire reserve force under a different jurisdiction, and on a different footing, and withdrew from this Bureau every means of enforcing the service, even withdrawing from its control the agencies required for conscription proper, and placing them under a proper jurisdiction—that of the commander of the reserves. At this time the legal practice of conscription was not found to be sharp enough to meet the exigencies of the armies, the calculations of anxious commanders, and the clamor of aspiring officers seeking commands, and a new system of recruiting was sought to be established, and was supposed to be expressed in General Orders, No. 73, and its sequents. The agents employed in recruiting this policy have discovered that the moral force of general orders, sustained by all the reserve force, is not sufficient without some forms of law and Government faith, and have therefore required you to place under their control and direction the training officers of this Bureau, who have been accustomed to act under these forms, and in accordance with the faith of law and orders. (See General Holmes' letter and General Kemper's order to Colonel Shields.) It has been proposed virtually to dissolve your organization, to subject a department of your office under subordinate rule, and to degrade or expel from the service officers placed in charge by the President and yourself. I cannot recognize the attainment of one compensating result to the public defense to remunerate for these wrongs and evils. I present these views with a perfect sense of subordination, leaving their justification to the commentary of the recorded facts I have the honor to exhibit.

Appended hereto are tables exhibiting the operations of this Bureau, prepared from the reports of commandants of conscription, and of Lieutenant-Colonel Blake, chief of the registration service, and from the current records of this Bureau. These tables approximate accuracy nearer, perhaps, than any other data accessible to the Government, and it is believed will afford a fair estimate of the military condition and resources of the Confederacy inside the army lines. Paper marked A exhibits the operations of the Bureau of Conscription to the 1st of September, 1864. The reports of the months of September and October will show an addition to the number of cases of about 15,000. The result is that, in the space of two years, the Bureau has passed on the military liabilities of about 360,000 men. For the extent of which this operation has gleaned the legal military material, see Lieutenant-Colonel Blake's consolidated report marked B. See same report for a conjectural estimate of remaining supply of men, and suggestions as to the sources whence they may be drawn. See also same report for a lucid approximate exhibition of the industrial resources of the several States, and the number of men liable to military service and others engaged in their production. Paper marked C exhibits the number of persons liable to military service employed in the various departments of Government. It is supposed that many of these may be sent to the field, and their present employments conducted with equal efficiency by other classes. Paper marked D is a consolidated tabular statement of the number and condition of all persons between the ages of seventeen and fifty who are not in the military service and the reasons therefor. This registration has been urged with vigor, but is not yet complete. It is regarded as of grave importance and special attention is invited to it. It is a matter to be regretted that this Bureau has not been furnished with returns of the exact condition of the reserve forces and of the various quasi military organizations which are scattered over the country as guards, in garrisons at posts, &c. Were it placed within the competency of this Bureau to require such returns it is believed that they might be somewhat beneficial in estimating the military condition and resources of the Confederacy. Paper marked E exhibits the number of persons abstracted from the public defense by the certificates of the Governors of the States. The remarkable difference in numbers may well attract attention. For every man thus exempted in Virginia, the State of North Carolina claims fifteen, and forty times the number claimed by South Carolina. Besides these, the States of North Carolina and Georgia claim from Confederate service all persons in any manner employed by the authority of those States. Paper marked F exhibits the operations of the Bureau between the time of my last report (1st of April) and the 1st of September. A defective supply of proper officers and other agencies and frequent disturbances of the mode of administering the law have prevented the results of conscription from being as satisfactory as might be desired, but it is believed that the information herein submitted will justify the wisdom of the law and the energy of its execution, and will afford data on which to base the military policy of the Government.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,

Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

---

BUREAU OF COTTON EXCHANGE,
DEPT. OF ALABAMA, MISSISSIPPI, AND EAST LOUISIANA,
Jackson, Miss., November 6, 1864.

Lieut. Col. E. SURGET,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Selma, Ala.:

COLONEL: The distribution of blockade goods as directed in your respects of 29th ultimo shall have attention. Inclosed I hand you certificate of Governor Clark for 100 ounces quinine received by me for the State. Please send permit in favor of Messrs. Whitfield, Humphries, and Sherman to ship 20,000 pounds of cotton through the District of Homochitto. In connection with this matter I would invite your attention to the fact that the State is paying $100 per ounce for quinine in cotton at 50 cents per pound, allowing each bale to weigh 400 pounds. The certificate of Governor Clark shows this. It is none of my business, only so far as it brings the State in competition with the Government in effecting arrangements within the enemy's lines. We only pay the cost price of that article, say $10 or $12 per ounce.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. W. SANDERS,
Major and Quartermaster.

---

RICHMOND, VA., November 7, 1864.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA:

It is with satisfaction that I welcome your presence at an earlier day than that usual for your session, and with confidence that I invoke the aid of your counsels at a time of such public exigency.

The campaign which was commenced almost simultaneously with your session early in May last, and which was still in progress at your adjournment in the middle of June, has not yet reached its close. It has been prosecuted on a scale and with an energy heretofore unequalled. When we revert to the condition of our country at the inception of the operations of the present year, to the magnitude of the preparations made by the enemy, the number of his forces, the accumulation of his warlike supplies, and the prodigality with which his vast resources have been lavished in the attempt to render success assured; when we contrast the numbers and means at our disposal for resistance, and when we contemplate the results of a struggle apparently so unequal, we cannot fail, while rendering the full meed of deserved praise to our generals and soldiers, to perceive that a power higher than man has willed our deliverance, and gratefully to recognize the protection of a kind Providence in enabling us successfully to withstand the utmost efforts of the enemy for our subjugation.

At the beginning of the year the State of Texas was partially in possession of the enemy, and large portions of Louisiana and Arkansas lay apparently defenseless. Of the Federal soldiers who invaded Texas none are known to remain except as prisoners of war. In Northwestern Louisiana a large and well appointed army, aided by a powerful fleet, was repeatedly defeated and deemed itself fortunate in finally escaping with a loss of one-third of its numbers, a large part of its military trains; and many transports and gun-boats. The enemy's occupation of that State is reduced to the narrow district commanded by the guns of his fleet. Arkansas has been recovered with the exception of a few fortified posts, while our forces have penetrated into Central Missouri, affording to our oppressed brethren in that State an opportunity, of which many have availed themselves, of striking for liberation from the tyranny to which they have been subjected.

On the east of the Mississippi, in spite of some reverses, we have much cause for gratulation. The enemy hoped to effect during the present year, by concentration of forces, the conquest which he had previously failed to accomplish by more extended operations. Compelled therefore to withdraw or seriously to weaken the strength of the armies of occupation at different points, he has afforded us the opportunity of recovering possession of extensive districts of our territory. Nearly the whole of Northern and Western Mississippi, of Northern Alabama, and of Western Tennessee are again in our possession, and all attempts to penetrate from the coast line into the interior of the Atlantic and Gulf States have been baffled. On the entire ocean and Gulf coast of the Confederacy the whole success of the enemy, with the enormous naval resources at his command, has been limited to the capture of the outer defenses of Mobile Bay.

If we now turn to the results accomplished by the two great armies, so confidently relied on by the invaders as sufficient to secure the subversion of our Government and the subjugation of our people to foreign domination, we have still greater cause for devout gratitude to Divine Power. In Southwestern Virginia successive armies, which threatened the capture of Lynchburg and Saltville, have been routed and driven out of the country, and a portion of Eastern Tennessee reconquered by our troops. In Northern Virginia extensive districts formerly occupied by the enemy are now free from their presence. In the lower Valley their general, rendered desperate by his inability to maintain a hostile occupation, has resorted to the infamous expedient of converting a fruitful land into a desert by burning its mills, granaries, and homesteads, and destroying the food, standing crops, live-stock, and agricultural implements of peaceful non-combatants. The main army, after a series of defeats in which its losses have been enormous, after attempts by raiding parties to break up our railroad communications, which have resulted in the destruction of a large part of the cavalry engaged in the work, after constant repulse of repeated assaults on our defensive lines, is, with the aid of heavy re-enforcements, but with, it is hoped, waning prospect of further progress in the design, still engaged in an effort commenced more than four months ago to capture the town of Petersburg.

The army of General Sherman, although succeeding at the end of the summer in obtaining possession of Atlanta, has been unable to secure any ultimate advantage from this success. The same general, who in February last marched a large army from Vicksburg to Meridian with no other result than being forced to march back again, was able, by the aid of greatly increased numbers and after much delay, to force a passage from Chattanooga to Atlanta, only to be for the second time compelled to withdraw on the line of his advance without obtaining control of a single mile of territory beyond the narrow track of his march, and without gaining aught beyond the precarious possession of a few fortified points in which he is compelled to maintain heavy garrisons and which are menaced with recapture.

The lessons afforded by the history of this war are fraught with instruction and encouragement. Repeatedly during the war have formidable expeditions been directed by the enemy against points ignorantly supposed to be of vital importance to the Confederacy. Some of these expeditions have, at immense cost, been successful, but in no instance have the promised fruits been reaped. Again, in the present campaign was the delusion fondly cherished that the capture of Atlanta and Richmond would, if effected, end the war by the overthrow of our Government and the submission of our people. We can now judge by experience how unimportant is the influence of the former event upon our capacity for defense, upon the courage and spirit of the people, and the stability of the Government. We may in like manner judge that if the campaign against Richmond had resulted in success instead of failure; if the valor of the army, under the leadership of its accomplished commander, had resisted in vain the overwhelming masses which were, on the contrary, decisively repulsed; if we had been compelled to evacuate Richmond as well as Atlanta, the Confederacy would have remained as erect and defiant as ever. Nothing could have been changed in the purpose of its Government, in the indomitable valor of its troops, or in the unquenchable spirit of its people. The baffled and disappointed foe would in vain have scanned the reports of your proceedings, at some new legislative seat, for any indication that progress had been made in his gigantic task of conquering a free people. The truth so patent to us must ere long be forced upon the reluctant Northern mind. There are no vital points on the preservation of which the continued existence of the Confederacy depends. There is no military success of the enemy which can accomplish its destruction. Not the fall of Richmond, nor Wilmington, nor Charleston, nor Savannah, nor Mobile, nor of all combined, can save the enemy from the constant and exhaustive drain of blood and treasure which must continue until he shall discover that no peace is attainable unless based on the recognition of our indefeasible rights.

Before leaving this subject it is gratifying to assure you that the military supplies essentially requisite for public defense will be found, as heretofore, adequate to our needs, and that abundant crops have rewarded the labor of the farmer and rendered abortive the inhuman attempt of the enemy to produce by devastation famine among the people.

FOREIGN RELATIONS.

It is not in my power to announce any change in the conduct of foreign powers. No such action has been taken by the Christian nations of Europe as might justly have been expected from their history, from the duties imposed by international law, and from the claims of humanity. It is charitable to attribute their conduct to no worse motive than indifference to the consequences of a struggle which shakes only the republican portion of the American continent, and not to ascribe to design a course calculated to insure the prolongation of hostilities.

No instance in history is remembered by me in which a nation pretending to exercise dominion over another asserting its independence has been the first to concede the existence of such independence. No case can be recalled to my mind in which neutral powers have failed to set the example of recognizing the independence of a nation when satisfied of the inability of its enemy to subvert its Government, and this, too, in cases where the previous relation between the contending parties had been confessedly that of mother country and dependent colony; not, as in our case, that of coequal States united by Federal compact. It has ever been considered the proper function and duty of neutral powers to perform the office of judging whether in point of fact the nation asserting dominion is able to make good its pretensions by force of arms, and if not, by recognition of the resisting party, to discountenance the further continuance of the contest. And the reason why this duty is incumbent on neutral powers is plainly apparent when we reflect that the pride and passion which blind the judgment of the parties to the conflict cause the continuance of active warfare and consequent useless slaughter long after the inevitable result has become apparent to all not engaged in the struggle. So long, therefore, as neutral nations fail, by recognition of our independence, to announce that in their judgment the United States are unable to reduce the Confederacy to submission, their conduct will be accepted by our enemies as a tacit encouragement to continue their efforts, and as an implied assurance that belief is entertained by neutral nations in the success of their designs. A direct stimulus, whether intentional or not, is thus applied to securing a continuance of the carnage and devastation which desolate this continent and which they profess deeply to deplore.

The disregard of this just, humane, and Christian public duty by the nations of Europe is the more remarkable from the fact that authentic expression has long since been given by the Governments of both France and England to the conviction that the United States are unable to conquer the Confederacy. It is now more than two years since the Government of France announced officially to the Cabinets of London and Saint Petersburg its own conclusion that the United States were unable to achieve any decisive military success. In the answers sent by these powers no intimation of a contrary opinion was conveyed; and it is notorious that in speeches, both in and out of Parliament, the members of Her Britannic Majesty's Government have not hesitated to express this conviction in unqualified terms. The denial of our rights under these circumstances is so obviously unjust and discriminates so unfairly in favor of the United States that neutrals have sought to palliate the wrong of which they are conscious by professing to consider, in opposition to notorious truth and to the known belief of both belligerents, that the recognition of our independence would be valueless without their further intervention in the struggle, an intervention of which we disclaim the desire and mistrust the advantage. We seek no favor, we wish no intervention, we know ourselves fully competent to maintain our own rights and independence against the invaders of our country, and we feel justified in asserting that without the aid derived from recruiting their armies from foreign countries the invaders would ere this have been driven from our soil. When the recognition of the Confederacy was refused by Great Britain in the fall of 1862 the refusal was excused on the ground that any action by Her Majesty's Government would have the effect of inflaming the passions of the belligerents and of preventing the return of peace. It is assumed that this opinion was sincerely entertained; but the experience of two years of unequalled carnage shows that it was erroneous, and that the result was the reverse of what the British ministry humanely desired. A contrary policy, a policy just to us, a policy diverging from an unvarying course of concession to all the demands of our enemies, is still within the power of Her Majesty's Government, and would, it is fair to presume, be productive of consequences the opposite of those which have unfortunately followed its whole course of conduct from the commencement of the war until the present time. In a word, peace is impossible without independence, and it is not to be expected that the enemy will anticipate neutrals in the recognition of that independence.

When the history of this war shall be fully disclosed, the calm judgment of the impartial publicist will for these reasons be unable to absolve the neutral nations of Europe from a share in the moral responsibility for the myriads of human lives that have been unnecessarily sacrificed during its progress.

The renewed instances in which foreign powers have given us just cause of complaint need not here be detailed. The extracts from the correspondence of the State Department which accompany this message will afford such further information as can be given without detriment to the public interest, and we must reserve for the future such action as may then be deemed advisable to secure redress.

FINANCES.

Your especial attention is earnestly invited to the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, submitted in conformity with law. The facts therein disclosed are far from discouraging, and demonstrate that with judicious legislation we shall be enabled to meet all the exigencies of the war from our abundant resources and avoid at the same time such an accumulation of debt as would render at all doubtful our capacity to redeem it. The total receipts into the Treasury for the two quarters ending on the 30th of September, 1864, were $415,191,550, which sum, added to the balance of $308,282,722 that remained in the Treasury on the 1st of April last, forms a total of $723,474,272. Of this total not far from half—that is to say, $342,560,327—have been applied to the extinction of the public debt, while the total expenditures have been $272,378,505, leaving a balance in the Treasury on the 1st of October, 1864, of $108,435,440.

The total amount of the public debt, as exhibited on the books of the Register of the Treasury on the 1st of October, 1864, was $1,147,970,208, of which $539,340,090 were funded debt bearing interest, $283,880,150 were Treasury notes of the new issue, and the remainder consisted of the former issue of Treasury notes, which will be converted into other forms of debt and will cease to exist as currency on the 31st of next month.

The report, however, explains that in consequence of the absence of certain returns from distant officers the true amount of the debt is less by about $21,500,000 than appears on the books of the Register, and that the total public debt on the 1st of last month may be fairly considered to have been $1,126,381,095.

The increase of the public debt during the six months from the 1st of April to the 1st of October was $97,650,780, being rather more than $16,000,000 per month, and it will be apparent, on a perusal of the report, that this augmentation would have been avoided and a positive reduction of the amount would have been effected but for certain defects in the legislation on the subject of the finances, which are pointed out in the report and which seem to admit of easy remedy.

In the statements just made the foreign debt is omitted. It consists only of the unpaid balance of the loan known as the cotton loan. This balance is but £2,200,000 and is adequately provided for by about 250,000 bales of cotton owned by the Government, even if the cotton be rated as worth but 6 pence per pound.

There is one item of the public debt not included in the tables presented, to which your attention is required. The bounty bonds promised to our soldiers by the third section of the act of 17th of February, 1864, were deliverable on the 1st of October. The Secretary has been unable to issue them by reason of an omission in the law, no time being therein fixed for the payment of the bonds.

The aggregate appropriations called for by the different departments of the Government, according to the estimates submitted with the report, for the six months ending on the 30th of June, 1865, amount to $438,102,679, while the Secretary estimates that there will remain unexpended out of former appropriations, on the 1st of January, 1865, a balance of $467,416,504. It would therefore seem that former estimates have been largely in excess of actual expenditures, and that no additional appropriations are required for meeting the needs of the public service up to the 1st of July of next year. Indeed, if the estimates now presented should prove to be as much in excess of actual expenditures as has heretofore been the case, a considerable balance will still remain unexpended at the close of the first half of the ensuing year.

The chief difficulty to be apprehended in connection with our finances results from the depreciation of the Treasury notes, which seems justly to be attributed by the Secretary to two causes, redundancy in amount and want of confidence in ultimate redemption, for both of which remedies are suggested that will commend themselves to your consideration as being practical as well as efficient.

The main features of the plan presented are substantially these: First, that the faith of the Government be pledged that the notes shall ever remain exempt from taxation; second, that no issue shall be made beyond that which is already authorized by law; third, that a certain fixed portion of the annual receipts from taxation during the war shall be set apart especially for the gradual extinction of the outstanding amount until it shall have been reduced to $150,000,000, and fourth, the pledge and appropriation of such proportion of the tax in kind and for such number of years after the return of peace as shall be sufficient for the final redemption of the entire circulation.

The details of the plan, the calculations on which it is based, the efficiency of its operation, and the vast advantages which would result from its success are fully detailed in the report and cannot be fairly presented in a form sufficiently condensed for this message. I doubt not it will receive from you that earnest and candid consideration which is merited by the importance of the subject.

The recommendations of the report for the repeal of certain provisions of the tax laws which produce inequality in the burden of taxation; for exempting all Government loans from taxation on capital, and from any adverse discrimination in taxation on income derived from them; for placing the taxation on banks on the same footing as the taxation of other corporate bodies; for securing the payment into the Treasury of that portion of the bank circulation which is liable to confiscation because held by alien enemies; for the conversion of the interest-bearing Treasury notes now outstanding into coupon bonds, and for the quarterly collection of taxation; all present practical questions for legislation, which, if wisely devised, will greatly improve the public credit and alleviate the burdens now imposed by the extreme and unnecessary depreciation in the value of the currency.

The returns of the Produce Loan Bureau are submitted with the report, and the information is conveyed that the Treasury agency in the Trans-Mississippi Department has been fully organized and is now in operation with promise of efficiency and success.

The provisions heretofore made to some extent for increasing the compensation of public officers, civil and military, is found to be in some places inadequate to their support, perhaps not more so anywhere than in Richmond, and inquiry with a view to appropriate remedy is suggested to your consideration. Your notice is also called to the condition of certain officers of the Treasury, who were omitted in the laws heretofore passed for the relief of other public officers, as mentioned in the report of the Secretary of the Treasury.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR.

The condition of the various branches of the military service is stated in the accompanying report of the Secretary of War.* Among the suggestions made for legislative action, with a view to add to the number and efficiency of the Army, all of which will receive your consideration, there are some prominent topics which merit special notice.

The exemption from military duty now accorded by law to all persons engaged in certain specified pursuits or professions is shown by experience to be unwise, nor is it believed to be defensible in theory. The defense of home, family, and country is universally recognized as the paramount political duty of every member of society, and in a form of government like ours, where each citizen enjoys an equality of rights and privileges, nothing can be more invidious than an unequal distribution of duties and obligations. No pursuit or position should relieve any one who is able to do active duty from enrollment in the Army, unless his functions or services are more useful to the defense of his country in another sphere. But it is manifest that this cannot be the case with entire classes. All telegraph operators, workmen in mines, professors, teachers, engineers, editors and employés of newspapers, journeymen printers, shoemakers, tanners, blacksmiths, millers, physicians, and the numerous other classes mentioned in the laws cannot in the nature of things be equally necessary in their several professions, nor distributed throughout the country in such proportions that only the exact numbers required are found in each locality; nor can it be everywhere impossible to replace those within the conscript age by men older and less capable of active field services. A discretion should be vested in the military authorities, so that a sufficient number of those essential to the public service might be detailed to continue the exercise of their pursuits or professions; but the exemption from service of the entire classes should be wholly abandoned. It affords great facility for abuses, offers the temptation as well as the ready means of escaping service by fraudulent devices, and is one of the principal obstructions to the efficient operation of the conscript laws.

A general militia law is needful in the interest of the public defense. The Constitution, by vesting the power in Congress, imposes on it the duty of providing "for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the Confederate States." The great diversity in the legislation of the several States on this subject, and the absence of any provision establishing an exact method for calling the militia into Confederate service, are sources of embarrassment which ought no longer to be suffered to impede defensive measures.

The legislation in relation to the cavalry demands change. The policy of requiring the men to furnish their own horses has proven pernicious in many respects. It interferes with discipline, impairs efficiency, and is the cause of frequent and prolonged absence from appropriate duty. The subject is fully treated in the Secretary's report, with suggestions as to the proper measures for reforming that branch of the service.

The recommendation hitherto often made is again renewed, that some measure be adopted for the reorganization and consolidation of companies and regiments when so far reduced in numbers as seriously to impair their efficiency. It is the more necessary that this should be done, as the absence of legislation on the subject has forced generals in the field to resort to various expedients for approximating the desired end. It is surely an evil that a commanding officer should be placed in a position which forces upon him the choice of allowing the efficiency of his command to be seriously impaired or of attempting to supply by the exercise of doubtful authority the want of proper legal provision. The regard for the sensibility of officers who have heretofore served with credit, and which is believed to be the controlling motive that has hitherto obstructed legislation on this subject, however honorable and proper, may be carried to a point which seriously injures the public good; and if this be the case, it can scarcely be questioned which of the two considerations should be deemed paramount.

The Secretary's recommendations on the subject of facilitating the acquisition of the iron required for maintaining the efficiency of railroad communication on the important military lines are commended to your favor. The necessity for the operation in full vigor of such lines is too important to need comment.

The question in dispute between the two Governments relative to the exchange of prisoners of war has been frequently presented in former messages and reports, and is fully treated by the Secretary. The solicitude of the Government for the relief of our captive fellow-citizens has known no abatement, but has, on the contrary, been still more deeply evoked by the additional sufferings to which they have been wantonly subjected by deprivation of adequate food, clothing, and fuel, which they were not even permitted to purchase from the prison sutlers. Finding that the enemy attempted to excuse their barbarous treatment by the unfounded allegation that it was retaliatory for like conduct on our part, an offer was made by us with a view of ending all pretext for such recriminations or pretended retaliation.

The offer has been accepted, and each Government is hereafter to be allowed to provide necessary comforts to its own citizens held captive by the other. Active efforts are in progress for the immediate execution of this agreement, and it is hoped that but few days will elapse before we shall be relieved from the distressing thought that painful physical suffering is endured by so many of our fellow-citizens whose fortitude in captivity illustrates the national character as fully as did their valor in actual conflict.

EMPLOYMENT OF SLAVES.

The employment of slaves for service with the Army as teamsters or cooks, or in the way of work upon the fortifications, or in the Government workshops, or in hospitals and other similar duties, was authorized by the act of 17th of February last, and provision was made for their impressment to a number not exceeding 20,000, if it should be found impracticable to obtain them by contract with the owners. The law contemplated the hiring only of the labor of these slaves and imposed on the Government the liability to pay for the value of such as might be lost to the owners from casualties resulting from their employment in the service.

This act has produced less result than was anticipated, and further provision is required to render it efficacious; but my present purpose is to invite your consideration to the propriety of a radical modification in the theory of the law.

Viewed merely as property, and therefore as the subject of impressment, the service or labor of the slave has been frequently claimed for short periods in the construction of defensive works. The slave, however, bears another relation to the State—that of a person. The law of last February contemplates only the relation of the slave to the master and limits the impressment to a certain term of service.

But for the purposes enumerated in the act, instruction in the manner of encamping, marching, and parking trains is needful; so that even in this limited employment length of service adds greatly to the value of the negro's labor. Hazard is also encountered in all the positions to which negroes can be assigned for service with the Army, and the duties required of them demand loyalty and zeal. In this respect the relation of person predominates so far as to render it doubtful whether the private right of property can consistently and beneficially be continued, and it would seem proper to acquire for the public service the entire property in the labor of the slave, and to pay therefor due compensation rather than to impress his labor for short terms; and this the more especially as the effect of the present law would vest this entire property in all cases where the slave might be recaptured after compensation for his loss had been paid to the private owner. Whenever the entire property in the service of a slave is thus acquired by the Government, the question is presented by what tenure he should be held. Should he be retained in servitude, or should his emancipation be held out to him as a reward for faithful service, or should it be granted at once on the promise of such service; and if emancipated, what action should be taken to secure for the freedman the permission of the State from which he was drawn to reside within its limits after the close of his public service? The permission would doubtless be more readily accorded as a reward for past faithful service, and a double motive for a zealous discharge of duty would thus be offered to those employed by the Government—their freedom and the gratification of the local attachment which is so marked a characteristic of the negro, and forms so powerful an incentive to his action. The policy of engaging to liberate the negro on his discharge after service faithfully rendered seems to me preferable to that of granting immediate manumission, or that of retaining him in servitude. If this policy should recommend itself to the judgment of Congress, it is suggested that, in addition to the duties heretofore performed by the slave, he might be advantageously employed as pioneer and engineer laborer, and in that event that the number should be augmented to 40,000.

Beyond these limits and these employments it does not seem to me desirable, under existing circumstances, to go. A broad moral distinction exists between the use of slaves as soldiers in defense of their homes and the incitement of the same persons to insurrection against their masters. The one is justifiable if necessary, the other is iniquitous and unworthy of a civilized people; and such is the judgment of all writers on public law, as well as that expressed and insisted on by our enemies in all wars prior to that now waged against us. By none have the practices of which they are now guilty been denounced with greater severity than by themselves in the two wars with Great Britain, in the last and in the present century; and in the Declaration of Independence of 1776, when enumeration was made of the wrongs which justified the revolt from Great Britain, the climax of atrocity was deemed to be reached only when the English Monarch was denounced as having "excited domestic insurrections amongst us."

The subject is to be viewed by us, therefore, solely in the light of policy and our social economy. When so regarded, I must dissent from those who advise a general levy and arming of the slaves for the duty of soldiers. Until our white population shall prove insufficient for the armies we require and can afford to keep in the field, to employ as a soldier the negro, who has merely been trained to labor, and as a laborer [under] the white man, accustomed from his youth to the use of firearms, would scarcely be deemed wise or advantageous by any; and this is the question now before us. But should the alternative ever be presented of subjugation or of the employment of the slave as a soldier, there seems no reason to doubt what should then be our decision. Whether our view embraces what would, in so extreme a case, be the sum of misery entailed by the dominion of the enemy, or be restricted solely to the effect upon the welfare and happiness of the negro population themselves, the result would be the same. The appalling demoralization, suffering, disease, and death which have been caused by partially substituting the invader's system of police for the kind relation previously subsisting between the master and slave have been a sufficient demonstration that external interference with our institution of domestic slavery is productive of evil only. If the subject involved no other consideration than the mere right of property, the sacrifices heretofore made by our people have been such as to permit no doubt of their readiness to surrender every possession in order to secure their independence. But the social and political question, which is exclusively under the control of the several States, has a far wider and more enduring importance than that of pecuniary interest. In its manifold phases it embraces the stability of our republican institutions, resting on the actual political equality of all its citizens, and includes the fulfillment of the task which has been so happily begun—that of Christianizing and improving the condition of the Africans who have, by the will of Providence, been placed in our charge. Comparing the results of our own experience with those of the experiments of others who have borne similar relation to the African race, the people of the several States of the Confederacy have abundant reason to be satisfied with the past, and to use the greatest circumspection in determining their course. These considerations, however, are rather applicable to the improbable contingency of our need of resorting to this element of resistance than to our present condition. If the recommendation above made, for the training of 40,000 negroes for the service indicated, shall meet your approval, it is certain that even this limited number, by their preparatory training in intermediate duties, would form a more valuable reserve force in case of urgency than threefold their number suddenly called from field labor, while a fresh levy could, to a certain extent, supply their places in the special service for which they are now employed.

OTHER DEPARTMENTS.

The regular annual reports of the Attorney-General, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Postmaster-General are appended, and give ample information relative to the condition of the respective departments. They contain suggestions for legislative provisions required to remedy such defects in the existing laws as have been disclosed by experience, but none of so general or important a character as to require that I should do more than recommend them to your favorable consideration.

NEGOTIATIONS FOR PEACE.

The disposition of this Government for a peaceful solution of the issues which the enemy has referred to the arbitrament of arms has been too often manifested and is too well known to need new assurances. But while it is true that individuals and parties in the United States have indicated a desire to substitute reason for force, and by negotiations to stop the further sacrifice of human life, and to arrest the calamities which now afflict both countries, the authorities who control the Government of our enemies have too often and too clearly expressed their resolution to make no peace, except on terms of our unconditional submission and degradation, to leave us any hope of the cessation of hostilities until the delusion of their ability to conquer us is dispelled. Among those who are already disposed for peace many are actuated by principle and by disapproval and abhorrence of the iniquitous warfare that their Government is waging, while others are moved by the conviction that it is no longer to the interest of the United States to continue a struggle in which success is unattainable. Whenever this fast-growing conviction shall have taken firm root in the minds of a majority of the Northern people there will be produced that willingness to negotiate for peace which is now confined to our side. Peace is manifestly impossible unless desired by both parties to this war, and the disposition for it among our enemies will be best and most certainly evoked by the demonstration on our part of ability and unshaken determination to defend our rights, and to hold no earthly price too dear for their purchase. Whenever there shall be on the part of our enemies a desire for peace there will be no difficulty in finding means by which negotiation can be opened, but it is obvious that no agency can be called into action until this desire shall be mutual. When that contingency shall happen the Government, to which is confided the treaty-making power, can be at no loss for means adapted to accomplish so desirable an end. In the hope that the day will soon be reached when under Divine favor these States may be allowed to enter on their former peaceful pursuits and to develop the abundant natural resources with which they are blessed, let us, then, resolutely continue to devote our united and unimpaired energies to the defense of our homes, our lives, and our liberties. This is the true path to peace. Let us tread it with confidence in the assured result.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

ASST. QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE, TAX IN KIND,

Richmond, November 7, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War:

I have the honor to submit the accompanying report in answer to the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 14th of June, received at this office 22d of September. In consequence of the difficulty in collecting the minor reports from the officers and agents dispersed throughout the Confederacy, it has been impossible to represent a full statement of all the receipts of the crops of 1863. The Trans-Mississippi Department is very imperfectly reported; it is supposed that the mails containing the information have been captured. Large quantities of the tithe have been collected by unauthorized parties belonging to armies in the field. These can only be ascertained after many months, through the collectors of the money tax and the penalty in default of delivery in kind. It is expected that a more complete statement will be ready for Congress during the first half of its session. The value of the tithes which have passed through the hands of the officers on tax duty at schedule rates in the several States is $110,527,542. It is estimated that the reports from the Trans-Mississippi Department, and more complete statements from this side, and the irregular collections by the armies in the field not reported, will increase this amount to beyond $150,000,000. But this must not be assumed as the tenth of the productions, because many delinquents will pay in money, and large districts impracticable for the establishment of tax depots will also pay in money. The gross cost of collection is reported at $2,376,277.40; the net cost of collection, $1,244,686.07. These are underestimates of the actual cost, the outstanding debts not being included. The more complete report will probably increase the percentage of cost of collection to about 4 per cent. gross and 2 net. The net cost is arrived at by deducting from the gross outlay the hire of laborers and teamsters, excess of transportation over eight miles, purchase of means of transportation, grain sacks, hay presses, scales, boxes, and barrels—expenses which would have been created if the tax-in-kind laws were not in existence.

The voluntary payment of the tithe tax exhibits a cheerful compliance by the people with the law. Generally the receipts exceed the assessors' estimates, which arises from the fact that many producers have voluntarily paid their tax without having been assessed at all; but in a few cases they refuse to be assessed, and throw obstacles in the assessors' way. A remedy would be found in a law requiring producers to come forward in their own person or by proxy for assessment and imposing a penalty in default. Assessors for the year 1863 have in some instances failed to assess, and in others have rated values so low that producers have preferred to pay the money value and the 50 per cent. penalty rather than deliver in kind. The occupation by the enemy of large districts prevents assessors from operating, and the absence of producers in the Army is an obstacle to the thorough assessment of the crops. The Army consumes many crops of hay, corn, oats, and even wheat before they are matured. These can never be assessed, and are consequently lost to the tax in kind. A modification of the law is needed to require the money collectors everywhere, both in practicable and impracticable localities, to take up receipts in the hands of the producers who have, through ignorance, paid their tax in kind in good faith to unauthorized persons for the use of the Army, and to give credit for such receipts in satisfaction of the money value. The exemption from the tax in kind on corn to those who do not produce more than 200 bushels of corn will have a serious effect upon the receipts of the present year, and the same effect will be experienced in estimating the worth of a producer. Under the tenth section of the act he cannot be taxed in kind unless he is "worth $500 for himself and $100 for each minor child living with him, and $500 in addition for each minor son he has living or may have lost or had disabled in the military or naval service." This would not be material if the worth were estimated in our Treasury notes, but Article III, section 1, of the act of 17th of February, 1864, Chapter LXIV, values such taxable property at its market value in the neighborhood in 1860. The effect is, a producer rents a farm and has little other property than 500 bushels of corn, the product of the farm. This crop, estimated at its value in 1860, with his other property, may not exceed the amount which would exempt him, and he pays no tithe. The report analyzed gives the following results:

The tithe of wheat (being 29,048,711 rations of flour) and the part of the corn (amounting to 49,339,528 rations of meal), at one pound to the ration, will supply bread for 200,000 men one year. The tithe of bacon, at one-third pound to the ration, will supply 160,211 men one year. The remainder of the tithe corn, together with the oats, at ten pounds to the ration, will supply 130,374 animals one year. The tithe hay and fodder, at ten pounds to the ration, will supply 35,992 animals one year. But this must not mislead into the supposition that all the tithes have gone to the Army. Besides issues to armies in the field they have been distributed to the different bureaus of the War Department, and have contributed largely to the support of their operatives and animals. To a considerable extent the families of soldiers have been supplied with bread from them. Some remain on hand in localities difficult of access, and a small percentage has been lost by fire, by the enemy, and by decay. The analysis is given to exhibit in a condensed shape the capacity of the tax in kind to furnish food.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LARKIN SMITH,
Assistant Quartermaster-General.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
November 8, 1864.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS,
President:

SIR: I have the honor to submit the accompanying reports and letters from Brigadier-General Echols and others, disclosing the existence of a treasonable association among the disaffected people resident in various counties of Southwestern Virginia. This association is so pernicious and formidable in its operations and designs as to require prompt and vigorous measures on the part of the Government to arrest and repress it. Some weeks since, through the zeal and vigilance of Leory, who had been employed by the Department as a commissioner to examine persons under arrest by the military authorities, intelligence was received of combinations being formed among the disloyal in one or more counties for dangerous ends, and he was instructed to devote himself diligently to the investigation and discovery of their character, extent, and aims. At the same time his expert detectives were sent from this city to aid in making inquiries and discoveries. Through confessions that were made by a suspected party under military arrest on other grounds, and by the success of these detectives, while themselves under apparent arrest, in winning the confidence of other guilty parties, information was obtained both of the names of some members of the association and of the signs and passwords by which they might be approached and communicated with. The detectives then proceeded to prosecute their researches and to obtain an insight into the character and aims of the association.

At the same time other investigations were being actively made by Mr. Leory and by Brigadier-General Echols, then in command of the department, to whom all discoveries effected were disclosed. The result has been to ascertain that for months past there has existed in Southwest Virginia an association with its headquarters outside the Confederacy, within the enemy's lines and probably under the guidance of intelligent but artful traitors and foes, extending over many counties and spreading rapidly among the disaffected, and through their insidious representations among the ignorant likewise, having for its direct purpose to give aid and co-operation to the enemy in their efforts for the subjugation of the State as also to shield themselves from danger and participate in the spoils and confiscations of the enemy.

The association is secret, the members have signs and passwords known only among themselves, and are bound to each other for the prosecution of their nefarious designs by the most solemn oaths. They are under obligation to encourage desertions from the Army and to pass and harbor all deserters, escaped prisoners, or spies; to give information to the enemy of the movements of our troops, of exposed or weakened positions, of inviting opportunities of attack, and to guide and assist the enemy either in advance or retreat. They are believed on more than one occasion to have caused the frustration of our plans and successful surprises by the enemy, and among the latter the one that resulted disastrously in the death of the gallant General Morgan. They have an understanding with the enemy that they are in every event to be free from military service; that their homes and possessions are to be ever preserved, to secure which they have certain indications by which their property is to be recognized; that whether on mere present successes or on ultimate conquest, they are to participate in the rewards of victory. Numbers of deserters from our armies and of violent disaffected men, both from within and without our lines, have collected in this vicinity, and under the influence of the members of this association, and having from them aid and countenance, have banded together, plundering and subsisting upon the means of the well-affected citizens and holding all such in some counties, by threats and outrages, in such terror as to prevent not merely efforts against them, but even disclosures of their names or deeds.

This association, originating in remote localities, little known and difficult of access, long escaped observation and detection. Enjoying in consequence impunity, it has of late spread extensively and is now diffused over many counties of Southwest Virginia, and has even extended to some bordering counties of the Valley. It embraces some citizens of position and influence hitherto unsuspected, and has been able in one county to elect the sheriff and in others the justices of the peace from its members. In not a few they exercise a controlling influence over witnesses and jurors, and consequently in the administration of criminal law. As their numbers have extended, their leaders have become more ambitious in their designs. They have lately conceived the idea of forming a new State of Southwest Virginia, and within their association have elected officers whom they style governor, lieutenant-governor, brigadier-general, and judges, so as to furnish the official organization of a government. They claim, likewise, to have extended their insidious operations to our armies and to have in at least one regiment the majority of the soldiers, and in many others members actively engaged in encouraging desertions and disseminating their principles. One of the leading members of the association advised the detectives, supposed to be members, that the best service they could render would be by gaining in the army of General Lee adherents to their plans.

When these discoveries were partially made this Department was anxious to remedy the progressing evil by sending forces into the disaffected counties to arrest or disperse deserters and predatory bands, and by instituting legal proceedings against the leaders of the association. Forces have been advantageously employed in restoring order and making arrests in several of the most disaffected counties, but the deserters and outlaws, with the information and aid received, in large numbers escape into the recesses of the mountains and pass to other counties.

To determine whether judicial proceedings should be instituted, Mr. Nicholas F. Boccock, of Buckingham, a lawyer of experience, intelligence, and character, was sent by the Department to investigate the nature of the evidence and advise the remedies to be applied. His information and examination convince him that while the evidence is fully adequate to satisfy any reasonable mind of the facts stated, yet being derived indirectly from parties implicated, from the reports of others, and from circumstances of suspicion would, in most instances, not suffice to convict on indictments for overt acts of treason. There would, too, be little chance of justice before the tribunals in the disaffected region where both complicity and terror would preclude fair judgments. He therefore recommends the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, as at once the prudent and most satisfactory remedy. In this view I fully concur. The prompt arrest of all the leaders in this traitorous conspiracy might then be made by the military authorities; they could be removed, to the terror of their accomplices, and be detained at a distance from the places of their deleterious influences.

The less conspicuous and more ignorant members would be affrighted and deterred from the further prosecution of their evil designs, and all would be repressed by the knowledge that they could at any time be seized and confined by the military authority. The dread alone of such action would in general suffice, and, except in case of leading culprits, there would probably be little or no occasion to exercise the power of arrest and detention. Experience has shown that such has been heretofore, in case of apprehended dangerous combinations or individual disloyalty, the salutary effect of the mere suspension. I therefore advise that its suspension under the present formidable appearance of disaffection in Southwest Virginia be earnestly recommended to Congress.

Respectfully submitted.

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

CHRISTIANSBURG, August 28, 1864.

[Major LEORY(?):]

MAJOR: Understanding that you intend visiting Richmond for the purpose of representing the condition of this section of country to the military authorities, we desire to unite our testimony with yours. We would respectfully represent that the counties of Montgomery,

Floyd, Giles, and others adjacent, are infested by armed bands of deserters, both from ours and the Yankee army; that the lives and property of all loyal citizens are rendered very insecure by their presence; property having been repeatedly burned and unarmed and inoffensive citizens fired upon; that the reserve forces of this section are totally inefficient under existing organization, the deserters having fired upon, captured some of them, and dispersed the remainder; that we have good and sufficient reason to believe that a secret society whose principal object is to encourage desertion exists in our midst, and has for members all or nearly all the disloyal portion of our community.

We further believe that the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad will be cut by the deserters unless they are dispersed, and that communication by this important line is in danger of being interrupted at any time by them.

Permit us, major, to express the entire confidence that we feel in your zeal for the welfare of our country, and we believe that you will use every exertion to obtain for us relief from the existing state of affairs.

Very respectfully, your obedient servants,

ROBT. L. CUSTIN,
JAMES P. HAMMET,

Members Committee of Safety, Montgomery County.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

HDQRS. DEPT. OF SOUTHWESTERN VA. AND EAST TENN.,
Dublin, September 1, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War:

SIR: Mr. Leory, the highly intelligent commissioner, &c., for this department, goes to Richmond this morning for the purpose of consultation with the authorities, principally with yourself, in regard to a matter of importance to our cause in this section and in one or two of the adjoining States. We have for some time back suspected the existence of a secret treasonable association, but have not until recently been able to determine its existence and extent, when Mr. Leory, by his intelligence and perseverance, has been enabled to determine with certainty its character and existence and extent. He will explain to you the whole matter. Some action must be taken at once in regard thereto, and I hope that the assistance which Mr. Leory desires in the way of experiment and skillful detectives may be furnished to him. I will, of course, do all in my power to aid him in the department.

I have found matters in the department in a bad condition, but will do all in my power to correct them.

I am, very respectfully, &c.,

JNO. ECHOLS,
Brigadier-General.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

DUBLIN, VA., September 20, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War:

SIR: As the car was about leaving this point yesterday I wrote to you a hurried note stating that my plans with reference to the society known as the "Heroes of America" had been successful. The detectives, with the aid I furnished them, have passed as members of this order and are obtaining important information. We have a large list of traitors. Within ten miles of this place we find three justices of the peace and one Methodist minister attached to the society. While in Montgomery County, among others, we have discovered the name of the sheriff recently elected. I have also reliable information that a prominent lawyer, once a candidate for lieutenant-governor of the State of Virginia, is a leading member of the treasonable order. I have but two detectives from Richmond and two obtained here. I need more at once. The adjoining counties are full of these people, and three or four men work in such a mass too slowly. I wish before any arrests are made to obtain testimony against the leaders in four or five counties. I am told there are 800 members of the order in Montgomery County alone.

The Governor of this State, having been informed of the existence of a secret society for treasonable purposes in Floyd County, is taking steps to break it up. I fear his plans and mine may conflict. Would it not be well to have him informed of the measures the Government has adopted?

I have efficient aid from General Echols.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

HENRY J. LEORY,
C. S. Commissioner.

[Inclosure No. 4.]

OFFICE COMMISSIONER,
Dublin, September 19, 1864.

SIR: I have but a moment to write. My plans concerning the secret society have been completely successful. I need more detectives. I fear the steps taken by Governor Smith may interfere with mine. I have names of many members—more prominent men.

Your obedient servant,

HENRY J. LEORY.

[Inclosure No. 5.]

Report of Detectives.

Left Dublin the 12th of September (Monday evening); stopped all night with a Mr. Morgan, north the railroad about one mile from New River bridge; started next morning for the Central depot; stopped there and made inquiry for parties said to be living there; could find no such parties there. Saw Doctor Hammet, who informed me where some of the parties could be found; took the train to Christiansburg; arrived there, went in search of some of the parties named; first man found was Rowsie, a German living directly opposite the hotel kept by Mr. Burgess. He was standing in the door of the blacksmith shop. I walked up to him and gave him the sign of the order. He did not answer at first, seeming very shy. After a few moments made the sign again. After a little while he said, "These are gloomy times here," that being one of the passwords of the order. I answered, "Yes, but we are looking for better," that being the answer. He then smiled, seeing I had answered him correctly. We then had a little talk. He then introduced me to a young man named Henry Questine, who was working at the forge. I passed the sign, grip, and passwords with him. After getting out of the door he told Rowsie he thought he knew me. I asked Rowsie what his name was. He told me. I then told him he did know me. I thereupon went in and told him I was not passing by my full name, and asked him not to make my name known, as it might prevent my passing about a little unsafe with the authorities, which I think he was careful in doing. Rowsie then invited me in the adjoining shop, there introduced me to a man at the forge by the name of Fariss. I passed signs, grip, and passwords with him, and we then had a conversation about the gloomy times and gloomy men; found him a member of the order, very much against the Confederate States; heard from Questine afterward that this man talked with General Averell at the time he was in Christiansburg. There was also a German, whose name I did not learn, at work with him, also a member of the order.

By appointment with Questine, McGill and myself walked out with him some distance on the road and had a long conversation on the subject of the order, its members, objects, &c. He told me of the following-named persons, members of the order: Daniel H. Hoge, the lawyer living on the North Fork of the Roanoke River; William Harman and Captain Callahan, of the police; Capt. John Francis, formerly of French's battery, now sheriff-elect of the county of Montgomery. He told me this man had resigned his command, and his lieutenant had afterward carried the most of his command to the Yankee army. He also told us the organization was first formed in the county by a man named Horace Dean, about twelve months ago, who came on from Richmond, but whose home is in North Carolina, and that he passed through Carroll County, Va., on his way home. Also a man named Williams, a wheelwright in Christiansburg, belonging to the order, and William Burnett, a cabinetmaker, of same town, who was afterward seen and conversed with by McGill. Also one Randall Cardin, an initiating officer, who lives on the Pepper's Ferry road, and one Bresser, nearby, and said there were some ten of them living there near together of the order, and of a lot of deserters on a place called Tom's Creek, and said they were supplied with powder and caps by members in Christiansburg to resist their capture. He mentioned in his conversation that the members of the order were bound to convey all the information they could obtain to the enemy, and to assist all deserters from our army. On the following day, the 14th day of September, McGill and myself were seated on the platform in front of Rowsie's dwelling; he, Rowsie, then told us that Capt. John Francis, then sitting a short distance from us with several persons around him, all belonged to the order, and that he was elected sheriff by reason of his being a member of the order, and also of Lawyer Daniel H. Hoge, of the same county, who was also a member of the order; that three-fourths at least of the people of the county were members, and in Floyd County nearly all the people, and in Giles and Montgomery, and also a greater part of the men of the Fifty-fourth Virginia Regiment also members, and that it was widely extending in the army near Petersburg.

We endeavored on the same evening to get an interview with Capt. John Francis. I sent Questine to ask him to meet us in room No. 4 in the hotel; saw McGill; told him. We then went on to the room; remained there some time. Captain Francis did not come. I then asked McGill to go out and look for him. He went out, and saw Questine go up and speak to Francis, who directly after mounted his horse and rode off without ourspeaking to him. We supposed he was afraid we were not all right, and we thought the rest of the party seemed to be getting restless and uneasy from some cause or other. We left Christiansburg and walked to the Montgomery Springs; left there next morning, Thursday, 15th, for Dublin Depot; then went over to Newbern; had an interview with Major Leory; started next morning from Newbern for Snowville; stopped on the route at Andy Hall's, between the ferry and Snowville; found the family strong Union people. The women seemed to know all about the order; one of the women knew the passwords. I afterward heard they were members of the order. Andy Hall said his sons and son-in-law were in the brush, and would never serve in the Southern Army. Told them we were Union men in search of information to send to the Federal Army. They seemed highly pleased. Andy Hall said he had never joined the order; that his recollection was so bad he could not remember the passwords, &c. When we left he walked with us and showed us the road; told us to stop at his brother's, David P. Hall; that he was a member of the order. We then passed on to Snowville; staid all night. Left next morning, Saturday, the 17th, for Childress' Store; passed by, came to the farm of William Childress, who, we had been informed, was a member of the order. Met him at home; passed sign and grip and passwords with him; found him to be a member of the order; had a conversation about the war and found him a strong Union man, much opposed to the war and the Confederacy. Told us his brothers, Tom and Stephen, were members, and invited us over to the distillery, where we met his brother Tom, a justice of the peace, who is a very strong Union man. He said, in conversation with McGill, that some man was making brandy, and would like to make some for Uncle Jeff; that he would make it all right. McGill replied he would put something in it, would he not? He said yes, seeming much pleased. There was also a cooper named Tom W. Terry, a violent Union man. Capt. John Francis came while we were there, and there was a great deal of private conversation among the party. Then we were afterward told by James Hight that they were consulting about killing us if they could find out whether we were spies sent there to find out what they were doing. When we were in the act of leaving, Stephen Childress advised us not to go on to Christiansburg, but to stop with Madison Smith, a preacher.

We went on to Christiansburg next morning, Sunday, 18th; raining quite hard; went out to Preacher Smith's; found him at home; went in; made the sign to him. He did not answer at first; seemed to be suspicious of us. We entered into conversation with him; told him we were recommended to come to see him by Stephen Childress, and, after talking sometime, told him, from conversation with Childress, I inferred he was a member of the Order of the Heroes of America; said he had heard of it; told him we were in search of information to take to the Federal Army. He was much in favor of the Yankees and opposed to the Confederate cause. Told us we need not be afraid to talk to him; told him McGill was going through the lines. During the time we were there a man named James Thompson came in. He was a violent Union man; said to be keeper of the poorhouse. After remaining three or four hours, we took our leave, and had gotten some 100 yards when Preacher Smith called to us. We halted; he came up to us and said he supposed we understood he was all right—that he was a preacher and must be cautious how he talked to strangers. Told him I supposed he was a member of the order; that he knew we were, and in as much danger as himself. He then acknowledged he was; gave us the grip at parting and wished us much success at parting; then parted and went back to Christiansburg.

Left next morning, Monday, 19th, for Montgomery Springs. Next day, Tuesday, 20th, went over to see Daniel H. Hoge; found him at home; engaged in conversation with him; passed sign with him; McGill said, "It's gloomy times." He said, "Yes, they were gloomy." I answered, "Yes, but we were looking for better." Hoge asked what we were looking for. I answered, "A red and white cord." He asked, "Why a cord?" I answered, "Because it is safe for us and our families." He then remarked it was a good cause. McGill said he thought it was. He then asked where we were from. I told him I belonged to Parker's battery on Howlett's farm, and was from Richmond. He asked me who was working in the cause in Richmond; told him I was not much in the city and could not tell him, but I knew the masses of the people were opposed to the war. He then asked me if the order had spread much in the army. We told him it was spreading rapidly. He said he never wanted to see the Confederacy recognized. He also asked me how A. J. Crane and H. K. Ellyson, of the city, were in the cause; said he would like much to hear from him; urged me to see him and find out, and write to him if he belonged to the order, and to write how the cause was progressing in the city and army, and who was working. Told him I did not know if we should go back to Richmond. McGill told him he thought he should go through the lines and go to Alexandria. Hoge told him he had better stay and work in the cause and try to elect members to the Legislature who were favorable to the call of a convention of States to settle the war. Said he would like to see John M. Botts, and would write to him if he knew how to get a letter to him, as he thought Botts could give him a great deal of information. Thought they could devise some means to stop the war. I told him I would convey the letter. He then asked me if I would write a few lines to Botts and request him to write to him (Hoge), and that he would like to meet Mr. Botts in Lynchburg, as his daughter was going to school there and he could go down there and see him without creating any suspicion. I promised to write to Mr. Botts and also to him (Hoge).

Mr. Hoge told us this order was known to most of the officers in the Yankee army, and that the members of it were not molested by them, and that during the time the Yankees were at Blacksburg they picketed on the side of the mountain opposite his house, and that they were in the act of taking a horse from a woman, but upon being satisfied that the man was all right, or member of the order, they did not take the horse. They inquired of the woman who lived down there (meaning his, Hoge's, place). She answered that if they knew that man as well as she did they would not molest him; that it was Daniel H. Hoge, and that he was opposed to the war from its commencement, and had been fighting against it ever since. They then said they would not interrupt him, and did not. He stated that he should have gone to Blacksburg while the Yankees were there, but that it was raining, and he could not walk, and that he could not ride without attracting too much notice, and that his wife was confined and opposed to his going; consequently did not go. He said he knew the Yankees would not take him prisoner or otherwise interfere with him. At parting shook hands, gave us the grip of the order, wished us success, again asked me to write; promised to do so.

JNO. B. WILLIAMS.
THOMAS MCGILL.

[Indorsement]

WAR OFFICE,
November 9, 1864.

Submitted by Major Carrington, provost-marshal, with assurances of the reliableness of the parties.

R. G. H. KEAN,
Chief of Bureau of War.

[Inclosure No. 6.]

Report of Detectives.

WINCASTLE, Monday, October 10.

While sitting on the porch of J. & H. Guggenheimer the sign of secrecy of the Order of Heroes of America was given me by a man whom I afterward learned was named George Fellows, who was sitting on his porch opposite. I answered him. In a few minutes he crossed the street toward me and gave me a sign to follow him. I went on and followed him into a cellar. After getting in he said, "Three." I answered, "Days." He then said I was all right, and took from his pocket a bottle of brandy and invited me to drink. He then told me he had been informed that there were two Yankee spies in town, and that I had been pointed out to him as one of them. He said he told the man he would find out, and that after giving me the sign and finding I was all right, that the man might go to the devil. He told me the head man of the order in the county lived in town, and he would like me to see him. I told him I should like to have an interview with him. He told me his name was John Camper. About this time some man came in the cellar, when I walked out. The same evening of the 10th, McGill and myself were on the same porch, and I saw Fellows and another man sitting in a door opposite to us. Fellows made a sign toward the other man. From this I understood it to be John Camper. In a short time we got up and started down the street in the direction of Camper's residence. Camper followed us. When he got to his gate he started in. We gave him the sign of secrecy. He answered: We then went through with the passwords. He then invited us in. We went in and took a seat on the porch; talked about the order and the war, &c. I asked him what the obligations of the order were; told him I understood they were, in part, to convey all the information to the Federal army that could be obtained and to assist deserters in passing through the country from the Confederate army. He said yes; that was their obligation, and said the order was known by the Yankee officers, and that when the Yankees passed through the town that he asked them for a guard, and they posted two at his gate. He also told us that about 1,000 deserters had passed through the country; that they passed around the town, flanking it. He told us the owner of the factory nearly opposite his house was a member of the order, and that his name was Amons. And the man who lived next above him was also a member. His name I did not learn. After some other conversation we took our leave. He gave us the grip at parting.

We started on back to the hotel at which we were stopping. We were overtaken by a negro shoemaker, at whose house we had previously met Fellows, and was told by him to look out, that the citizens of the town were making up a party to arrest us. We then met Fellows, who told us the same and advising us to leave town, and requested us to meet him in the cellar where we had met in the morning. Promised to meet him. We then went on to the hotel. There found several persons gathered and some excitement. After consultation, thought both had better not go. I remained, and McGill went up to see him. On the same day in the forenoon we had an interview with Fellows in the shop of this negro shoemaker. He inquired of us about Doctor Rucker and his command. He wanted to find out where it was. Said he was going to start through the lines in a night or two. Said his wife had a ring which was given to her by Doctor Rucker with his name on it, and the doctor would befriend him. This man Fellows was walking on a crutch, but said he was perfectly well and could walk as well as ever, and that he could walk thirty miles per day. The negro who was working in the shop said he had seen me in the Yankee army that passed through the town—was certain I was the man. I told him to keep that a secret, and I think he did. He told us we need not be afraid to talk to Fellows; that he was all right. Fellows said he could get through the lines in three nights. Next day, the 11th instant, met Fellows at the same shop. As we were about to leave he told us we had better go, as the citizens were watching us, and that his wife had been about town and the citizens were talking a good deal about us. Said we were lying about in the free negro houses; advised us to leave before the enrolling officer came.

He told McGill in the morning that he had been told we were detective officers from Richmond, and if he thought it true we would not live to get to the depot. The negro shoemaker said there would be the damndest running off among the negroes of the town in a short time that ever was heard of.

We took leave of Fellows and the negro and started on the road for Bonsack's Depot; stopped at the pottery of the Noffsinders, about one mile from Fincastle, who we understood were members of the order, but they were absent. We went on and stopped all night with a Dunkard preacher by the name of Nininger, said to be a member of the order. He would not give us the signs or passwords. He had been arrested a few days previous and was, I suppose, suspicious of us. In conversation found him opposed to the war and of strong Union sentiment. We proposed to pay for our supper and lodging; he asked us if we had anything besides Confederate money, that he did not care about that; told him we had not. He then said his daughter had to have her bonnet fixed, and she could use it in that way. We then paid him $10. We left next morning by daylight. Walked on to a Mr. Ben Broumore, another Dunkard preacher. Found him at the ——. Told him we had called to see if we could get breakfast with him. Told him we had stayed all night with Nininger and had to leave before breakfast in order to reach the train in time. McGill then gave him the sign. He smiled. Mr. McGill remarked, "It is gloomy times." He said, "Yes, very gloomy." I answered yes, but we were looking for better. He then asked what we were looking for. I answered, "A red and white cord." He asked, "Why a cord?" I replied, "Because it is safe for us and our families." He then asked us to the house. We went in, sat down, talked about the order and the war; spoke of the order and how it had spread in the Army. We spoke of the Fifty-fourth Virginia Regiment and said most of the men belonged to the order. He told us that most all of the Twenty-second had been initiated in the order and that a great many of them had deserted, which he said was a good thing, and after some other conversation invited us to breakfast, after which we left. We shook hands at parting; he gave us the grip of the order.

JNO. B. WILLIAMS.

THOS. MCGILL.

[Indorsement.]

RICHMOND, Novembér 9, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded to the Honorable Secretary of War.

These men were sent by your direction to aid Commissioner Leory in his investigations. I consider them reliable.

I. H. CARRINGTON,

Provost-Marshal.

[Inclosure No. 7.]

DUBLIN, VA., November 4, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War:

SIR: After consultation yesterday we all concluded it would be advisable for Mr. Bocoek to return to Richmond and obtain your opinion on an important point that now presents itself. We are ready to make arrests. I have the names of over 100 persons, and evidence against most of them, but we have thought it desirable to make the arrests by military authority, and that cannot be done unless the writ of habeas corpus be suspended. We wish to know whether the President will apply to Congress for the suspension, and also concerning the probability of the compliance on the part of Congress. Mr. Bocoek will also explain other points to you. He appears to doubt that the legislation of Congress will reach the case of treasonable organizations. We had a consultation yesterday concerning these matters with Generals Breckinridge and Echols. They are prepared to do what we conclude is best.

The last act of Congress suspending the writ of habeas corpus enumerated the cases in which arrests could be made, and covered all the cases that could occur here. It appears to me of the greatest importance that the writ should be suspended. Mr. Johnston, a distinguished lawyer in Abingdon (a nephew of General Joe Johnston), writes to General Echols that the secret order is growing fearfully in that part of the country. I have sent my two detectives there.

I write in some haste to give this letter to Mr. Bocoek, who leaves this morning.

I am, your obedient servant,

HENRY J. LEORY.

[Inclosure No. 8.]

RICHMOND, November 8, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War Confederate States of America:

SIR: I deem it my duty to call your attention to the condition of things in Southwestern Virginia, and to urge upon you, and through you upon the other authorities, the necessity of the adoption of prompt and vigorous measures in order to remedy the evils which now exist in that region. It has been observed for several months past that the number of deserters in that department have been rapidly increasing, and that they have come from the two armies of Virginia and from the army of Georgia. In some counties of the department these deserters have formed themselves into gangs and companies, and have been bold enough and strong enough to defy the police and enrolling guards of the counties where they were, and to make it necessary to send in pursuit of them strong military detachments. In some counties they have been very bold and have openly set the laws of the country at defiance, and have committed and are committing many outrages upon the property and persons of our respectable and loyal people. It has been found very difficult to capture or drive from the country these deserters, because they are supported and sustained in every way by the disloyal citizens of that section, and when pressed by a superior force they scatter and take refuge in the great mountains of Southwestern Virginia, where it is almost impossible to reach them thus scattered, and where they are supplied with all that they may need by their friends at the expense of the loyal citizens of property in their vicinity.

A secret and treasonable organization has been in existence in the department for many months and has lately been increasing in size and importance with great rapidity. It numbers among its members quite a large number of men of some local influence in the respective counties in which they live, among whom are to be found some professional men and officers of the law of the State of Virginia. This organization was formed originally at the suggestion of the Yankee authorities, and has scattered over the country now what are called their initiating officers. Persons who are received into it are bound by the most solemn oaths not to disclose the secrets of the society or order. They are all bound to communicate to the enemy at all times all information which they can convey which may be of value. They bind themselves in the event of any invasion of the country by the enemy to furnish all needed information as to the roads of the country, and to notify the invaders at all times of any approaching danger. In return for these and other services to be rendered it is understood that the Yankee authorities have promised protection to the persons and property of these people. They have adopted a badge by which they recognize one another. They have also adopted a system of signs and grips and passwords only to be communicated to the initiated. The more ignorant classes of the country have been induced to join the organization by the promise of a division hereafter among them of the property of the loyal Southern citizens.

It is reported and believed to be true that in the State elections of last spring one of this order was elected sheriff of an important county in that portion of the State, and several justices of the peace are known to be connected with it. Earnest efforts have of late been made to enlist the soldiers into the order, and it is known that these efforts have been successful to a certain extent. Information has been communicated lately which leads to the belief that a considerable number of the order are now in the Army of the Valley of Virginia, and that some of the soldiers in the army of General Hood, from Virginia, are also members. As a consequence of this a company of Virginia soldiers in this latter army who were on picket are said lately to have gone over to the enemy in a body. Of course the spread or adoption of the doctrines or purposes of this organization by any considerable number of our soldiers would be disastrous to us in the extreme.

This, then, sir, is the condition of the Department of Southwestern Virginia, and some active, energetic measures must at once be adopted to crush out the treason which has so rapidly spread itself over that section of the Confederacy. It will be impossible to reach effectually the leading parties by the ordinary processes of law. They are so banded together that in the courts they could and would prove anything which they might desire.

In order to show the spirit which actuates these people it is proper that you should know that in two of the counties of Southwestern Virginia they have recently organized what they call a "new State," for which they elected a governor and lieutenant-governor, &c., and that in this same vicinity there was organized a brigade of deserters, for which was chosen a leader who was denominated "general."

This order has spread itself into East Tennessee and North Carolina. I make this communication, briefly and hurriedly, with the hope that I may have an opportunity of going more into details soon in a personal interview, but if I do not I desire to impress upon the authorities the knowledge of the serious and alarming condition of things of which I have spoken and the absolute necessity of the use of the most decisive measures in relation thereto.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JNO. ECHOLS,
Brigadier-General.

[Inclosure No. 9.]

RICHMOND, November 8, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to report that in obedience to your instructions I last week visited Southwest Virginia for the purpose of assisting Major Leory, commissioner, in certain important proceedings which he contemplated instituting. Upon investigation I ascertained the following facts to be true: That there exists in many of the counties embraced in his commission an organized secret association, the members of which readily distinguish each other by certain passwords, grips, and other tokens of recognition communicated only to those who are initiated into it. Upon being admitted into the association the person admitted is required to take an oath to perform faithfully the duties imposed upon its members and, on penalty of death, not to divulge its secrets. The duties required are to encourage and facilitate desertion from the Confederate Army; to protect deserters and aid them in avoiding detection and arrest; to give information to the Federal troops of all facts which may enable them to strike a successful blow; to warn them of attacks meditated against them; to give information of the position, movements, numbers, and condition of the Confederate forces; to guide the enemy in their march through the country; to point out for destruction the property of loyal citizens; and, in short, to do everything and give all information which may contribute to the success of the Federal and the defeat of the Confederate cause, except only that they are not required to take up arms.

This organization has its headquarters in the United States, and of its character and purposes the Federal soldiers in the field seem to be well informed, so that they allow all members thereof residing on Confederate soil freely to pass in and out of their lines. The inducements offered to persons in the South to unite in the organization are exemptions from military service; protection to their persons and property during the war; and, at the conclusion thereof, participation in the division of the real estate of loyal citizens. In the extreme southwestern counties of the State of Virginia this organization is rapidly increasing in numbers, extending also into the State of North Carolina and eastward into many of the counties of Virginia and embracing already many of the most prominent and influential members of society. In some counties justices of the peace and in one the sheriff-elect are known to belong to it and to have been elected by the votes and influence of its members. Throughout the section of country where it exists there are many deserters from the army, who, concealed by its members, lurk along the highways and fall upon and rob loyal citizens when found alone or unprotected, and in some instances they have entered the houses of such citizens and plundered them. So numerous and efficient is the organization that though the military authorities in that department are vigilant and active in their efforts to arrest the deserters, yet their efforts are rendered almost fruitless by the facilities for concealment and escape rendered them on every hand by the members thereof.

The proofs of the existence of this organization and of its extensive prevalence and rapid growth, and of the names and localities of many of its members, are of such a character as to exclude all doubt. Such was the evil as to the remedy for which I was called on to advise. It was easy to say arrest the deserters and punish them, but how arrest them, while at every turn they were concealed and warned of the approach of the force sent to arrest them? It appeared to me to be indispensable, first, to break up the organization by which they were sheltered, and then alone would their apprehension become practicable. But how to break up this organization was the real difficulty.

The members of it are persons who are above the conscript age, or are exempt from military duty, and are therefore not liable to seizure by military authority and trial before the military courts. If arrested and brought to trial before the civil courts, the evidence being only that such an organization exists for such purposes and with such designs and that the parties on trial are members of it, there being no evidence that any particular person did or assisted in doing any of the acts proved, it would be almost impossible to fix guilt on any individual so as to secure his conviction. The results of the organization appear, their agency is manifestly exerted, but there is no evidence and none likely to be obtained to prove who has acted.

The organization is extending itself daily, and, for other more daring deeds, is gathering strength and awaiting its opportunity. Before that opportunity occurs, it must be struck down or it will become fearfully potent.

I have advised that the law as it now stands affords no adequate remedy for the evil; none but such as, if attempted to be applied, would by the very failure to suppress, stimulate the growth of the association. My opinion is clear that the only mode of successfully combating this alarming evil is by military authority, which can only be done upon legislation providing for its exercise and relieving it of interference by the civil authorities by the writ of habeas corpus or otherwise, until the treason is effectually suppressed.

Respectfully submitted.

N. F. BOCK.

[Inclosure No. 10.]

Report of Detectives.

In the jail at Abingdon, on the 2d of November, conversed with the following men and found them members of the Order of Heroes of America:

First. John Gardner, with whom we exchanged signs and passwords. He told us which way to go to get out of the lines; to go by the way of Estillville, of this county, and through Scott County into Tennessee. Told us nearly all the people in the lower end of the county of Washington and in county of Scott were members of the order, and that John Hamilton, the sheriff of the county, was a member of the order and would assist us any time, day or night, that we would call on him, to pass through the lines, and that a man named Dorton was also a member and would assist us.

Second. Harrison Bowman, a member, also told us that John Hamilton, sheriff, was a member and would assist us in getting through the lines, and with provisions, and that he lived on the south side of the North Fork of the Holston River; also told us of one William Dorton, a member, who would assist us. Told us most any of the people in that part of the country would assist us in getting off. He told McGill that he had written a letter, which had been found upon his little boy, describing the way for the enemy to come in and capture the post of Abingdon, where the arms were kept, how the jail was situated, &c., but said the authorities would have to prove that he wrote it. He told us he had been staying out in the bushes for some length of time with some fifteen others, and that in one hour more he would have gotten off, as all his arrangements had been made to leave. He said he expected the enemy to come in there in a few days.

Third. A man whose name I did not learn, who gave us the signs and passwords of the order. This man was dressed in a straw hat and a bedquilt over his shoulder made in squares. McGill says there are some five others in the same part of the jail, members of the order.

On the train between Dublin and Lynchburg found two members of the order sent from Wytheville; told us they were members; passed the signs and passwords with them; one of them was E. B. Petrie, from Forsyth County, N. C.; said the order was extensive in that country; the other, Linville Price, deserter from the Thirty-fourth North Carolina Regiment, from Ashe County, N. C. I think valuable information may be gotten from these men. They are confined now in Castle Thunder.

JNO. B. WILLIAMS.
THOS. MCGILL.

[Indorsement.]

NOVEMBER 9, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded to Honorable Secretary of War.

I. H. CARRINGTON,
Provost-Marshal.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., November 8, 1864.

The PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

SIR: I have received a resolution adopted by the House of Representatives on the 14th of June, 1864, and referred by Your Excellency to this Department, requesting the President "to transmit to the House at the commencement of the next session a tabular statement showing the product in each State of the 'tax in kind' for the year 1863, said statement to exhibit the quantity of each article paid by the several States, the aggregate quantity contributed by all the States, and the value thereof, estimated as in cases of impressment." In response, I have the honor to transmit herewith a letter and tabular statement prepared by Lieut. Col. Larkin Smith, assistant quartermaster-general, in charge of the tax in kind, with the approval of the Quartermaster-General, giving the information called for by the House.*

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES OF ALABAMA,
Montgomery, Ala., November 8, 1864.

General S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: Herewith I forward copies of a communication from Governor Watts and my reply thereto; also copies of a note of inquiry from the commandant of conscripts and my response thereto, as well also a printed copy of a general order issued by Governor Watts, dated October 21, 1864.† These papers are forwarded as information and for such action as to the Department may seem proper. I shall obey the orders given me, meeting force with force.

I am, general, very respectfully, &c.,

J. M. WITHERS,
Major-General.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT OF ALABAMA,
Montgomery, Ala., November 8, 1864.

General J. M. WITHERS:

DEAR SIR: I learn that some of your enrolling officers have been taking by force officers of the State, holding not only my certificates, but those of Colonel Lockhart, commandant of conscripts. This state of things cannot long exist without a conflict between the Confederate and State authorities. I shall be compelled to protect my State officers with all the forces of the State at my command. I hope you will see the importance of preventing such a condition of things by instructing your enrolling officers as to their duties. I did not expect to be under the necessity of writing to you on this subject after the conversation with me ten days since. I shall be pleased to hear from you on this subject.

Very respectfully,

T. H. WATTS,
Governor of Alabama.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES OF ALABAMA,
Montgomery, November 8, 1864.

His Excellency THOMAS H. WATTS,

Governor of Alabama:

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of this date in which you state that you "learn that some of your (my) enrolling officers have been taking by force officers of the State holding, not only my (your) certificates, but those of Colonel Lockhart, commandant of conscripts." As you do not specify any instance in which force has been used by enrolling officers to put "officers of the State" in Confederate service, I am left without the information indispensable to instituting such investigation as would enable me to correct abuses, if any exist, and, if not, to the giving you correct explanations. No instructions have been given to enrolling officers not required by orders and instructions forwarded to me by the War Department. My personal feelings and my sense of policy and duty have united in making me most anxious to perpetuate the most frank and cordial co-operation with you in the discharge of the duties assigned me. For this purpose I have deferred to your wishes whenever I had the discretion to do so, and when I have had no discretion the subject of difference has been promptly referred to the War Department. Thus, in reference to the instructions to hold all persons liable to the Confederate service between the ages of seventeen and fifty years, and not to recognize the claims to exemption by any of these, should such claims be based on elections to State officers occurring subsequently to the 17th of February last, your communication was immediately forwarded to the Department. As no response has been received and no change in my instructions given, you know too well the obligations of an officer to suppose that I would hold a commission and fail or refuse to obey the orders given me.

* See p. 800.

† Order not found.

In the conversation to which you allude there were three subjects to which I called your attention, and on which I thought there was at last a full agreement. The first was as to State officers, and to prevent conflict I requested to be furnished with a list of those pronounced by you indispensable and therefore exempt. No such list has been received and hence no specific instructions could be given by me. The second was as to persons liable to service in the reserve who had avoided that service by joining militia companies. The third was as to parties between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years in militia companies whose furloughs and details had been revoked and who were therefore liable to general service. In reference to each of these classes I understood that you would issue orders to have them turned over to the enrolling officers. Yet from your note in reference to Captain Stark's company I was induced to believe that you still contended for the right to retain both classes in your militia companies so long as they were considered on duty. You cannot regret any conflict between State and Confederate States authority more than I do, yet you must recollect that whilst I hold a commission I can only exercise such discretion as is given me. That when none is given me I must carry out orders, and in doing so that I am in duty bound to use such force as may be absolutely necessary to insure success. Permit me, then, to suggest that in all cases where no discretion is given and in which there is possibility of conflict you address yourself to the Confederate Government, which, like the State government, is not so restricted.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
J. M. WITHERS,
Major-General.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

OFFICE COMMANDANT OF CONSCRIPTS,
Montgomery, Ala., November 8, 1864.

Capt. JOHN C. BURCH,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Hdqrs. Reserves, Alabama:

Please inform me if paragraph V, General Orders, No. 11, is intended as a revocation of all certificates of exemption as State officers heretofore granted by the commandants of conscripts upon the certificate of His Excellency the Governor of Alabama, where such certificates are held by persons between the ages of seventeen and fifty years, and where the parties have been elected or appointed to such State offices since the 17th of February, 1864.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. C. LOCKHART,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Commandant.

[Inclosure No. 4.]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVES,
Montgomery, November 8, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel LOCKHART,

Commandant of Conscripts:

COLONEL: In response to your communication of this date inquiring as to the intention of paragraph V, General Orders, No. 11, issued from these headquarters, I am directed by the major-general commanding to say that the Secretary of War has decided that "all men between seventeen and fifty were enrolled by the act of 17th of February, 1864." He also decided in the case of Andrew J. Perry, from Lowndes County:

If this party has been elected a justice of the peace since the 17th of February he is not entitled to exemption.

From this you will perceive that certificates of exemption to persons between seventeen and fifty years of age claiming to be State officers who have been elected since February 17, 1864, are inoperative and void. They avail nothing to protect persons holding them from being put into the Confederate service.

Respectfully,

JNO. C. BURCH,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

RICHMOND, VA., November 9, 1864.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

I herewith transmit for your consideration a communication from the Secretary of War,* showing that a dangerous conspiracy exists in some of the counties of Southwestern Virginia and in the neighboring portions of North Carolina and Tennessee, which it is found impracticable to suppress by the ordinary course of law. The facts are so fully exhibited by the report and accompanying papers, herewith submitted, that I consider it unnecessary to repeat them or to do more than invite your early attention to disclosures upon which I deem it my duty to recommend the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus in order that full efficacy may be given to the military power for the repression of the evil.

---

*See p. 802.

It may be proper here to add that after the expiration of the term for which the writ was suspended serious embarrassment was encountered, particularly at Mobile, Wilmington, and Richmond, on account of the inability of the military authorities to arrest and hold suspected persons against whom the testimony was sufficient to give full assurance that they were spies or holding treasonable communication with the enemy, though legal proof could not be adduced to secure their commitment and conviction by the courts either because of the character of the evidence or of the necessity for concealing the sources of information, which were not infrequently within the enemy's lines.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

MONTGOMERY, November 9, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

Unless you interfere there will be a conflict between the Confederate and State authorities. Officers of the State cannot be conscribed without the consent of the State. I learn that your enrolling officers have instructions to enroll officers of the State who have been elected since the 17th of February, 1864. I deny such right and will resist it with all the forces of the State. The police officers of Selma have been enrolled by force. These officers are indispensable to the administration of the State government. General Withers says he has no discretion. An early reply requested.

T. H. WATTS,
Governor of Alabama.

---

RICHMOND, VA., November 9, 1864.

His Excellency Governor WILLIAM SMITH:

GOVERNOR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 24th ultimo, covering a copy of the resolutions passed at a meeting of the Governors of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi, held at Augusta, Ga., October 17, 1864,* and am,

Very respectfully and truly, yours,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

RICHMOND, VA., November 9, 1864.

Maj. THOMAS HUDSON,
Commandant of Conscripts, Enterprise, Miss.:

MY DEAR SIR: I have received your letter of September 29, and found pleasure in complying with the request which it conveyed by assigning you to duty as commandant of conscripts for the State of Mississippi as well as of the camp at Enterprise. You need no assurance of my friendly interest in you, and I trust that the country will receive from your energy and zeal in this new position all the benefits which your past services entitle us to expect.

Very respectfully and truly, yours,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

* See p. 735.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., November 10, 1864.

Governor T. H. WATTS,
Montgomery, Ala.:

Officers of the State of Alabama, certified by you to be necessary to State administration, are exempt. Officers of the police of Selma are, I suppose, not considered as State officers. Cannot the courts decide? I only wish to enforce the laws, and deprecate conflict with the authorities of the State.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
 WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., November 10, 1864.

Maj. GARNETT ANDREWS,
Asst. Adj. Gen., General Gardner's Headquarters:

MAJOR: In reply to your application I am instructed by the Honorable Secretary of War to say that your original authority "to enlist a battalion of infantry from among the foreigners now prisoners of war at Millen, Andersonville, and other points in Georgia" is enlarged to the extent that you are now authorized to effect such enlistments among the same class of prisoners confined in any of the military prisons under the control of Brigadier-General Gardner.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
 JNO. BLAIR HOGE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Judge Campbell wishes to see you with reference to an officer whom he recommends to be connected with your proposed organization.

J. B. H.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., November 12, 1864.

Brig. Gen. W. L. BRANDON,
Commanding Reserves of Mississippi, Enterprise, Miss.:

GENERAL: Your letter of the 19th ultimo, addressed to the Adjutant-General, has been referred to me. I regret seriously that any difference of opinion exists between the Governor of Mississippi and yourself in relation to the liability of men to military service under the laws of conscription, especially that which directs the organization of the reserves.

I deprecate any conflict with the State authorities on this or any other subject, but as head of this Department and an officer acting under Confederate authority I am bound to administer and enforce the acts of Congress according to their fair and just intendment. Those acts being, as I am bound to consider, and as I believe they undoubtedly are, constitutional, form a part of the supreme law of the land and are obligatory upon all, not less on the State authorities than those of the Confederacy. By those acts all persons of the military age prescribed are placed at once in the service of the Confederacy. They cannot, therefore, longer be the subjects of enrollment or enlistment for State troops. Doubt might exist in regard to the operation of the law upon such troops as had been previously constituted, in the language of the Constitution, troops of war by any State, but none can arise as to those who had not been previously recruited or who were mere militia. All such, therefore, are liable to conscription, or to organization as reserves, according to their ages, and the plain duty is incumbent, both upon this Department and its officers, to proceed with all courtesy and respect, but with firmness, to execute the law. As far as I can perceive, the organizations formed by the Governor of Mississippi are purely those of militia. They cannot, therefore, present any claim for exemption from the operation of these laws, and however reluctant to contravene the views of the Governor, I see no alternative for the Department or yourself but to proceed to claim the members liable to service with the Army or the reserves. You will, of course, do this in a manner as conciliatory and respectful as may be compatible with the performance of duty, explaining to the Governor the construction placed by the Department upon the laws and your instructions in respect to them.

Very respectfully,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 271. } Richmond, November 14, 1864.
* * * * *

II. The Thirtieth Georgia Battalion, Lieut. Col. Andrew Young, with the addition of the four companies raised under authority of the War Department where the conscript act could not be enforced, will constitute the Eleventh Regiment Georgia Cavalry.

* * * * *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. GEORGIA RESERVES AND MIL. DIST. OF GEORGIA,
Macon, Ga., November 14, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: I am here for a single day to attend to the business of my office, and shall return in the morning to the command in front of Atlanta. I was gratified to receive your letter* approving my course and policy in reference to the militia, and beg to say that nothing has been done or said to yield the claim of the Confederate Government upon the detailed men when the militia is not engaged in active service.

I am, very respectfully, yours, &c.,

HOWELL COBB,
Major-General, &c.

HEADQUARTERS,
Petersburg, November 14, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: Brig. Gen. J. G. Martin, who has been on duty at Salisbury for some days, informs me from the inquiries he made he thinks 2,000 or 3,000 foreigners now held there as prisoners of war could be enlisted in our service. He also states that authority for this purpose has been given to several persons by the War Department, and that the company officers are to be elected by the members of the company. If they are taken from among themselves I fear they may be neither effective nor reliable. How would it answer to organize these men into the Regular Army, with officers appointed by the President, and the whole under one good officer? The men could then be placed in camp, instructed, and disciplined. By the spring they would make a valuable addition to the Army. General Martin thinks that by proper management this force could be increased to 7,000 or 8,000. The subject is respectfully referred to you for consideration.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

R. E. LEE,
General.

---

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES, MISSISSIPPI,
Enterprise, November 15, 1864.

His Excellency President JEFFERSON DAVIS,
Richmond, Va.:

MR. PRESIDENT: I have the honor to bring a matter to your immediate attention, which I deem to be of the most vital importance at this crisis of our affairs. Early in September last Governor Clark, of this State, issued a proclamation calling for six-months' volunteers. As he did not restrict the officers, authorized by his order to raise these companies, to the militia, I addressed him a communication to know whether he proposed to admit the men of the military age or of the reserve classes into this organization of State volunteers. He answered, "I propose to receive volunteers for six months without regard to age," against which I protested and telegraphed his answer (a copy of which is inclosed, marked A) to the Department, and asked for instructions. I adopted this course, because I was unofficially informed by Judge Fisher, now a colonel of one of the State volunteer regiments, that the Governor had had a correspondence with the Honorable Secretary of War on the subject, and that he did not dissent from his right to take these men into his volunteer organization. Governor Clark reiterated nearly the same to me at a subsequent interview on the subject, viz: Though the Secretary did not concur, yet he made no objection to his right to the men of all ages. I brought the matter to the attention of Lieutenant-General Taylor, and he replied that he had said to Governor Clark it made no difference who got the men out, as they were to be assigned to the command of the officers of the C. S. Army in the field.

I dissented from the general's views and told him it had operated very prejudicially both to the business of conscription and the enrollment of the reserves. Previously to the Governor's action the men were enrolling themselves quite rapidly. Now force has to be used to compel them, and as all the organized regiments of cavalry of the reserves were at the front, the business of conscription and enrollment had in a great measure ceased.

This organization will undoubtedly be a weak one, for the reason that the men who were rushing into it were those who had skulked the service from the beginning of the war. They will not be amenable to the courts-martial of the C. S. Army, and their courts-martial would be composed of officers of same class, who would sympathize with the men, and their findings and execution of the sentences would be a farce. Neither discipline nor good order could be preserved and the troops would be very inefficient, and I fear when they come to act against the enemy will disgrace both themselves and their State.

In opposition to the Governor's claim, I replied to him, the Constitution empowered the Congress to provide an army for the common defense. The States had accepted the act of conscription and it was now being carried into effect to provide and sustain such a force. If he was right in regard to his powers under the Constitution the Governors of the States could defeat the measure, and the Government of the Confederate States of America would be powerless to provide an army for the general defense, for the men liable to conscription or enrollment would go into the State service in preference to being enlisted into the general service. As an evidence of the truth of this they are now going into that organization, even after being enrolled by the conscript officers, instead of reporting to the camp of instruction. And it will be very difficult to get them out; to effect which I issued a general order to have every man reported who has taken this course, with the intention to assign them to the general service.

After having telegraphed the Department in regard to this matter I made a written report, forwarding with it copies of all papers to General Cooper and asking for instructions. Two months have now passed without my receiving instructions. Deeming it a matter of too much importance to be passed over, I have presumed on your indulgence to bring it to your immediate attention. I feel seriously embarrassed, for I fear it will operate a failure of my exertions to get the men in the field. I am anxious to do my whole duty in the position you have done me so much honor by placing me, and will carry out your instructions to the best of my abilities.

I have the honor to be, with great regard, your obedient servant,

W. L. BRANDON,

General, Comdg. Reserve Forces of the State of Mississippi.

[Indorsement.]

DECEMBER 10, 1864.

Secretary of War for perusal and remarks.

J. D.

[Inclosure.]

A.

MACON, September 20, 1864.

Brig. Gen. W. L. BRANDON,

Enterprise, Miss.:

GENERAL: The State of Mississippi has to defend herself in future. For this defense I propose to receive volunteers for six months without regard to age. If mustered into State service previous to enrollment or conscription, I have no doubt of my right to them as "troops of war" of the State.

I am, general, very respectfully,

CHAS. CLARK,

Governor of Mississippi.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,

Richmond, Va., November 17, 1864.

General R. E. LEE,

Commanding Army of Northern Virginia:

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 14th instant, and to thank you for the suggestions contained in it relative to the enlistments for our Army of the foreigners among the prisoners of war held by us. For some time past my attention has been attracted to that mode of recruiting, and I have given to officers supposed to be competent, in several instances, permits to raise battalions, directing them to prefer Irish and French, and to enlist no citizens of the United States. The latter, especially native born, I hold in great distrust. I preferred to form battalions to regiments, because I doubted the expediency of having so many of this material together as a regiment required.

While authorizing the formation of these few battalions as an experiment, I all the time preferred, and directed the officers of prisons to promote, general enlistments and the distribution of the men enlisted among the regiments of our different armies, selecting, as far as practicable, those which had been originally composed of foreign material. I have, too, authorized several officers, whose commands had been greatly depleted, to recruit for them from this source. Among others, General York, while wounded here, has obtained this permission and proposes to visit the prisons, taking with him one or more Catholic chaplains, whose influence, he thinks, may be profitably exercised upon those of the same religious persuasion. I shall be pleased to give similar authority to recruit to any officers in your army whom you may recommend, and who are willing in that way to replenish their commands.

You have, I believe, a Virginia battalion, originally composed of Irish, now greatly reduced by the casualties of service, which might, probably, in that way be re-established in numbers and efficiency. I have applied to Congress to give the power of appointing officers whenever new organizations are formed from such material. I presume this power will be granted to the Executive. In the absence of such power, with one battalion alone, first organized, I resorted to the form of an election, the men readily accepting and electing such officers as were presented to them; but I considered the precedent a bad one, and that it would be dangerous to allow such a privilege to continue, as in filling vacancies hereafter they might really exercise the privilege of selection for which they would be qualified neither by intelligence nor trustworthiness.

The suggestion made by you to enlist these men for the Regular Army will be submitted to the President; but as we have not the requisite officers of the Confederate Army, and serious objection is entertained to the permanent appointment of such officers during the war, I think it preferable to obtain, if practicable, the power of appointing from Congress, and to enlist for the Provisional Army.

Very respectfully,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

---

RICHMOND, VA., November 17, 1864.

General A. R. WRIGHT and OTHERS,
Milledgeville, Ga.:

Yours of the 11th received, with copy of resolutions inclosed.* I had no previous knowledge of them. The first and second are truths often declared; the third, if fairly construed, is but the announcement of our theory of government, but under existing circumstances its terms might suggest conclusions injurious to the recognition of the compact between the Confederate States. The rest are regarded by me as objectionable, if not dangerous. Will reply more fully by mail.

---

* Neither letter nor inclosure found, but see résumé in Davis to Wright et al., next, post.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

RICHMOND, VA., November 17, 1864.

The Honorable Senators of Georgia, Messrs. A. R. WRIGHT, T. L. GUERRY, J. M. CHAMBERS, THOMAS E. LLOYD, FRED. H. WEST, and RO. B. NISBET:

GENTLEMEN: I answered by telegram your letter of the 11th instant this morning, as requested, and now respectfully comply with your desire that I should express my views on the subject to which you invite my attention. In forwarding to me the resolutions introduced in the House of Representatives of Georgia by Mr. Stephens, of Hancock, you state that you are not inclined to favor the passage of these or any similar resolutions, believing them to have a tendency to create divisions among ourselves and to unite and strengthen our enemies, but that it is to assert in Milledgeville that I favor such action on the part of the States, and would be pleased to see Georgia cast her influence in that way. You are kind enough to say that if this be true, and that if the passage of these or similar resolutions would in the slightest degree aid or assist me in bringing the war to a successful and speedy close, you will give them your earnest and hearty support. I return you my cordial thanks for this expression of confidence, but assure you that there is no truth in the assertions which you mention, and I presume that you will already have seen by the closing part of my annual message, which must have reached you since the date of your letter, that I have not contemplated the use of any other agency in treating for peace than that established by the Constitution of the Confederate States. That agency seems to me to be well adapted to its purpose and free from the injurious consequences that would follow any other means that have been suggested.

The objection to separate State action which you present in your letter appears to be so conclusive as to admit no reply. The immediate and inevitable tendency of such distinct action by each State is to create discordant instead of united counsels; to suggest to our enemies the possibility of a dissolution of the Confederacy, and to encourage them by the spectacle of our divisions to more determined and united action against us. They would readily adopt the false idea that some of the States of the Confederacy are disposed to abandon their sister States and make separate terms of peace for themselves; and if such a suspicion, however unfounded, were once engendered among our own people, it would be destructive of that spirit of mutual confidence and support which forms our chief reliance for success in the maintenance of our cause.

When the proposal of separate State action was first mooted it appeared to me so impracticable, so void of any promise of good, that I gave no heed to the proposal; but upon its adoption by citizens whose position and ability give weight to the expression of their opinions, I was led to a serious consideration of the subject. My first impressions have not been changed by reflection.

If all the States of the two hostile federations are to meet in convention, it is plain that such a meeting can only take place after an agreement as to the time, place, and terms on which they are to meet.

Now, without discussing the minor, although not trifling, difficulties of agreeing as to time and place, it is certain that the States would never consent to a convention without a previous agreement as to the terms on which they were to meet. The proposed convention must meet on the basis either that no State should, against its own will, be bound by the decision of the convention, or that it should be so bound. But it is plain that an agreement on the basis that no State should be bound without its consent by the result of the deliberations, would be an abandonment on the part of the North of its pretended right of coercion; would be an absolute recognition of the independence of the several States of the Confederacy; would be, in a word, so complete a concession of the rightfulness of our cause that the most visionary cannot hope for such an agreement in advance of the meeting of a convention. The only other possible basis of meeting is that each State should agree beforehand to be bound by the decision of the convention, and such an agreement is but another form of submission to Northern dominion, as we well know that in such a convention we should be outnumbered nearly two to one. On the very threshold of the scheme proposed, therefore, we are met by an obstacle which cannot be removed. Is not the impracticable character of the project apparent?

You will observe that I leave entirely out of view the suggestion that a convention of all the States of both federations should be held by common consent without any previous understanding as to the effect of its decisions; should meet merely to debate and pass resolutions that are to bind no one. It is not supposed that this can really be the meaning attached to the proposal by those who are active in its support, although the resolutions to which you invite my attention declare that the function of such a convention would be simply to propose a plan of peace, with the consent of the two belligerents; or, in other words, to act as negotiators in treating for peace. This part of the scheme is not intelligible to me. If the convention is only held with the consent of the two belligerents, that consent cannot be obtained without negotiation. The plan then would resolve itself into a scheme that the two Governments should negotiate an agreement for the appointment of negotiators to make proposals for a treaty. It seems much more prompt and simple to negotiate for peace at once than to negotiate for the appointment of negotiators, who are to meet without power to do anything but make proposals.

If the Government of the United States is willing to make peace, it will treat for peace directly. If unwilling, it will refuse to consent to the convention of States. The author of these resolutions and those who concur in his views appear to me to commit the radical error of supposing that the obstacle to obtaining the peace which we all desire consists in the difficulty of finding proper agencies for negotiating, so that the whole scope of the resolutions ends in nothing but suggesting that if the enemy will treat, the best agency would be State delegates to a convention; whereas the whole and only obstacle is that the enemy will not treat at all, or entertain any other proposition than that we should submit to their yoke, acknowledge that we are criminals, and appeal to their mercy for pardon.

After this statement of objections it may appear superfluous to add others of less gravity, but as you invite a full expression of my views I will add that history is replete with instances of the interminable difficulties and delays which attend the attempt to negotiate on great and conflicting interests when the parties to the negotiation are numerous. If this has been the case where the parties possessed full powers to conclude a treaty, what can we hope from an assemblage of negotiators from thirty or forty States who, in the midst of an exasperating warfare, are to meet without power to conclude anything? In the history of our own country we find that in a time of profound peace, when the most cordial brotherhood of sentiment existed, and when a long and bloody war had been brought to a triumphant close, it required two years to assemble a convention and bring its deliberations to an end, and another to procure the ratification of their labors. With such a war as the present in progress, the views of the large assemblage of negotiators proposed would undergo constant change, according to the vicissitudes of the struggle and the attempt to secure concordant views would soon be abandoned and leave the parties more embittered than ever—less hopeful of the possibility of successful negotiation.

Again, how is the difficulty resulting from the conflicting pretensions of the two belligerents in regard to several of the States to be overcome? Is it supposed that Virginia would enter into a convention with a delegation from what our enemies choose to term the "State of West Virginia," and thus recognize an insolent and violent dismemberment of her territory? Or would the United States consent that "West Virginia" should be deprived of her pretensions to equal rights after having formally admitted her as a State and allowed her to vote at a Presidential election? Who would send a delegation from Louisiana, Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri? The enemy claims to hold the government of those States, while we assert them to be members of the Confederacy. Would delegates be received from both sides? If so, there would soon be a disruption of the convention. If delegates are received from neither side, then a number of the States most vitally interested in the result would remain unrepresented, and what value could be attached to the mere recommendations of a body of negotiators under such circumstances? Various other considerations suggest themselves, but enough has been said to justify my conclusion that the proposal of separate State action is unwise, impracticable, and offers no prospect of good to counterbalance its manifold injurious consequences to the cause of our country.

Very respectfully, yours,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

[NOVEMBER 17, 1864.—For Cooper to Taylor, authorizing a call for the reserves to resist Sherman's army, see Series I, Vol. XLV, Part I, p. 1218.]

---

SUBSISTENCE DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., November 17, 1864.

Maj. R. J. MOSES,

Chief Commissary of Subsistence:

MAJOR: Your letter of 4th instant has been received. The act of Congress of March 26, 1863, to regulate impressments (see General Orders, No. 37, 1863) made a discrimination between the owners who produced or raised the article which was the subject of impressment, or who held it for consumption, and those who held it for sale, in respect of the mode of ascertaining the price or just compensation to be paid by the impressing officer. The first section of the act prescribes the manner in which the price to be paid to the owner of the first class shall be ascertained, viz, by appraisement made by persons appointed from the vicinage. The sixth section establishes a permanent board to fix rates at which the property held by the other class should be valued.

The act of April 27, 1863 (see General Orders, No. 53, 1863), authorized an appeal by the impressing officer from the decision of the appraisers to this permanent board. This act was adopted in consequence of the extravagant appraisement made by vicinage appraisers.

The supreme court of Georgia in the year 1863 declared that the schedule rates established by the permanent board did not furnish prima facie evidence of value, and set aside the impressments made under the sixth section of the act. Their opinion seemed to be that the value should be ascertained at the time of the appraisement of the particular article impressed.

The General Orders of the War Department (No. 161, 1863) will show that the Department yielded to the opinion of the supreme court, and allowed a vicinage appraisement in all cases. The principle of that order was incorporated into the act of Congress of 16th February last, published in General Orders, No. 30, of this year. That act allows the vicinage appraisement in all cases, and allows an appeal to the permanent board to be made by either party, and empowers the board to hear testimony as to value. The appointment of a board of appraisers for such a purpose is believed to be constitutional. That board is not confined to schedule rates in any case, but is to decide upon the question of value as an original question, and if requisite they can take testimony for the purpose of informing their judgment upon the matter.

I would call your attention particularly to the certificate to be used in the case of the approval or disapproval of the appraisement on the award of the appraisers. In case of disapproval the certificate should be, "This appraisement is not accepted as fair and just, but the same is objected to because the value assessed is excessive and affords more than a just compensation for the property, and therefore an appeal is made to the appraisers under the act of Congress of February 16, 1864." (See General Orders, No. 30, current series.)

This opinion of the state of the case is derived from the highest judicial authority in the Confederacy, and will, I think, warrant your making impressments in accordance with circular referred to below.

The question of appeal from the award of the vicinage appraisers is fully discussed in the circular,* of which a copy was forwarded to you with my last letter.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. B. NORTHROP,
Commissary-General of Subsistence.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, ENGINEER BUREAU,
Richmond, Va., November 19, 1864.

General R. E. LEE,
Commanding Army of Northern Virginia:

GENERAL: I am directed by the Honorable Secretary of War to write to you in reference to an organization for the negro force it is proposed to employ as laborers with the armies of the Confederacy. After some reflection I have presented the following outline to the War Department, and I would now respectfully ask you to consider it, and propose such modifications and alterations as your greater experience and better judgment may dictate.

---

* See September 5, p. 622.

The unit of the organization to be a gang or working party of 100 negroes under a "manager," assisted by three "overseers," first, second, and third. Eight of these gangs to be placed under a "superintendent," forming a force 800 strong, corresponding to a battalion. Three of these to be under a "director," making a working party or body 2,400 strong; the entire force serving with an army to be under one, two, or more directors, according to the number employed, and the whole to be under the general supervision and control of the chief engineer of each army. This last feature is advised because the negroes can be employed as organizations in the construction of defenses, in repairing roads and bridges, and in doing much of the work appertaining to the pioneer; and for like reason the whole negro force called into service should be placed under the general supervision and direction of the Engineer Bureau.

The negroes required to serve as teamsters and in other work not connected with the engineer service will be detailed in such numbers as may be required, but their names will still be borne on the rolls of the gang to which they belong. This feature is thought to be important in order that there should be some one to look after the negroes and take an interest in their welfare at all times. It is expected this will be done by the "managers" and "overseers." For the supplying of the negroes with clothing, camp equipage, rations, &c., it is proposed that a "purveyor" be appointed for each working party under a "director" with three assistant purveyors, being one for each party under a "superintendent." The purveyor to be a bonded agent, and if necessary, the assistant purveyors to be bonded also. Perhaps quartermasters already in the service might be assigned to these duties. For medical service, one surgeon or physician for each superintendent; for keeping the records and issuing instructions it is proposed that two clerks be allowed to each director and one to each superintendent. It is expected to call into service as fast as possible the 20,000 male slaves authorized by the act of February, 1864 (see General Orders, No. 32, for 1864), and to have this service completed by the Bureau of Conscription. The negroes when collected under the provisions of this law to be placed under temporary managers or guards detailed from conscript camps or from the reserves, and when collected in gangs of 50 to 100 to be forwarded under their charge to the armies or stations to which they may be assigned, exact records to be kept by the enrolling officers of the negroes taken into service, embracing the information usual on muster-rolls with the addition of the name of owner; a proper list to accompany each gang when forwarded to service, from which regular muster-rolls can be prepared; and also descriptive lists when details are made for labor outside of the engineer service. When the gangs first arrive at the places where they are to be employed they should be attached temporarily to the engineer troops and put to work at once under the officers commanding these troops.

When the number amounts to 800 they should be formed into eight full gangs of 100 each, organized as hereinbefore indicated and placed under a superintendent. Thus the negroes will be useful as laborers from the moment they are delivered. That these laborers when regularly organized may be systematically furnished with rations, clothing, and other necessities, provision returns and requisitions will be prepared by the managers or overseers, whose certificates shall be considered of the same effect as those of company officers, and it will be the duty of the directors to examine and approve said requisitions, &c., and such approval will be the authority for the purveyors and assistant purveyors to make the issues called for. The manager will be made responsible for all property issued to the gang of 100 men under his charge. Field transportation to be furnished to these organizations of laborers in such quantity as the resources of the country will admit of. For the better regulation and efficiency of the labor as contemplated the chief engineer of each army should assign a field officer of engineer troops to inspect, supervise, and muster the organizations and to make assignments of working parties in such way and manner as may be ordered by the commanding general through his chief engineer, and it will be made the duty of the same field officer to see that details for labor outside of the engineer service be made promptly when ordered by the commanding general.

It is contemplated that the Quartermaster's Department should furnish clothing and other supplies usually provided by that department to this negro force; that the owners should be paid by this same department, and that the Commissary Department should furnish rations. It is proposed that this negro force be mustered as in case of troops, by the field officer appointed for that purpose, and duplicate muster-rolls forwarded through the chief engineer of the army to the Engineer Bureau. Pay-rolls to be prepared at the same time and forwarded through the chief quartermaster of the army to the Quartermaster-General, who at the expiration of each year shall send a suitable officer into each State to meet at certain convenient designated points all owners, who shall appear personally or by attorney, to receive payment for past services rendered by their slaves. In case of the loss of any negro by death, desertion, or otherwise, notice thereof shall be prepared in triplicate by the manager or overseer, showing the time and manner of his loss, to be forwarded through the chief engineer to the Engineer Bureau. This notice to be upon a simple and convenient printed form to be furnished by the Engineer Bureau; careful entries of such casualties to be made by the manager upon the muster-rolls of the gang. The managers and overseers should be selected as far as possible from the class of men accustomed to manage negroes on farms, plantations, and works of civil improvement. Careful measures should be taken, too, to look into the qualifications and past experience of each one, and this might be accomplished probably by assigning the duty to some engineer officers serving in each of the States; the officer for Virginia and North Carolina to be named by the chief engineer of your army. The officers for the coasts of South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida to be named by the chief engineer of General Hardee's department. The officers for the Division of the West to be named by the chief engineer of that division. Should these managers and overseers prove incompetent, power to be vested in the commanders of the respective armies to return them to duty with the reserves. If guilty of malfeasance or malpractice, they should be at once ordered into the ranks for general service.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. GILMER,

Major-General and Chief of Engineer Bureau.

[NOVEMBER 19, 1864.—For Hartridge, Echols, et al., to the people of Georgia, urging that “every man fly to arms” to resist Sherman’s army, see Series I, Vol. XLIV, p. 869.]

[NOVEMBER 19, 1864.—For proclamation of Governor Brown, ordering a levy en masse of white males between ages of sixteen and fifty-five years, see Series I, Vol. LIII, p. 375.]

WAR DEPARTMENT, NITER AND MINING BUREAU,
Richmond, November 20, 1864.

Col. I. M. St. JOHN,
Chief of Bureau:

COLONEL: Your questions on the iron service are hereinafter replied to in their order:

First. What furnaces continue in blast in Virginia?

Eighteen furnaces remain in blast in Virginia, or rather have been able to get in blast at a late day, as follows: Marion Magnetic, Smyth County; Beauregard, Grey Eagle, Barren Springs, Wythe County; Lucy Selina (worked by Government), Rockbridge County; Boyd’s Furnace, Botetourt County; Amherst, Amherst County; Estelino, Augusta County; Victoria, Louisa County; Roaring Run, Alleghany County; Union, Patrick County; Liberty, Shenandoah County; Westham (worked by Government), Henrico County; Catawba, Rebecca, Botetourt County; Glenwood, Rockbridge County; Australia, Alleghany County; Caroline (will suspend under Order 82), Shenandoah County.

Very few of these eighteen furnaces have been able, however, to make a full blast. The want of labor and subsistence and the movements of the enemy have operated to prevent work for some time at all of them except three, and one of them has been twice burned by the enemy. They have not averaged more than a half blast, and some of them must cease work unless the contractors are allowed greater facilities for securing supplies.

Second. What available furnaces are out of blast?

Thirteen furnaces are now out of blast, and for the following reasons: Mount Hope, Wythe County, want of labor and supplies; Graham’s, Wythe County, want of labor and stock; California, Rockbridge, ore bank exhausted; Buena Vista, Rockbridge, burned by the enemy; Elizabeth, Augusta, burned by the enemy; Catharine, Spotsylvania, burned by the enemy; Mount Torry, Augusta, burned by the enemy; Columbia, Shenandoah, burned by the enemy (Order 82 would have suspended); Mount Vernon, Augusta, burned by the enemy (Order 82 would have suspended); Page Iron Works, Shenandoah, suspended by Order 82 after January 1, 1865. Three of these thirteen could not work for lack of labor, and three had to suspend under General Orders, No. 82. Also the Caroline furnace, though still in blast, will soon suspend under this order, a few men being only left to work up the stock on hand. The Elizabeth, Grace, Cloverdale, Mount Torry, Buena Vista, and Catharine are being rebuilt, and if labor can be secured will probably work next year.

Third. What plan is adopted under order of chief of Bureau for the inspection of the furnaces?

The district superintendents are required to send from each furnace, if possible, a semi-monthly, but certainly a monthly, report of the following character:

Furnace report to ———.

Name of works.	In or out of blast.	Tons.			Week's stock on hand.	Force.				Remarks, &c.
		Per day.	At furnace.	Hauled and ready to ship.		Subject to military duty.	Exempt.	Negroes.	Total.

In addition to these reports an inspecting officer of special qualifications goes from furnace to furnace, as time will allow, and reports directly to the chief of Bureau upon the general management of the furnaces, their condition, and prospects.

Fourth. Compare furnace results in Virginia and Alabama, and state why at this late day the Alabama system of large furnaces cannot be applied in Virginia, giving instances of the scarcity of ore.

The Alabama furnaces have probably attained a higher daily yield than those in Virginia. In one case the Government furnace in Bibb County, Ala., averaged through the month thirteen tons of iron per day, and at another furnace I think an average of ten tons per day was attained for one month. Still, the difference of yield has not been so great as these cases would indicate. From many disturbing causes incident to war much time has been lost at the Alabama furnaces, and the daily average would scarcely exceed, if equal, four tons per day, which most of the Virginia furnaces aim to reach for such time as they can secure stock to keep in blast. The Alabama iron region is new, and all the furnace localities abound with ore and fuel, and private enterprise, aided in most cases by the Government, availing itself of modern information, has erected large and improved furnaces where fuel, ore, and subsistence are very abundant. The Virginia mineral region, on the other hand, has been worked for many years, and most of its furnaces are old, and hence small; but having been worked so long, fuel has become alarmingly scarce, and many furnaces have a most precarious supply of ore, this article being frequently hauled for miles in wagons—in one case as far as ten miles. Two of the largest furnaces in the State have been idle a long time for want of ore, the banks from which they have heretofore been supplied, and which were considered inexhaustible, having very suddenly given out. It is very doubtful whether the Westham Furnace can be continued in blast, for up to this time no ore bank has been found on the line of the canal which will supply the necessary ore. There are few, if any, mineral veins in Virginia, nearly all of its ores existing in pockets or detailed masses, the size and extent of which can only be ascertained by actual experiment; hence all mining is very precarious. Ore banks pronounced by the most experienced miners to be boundless have given out after a few months' work.

When ore happens to be abundant the wood has been nearly all cut, and no situation is now known to me in this State where stock—meaning fuel and ore—could be procured for a furnace to make ten tons of iron per day. But were the case otherwise, it would be impossible to maintain the force required for so large a furnace. Each furnace depends upon its own locality for supplies of bread and meat and forage, it being almost impossible to bring them from a distance in the present state of transportation, and no one neighborhood could support so large a force. The small furnaces find it extremely difficult to feed their laborers. If fuel, ore, and food were as convenient and abundant as in Alabama, the large furnace system would even now be adopted; but the scarcity of all these is thought to render it impracticable entirely. The present small furnaces of Virginia would afford an ample supply of iron if the service was placed upon a proper footing, as will be indicated below.

Fifth. State the working of the present plan of contracting for partial yield of furnace.

This plan has been found most advantageous in that while it secures to the Government one-half of all iron made at a very moderate price, it offers to contractors a great stimulus for the largest possible yield. It was absolutely essential that some iron should be put on the market to supply agricultural and other interests. The plan now pursued gives the Government one-half of all iron made at a price not much, if at all, above cost, and a preference over all other purchasers for the remaining half.

Sixth. State what essentials of labor, stock, and supplies must be demanded to guarantee a supply of iron for the next year.

The iron force was much too small before one-fifth of the men were taken away under General Orders, No. 82. These men must be replaced and an addition of 300 men fully be made to the previous force, with an increase of from 100 to 150 horses or mules. Should this labor be furnished promptly, and the service placed upon a proper footing before all army officers, but little apprehension need be felt for the iron supply, for all difficulties of fuel and ore will in that event be overcome. But it is absolutely essential that the iron masters shall have more support from the Government than heretofore. The manufacture of pig-iron in Virginia was a very hazardous enterprise, even before the war, and but two men are known to me who ever met with success. All the difficulties have been much increased by the war, and the much greater difficulty of securing supplies added to them. But all these could have been overcome if the iron masters had been properly protected against the interference of Government officers. Ample general orders exist on this subject, but they are not respected, and it has never been found possible to have any officer punished for their violation. It will suffice to mention one notable case where a quartermaster, Captain Hoof, of General Rosser's brigade, not only impressed supplies from the contractors, but from the Government furnaces, thereby causing the actual starvation of some of the furnace mules, and making it necessary to hire out the furnace labor to prevent a similar result. On hearing the facts the Secretary of War immediately ordered Captain Hoof to be relieved from duty and to report in Richmond, but this order, now some nine months old, has never been obeyed, and Captain H. remains on his original duty. The iron master is a necessity, and should be cherished as such, and allowed the same facilities for securing subsistence and forage as are enjoyed by commissaries and quartermasters; and his supplies once secured should not be touched for any other purpose. Unless this encouragement and protection is afforded the contractors will become disheartened and give up. They cannot possibly carry on their operations under the present system of protection, which exists only on paper.

Very respectfully, yours,

RICHARD MORTON,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

[Indorsement.]

NITER AND MINING BUREAU,
Richmond, Va., November 21, 1864.

Respectfully submitted to the Secretary of War in connection with views already presented. Especial attention is requested to the suspension of thirteen furnaces in Virginia, and to the cause of that suspension. For further information the officer directly in charge is directed (in handing this paper) to be prepared to answer all questions.

I. M. ST. JOHN,
Colonel and Chief of Bureau.

GENERAL ORDERS, }	ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 84. }	Richmond, Va., November 21, 1864.
*        *	*        *

IV. Detailed soldiers will not be transferred by officers with whom they are upon duty to other officers without authority from this office or from the general commanding the army to which the soldiers belong. Detailed conscripts will be transferred only by the authority of the chief of the Bureau of Conscription.

V. The telegraph will be used as economically as possible, and messages will not be sent by it without the approval of the commanding officer present. Where the telegram exceeds ten words, the voucher for its payment must embrace in his certificate that it was not for the personal benefit of the person by whom it was sent, and that it was necessary, and contained official business which could not be transacted by mail without detriment to the public service.

VI. Supplies collected or held by county or district agents for the benefit of soldiers' families are not liable to impressment.

VII. Paragraph XIII, General Orders, No. 34, current series, is amended to allow all retired soldiers who may enter any university, college, or school to draw their rations in kind at the nearest post.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

RICHMOND, VA., November 21, 1864.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

In response to your resolution of the 8th instant I herewith transmit a communication from the Secretary of War, which conveys the information requested relative to the act of June 14, 1864, "to provide and organize a general staff."

The seventh section of the act invests the Executive with the discretion which has been exercised. The eighth section, by restricting appointments, indicates the course which has been pursued in the attempt to ascertain with accuracy the number of officers in the several staff corps, so as to distribute them in accordance with the order from the Adjutant-General's Office, a copy of which is annexed, as well as to ascertain whether there are not supernumerary staff officers now in commission who should be discharged.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, November 17, 1864.

The PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES: -

SIR: I have received a copy of the following resolution, adopted by the House of Representatives on the 8th instant, and referred by Your Excellency to this Department:

Resolved, That the President be respectfully requested to inform the House whether any appointments have been made under the act entitled "An act to provide and organize a general staff for the armies in the field to serve during the war," approved June 14, 1864, and if not, why have not such appointments been made in pursuance of said act.

In response, I have the honor to inclose herewith a letter from the Adjutant-General, reporting that no appointments have been made under the act referred to. In addition to the explanation afforded by that report, showing the discretion vested in you by the act and the adequacy of previous regulations to meet the necessity of a staff organization, it may not be improper to advert to the fact that soon after the adjournment of Congress your attention was called by the chairman of the Military Committee of the Senate to the serious inconveniences which might result from the promotion of certain officers of the staff contemplated by that act, and the suggestion made that, in regard to them at least, it might be better not to enforce the law, as additional legislation would probably be attempted at the next session. This circumstance, it is believed, contributed to guide the discretion exercised under the act in not enforcing the same, as inconveniences would naturally have resulted from giving the rank contemplated to some portion of the staff and withholding it from others.

Very respectfully,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

[Sub-inclosure.]

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., November 15, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of communication from His Excellency the President, referred to me for report, containing copy of a resolution of the House of Representatives dated the 8th instant, and in these words:

Resolved, That the President be respectfully requested to inform this House whether any appointments have been made under the act entitled "An act to provide and organize a general staff for the armies in the field to serve during the war," approved 14th June, 1864, and if not, why have not such appointments been made in pursuance of said act.

In accordance with your instructions I have the honor to report that no appointments have been made under the act above recited.

The seventh section of the act is in these words:

The President is hereby authorized to reduce the number of officers authorized by this act to the staff of any general officer, or to increase the same when, in his opinion, the service will be benefited thereby.

On the 29th of April, 1864, prior to the passage of the act, the President caused to be issued from this office General Orders, No. 44 (a copy of which is inclosed),* prescribing the number of staff officers, not to exceed certain grades, which he deemed necessary to the several commands in the field. These orders have not been revoked, the President having, I presume, availed himself of the authority conferred in the seventh section of the act not to increase the number and rank of staff officers beyond the provisions of the orders. To carry out these orders the legislation prior to the act of the 14th of June is sufficient.

Permit me to add that I have heard no complaint from any quarter that the number and rank of the staff officers provided for by general orders are not sufficient for all the purposes of commands in the field.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

RICHMOND, June 15, 1864.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:

DEAR SIR: In considering the recent acts of Congress in regard to the Quartermaster's and Commissary Departments and the general staff bill, I think it is to be regretted that it was not provided in both these measures that the President might, if he thought proper, make all appointments above the rank of major with temporary rank only.

The appointment of quartermasters with the rank of colonel will, as the department is now organized, cause them to rank every officer in the department except one or two. In the Commissary Department they will rank all but one. This should be avoided if possible, as it would be a great injustice to many valuable and meritorious officers.

I think we can remedy it at the next session of Congress, and I take the liberty of recommending that these appointments may be delayed until this fault in these measures can be corrected.

As you are authorized to assign officers to these positions, I cannot see that the public interest can suffer by adopting this course.

Very respectfully, your friend,

EDWARD SPARROW.

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
APPOINTMENT BUREAU,
November 12, 1864.

Official copy.

ED. A. PALFREY,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

On the above were the following indorsements:
Secretary of War for attention and remarks.

J. D.

* Omitted, but see p. 352.

JUNE 23, 1864.

Respectfully returned to the President.

The suggestions of Mr. Sparrow, especially in view of his position as chairman of the Military Committee of the Senate, are entitled to weight. Some grave inconveniences will certainly result from the increase in rank required by the staff bill, and if assurance can be felt that the amendment proposed will meet the approval of the Congress at its next session it would be expedient to fill the positions for the present by assignment and abstain from increasing rank permanently, as proposed by the act.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary.

JUNE 25, 1864.

Adjutant-General for future reference, &amp;c.

J. D.

JUNE 28, 1864.

File for future reference and keeping the subject in mind, with the understanding that no action will be taken on the general staff bill of June 14, 1864, without special instructions.

S. C.

NOVEMBER 15, 1864.

This copy of original paper on file in this office is respectfully submitted to the Secretary of War, in connection with communication of this date in relation to the general staff act of June 14, 1864.

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 276. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, November 21, 1864.

* * * * *

V. The seven Louisiana companies now serving in the organization known as Powers' Regiment of Cavalry are hereby organized into a battalion, to be known as the Eighteenth Louisiana Battalion Cavalry.

VI. The three Mississippi companies now serving in the organization known as Powers' Regiment of Cavalry are hereby organized into a battalion, to be known as the Twenty-third Mississippi Battalion Cavalry.

* * * * *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
Petersburg, November 21, 1864.

Maj. Gen. J. F. GILMER,
Chief of Engineer Bureau:

GENERAL: Your letter of the 19th instant with regard to the organization of the negro laborers to be attached to the armies of the Confederacy under the act of Congress of 17th of February, 1864, has been received. Upon the examination of your plan in all its details I think that it is perhaps the best which can be adopted. I do not know that three overseers will be necessary in addition to one manager for each "gang" of 100 men. Would not two be enough? When the negroes arrive in the army and are temporarily attached, as recommended, to the working parties already organized, I think they should be organized into a gang as soon as they reach 100 in number, instead of waiting until 800 are collected, as is suggested. Too much care cannot be taken in the selection of the directors, superintendents, and managers. They should be men of probity, energy, and intelligence. Every precaution should be taken to insure proper and kind treatment of the negroes and to render them contented in the service. The code of punishments should be distinctly defined, and the graver punishments should not be left in the hands of the managers and overseers without due reference to the directors and superintendents. There should be a system of rewards, too, for good conduct and industry, these rewards to be paid to the meritorious over and above the hire paid to their masters. Most of the negroes are accustomed to something of this sort on the plantations. Foremen could be selected from among those who exhibit the best qualifications and character, who would correspond to non-commissioned officers in our military organizations. These would aid materially in promoting the efficiency of the organization and might receive extra wages as a reward and encouragement.

I hope steps will be taken to put the act into execution at once. We are in great need.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. E. LEE,
General.

[First indorsement.]

ENGINEER BUREAU,
November 25, 1864.

Respectfully submitted to Honorable Secretary of War, asking attention to the modifications in the organization of labor as suggested by General Lee.

As the number of overseers to 100 negroes can be more easily increased than diminished should the service require a change, I would advise two overseers instead of three, in addition to the manager.

Attention is asked to the suggestion of General Lee that the negroes be organized as soon as 100 are received, instead of waiting until 800 are collected. I concur fully in his views that great care should be taken in the selection of directors, superintendents, and managers, and that kind treatment should be secured to the negroes; that a code of punishment should be distinctly defined, and that the severer punishments should not be left in the hands of managers and overseers, without any reference to the directors and superintendents; that there should be a system of rewards for good conduct and industry, and that foremen should be selected from among the negroes who exhibit the best qualifications and character, who would correspond to non-commissioned officers. Extra pay should be allowed to such foremen as a reward and encouragement.

I would respectfully recommend to the Honorable Secretary of War that he urge upon the chief of Bureau of Conscription the importance of carrying forward as rapidly as possible the impressment of the 20,000 slaves authorized by law and heretofore ordered to be impressed; that the same be sent in convenient gangs under proper guards to the armies in the field, to be attached temporarily to the engineer troops serving with the same, and to the harbors of Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah, and Mobile. to be employed on the coast defenses, strict care being taken as to preserving accurate records, as suggested in my letter to General Lee.

J. F. GILMER,

Major-General and Chief Engineer of Bureau.

[Second indorsement.]

NOVEMBER 26, 1864.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

General Gilmer's indorsement is approved. Have order in conformity with the arrangement proposed prepared and submitted. General Gilmer will aid Colonel Clay in its preparation if desired.

J. A. S.,

Secretary.

RICHMOND, VA., November 21, 1864.

Vice-President STEPHENS,

Crawfordville, Ga.:

SIR: In the Augusta Constitutionalist, communicated by yourself, I find published a letter addressed by you to Hon. Thomas J. Semmes, C. S. Senate, in which is contained the following passage:

I know there are many persons amongst us, whose opinions are entitled to high consideration, who do not agree with me on the question of McClellan's election. They prefer Lincoln to McClellan. Perhaps the President belongs to that class. Judging from his acts, I should think that he did.

Your public station gives importance to the statement, and the possible effect upon those Northern men who desire to terminate the war, and who supported the election of McClellan, is too obvious to require comment. I am quite at a loss to imagine the basis for your conclusion, and have therefore to ask to what acts of mine you refer.

Very respectfully, yours,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 277. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, November 22, 1864.

* * * * *

II. Company D, Thirty-fifth Battalion Virginia Cavalry, is hereby disbanded. The members of this company are permitted to join such other companies of the battalion as they may select; but failing to make such selection, they will be promptly distributed among the other companies of the battalion by the brigadier-general commanding.

III. The First Battalion North Carolina Reserves, with the unattached company commanded by Capt. W. R. Williams, which is hereby added thereto, will constitute the Second Regiment North Carolina Reserves.

IV. The ten companies comprising the Fourth, Seventh, and Eighth Battalions of North Carolina Reserves, as organized under the orders of Lieutenant-General Holmes, will constitute the Third Regiment North Carolina Reserves.

V. The organization of the Eighth Battalion of North Carolina Reserves (Millard's), consisting of three companies, is hereby recognized and made the action of the War Department. It will hereafter be designated as the First Battalion North Carolina Reserves.

* * * * *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[NOVEMBER 23, 1864.—For Maury to Watts and Clark, calling for State troops from Alabama and Mississippi to defend Mobile, &c., see Series I, Vol. XLV, Part I, p. 1241.]

[NOVEMBER 23, 1864.—For Davis to Bragg, in regard to the suspension of the law restricting reserve troops to service within their State, see Series I, Vol. XLII, Part III, p. 1226.]

OFFICE COMMISSIONER OF TAXES,
Richmond, November 23, 1864.

Hon. G. A. TRENHOLM,
Secretary of the Treasury:

SIR: The accompanying letter from Hon. L. J. Dupré has been referred to this office by you for consideration and remarks.* It is hardly expected that I should travel out of the legitimate sphere of my duties to discuss that portion of the letter referring to matters under another and independent department of the Government, and I shall, therefore, confine my remarks strictly to the subject of taxation. The complaints of Mr. Dupré in discussing this question are of a twofold character, embracing the alleged inadequacy of the laws in force for the relief of his constituents and the manner of their execution by the local tax officers. The only power to correct the first is the Congress of the Confederate States, of which he is himself a member. I shall, therefore, confine my remarks to the subject of the execution of those laws (and their proper interpretation) which have been enacted for the benefit of taxpayers situated as those whom he represents are. I venture to assert that there are many districts in other States of the Confederacy that have suffered as much as those to which he refers. These would be alike entitled to all the benefits and immunities secured to them by the acts of Congress. Memorials have been received from various districts in Mississippi, North Carolina, and Virginia, praying to be relieved from the payment of taxes on account of the ravages of the enemy. There seems to be an erroneous opinion entertained upon this subject, which I have on various occasions endeavored to correct. Those who have lost property by the enemy, in many cases, seem to think that for that reason the law intends they shall be relieved from taxation upon what they have left, and here is the error.

The act to "lay additional taxes," &c., approved 17th of February, 1864, imposes a tax of 5 per cent. upon all property, real, personal, and mixed, of every kind and description and not exempted or taxed at a different rate. This is an ad valorem tax on property and not a personal tax on the owner, and when Congress inserted the provision for the relief of those whose property had been injured or destroyed by the enemy, it was not the intention to remit the tax on that which remains. The language of the law is that the assessment on property injured or destroyed may be reduced in proportion to the damage sustained; that is, if a tax-payer on the 17th of February owned twenty slaves worth $10,000 and a tract of land worth $10,000, and since that time the enemy have stolen ten of his slaves and damaged his plantation $5,000, only the remaining ten slaves shall be assessed at $5,000 and the value of the land shall be reduced to the extent of the damage, which will reduce the assessment to $5,000. This seems to be the true intent of the law.

* Dupré's letter not found.

But Mr. Dupré complains that the assessors in the section referred to make no discrimination in the value of slaves there and in the more favored portions of the State. The law does not authorize any distinction. A slave has, in the eye of the law, an intrinsic value whether productive of profit or expense to the owner; but under the act of Congress the assessor has no power to deviate from the basis thereby established. The law says slaves (unless purchased since 1st of January, 1862) shall be assessed upon the basis of 1860. This applies as well to the invaded districts as to the others, unless there is some special law authorizing a reduction in such cases.

It has been contended, and this seems to be the import of Mr. Dupré's observations on this point, that under paragraph IV, act of 17th of February, where a tax-payer has been deprived of the "use" of his slave by reason of the presence or proximity of the enemy, though still in his possession and under his control, his value is to be assessed according to his present use or state of unprofitableness instead of the rate of his market value in 1860.

Such, I think, was not the intention of Congress, nor is the language of the act susceptible of such construction. There is very little doubt that the word "property," in its legal signification, is technically more applicable to personalty than to realty. The best and most exact law writers speak of "real estate" and "personal property." It may be admitted that the word "property" in the paragraph referred to may have been intended to cover both realty and personalty, yet the context shows that the main idea in the minds of the legislators seems to have reference to real estate only. Hence the use of the words "injured or destroyed by the enemy, or the owner deprived of the use or occupancy thereof or the means of cultivating the same," &c. I think nothing can be clearer than that Congress never intended to tax any property that was in the occupancy or possession of the enemy; therefore the word "destroyed" has been construed to embrace slaves and other personalty taken and carried away by the enemy. But it doubtless occurred to Congress that certain lands, by reason of the "presence or proximity of the enemy," could not be safely "occupied" or "cultivated," and as the "lands" could not be removed and might be seriously "injured" and the fences and houses thereon "destroyed," it became necessary to make a provision in their favor. But as to slaves there is no such reason. They may be removed, and their intrinsic value will be as great after such removal as that of the slaves of persons securely remote from immediate danger. The owner would still have the "use" of such slaves absolutely. They may not be as profitable to him, but the act never intended to measure the value of the slaves in the actual possession of their owners by their profitableness or unprofitableness to them in 1864. The rule prescribed is exactly the reverse, to wit, "the market value in 1860," and not their available profit in 1864. It will not do for the owner to keep his slaves or other personal property in near proximity to the enemy and claim on that account that the assessment on such property should be reduced from the standard value of 1860, when the present value is so much enhanced, when the owner still has the "use" of them, and when in some instances the very risk is incurred for the reason that such slaves or other personalty are more profitable to him in such exposed locality than they have ever been at any time. It is the duty of assessors under the law to ascertain and determine what similar slaves to those to be valued were worth in 1860, and when they have so ascertained that must be the standard of valuation.

They have no authority to deviate from it as to the means of arriving at the facts by which they are to be governed; it is for them to adopt the best that they can under the circumstances. By way of establishing uniformity and securing equality among all the property holders in any particular State, State collectors were advised to ascertain from the best information that could be had the average value of slaves between certain ages in 1860, and to adopt a schedule of prices to correspond therewith, to be varied according to circumstances, which should be a guide for assessors throughout the State. This, as is shown by experience, is the fairest, most equitable, and most satisfactory mode of assessment. Yet this schedule was not mandatory, but merely advisory. It was thought that inasmuch as the district collector has express power under the assessment act to supervise and correct the assessments of his assessors, it was no stretch of power for the State collector, through him, to propose a schedule of values in advance for the guidance of the assessors, which they themselves might from time to time prove to be correct by reference to the same sources of information resorted to by the State collector, to wit, tax returns and other public records. Under this rule the values of slaves in 1860 were ascertained and a schedule of those values furnished to the assessors, which has universally, I believe, been adopted by them in all parts of the same State. If any assessor were to disregard this schedule and assess slaves at a lower rate, it would not only be the right but the duty of the collector, if he was convinced that the schedule was the proper standard, to notify the tax-payer and proceed to raise the assessments to the proper standard. The mode adopted avoids all this trouble and secures uniformity of valuation throughout the State.

Under existing laws, therefore, it is the duty of the State collector of Louisiana and every other State to enforce the laws in every district where it is practicable to do so, including those districts which have been invaded and those which have not, and it is equally the duty of local officers, assessors, and collectors to execute the laws according to the instructions prescribed by competent authority under those laws. In doing so they should duly observe and respect the rights of tax-payers under the law, and should not execute their duties harshly or offensively, but firmly. So far as the collection of a money tax is concerned these officers have nothing to do with property taken by impressment, whether paid for or not. They have no authority to settle claims or to allow them as an offset against taxes. It is their simple duty to ascertain what sum each person owes as taxes and then to collect it and pay it over to the State collector as prescribed by law. This applies to all districts alike, where it is practicable to execute the law.

Mr. Dupré desires you to suggest a plan for the relief of his constituents by Congress. It would be difficult for me to suggest a plan that would meet his wishes unless it were to pass an act exempting the whole district (where it had been so invaded) from the payment of taxes. But this would not be just, because there are persons in most of these districts who have really never been injured or damaged, but who have prospered and made large sums of money. Then it would be difficult to say what districts should be so exempted and what extent of damage should entitle them to it.

Another plan might be adopted, if Congress believes that a man should be exempted from taxes because he lost property by the enemy, and that is to allow the tax-payer to deduct his damages from his tax and not from the assessment.

I cannot conscientiously recommend such a measure, however. I think the exemption clauses of the law are very liberal and are sufficient for the relief of the poorer classes, and that when a tax-payer does not fall within either of those classes he should pay his due portion of the public burdens upon the property he has left. I could not suggest a more appropriate law than the one now in force, relieving the tax-payer entirely from taxation upon property destroyed or carried away, and providing for the reduction of the value of that which has been injured or damaged by the enemy to the extent of the damage.

Thousands have suffered by the depredations of the enemy, and they are entitled to the sympathies of all good men; and thousands more are destined to suffer, no doubt, from the same cause if the war should continue long. In that event localities now secure and that have never been visited will be overrun and desolated by the enemy. The time may come when but few localities will be exempt from their visitations. Already the fairest portions of Georgia have been overrun, and at this time Sherman's track of desolation is being extended toward the sea-board. In time it may be that there will be comparatively few men of property who have not been damaged, and a measure allowing a deduction from their taxes of all who have been so damaged to the extent of the damage would reduce the revenue from taxation to a pitiful sum.

I think that while taxes are laid as a means of supporting the Government that all should be required to pay their proportion, according to the property they possess. If a man owns fifty negroes and has lost twenty-five of them by the enemy I see no good reason why he should not pay tax upon the remaining twenty-five. If he has lost his lands, stock, &c., and has no money to pay the taxes, he can sell a portion of the negroes to pay them. Such a man is unfortunate, but not so much so as thousands of others who have lost all they had.

Viewed as a matter of public policy, I think that the taxes should be collected in every district where it is practicable from those who are liable. Where taxes are collected the people must have currency to pay them and by that means it circulates. But in some districts, even where a large majority of the people are loyal and true to our Government but so contiguous to the lines of the enemy as to render it impracticable to put the law in operation, it is found that our currency scarcely circulates at all. This I am told is the case in some of the northern counties in this State, and it certainly exercises a damaging influence upon our cause. Therefore I could not recommend a measure that would exempt whole districts from the operation of the tax laws, thereby stopping the circulation of our currency in such localities and holding out the temptation to their citizens to adopt that of the enemy.

The foregoing are my views frankly expressed, but it is the peculiar privilege and province of Congress to adopt such measures in the premises as they may deem meet and proper.

Respectfully submitted.

T. ALLAN,
Commissioner.

HARRISONBURG, November 23, 1864.

Hon. JOHN B. BALDWIN:

DEAR SIR: We regret exceedingly to trouble you so much with our county matters, but the direst necessity of our people impels us to trespass upon your kindness. You will remember that Order 77 was suspended in this county, and the enrolling officer, with the county court, directed to inquire and report the ravages of the enemy and the names of the greatest sufferers liable to military duty. This, with great care and accuracy, was done, showing a ruin and devastation appalling and unparalleled; showing that with an equal distribution of every article of food for man and beast that there was barely enough left in the county to sustain life. Since that time the army agents and officers have been foraging, impressing, and hauling off a portion of the scanty subsistence left, until our people are almost reduced to beggary, especially the poorer classes (always the most numerous), who relied upon the produce for supplies. The order suspending Order No. 77 has been revoked, and all liable under that order are ordered to report here on the 29th instant.

If this order remain in force no man who has not lived in the midst of famine, disease, and death can foresee the consequences to our people. The suspending order directed the names of the greatest sufferers to be given, as if it intended relief to them; but none comes. Many who are liable are without a pound of meat, bread, or anything to live on, to say nothing of firewood and other outside necessities of life. It may be said the brief space given them was sufficient. Not so; the scarcity of every article prevents even the wealthy from laying in a supply in a brief period. On the contrary, it will require the daily and hourly exertions of the poor and those who have been burnt out to procure a scanty subsistence to sustain life during the winter. We are deeply impressed with the conviction that if the call is insisted upon it will result in no material advantage to the Government. When the soldier now in the Army learns that his neighbor on whom his family have leaned for support during all this war is himself called into service and his family (his wife and little children at home) are sure to suffer, he will become uneasy in his place, and will weigh the duty he owes his country and then weigh the duty he owes his family, and what the promptings of nature would be is not difficult to determine.

We know the Government needs men or it would not call them. We believe it is prompted by a high sense of duty to the country; yet we feel sure if it could see our once fair county, then teeming with its abundance, now almost "a howling wilderness," it would not call for another man from its borders. We have no slave labor, and this call takes our principal working force. What is to become of a corn crop? What is to become of any spring crop?

We believe it humanity to the people and the best interest of the Government to suspend this call indefinitely. We believe that all embraced in that order ought to be permitted to remain at home, and those who are liable and have not suffered and are able ought to be required to aid the family of the veteran soldier now in the field, thus making him cheerful and happy in the discharge of his duty.

We write you this with the hope that you may, through the Secretary of War or other authority, take action to suit our wants. If that fail, we submit to your superior knowledge the propriety of Congressional action.

Yours, truly,

WM. McK. WARTMANN.
JOHN T. HARRIS.

[First indorsement.]

This letter from the presiding justice of Rockingham County and Hon. John T. Harris, one of the delegates in the General Assembly from that county, is respectfully submitted for the consideration of the Secretary of War. I can add nothing to what has so often been said by me and reported by the enrolling officer as to the dreadful condition of affairs in that county.

JOHN B. BALDWIN.

[Second indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES OF VIRGINIA,
November 25, 1864.

Respectfully returned.

General Orders, No. 77, were suspended in Rockingham (as Hon. Mr. Baldwin will remember) to allow the people of that ravaged county to make the best provision they could for the winter, before being sent to the field, and not with any express or implied view of exempting them from service. I trust the Secretary of War may authorize relief to be granted in extreme cases, but I have no further authority in the premises.

J. L. KEMPER,
Major-General.

[Third indorsement.]

NOVEMBER 29, 1864.

Instructions have been given the Conscript Bureau which will extend such relief as can be afforded in individual cases. General exemption cannot be allowed. The exigencies of the service are paramount.
J. A. S.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., November 24, 1864.

Maj. E. B. BRIGGS,
Georgia Militia, Columbus, Ga.:

SIR: Your letter of the 12th instant asking authority to raise a regiment of colored troops, should Congress authorize their formation, has been received. In reply you are informed that it is not probable that any such policy will be prescribed by Congress, and the Department is not prepared to consider such applications.

Respectfully,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War

[NOVEMBER 24, 1864.—For Maury to Clark, requesting call of State militia to re-enforce General Gardner, see Series I, Vol. XLV, Part I, p. 1244.]

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., November 24, 1864.

General GILBERT S. MEEM,
Shenandoah County, Va.:

SIR: The memorial of the justices of Shenandoah County, submitted by you to the President, has been by him referred to this Department for appropriate reply. Deepest sympathy is felt for the suffering which has been entailed on the people of Shenandoah and the adjoining counties by the savage depredations and malignant incendiarism of our enemies, and there is not wanting, on the part of the Department, an earnest desire to afford to the people of the county all the alleviations which exigencies of the service will allow.

I have had on this subject anxious conference with General Kemper and General Lee, and am compelled reluctantly to the conclusion that the reserves from Shenandoah and Page Counties, now serving in front of Richmond, cannot be relieved and sent home in this emergency. Neither can the call for those between eighteen and forty-five years of age capable of active service be altogether dispensed with.

All that I see practicable at this time is, that such of the reserves remaining at home in these counties, now being collected by Brigadier-General Lee, may be allowed to remain, and that the enrolling officers engaged in assembling those between eighteen and forty-five capable of active duty be instructed to exercise a more liberal discretion than heretofore in furloughing important mechanics and others, the necessity for whose presence is plain for the support of numerous dependents.

It is hoped the contingencies of the campaign may allow, at a later period, more liberality in furloughing the reserves in front of this city than the exigencies of service have hitherto permitted. Should such an opportunity occur it will be embraced with promptness, and the reserves from the counties desolated by the enemy will be specially favored.

While these indulgences may appear to the distressed community of those counties but inadequate relief, they will, it is hoped, accept them as an earnest of the sympathy and interest of the Department, and believe that more is not done only because not compatible with the general defense and safety.

Very respectfully,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., November 25, 1864.

Lieut. Col. GEORGE W. LAY,
Inspector-General of Conscription:

GERERAL: I am instructed by the Secretary of War to communicate for your information that purchasing agents or transportation agents appointed under the act of Congress approved June 14, 1864, chapter 52, from persons then over forty-five years of age or who are physically incapacitated for service in the field, or who had been in the service over twelve months, or who had been at that date discharging any of the duties required of such agents, are not liable to conscription.

Should any of these agents not belong to the classes above enumerated, they are liable to conscription, and will be duly enrolled and assigned, unless specially detailed to perform the duties of their agencies.

The Secretary further directs that this decision shall be communicated to your enrolling officers for their future guidance, and to secure the prompt assignment to the Army of all those acting as agents, who are not appointed in accordance with the provisions of the aforesaid act of Congress or detailed by competent authority.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. B. DUFFIELD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

(Same to Generals of Reserves.)

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., November 25, 1864.

Major-General WITHERS,
Commanding Reserves in Alabama:

GENERAL: Your letter of the 8th instant, inclosing your correspondence with His Excellency Governor Watts, has been received. The tone of His Excellency's letter is well calculated to excite surprise.

The conscription act of April 14, 1862, authorizes the President to call out and place in the military service of the Confederate States for three years all white men, who are residents of the Confederate States, between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five years at the time the call or calls may be made who are not legally exempted from the military service.

The act of September 27 following authorized the calling out of the residents between thirty-five and forty-five "at the time the call or calls may be made" who were not exempt.

The act of Congress of the 17th of February last declared that all white men between the ages of seventeen and fifty shall be in the military service of the Confederate States for the war from and after the passage of the act. This last act repealed all pre-existing exemptions, and enacted that the persons specified in the act should be exempt. Among the exemptions are such officers as the Governors of the respective States may certify to be necessary to the proper administration of the State government.

It is very clear that the acts of Congress determined that the persons who were to be placed in the Army and those who should be released from service under each of these acts were to be ascertained by the facts existing at the date of the Presidential calls or the date of the act of Congress, as expressed by the terms of the acts above quoted.

It so happened that Congress, in adopting the exemption act of October, 1862, repealed the exemption act which had been adopted in April, and which accompanied the conscription bill of that month. An adherence to the terms of the act of April would have placed men in service who would have been exempted if the consequence had been foreseen. The Department, therefore, allowed the class mentioned in the act of April, and who were embraced in the call of that month, the benefit of the exemption of the October act when they had not been enrolled. This was not in accordance with the terms of the act, but was an indulgent construction, to meet an inconvenience produced by the legislation.

The act of February last contains no ambiguity, and does not require any departure from its language to fulfill the intention of Congress or to prevent hardships. Congress divided the population at the date of its enactment into the two classes, of conscripts and exempts.

To entitle an officer to exemption he must have been an officer at that date. The Governor was authorized to decide, when the call for service was made, whether he was necessary for a proper administration of the State government. I cannot understand the argument that is opposed to the view herein presented.

Congress, under its unquestionable power, appropriates the services of the men who are of the proper age for the public defense. At the date of this act there has been no appropriation of that service by any other authority. The men are in the militia, and might be called out by the President to perform militia duty under previous acts of Congress to repel the invader of the country; but Congress, having the power to raise armies in a period of great public danger, when the enemy is upon the soil of every State, and occupies an important portion of the Confederacy, deems that his services are requisite for the war, and so enacts. How can this man be taken from the service except by an act of Congress? The act of Congress is admitted to be in pursuance of the Constitution. It is the supreme law of the land. All men are required to render to it obedience, and the judges of the State are bound by it, anything in the constitution and laws of the State to the contrary notwithstanding.

If the Governor of Alabama supposes that the act of Congress contains an exemption in favor of officers who have been elected since the date of the act, and who have obtained a certificate from him that they are necessary for a public administration of the State government, the Department differs from him; but this difference scarcely entitles him to take up arms, or to menace with resistance by force the administration of the Department. The question is a judicial one, and the courts are open to the party aggrieved to assert his right to an exemption. The question is not one of a political character, involving any necessity for a discussion between the executives of the Confederate and State governments, but of private right, between the individual claiming to be exempt from service and the officer who asserts his liability to the service. If the claim be that independently of any act of Congress the officer is exempt; that the claim of the State for civil service is paramount under the prior claim of the Confederate States for military service, and its assertion of that claim by appointing, still the question may be disposed of by the judicial tribunals. The Department approves of the course you have adopted and of the tone and matter of your correspondence.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

[NOVEMBER 25, 1864.—For order of Governor Brown establishing camps of organization for Georgia militia, see Series I, Vol. LIII, p. 378.]

RICHMOND, November 26, 1864.

THE SENATE OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

In response to your resolution of the 17th instant I herewith transmit for your information a communication from the Secretary of War relative to the number of persons in "each State exempted from military service upon the certificate of the Governors, respectively, that they are officers necessary for the proper administration of the government of said States."

JEFF'N DAVIS.

[Inclosure.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, November 24, 1864.

The PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

SIR: I have received the following resolutions of the Senate referred by Your Excellency to this Department:

Resolved, That the President of the Confederate States be requested to communicate to the Senate the number of persons in each State exempted from military service upon the certificate of the Governors, respectively, that they are officers necessary for the proper administration of the government of said States.

In response I have the honor to transmit herewith a report from the superintendent of conscription containing the information called for by the Senate.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

[Sub-inclosure.]

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., November 23, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to return the inclosed paper referred to this Bureau, and in pursuance of your indorsement to report thereon that you will find the response thereto contained in the paper inclosed, marked A. I use the opportunity to remark that the Governors of several States, in giving certificates of exemptions, under the act of the 17th of February, 1864, do not confine their certificates to officers as that term seems to be used in the law, but extend them to all persons in the service of the State, or in any mode employed by State authority, and that authority is interposed to prevent the conscription officers from enrolling and assigning such persons to Confederate service. In the past year I have frequently invited your attention to the cases arising under this action. In my returns I of course report all such cases of certificates as for officers, that being the term used in the law.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

A.

List of the number of State officers exempted in each State on the certificate of the Governors of the respective States.

Virginia .....	1,422
North Carolina.....	14,675
South Carolina.....	233
Georgia.....	1,012
Alabama.....	1,223
Mississippi.....	110
East Tennessee.....	39
East Louisiana.....	20
Florida.....	109
Total.....	18,843

HEADQUARTERS BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., November 20, 1864.

I certify that the above list is a true extract from the official returns furnished me by the generals of reserves in the respective States, as contained in the consolidated reports of the commandants of conscripts.

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., November 28, 1864.

The PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

SIR: The resolution of the House of Representatives requesting the President to inform the House by what authority of law the War Department is now conducting an impressment of slaves in Virginia, without regard to the State law on that subject, which has been referred by you to this Department, has been received.

On the 17th of September last General Lee, commanding the Army of Northern Virginia, made known to this Department "that there was an immediate necessity for the services of 5,000 negroes for thirty days;" that the necessity was sufficiently urgent to justify calling for this labor at once; that he could not consistently with the exigencies of the service detail officers and soldiers from the army for this duty, and said "that if the agents of the Bureau of Conscription can be employed for this purpose I am prepared to give them such authority as I consistently may. They can consult with the local authorities and arrange for the impressment in such manner as to be least injurious to the public service. I inclose a tabular statement of the quota and the counties from which it is proposed to draw the negroes."

The existence of an urgent necessity for an immediate supply of the labor required was unquestionable. In conformity to the request of the commanding general the agency of the officers of conscription was directed for the impressment according to the schedule furnished by him, with orders to confine the impressment to slaves between eighteen and fifty years of age, and that not more than one slave out of every five on any farm should be taken, and where there were only three slaves of the ages required those should be exempt.

The question whether a commanding general, in the absence of any law upon the subject, under the pressure of an immediate and urgent necessity, be authorized to impress slaves for service with his army has been much debated in this country, and a diversity of opinion has been expressed upon it. In a discussion in Congress of a claim for compensation for the loss of a slave so impressed for the defense of a city in a state of siege, Judge P. P. Barbour, of Virginia, said:

The slave, as an item of property, is not a member of the body politic; he owes no service on his own account to the Government. The Government knows him only as the property of his master, and it can get at him only in two ways—the one is by the ordinary process of taxation, and the other is by the extraordinary exertion of power under a pressing public emergency. * * * If the officer wantonly or unnecessarily invade the property of the citizen, he is a trespasser. But, then, this must be shown, and in the present case not so much as a doubt has been suggested of the existence of such a case of necessity. If the necessity exists, then that case has arisen in which the Government may take the private property for the public use.

The power of a general in the field to impress private property for the public use in a case of an immediate necessity has, since the discussion referred to, been judicially determined by the Supreme Court of the United States to be legitimate.

The fifth section of the impressment act of the 16th of February last, amendatory of the laws regulating impressments, seems to recognize this power as belonging to the commanding general, for it prohibits the impressment of a very large class of slaves "except in case of urgent necessity, and upon the order of the general commanding the department" in which the class referred to may be employed. It was to this class of slaves that General Lee had reference in his letter when he speaks of communicating the authority that resides in him. This Department, in ordering the impressments under the circumstances before mentioned, in conformity to the request of the commanding general and according to his plan, had some reference to the powers that belonged to him under the conditions that have been disclosed.

It also made reference to the powers with which it was clothed by the acts of Congress. The fourth section of the act of Congress of the 26th of March, 1863, authorized the Secretary of War to take private property for the public use whenever he shall deem it necessary by reason of the impracticability of procuring the same by contract, so as to accumulate supplies for the Army, or for the good of the service, in any locality, by general order, through the instrumentality of subordinate officers.

The ninth section of the same act directed that when slaves are impressed by the Confederate Government to labor on fortifications or other public works the impressment should be made according to the rules and regulations provided in the laws of the State where they are impressed; and in the absence of such law, in accordance with such rules and regulations as the Secretary of War shall from time to time prescribe, not inconsistent with the terms of the act. This act of Congress does not require the Department to employ the agency of State officers to secure the labor of slaves. The power to make the impressment in the fourth section of the act above quoted gives to the Secretary of War the power to impress any property liable to impressment through the agency of officers of the Confederate States, and in the ninth section of the act the terms used are, "that when slaves are impressed by the Confederate Government, * * * the impressment shall be made by said Government" in accordance with such rules and regulations as have been provided in the laws of the State wherein they are impressed, if there be such laws.

In an act passed by the State of Virginia, 3d of October, 1862, the Governor of the State was authorized and required to call into the Confederate States service slaves for labor on fortifications and public works. The act provided for the equalizing of the burden as nearly as may be among the several counties, cities, and towns of the Commonwealth, for the hire to be paid, the obligations to be incurred by the Confederate Government, and for the manner of the collection and delivery of the slaves. This act is not an act for the impressment of slaves, but a mode of drafting them for the public service. The execution of the act was dependent in a great measure upon the action of the county court, and experience has fully shown that its operation is dilatory, and that it is not suitable for an immediate and urgent necessity, such as existed in this case.

The only provision in this act that authorizes the impressment of slaves is conditional upon the event of the neglect or refusal of the county or corporation court to perform the duty imposed upon them. In that event the Governor is authorized, with the aid of certain specified officers of the county, to make an impressment of the slaves demanded from the county by agents of his selection.

The Department has usually collected slaves for work upon fortifications by a requisition upon the Governor according to the terms of this act. It is equitable in its provisions, and the agencies employed are probably the least obnoxious of any other for the accomplishment of the object proposed—that object being the assertion of an onerous and repulsive claim for service. But the existing circumstances did not admit of the delay necessarily involved in the use of its machinery. The Department has not supposed that this act was incorporated into the legislation of the Confederate States by the ninth section of the act of March, 1863, but it has in its general order under that section of act and its special order in the present instance preserved its leading features in reference to the apportionment of the labor, the compensation to be made, the obligations to be assumed to the owner in case of the loss or injury of the property, and the length of time for which the slaves are to be continued in the service.

Having thus shown the authority of law under which the Department is now conducting the impressment of slaves in Virginia, the answer to the resolution of the House of Representatives is respectfully submitted.

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

CIRCULAR }	CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
No. 34. }	WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
	Richmond, Va., November 28, 1864.

In the recent reports of commandants of conscripts there have been exhibited frequent inaccuracies both of returns and calculations, and such manifest discrepancies as would indicate a want of scrutiny in making them up.

This Bureau must rely solely on the monthly reports for all the information therein called for, and the Government is dependent on this Bureau for that information. It is of the very first importance that these reports should be full, accurate, and correspondent.

It is the duty of commandants to scrutinize all returns, to have them thoroughly corrected, and to consolidate them with mathematical accuracy.

Wherever there are defects, omissions, or discrepancies they should be pointed out and accounted for under the head of "remarks," and each report should be accompanied by a brief analysis on a separate sheet of paper and the wants of the service indicated.

Such accompanying report may properly comment on the capacity and conduct of enrolling officers by name or as a class, and on the condition of the service.

The Bureau is always aided in its administration by such intelligent communications.

Each monthly report must be certified and signed by the commandant.

By command of the Secretary of War:

C. B. DUFFIELD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., November 28, 1864.

His Excellency President DAVIS:

SIR: I have the honor to transmit for your information a copy of the report of the major-general commanding reserve forces in Virginia, acting under General Orders, Nos. 73 and 77, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office. At the time these orders were issued it was vaguely conjectured, and perhaps represented, that they would furnish to the Army of Northern Virginia near 40,000 men. From the records of this Bureau at that time my estimate was that they would furnish about 5,000 men. The beggarly list here presented does not reach to my calculations, and I am informed that of this number many have already deserted or have been discharged. My belief is that had General Orders, No. 73, been omitted or properly modified so as to express your purpose of calling the reserve forces to the aid and not to the control of the conscription authorities, and then the wide field of 77 been opened to this agency, a much larger contribution to the Army would have been made without serious disturbance to the industry of the country or the departments of Government.

I fear it may be assumed that this control and direction of the officers and business of conscription by the general of reserves in their respective States is a failure. Their aid and that of their forces called as occasion may demand might be beneficial. I venture to use the occasion as pertinent to reiterate, from my thirty months' experience, that for the uniform, impartial, and thoroughly efficient administration of conscription, first, all exemptions by classes should be absolutely abolished; second, conscription should be made independent of the regular military authorities, and the President authorized to assign to the service such officers as he may select, or to appoint for this special duty from civil life, either with rank or salary, such persons as he may select.

The present organization, properly officered, with authority to use the reserve forces on occasion, could perform all the functions of conscription proper, including the levy of slaves, the management of details, furloughs, &c., and also take charge of deserters and absentees, and supervise the entire interior military police. I am confident that without seriously disturbing a single important existing regulation a general order could be devised which would, through the conscription organization, give simplicity, energy, and good results to the interior military organizations of the country.

Asking your lenient consideration for these free suggestions,

I have the honor to be, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,

Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

[First indorsement.]

Adjutant-General for remarks on the points presented.

J. D.

[Second indorsement.]

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,

December 2, 1864.

Respectfully referred to Major-General Kemper for such information as will enable the undersigned to respond to the indorsement of the President after he has a more full understanding of the subject.

S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General.

[Third indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES OF VIRGINIA,

December 7, 1864.

Respectfully returned.

In one respect Brigadier-General Preston and myself agree, to wit, that the present connection of the Bureau of Conscription and the reserve commanders can be productive of no good, for either the reserve commanders should control and conduct the business of conscription in the several States with their reserve forces, or they should be relieved of their present irritating connection with that business. General Preston's remarks and his mode of addressing them will illustrate the want of cordially co-operative relations, the actual antagonisms between the old and the new agents of conscription, which are to be deeply deplored and which may cause the new system to delay instead of to expedite the re-enforcement of the armies. It was in view of those relations that I asked to be relieved of my present command.

General Preston, however, severely reflects upon his own Bureau when he points with triumphant manner to what he terms "the beggarly list here presented," as sustaining his allegations. General Orders, No. 77, were issued on the 8th and my conscription circular executing those orders was issued on the 10th of October last. Some days were consumed in circulating the orders. "The beggarly list," inclosed, shows 4,538 conscripts received at Camp Lee in the month of October; nearly all if not every one of whom were received within the last eighteen days of that month.

Does General Preston mean to imply that all the men liable to military service under Orders 77 from Virginia were gotten out within less than twenty days? If so, he pays an unmerited tribute to my efficiency, for future reports will show that many were received in November, if not later.

The Bureau may be challenged to show when, before the month of October, 1864, the conscript officers collected 4,538 men within the same period. I am informed that in the twelve months preceding October last the Bureau and its agents assigned a fraction over 7,000 men to the armies from all the States within its reach. Now, if this is so I confidently expect to show that within the few weeks I have had charge of conscription in Virginia more men have gone to the Army from Virginia alone than were assigned by the Bureau and its agents from all the States within the preceding twelve months. It is believed that such facts will prove more forcible than even General Preston's eloquent and caustic commentaries. When General Preston alleges "it was vaguely conjectured and perhaps represented" that 40,000 men would be furnished by the orders (from Virginia), it is submitted that he wanders into the region of idle and groundless rumor, if he means to impute such conjecture to myself. Some of his own subordinates know that my opinion was that the orders would add 10,000 men to the Army from Virginia, but that there were in my belief 40,000 men in Virginia out of the Army between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years. Even the returns of the Bureau, obviously imperfect and partial, which were furnished me by one of its officers about the 1st of September last, showed 28,035 men in the State between eighteen and forty-five exempted and detailed for all causes. It is true General Preston alleges that the "conscription authorities proper" would have made a much larger contribution to the Army if they had been allowed to execute General Orders, No. 77, in the usual way. It is a significant fact, however, that I received no orders through the Bureau to execute General Orders, No. 77, until ten days after those orders had been published by the War Department, until after I had collected hundreds of conscripts in pursuance of those orders. This fact alone makes it obvious that if the tedious routine of the Bureau and its agents had been relied on the orders would hardly have been circulated throughout the State in the month of October, much less would any conscripts have been assigned to the Army in the critical emergency then pending.

As regards General Preston's intimation that General Orders, No. 77, have been executed in Virginia with serious disturbance of the public sentiment and the public industry, I make no reply, except to point to the gratifying and universal testimony of the general public of Virginia in proof that since the publication of General Orders, No. 73, conscription in this State has been characterized by more vitality and vigor, has been more popular, elicited higher commendation, achieved more important results, and has more rapidly re-enforced the Army in an emergency than at any previous time whatever. It is due to myself to aver that far better results would have been accomplished but for the incumbrance of the pre-existing system of conscription which I have had to bear, which has impeded my operations, frustrated many of my best efforts to serve the country, and seriously impaired my usefulness.

J. L. KEMPER,
Major-General.

[Fourth indorsement.]

Respectfully returned to the President.

I scarcely know what remarks to make on the subject of this unpleasant controversy other than to submit the accompanying paper,* which contains my views as to the means whereby the recruitment of our armies may be most rapidly effected. Every consideration, in my judgment, should be given to the most effectual and prompt means for filling our ranks.

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

* See inclosure No. 3, p. 859.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

Report of progress made in execution of the conscript law in Virginia, month of October, 1864.

Conscripts on hand at date of last report, October 1, 1864.....	489
Received since last report .....	4,538
		5,027
Assigned since last report .....	2,847
Improperly enrolled .....	6
Discharged .....	213
Deserted .....	12
Detailed .....	741
Died .....	1
Discharged under habeas corpus .....	7
Relieved from registration .....	28
Ordered to Brigadier-General Preston, Bureau of Conscription .....	1
On hand at camp of instruction, Dublin, when it was abolished .....	31
		3,887
On hand at camp of instruction, Richmond, November 1, 1864.....		1,140

Of the 4,538 conscripts received in the month of October, 4,450 were received after publication of General Orders, No. 77, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, current series. Of this number, 1,244 were light-duty men, most of whom had been previously so found under General Orders, No. 26, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, but were unassigned and reported under General Orders, No. 77.

Agricultural exempts unaffected by General Orders, No. 77 .....	351
Details revoked by General Orders, No. 77 .....	562
Details revived by General Orders, No. 81, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office .....	26
Light-duty men who apply for detail under General Orders, No. 81 .....	379

CONSCRIPT OFFICE, Richmond, November 1, 1864.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

Assignments in Virginia for month of October, 1864.

Organization.	No.	Organization.	No.	Organization.	No.
INFANTRY.		INFANTRY—cont'd.		INFANTRY—cont'd.
1st Virginia Regiment...	47	32d Virginia Regiment...	2	Wise's brigade.....	1
2d Virginia Regiment...	7	33d Virginia Regiment...	1	6th Georgia Regiment...	1
3d Virginia Regiment...	28	34th Virginia Regiment...	7	1st Virginia Battalion...	12
4th Virginia Regiment...	23	35th Virginia Regiment...	133	22d Virginia Battalion...	23
5th Virginia Regiment...	16	37th Virginia Regiment...	8	23d Virginia Battalion...	39
6th Virginia Regiment...	2	38th Virginia Regiment...	108
7th Virginia Regiment...	11	40th Virginia Regiment...	19	Total .....	2,627
8th Virginia Regiment...	6	41st Virginia Regiment...	19
9th Virginia Regiment...	28	42d Virginia Regiment...	37	ARTILLERY.
10th Virginia Regiment...	52	44th Virginia Regiment...	8	Drewry's artillery.....	4
11th Virginia Regiment...	107	45th Virginia Regiment...	44	Burroughs' artillery .....	1
12th Virginia Regiment...	66	46th Virginia Regiment...	35	Fluvanna Artillery .....	2
13th Virginia Regiment...	90	47th Virginia Regiment...	11	Rockbridge Artillery .....	1
14th Virginia Regiment...	70	48th Virginia Regiment...	13	Washington Artillery .....	2
15th Virginia Regiment...	59	49th Virginia Regiment...	86	2d Battalion Heavy Artillery.	1
16th Virginia Regiment...	21	50th Virginia Regiment...	2	1st Company Richmond Howitzers.	1
17th Virginia Regiment...	10	51st Virginia Regiment...	76	2d Company Richmond Howitzers.	2
18th Virginia Regiment...	75	52d Virginia Regiment...	10	3d Company Richmond Howitzers.	1
19th Virginia Regiment...	62	53d Virginia Regiment...	110	Norfolk Light Artillery Blues.	5
21st Virginia Regiment...	34	54th Virginia Regiment...	102	Penick's battery.....	1
22d Virginia Regiment...	41	55th Virginia Regiment...	28	Martin's battery .....	1
23d Virginia Regiment...	20	56th Virginia Regiment...	112	Chew's battery .....	2
24th Virginia Regiment...	34	57th Virginia Regiment...	63	French's battery .....	1
25th Virginia Regiment...	3	58th Virginia Regiment...	35	Talley's battery .....	1
26th Virginia Regiment...	17	59th Virginia Regiment...	43
27th Virginia Regiment...	4	60th Virginia Regiment...	10
28th Virginia Regiment...	59	30th Virginia Battalion...	3
29th Virginia Regiment...	28	Early's command .....	254
30th Virginia Regiment...	127	Pickett's division .....	10
31st Virginia Regiment...	14	Mahone's brigade.....	1

Assignments in Virginia for month of October, 1864—Continued.

Organization.	No.	Organization.	No.	Organization.	No.
ARTILLERY—cont'd.		CAVALRY—cont'd.		CAVALRY—cont'd.
Dance's battery.....	1	6th Virginia Regiment...	4	24th Virginia Regiment...	1
Barr's battery.....	20	8th Virginia Regiment...	15	27th Virginia Battalion...	1
Jackson's battery.....	9	9th Virginia Regiment...	10	34th Virginia Battalion...	10
Douthat's battery.....	2	10th Virginia Regiment...	25	Chambliss' brigade.....	1
Griffin's battery.....	4	12th Virginia Regiment...	1	2d Missouri Cavalry.....	3
		13th Virginia Regiment...	9
Total.....	62	14th Virginia Regiment...	1	Total cavalry.....	125
CAVALRY.		15th Virginia Regiment...	1	ENGINEERS.
		16th Virginia Regiment...	1
1st Virginia Regiment...	3	17th Virginia Regiment...	1	1st Regiment Engineers...	11
2d Virginia Regiment...	6	18th Virginia Regiment...	1	3d Regiment Engineers...	5
3d Virginia Regiment...	10	19th Virginia Regiment...	3
4th Virginia Regiment...	12	21st Virginia Regiment...	1	Total.....	16
5th Virginia Regiment...	2	22d Virginia Regiment...	1
		23d Virginia Regiment...	2

RECAPITULATION.

Arm of service.	Number.
Infantry.....	2,627
Artillery.....	62
Cavalry.....	125
Engineers.....	16
Navy.....	1
From camp at Dublin to Richmond.....	16
Total.....	2,847

Respectfully submitted.

J. C. SHIELDS,

Lieutenant-Colonel, Commandant for Virginia.

Capt. R. H. CATLETT,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Reserve Forces of Virginia.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES OF VIRGINIA,

Richmond, November 21, 1864.

Respectfully referred to the Bureau of Conscription with the remark that this report does not show the full number of men who have been sent to the Army under General Orders, No. 77. The existing machinery of conscription is not adapted to the work of rapidly re-enforcing the Army in an emergency. Hundreds of men who were sent to Camp Lee dropped out, disappeared without any means of accounting for them existing that I can discover, while many more joined the Army irregularly, without passing through Camp Lee. The machinery which was turned over to me could not dispose of the men as fast as I got them, and hence many were lost or joined the Army irregularly.

From data which I am now collecting I expect to show that double the number of men mentioned in this report were sent to the Army within the time specified.

J. L. KEMPER,

Major-General.

[Second indorsement.]

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,

Richmond, November 24, 1864.

Respectfully transmitted to the Secretary of War and special attention invited to indorsement of Major-General Kemper. It will be observed that he assumes the existing machinery of conscription is not adapted to the re-enforcement of the Army in an emergency. This was the assumption on which General Orders, No. 73, was based, and these orders added to this machinery the entire reserve force of Virginia and placed the whole under the order of General Kemper. General Orders, No. 77, revoking all details, furloughs, and temporary exemptions, and by ordering the revision of all medical exemptions and the cases of light-duty men, opened, as it was supposed, an immense field for the double machinery to furnish men to the Army. The result is reported at less than 3,000 men. It appears, therefore, that the machinery of conscription, even when controlled and aided by the machinery of the reserve forces, is not adapted to the rapid re-enforcement of the Army in an emergency. Indeed, it seems that even after the men are found by General Orders, No. 77, and are placed within the jurisdiction of this double machinery, they drop out and disappear or join the Army irregularly. It may therefore be concluded from this report that the duplex machinery created by General Orders, No. 73, to operate on the material created for it in General Orders, No. 77, and on the whole conscription material proper, is scarcely more efficacious in furnishing re-enforcements than the simple existing machinery of conscription.

It may be further assumed that had the material furnished by General Orders, No. 77, been left to the control of the conscription authority proper a result quite equal to that stated in this report would have been attained, and without serious disturbance either of public sentiment or the productive industry of the country.

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

Suggestions for a general order in reference to the enrollment of conscripts and reserve forces.

I. The business of enrollment, conscription, and collection of absentees, and the assignment of conscripts to the Army, will be conducted by the generals of reserves in the several States, under the direction of an officer of superior rank, who may be hereafter designated for the purpose.

(NOTE.—The superintendent of the Bureau of Conscription being subordinate in rank to many of the general officers of reserves, jealousies and irritations are likely to arise between the Bureau of Conscription and reserve commanders, and it would seem to be doubtful if uniformity of action can be secured in at once organizing and commanding the reserves and enforcing conscription, unless all reserve commanders are placed under some common head of appropriate rank.)

II. All applications for exemption and detail and the returns and reports required by existing orders will be forwarded by the generals of reserves to the Bureau of Conscription.

(NOTE.—This, it is believed, will secure the Bureau of Conscription in the undisturbed exercise of all its functions for which it was originally created. All the bureau work of conscription will thus be committed to the superintendent, while the more active and military duty of collecting conscripts, stragglers, and deserters and forwarding them to the Army will be imposed on the commanders of reserves, who alone have the control of the forces required for the performance of such duty. The more military duties will by this arrangement be separated from the office or bureau duties; the liability to confusion and conflict, it is believed, will be avoided, while the reserve commanders, having nothing to do with the decision of detail and exemption cases, will be left free to attend to the active command of the reserve forces whenever occasion requires.)

III. All conscripts will hereafter be sent directly from the district of their residence to the commands in the field to which they may be assigned, or to such rendezvous for conscripts as may be appointed by the generals commanding armies in the field.

The camp of instruction, the office of commandants of conscripts, and the conscript medical boards are hereby abolished. A surgeon may be assigned by the general of reserves to each enrolling district, whose duty it shall be to ascertain and determine what conscripts can be sent, without jeopardy of life or health, before the medical boards attached to the commands in the field to which such conscripts may be assigned. Such medical boards will be organized for the examination of conscripts and will determine the fitness of the conscripts for service in the field.

(NOTE.—The importance of thus simplifying the machinery of conscription and imparting greater promptness to its operations is deemed to be great and necessary. The camps of instruction were originally intended for the purpose imparted to their name, but there being now neither necessity nor propriety in detaining men at such places to instruct them in the duties of the soldier, when they are so much wanted in the field, I feel satisfied that confusion and delay will be avoided by breaking up those camps. The conscript medical boards located in the several districts being subject to the suspicion of local and personal influence, and being charged with favoritism and other abuses, and the system being, at least, an unwieldy and dilatory one, I deem it best to substitute for them simply an experienced surgeon in each district, but not of the district, with power to decide, preliminarily, what men the enrolling office can send before the army boards in the field without risk of life or health.)

The office of commandant of conscripts, which is not recognized by law, is now deemed unnecessary, as the general of reserves is himself, to all intents and purposes, commandant of conscripts.

To continue the present office of commandant is to interpose a superfluous officer between the general of reserves and his enrolling officers, which places him one remove further from the subordinates whom he is designed directly to control. I deem it of the first importance to simplify the machinery of conscription in every possible way, so that the rapid and efficient control of the enrolling officers may produce the desired results.

The greatest objection to the present system of conscription is the needless complexity of its machinery, which renders it cumbrous and dilatory in the transaction of business. In order to be effective at any time, but especially in this emergency, it must have imparted to it absolute simplicity of structure and celerity of operation. The Bureau located at Richmond has undertaken to decide all applications for exemption and detail, as well as nameless other miscellaneous applications from all the States east of the Mississippi. Such an application has heretofore been made to the county enrolling officer, who summoned his advisory board, investigated the case, entered it in his books, and reported it to a district enrolling officer, who, in his turn, investigated, made entries in his books, indorsed, and forwarded to the commandant of conscripts for the State. The commandant next made his examination and entries and indorsed and forwarded the papers to the Bureau of Conscription for its action. Frequently months were consumed in thus maturing the case, and even then on account of some defect it was liable to be sent back for rectification. In going back to the county enrolling officer it had to pass, in going as well as returning, the same circuitous channels to be indorsed, and the indorsement entered in a particular set of books as it passed each link in the chain of communication. Cases have passed in this way, back and forth, through all the intermediate offices, several successive times before it was properly made out, and even then, after being once decided, it was liable to be taken up again for a rehearing and started out once more upon its travels. During the pendency of these proceedings the applicant was usually allowed to remain out of the Army by virtue of his pending application. While the papers of a case were thus being sent to and fro between the county enrolling officer and the Bureau of Conscription an increase of volume and a consumption of time were involved enough to make a business man despair of ever getting the applicant into the Army.

The Bureau has been so far removed from its agents as to lose its control of them. The Bureau, in attempting to investigate and adjudicate cases of every description, coming up from all the cis-Mississippi States, seeks to accomplish what can only be done with intolerable delay, uncertainty, and confusion. When the cases are gotten into this routine it seems to be the hardest of all possible things to get the men into the Army, for while the cases are dragging their slow length along the applicants often change their residence or occupation, or somehow their States, or appear to be buried beneath the accumulated office matter. Let no one be surprised that cases should be found pending from six to twelve months, or that the records of conscription should show in a single district twenty-odd hundred conscripts reported and less than one-tenth of the number sent to the Army after the lapse of many months, or that dispassionate judges, well acquainted with the working of the system, should aver that it has kept more men out of the armies than would have sufficed to close the war. Such a system of conscription can only be likened to Milton's "Serbonian bog, where armies whole have sunk." The true plan, it is suggested, is as follows: Let an energetic executive officer control the business in each State. Let the general of reserves, acting as general of conscription, be that officer. Let the commandant of conscripts, the camps of instruction, with their commandants and corps of subordinates, the various county and district boards, both advisory and medical, be all abolished. Let all and each of the existing intermediaries between the general of conscription and the county enrolling officers, together with the whole of their elaborate systems of entries, indorsations, and books, be swept away, leaving only a corps of inspectors to supervise and report upon the conduct of county enrolling officers, and a single medical officer for each district. The general of conscription would in this way be brought into immediate communication and contact with his county officers, and their operations would be guided directly by his own hand. The general of conscription should be confined strictly to the employment of retired and disabled officers and men and to his own reserve forces for the performance of all enrolling and conscript guard duty. That force would be ample to enable him to sweep every county bare of conscripts, stragglers, and deserters without the employment of a single able-bodied man of the active forces. When a conscript is to be assigned let him be sent from the county of his residence to the nearest intermediate soldiers' home or to such rendezvous for recruits as the general commanding the army may appoint, thence to be forwarded to whatever regiment entitled to recruits he may select. No conscripts should be thus forwarded unless, in the judgment of the district surgeon, he would probably be found [fit] for full service by a field medical board upon his joining his regiment in the field. Every question of conscription, including all cases of exemption and detail arising in a State should be determined at the office of the general of conscription, all the sets of books, entries, indorsements, orders, and correspondence heretofore kept up by the Bureau of Conscription, the commandant of conscripts, the commandants of camps of instruction, the district officers, &c., being abolished and replaced by the single set of books kept at the headquarters of the general of conscription.

All the superfluous machinery of conscription being thus lopped off, a vast expense would be saved by the abandonment of useless and dilatory agencies, and a valuable increase of the Army would be effected by sending to the field the corps of officers and clerks, orderlies, couriers, and guards now needlessly striving "how not to do it" in the Department of Conscription. It will be observed that this plan implies that the Bureau of Conscription (a bureau neither created nor directly recognized by Congress) should be abolished, and the duties heretofore performed by it are devolved by the plan upon the generals of conscription in the several States. It is obvious, however, that a central controlling head must exist to insure uniformity and efficiency of action among the generals of conscription in the States. This central head should be a man of military experience as well as the best practical business qualifications, for he is to command all the reserve forces as well as the business of conscription throughout the Confederacy. His command would be larger in numbers and more important in character than any other whatever. His headquarters would be the source from which would emanate the orders prescribing the general rules and regulations to govern at once the organization and command of the reserve forces and the administration of conscription by his subordinate generals in the States.

No mere bureau work, no such corps of officers and clerks would encumber his headquarters as now fills the long perspective of the Bureau of Conscription, vainly endeavoring to decide all the multifarious questions of detail, exemption, assignment, rehearing, &c., arising in the Confederacy. If such cases ever reached his headquarters it would be by appeal from the decisions of his subordinate generals in the States, and would be considered after the appellant had been sent to and was serving in the Army. His would be a legitimate military command. As the large and important interests now connected with posts, hospitals, provost-marshalships, prisoners, &c., are not subject to a proper central control nor under any single effective administration, and as many of them constitute the lurking places for numbers who are liable to field duty, they should all come under the direction of the general-in-chief of the reserves and conscription. This would constitute a military department of the interior which would supervise and manage all military interests not now under the direction of generals commanding armies in the field. The advantages of such an organization would not lie merely in its compactness and simplicity; it would impart unity, celerity, and responsibility to the operations of conscription, to money purchasing, disbursing, and miscellaneous agencies and interests which are now virtually irresponsible, and which, by reason of present irresponsibility, are attended with serious losses to the country in both men and money.

The foregoing plan of a military department of the interior is the suggestion of an experienced soldier, not the writer. It is hoped that nothing in these suggestions will be construed as reflecting upon the present superintendent of the Bureau of Conscription. The above strictures are aimed at the present system of conscription, not at that distinguished and respected gentleman.

NOTE.—During the months of July and August, 1864, the indorsements copied at the office of the commandant of conscripts for Virginia, alone amounted to 600 quarto pages.

---

[NOVEMBER 28, 1864.—For Clark to Maury, in relation to maintaining the State troops of Mississippi in the field, see Series I, Vol. LII, Part II, p. 791.]

---

HDQRS. DEPT. OF WESTERN VIRGINIA AND EAST TENN.,
Wytheville, Va., November 29, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond:

I respectfully beg leave to call your attention to the operations of General Orders, No. 65, current series, and to submit one or two suggestions.

Many men, chiefly foreigners, have left the Federal service and come into our lines under the guaranties of this order. The inducement that has brought most of them is the promise that they "shall be received, protected, and supplied with means of subsistence until such of them as desire it can be forwarded to the most convenient points on the border, where all facilities will be afforded them to return to their homes." As most of those who avail themselves of this order have been sent to this department for transmission through my lines, I have had an opportunity of witnessing the practical workings of the system adopted to carry it into effect. The men are sent by the provost-marshal of Richmond to Abingdon or Bristol, with orders to send them through toward Kentucky. No discretion is authorized and the deserters are offered no choice. It is generally found that they are averse to this disposition of them, claiming that it is a violation of good faith. In nearly every case they ask to be permitted to remain in the Confederacy as laborers or mechanics. The experience of those who have gone through is sufficient to deter them. In the first place, they have to march on foot through a barren frontier of several hundred miles before they enter the Federal lines. This frontier is infested with prowling bands of lawless men who strip them of everything they possess, until, it has been reported to me, that by the time they reach the Federal lines they have scarcely clothing sufficient to hide their nakedness. They are then liable to arrest and punishment as deserters. At first they secured proper reception at the hands of the Federal authorities by representing themselves as deserters from our service. I have reason now, however, to believe that spies have been sent to ascertain the disposition made by us of this class of deserters, and that means are adopted which lead to the arrest of most of them.

Apart from the considerations of good faith which should induce an adherence to the terms of this order if it is still permitted to remain in force, our own necessities suggest a different policy. The scarcity of laborers and mechanics requires an increase of this class, and opportunity is offered to supply the demand. I therefore recommend that previous to being sent from Richmond those who desire to remain should be taken out and assigned to Government workshops or permitted to find employment. They could have an oath administered to meet their status and be furnished with descriptive lists to establish their identity.

Interpreting the order according to its spirit, I have from several of the lots sent here obtained a number of valuable mechanics, miners, &c., who have been assigned to work in their respective departments, and there is still a demand for more. If more are sent here I request that I be permitted to continue to select such as I deem fit for the required work.

The class of men who avail themselves of this order is generally good. A few bad men may come through to serve improper motives, but the bulk are honest, industrious men, who come from a desire to escape an odious service, and with the purpose in good faith of remaining in the Confederacy until such time as they can safely return to their homes.

I have undertaken at some length to point out the abuses and injustice involved in the present execution of the order, and trust that the subject will receive your early attention.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,

Major-General.

[First indorsement.]

DECEMBER 4, 1864.

Mr. SHEPHERD:

Inform General Breckinridge that instructions in conformity with his suggestion as to the employment of these deserters had been previously given and will be repeated.

He is fully authorized to give such employment, especially to foreigners among them, whenever he deems it expedient.

J. A. S.

[Second indorsement.]

DECEMBER 4, 1864.

To Major Carrington, provost-marshal, for consideration and suggestions as to the best course of proceeding in regard to these deserters.

J. A. S.

[Third indorsement.]

DECEMBER 7, 1864.

Respectfully returned to Honorable Secretary of War, calling attention to inclosed report.

I. H. CARRINGTON,

Provost-Marshal.

[Inclosure.]

DEPARTMENT OF EAST TENNESSEE,
Abingdon, December 2, 1864.Hon. J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War:

SIR: During the past month several hundred Yankee deserters have been sent to this post to be forwarded under Order No. 65 across our lines into Kentucky. Many of these men having expressed a strong desire to remain in this neighborhood have been permitted to do so. A list of the names of those thus allowed to remain, some 134 in number, is inclosed. Each of them has given his solemn parole on oath before me that whilst remaining here he would demean himself quietly and peaceably as a friend of the Confederate and State governments, obey all their laws, and give no aid, comfort, &c., to the enemy during this war, &c.

I did not exact an oath of neutrality because I considered that if these men remain here some length of time and establish themselves permanently they might be regarded as having acquired a citizenship which would perhaps at some future time render them liable to military duty, and as an oath of neutrality exacted by the Government might imply a tacit pledge that the party taking it was never to take up arms for either side, there would thus arise an inconsistency if some future policy should require them to render us military service. These men are all artisans, mechanics, teamsters, or laborers, &c., and with very few exceptions foreigners, i. e., from countries other than the United States. They have been employed in the quartermaster's and commissary departments, in the hospitals, and by private individuals in this neighborhood. Before they were permitted to remain they were required to have some place to work offered to them by parties known to the provost-marshal. The demand for skilled labor is very great here, and the conscription will render its necessity still more urgent. These men, having deserted from the Yankee Army, are afraid to return into the Yankee lines, and we have thus a guarantee that they will not injure us.

It seems, then, to me a wise policy to permit such men to remain with us to a certain extent; but as these applications are becoming more numerous, and as the commandant of this post refers to me for advice, and has guided himself in his action by my opinion, I think it proper to state the facts to the Department, as I am not advised what the policy of the Government in this regard may be.

If you think the course pursued improper I will so advise the commandant of the post, and cease to sanction it by administering the above oath and counseling the retention of these men. But if not otherwise instructed I will consider my action approved and direct accordingly.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
WILLIAM D. HENNEN,
Special Commissioner for Department of East Tennessee.

ABINGDON, December 3, 1864.

Names of Yankee deserters claiming the benefits of General Orders, No. 65, and who, having been sent to Abingdon, Va., to be forwarded into the Yankee lines, have been permitted to remain within our lines upon giving their parole and taking an oath before William D. Hennen, special commissioner for Department of East Tennessee, that whilst remaining in the Confederacy they will obey all the laws of the Confederate States and of the State in which they may remain; that they will demean themselves as friends of the Government of said States, and that during this war they will give no aid, comfort, or assistance to the United States, and upon declaring that it is well understood that any violation of said parole or oath is punishable with death.

Done between the 1st of November and 1st of December, 1864.

[Here follows the list of 134 names of the individuals, which is omitted.]

I certify the above list to be correct.

WM. D. HENNEN,

Special Commissioner for Department of East Tennessee.

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION, WAR DEPARTMENT,

Richmond, Va., November 29, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War:

SIR: You informed me this morning that His Excellency the President declined to accept my report to you in response to Senate resolution (referred to this Bureau) concerning the "number of persons in each State exempted from military service upon the certificates of the Governors, respectively," &c., on the ground of the manifest inaccuracy of the returns, and you required me to make proper explanations of those returns. As I am not informed of the specific inaccuracies referred to, I can only explain in general terms.

First. My report is made up from the consolidated monthly reports required by general orders to be made by the commandants of conscripts. A form of these reports furnished by this Bureau is herewith submitted. You will observe that it is a complete analysis of the act of February 17, 1864, using in direct connection and sequence the terms of that act, and providing for returns under every provision of the act. In addition to these reports I have used the reports of my registration officers. In general, the two have nearly conformed in result. These are the only sources provided for this Bureau to obtain information. The agencies employed in the conscript service are extremely defective in proper qualification as well for this as other grave duties, and I have found the utmost difficulty in getting the duties prescribed properly performed even by the highest officers in the service. My control over them and my direction of their duties is so frequently disturbed that their obedience is the act of the loosest volition. In this case my positive orders are that all exemptions for State officers shall be issued by the commandants. One of these officers explains his erroneous returns by charging them on the local officers, thus aggravating his own negligence of duty. His returns came to me under the sanction of the tribunal interposed between this Bureau and the officers of conscription.

Second. I conjecture the inaccuracies indicated by the President are supposed to exist in the returns from the States of North Carolina, Georgia, and Mississippi. The reports from North Carolina from May to October are now in the hands of a special inspector sent to that State. The regular and rapid increase of certified State officers and State employés would indicate accuracy, but on the doubt being expressed I have ordered and have now progressing this special inspection concerning them. It is well known that the laws of North Carolina have created large numbers of officers, and that the Governor of that State has not only claimed exemption for those officers, but for all persons employed in any form by the State of North Carolina, such as workmen in factories, salt makers, &c. This Bureau has no power to enforce the Confederate law in opposition to the Governor's certificates or the claims of a State.

I would respectfully refer you to Governor Vance's correspondence with you on this subject, in which he proposes (to use his own words) "to try title with the Confederate Government" in resisting the claims of the conscript officers to such citizens of North Carolina as he may claim for the proper administration of the laws of the State. In answer to a communication to him on the subject, the commandant for North Carolina now reports to me that his returns are inaccurate and greatly exaggerated. I have the honor to inclose his letter; and unless the report of my inspector relieves him from the confession of the disobedience of orders and false returns, I will be compelled to ask his relief from the conscription service.

In Georgia up to last reports the Governor had certified to 1,012 persons. I respectfully refer you to the correspondence of Governor Brown with yourself and his correspondence with the commandant of conscripts for Georgia referred to you, to show that, besides the 1,012 persons, he claims as not coming under the act of Congress large bodies of the citizens of Georgia, and forbids their enrollment by the Confederate conscript officers. It has been found impracticable to overcome this impediment. It has been frequently reported. The number is supposed to reach about 8,000 men liable to Confederate service.

Herewith is the last report of the commandant of conscripts for that State. In Mississippi the number certified up to the last report is only 110. The Governor of that State decided that his proclamation was sufficient certificate under the law. I beg to refer you to the letter from this Bureau to the Governor on that subject. No response has ever been received, and the results anticipated have been verified by the failure to receive proper returns. It is believed that a large number of persons in that State, withheld by the action of the Governor, have not been brought within the jurisdiction of the conscription officers. The service in that State, from a variety of causes, has not been efficient; but there, as well as elsewhere, you will please to remark that the work is progressive, not concluded; that the reports are of progress, not of final action. They are of what has been ascertained (by no means of what may yet be left) to be done.

I have given the reports, collected and sifted as thoroughly as the data or reasonable construction will allow. I do not regard them as accurate. They cannot be made so unless a uniform permanent system is adopted and maintained, and proper and sufficient agencies are assigned to the duties embraced in the administration of their matter.

With these explanations, I respectfully submit such information as is possessed by this Bureau. In view of the supposed inaccuracies, I will use the most active exertions and all the means under my control speedily to rectify them if they exist.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

P. S.—Since the writing of this note the accompanying special report has been received from Georgia confirming the estimate stated of persons withheld from conscription by the Governor of Georgia.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

CONSCRIPT OFFICE,
Raleigh, N. C., November 24, 1864.

Brig. Gen. JOHN S. PRESTON,
Superintendent of Conscription, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: As advised by telegram of this date, I have the honor to offer the following explanation relative to the discrepancy between the number of State officers as given in the monthly report for September and the number given by telegram yesterday. The discrepancy occurs in the manner in which the enrolling officers make up their monthly reports. For instance, an officer reports for the month of May forty State officers in his county, and in each subsequent report he repeats the same figures, with such additions as may from time to time become necessary, without any explanation. This has been ascertained by comparing their reports, which until recently it has been impossible to do, and now only partially, from the fact that their reports are frequently returned for correction and explanation, and cannot be had at the proper time the revision should be made, and this arises from the irregularity of mail communication, it frequently requiring from three to four weeks to get a communication to and an answer from an officer. I desire respectfully to further state that the same discrepancy (or a corresponding one) occurs under all the heads of exemption, making the aggregate nearly three times as large as it really is. For example, the total number at the date of report for the month of October under the head of "physical disability" is 35,032, whereas it should not exceed 10,000 or 11,000. Measures have been instituted by which I hope to present for November a correct report of each class of exemptions.

Earnestly hoping this explanation will meet your approbation and enable the Bureau to make a safe and reliable calculation of the information required,

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

PETER MALLETT,
Commandant of Conscripts for North Carolina.

P. S.—The registration report recently forwarded through Lieutenant-General Holmes may be relied upon as being the most authentic data it is possible to obtain.

P. M.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

HEADQUARTERS CONSCRIPT SERVICE, GEORGIA,
Augusta, November 25, 1864.

Brig. Gen. J. S. PRESTON,
Superintendent Bureau of Conscription, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram of the 23d instant, calling for the number of each class of exemptions of State officers in Georgia, and, in reply, to inform you that, foreseeing the necessity of this information, I ordered the enrolling officers throughout the State, in the following paragraph of my Circular No. 3, dated May 16, 1864, to collect it:

IV. The most active and continuous efforts of enrolling officers will be directed to perfecting a thorough military registration of all white males resident or found within their respective districts who are between the ages of seventeen and fifty years. This register should embrace all men not already in service, no matter what may be their physical condition or claims to exemption, and should satisfactorily exhibit under the head of "Remarks" the status of each person.

When the registration was called for I found that in most instances the officers had entirely failed to obey this order, and the inspectors assigned by me to superintend the registration could only collect the information partially, for the reasons that many of the militia officers were then in active service and absent from their counties and that there were two districts of the State entirely, one partly, in possession of the enemy. For these reasons I had to ignore the registration returns entirely in getting the information required by the telegram referred to and have to take as a basis upon which to estimate the number of civil officers in the State the Governor's proclamation, claiming all of them as exempt from conscription. To arrive at the probable number of militia officers, who are also claimed by the Governor as exempt, I have taken the late report of the adjutant and inspector general for the State, which shows an organized militia force of eighteen regiments, twenty-one first-class battalions, forty-seven second-class battalions, and eight independent companies. The information obtained in the manner above stated will be found in the inclosed table, which exhibits the whole number of exempts, designating the several classes, and in my opinion may be relied on as accurate. My impression is, from all the information I can gather, that most of the State officers, civil and militia, the latter especially, are composed of able-bodied men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. M. BROWNE,
Colonel and Commandant.

[Sub-inclosure.]

Report of civil officers in the State of Georgia exempt from conscription.

Governor and State-house officers.....	20
Judges supreme court.....	3
Clerks supreme court.....	2
Judges superior court.....	16
Senators.....	44
Representatives.....	169
Justices of the peace.....	1,350
Justices inferior court.....	660
Solicitors.....	16
Clerks superior court.....	132
Deputy clerks superior court.....	132
Clerks and deputy clerks inferior court.....	264
Ordinaries.....	132
Deputy ordinaries.....	132
Sheriffs.....	132
Deputy sheriffs.....	132
Constables.....	1,350
Tax collectors.....	132
Tax receivers.....	132
Jailers.....	132
County treasurers.....	132
Coroners.....	132
County surveyors.....	132
Aggregate.....	5,478

Report of militia officers in the State of Georgia exempt from conscription.

Adjutant and inspector general	1
Quartermaster-general	1
Commissary-general	1
Surgeon-general	1
Chief of ordnance	1
Military store-keeper	1
Aides-de-camp	44
Colonels	18
Lieutenant-colonels	39
Majors	86
Adjutants	86
Surgeons	18
Assistant sugeons	86
Assistant quartermaster-generals	86
Assistant commissaries	86
Captains	549
First lieutenants	549
Second lieutenants	1,098
Aggregate	2,751
Total number civil officers	5,478
Total number militia officers	2,751
Aggregate	8,229

HEADQUARTERS CONSCRIPT SERVICE, GEORGIA,

Augusta, November 25, 1864.

Respectfully submitted to Brig. Gen. John S. Preston, superintendent Bureau of Conscription.

WM. M. BROWNE,

Colonel and Commandant of Conscripts, Georgia.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,

Richmond, Va., June 1, 1864.

His Excellency Governor CLARK,

Macon, Miss.:

GOVERNOR: The Secretary of War referred your telegram of the 13th of May to this Bureau for consideration and reply. The act of Congress "to organize forces to serve during the war, approved 17th of February, 1864," General Orders, No. 26, paragraph II, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, and the instructions of this Bureau under sanction of the Secretary of War, designate the persons to be exempted without the Governor's certificate. Article 2, section 10, of the act of Congress requires that there shall be exempted such other officers as the Governors may certify to be necessary for the proper administration of the State governments. Your Excellency will readily perceive that a general proclamation by a Governor designating classes or individuals would not afford sufficient testimony to the enrolling officer for the identification of the persons claiming to belong to the classes or to be the individuals proclaimed to be exempted. Such identification could only be proved by the claimant exhibiting the certificate required by law. An enrolling officer accepting any proof less certain than that prescribed in emphatic terms by the act of Congress would certainly be derelict, and such admission would open the way to serious detriment to the service.

It is earnestly hoped by the Secretary of War that these considerations will induce Your Excellency to waive the demand of your telegraphic dispatch, and issue the legal certificates to such officers as you deem necessary for the proper administration of the State Government.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Colonel and Superintendent.

[Inclosure No. 4.]

Monthly return for August, 1864, enrolling department of Georgia, commanded by Col. William M. Browne.

NUMBER AND STATUS OF PERSONS EMPLOYED IN ENROLLING DEPARTMENT OF GEORGIA.

	Colonels.	Lieutenant-colonels.	Majors.	Captains.	Contract physicians.	First lieutenants.	Second lieutenants.	Non-commissioned officers.	Privates.	Conscripts—18 and 45.	Conscripts—45 and 50.	Total.
ENROLLING CORPS.
Commandant of conscript .....	1											1
Adjutant and assistants, and clerks at headquarters.....				1		2	2			7	1	13
Congressional district and enrolling officers.....			1	3		3	2					9
Assistants and clerks to enrolling officers.....						3	1					4
Sub-enrolling officers .....				7		4	8	20	9	187	135	370
Assistants and clerks to sub-enrolling officers.....
Inspectors of conscription .....			1	2								3
Chief quartermaster.....				1								1
Advisory boards.....
MEDICAL CORPS.
Chief surgeon at headquarters.....			1									1
Examining boards and clerks.....			12	8	6							26
Surgeons at camps.....			1	1								2
CAMPS OF INSTRUCTION.
Commandant of camps.....			1									1
Quartermaster.....				1								1
Commissary .....			1	1								1
Adjutants of camps .....				1			1					1
Drill-masters .....						1	10					11
Camp guards .....								12	98			110
SUPPORTING FORCE.
— companies.....				6		6	12	50	394			468
Disabled soldiers assigned, paragraph V, Orders 96, 1862.....				1		1		2	15			19
Conscripts assigned under section 8 .....									1			1
Absent with leave a .....			3	3	1					3
Absent without leave.....
Total .....	1		17	32	6	20	36	84	517	194	136	1,043

a Not reckoned in total.

Monthly return for August, 1864, enrolling department of Georgia, &c.—Continued.

OPERATIONS OF ENROLLING DEPARTMENT.

	During the month.				Total to date of report.
	Between 18 and 45.	Between 17 and 18.	Between 45 and 50.	Total.	Between 18 and 45.	Between 17 and 18.	Between 45 and 50.	Total.
Enrolled for field service.....	488	46	106	640	7,542	777	1,778	10,097
Enrolled for service under section 8.....	204	7	56	267	1,496	45	331	1,872
Volunteers enrolled.....		22	32	54	1	41	64	106
Total.....	692	75	194	961	9,039	863	2,173	12,075
Assignment to field service:
To infantry—
Conscripts.....	89	31	57	177				6,620
Volunteers.....
To artillery—
Conscripts.....	1		1	2				725
Volunteers.....
To cavalry—
Conscripts.....	1			1				586
Volunteers.....
To Navy—
Conscripts.....	2			2				360
Volunteers.....
To engineers—
Conscripts.....	91			91				176
Volunteers.....
Total.....	184	31	58	273				8,467
Assignment under section 8:
To conscription service.....	15			15	107		13	120
To Quartermaster's Department.....	12		1	13	97	2	12	111
To Commissary Department.....	7		1	8	44	1	4	49
To Ordnance Department.....	4		1	5	20		5	25
To Engineer Department.....					4			4
To Navy Department.....					1		2	3
To Post-Office Department.....
To Medical Department.....	54	1	13	68	171	3	29	203
To Treasury Department.....
To Niter and Mining Department.....
To provost guard.....	29		6	35	137	2	19	158
To post guard.....
To camp guard.....	2			2	47	2	3	52
To hospital guard.....
To bridge guard.....
To similar duties.....							1	1
Total.....	123	1	22	146	628	10	88	726

Deserters and absentees without leave arrested and returned to the Army this month..... 574
 Total number of deserters and absentees arrested and returned to the Army to date..... 4,366

NUMBER AND CLASSIFICATION OF EXEMPTIONS UNDER ACT.

Classifications.	During the month.				Outstanding at date of report.
	Between 18 and 45.	Between 17 and 18.	Between 45 and 50.	Total.	Between 18 and 45.	Between 17 and 18.	Between 45 and 50.	Total.
Physical disability.....	182	15	28	225	2,053	81	263	2,397
Confederate officers.....
State officers.....	50	1	6	57	979	3	30	1,012
Ministers of religion.....	67		16	83	224		56	280
Superintendent and physicians [to] deaf, dumb, and blind.....					15		3	18
Editors.....	2			2	2			2
Newspaper employes.....	8	3	1	12	107	4	5	116
Confederate public printer and employes.....

Monthly return for August, 1864, enrolling department of Georgia, &c.—Continued.

NUMBER AND CLASSIFICATION OF EXEMPTIONS UNDER ACT—Continued.

Classifications.	During the month.				Outstanding at date of report.
	Between 18 and 45.	Between 17 and 18.	Between 45 and 50.	Total.	Between 18 and 45.	Between 17 and 18.	Between 45 and 50.	Total.
State public printer and employés .....
Apothecaries .....	7			7	34		2	36
Physicians .....	87		19	106	302		81	383
Presidents and teachers of colleges, schools, &c.	29		2	31	126		14	140
Superintendents, physicians, and nurses in public hospitals .....
Overseers and agriculturists .....	210		28	238	874	3	269	1,046
Railroad officers and employés .....					849	18	131	998
Mail contractors .....	1			1	7			7
Drivers post coaches and hacks .....	1			1	5		1	6
Non-combatants .....
Foreigners .....	11			11	11			11
By order of War Department .....
Total .....	655	19	100	774	5,588	109	856	6,553

DETAILS FOR AGRICULTURAL AND NECESSARY PURPOSES.

Classifications.	During the month.				Total at date of report.
	Between 18 and 45.	Between 17 and 18.	Between 45 and 50.	Total.	Between 18 and 45.	Between 17 and 18.	Between 45 and 50.	Total.
Agricultural details:
Owners or managers with over 15 hands....	56		17	73	298	2	63	273
Owners or managers with between 10 and 15 hands.	36		19	55	107		72	179
Owners or managers with between 5 and 10 hands.	31		13	44	127	1	140	268
Owners or managers with less than 5 hands.	8		8	16	50	3	104	157
Miscellaneous .....	20	8	38	66	25	8	47	80
Total .....	151	8	95	254	517	14	426	957
On account of public necessity:
To railroad companies .....		1		1	182	16	34	232
To telegraph companies .....					3			3
To navigation companies .....					6			6
To cotton and wool factories .....	88	4	11	103	162	11	24	197
To paper mills .....					9		2	11
To iron manufactories .....	5			5	12		1	13
To foundries .....					12	2	4	18
To printing establishments .....					2	2		4
To fire department .....
To police department .....	1			1	35		9	44
To gas works .....
To salt manufactories .....	4			4	24		2	26
Shoemakers .....	28		12	40	62	2	29	93
Tanners .....	16		3	19	26		9	35
Blacksmiths .....	40		15	55	70		35	105
Millers and mill engineers .....	38		3	41	61		13	74
Millwrights .....	1		1	2	8		5	13
Ferry-men .....	1			1	1		1	2
Wheelwrights .....	10		7	17	16		11	27
Wagon makers .....	2			2	8		12	20
Indigent circumstances .....	20	4	2	26	40	5	54	99
Express company .....					40		5	45
Equity, justice, and necessity .....	16		23	39	24	4	104	132
Miscellaneous .....	34		11	45	51		14	65
Total .....	304	9	88	401	854	42	368	1,264

Monthly return for August, 1864, enrolling department of Georgia, &c.—Continued.

DETAILS FOR GOVERNMENT SERVICE.

Classifications.	During the month.				Total at date of report.
	Between 18 and 45.	Between 17 and 18.	Between 45 and 50.	Total.	Between 18 and 45.	Between 17 and 18.	Between 45 and 50.	Total.
Bureaus and departments (not including contractors or artisans, mechanics, &amp;c.):
Conscription Department.....	37			37	105		30	135
Quartermaster's Department.....	14		5	19	98	2	55	155
Commissary Department.....	15		3	18	115	2	32	149
Ordnance Department.....	20		1	21	39	5	5	49
Engineer Department.....	13		7	20	20	1	8	29
Navy Department.....	15			15	38	1	6	45
Post-Office Department.....	1			1	9		2	11
Medical Department.....	6	2	1	9	14	2	7	23
Treasury Department.....	1			1	23		3	26
Niter and Mining Bureau.....	1			1	1			1
Miscellaneous.....	5			5	6			6
Total.....	128	2	17	147	468	13	148	629
Of contractors to furnish supplies:
In Quartermaster's Department.....	8			8	26		5	31
In Commissary Department.....	3		1	4	6		2	8
In Ordnance Department.....	3			3	64	3	4	71
In Engineer Department.....	22		2	24	25		3	28
In Navy Department.....					1			1
In Post-Office Department.....	1			1	1			1
In Medical Department.....	1			1	1			1
In Treasury Department.....
In Niter and Mining Bureau.....
Total.....	38		3	41	124	3	14	141
Of artisans, mechanics, &amp;c.:
To Quartermaster's Department.....	2		2	4	97	5	23	125
To contractors with Quartermaster's Department.....	7			7	76	2	7	85
To Commissary Department.....					4		1	5
To contractors with Commissary Department.....	1			1	5			5
To Ordnance Department.....	44	2		46	47	2	2	51
To contractors with Ordnance Department.....	2			2	26			26
To Engineer Department.....
To contractors with Engineer Department.....
To Navy Department.....					2			2
To contractors with Navy Department.....	7			7	9		1	10
To Post-Office Department.....
To contractors with Post-Office Department.....
To Medical Department.....
To contractors with Medical Department.....	3			3	4			4
To Treasury Department.....
To contractors with Treasury Department.....
To Niter and Mining Bureau.....
To contractors with Niter and Mining Bureau.....	3			3	181	2	12	195
Total.....	69	2	2	73	451	11	46	508

HEADQUARTERS CONSCRIPTION SERVICE, GEORGIA,
Augusta, September 13, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded to Brig. Gen. John S. Preston, superintendent Bureau of Conscription.

WM. M. BROWNE,
Colonel and Commandant.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Richmond, November 30, 1864.

THE SECRETARY OF WAR:

SIR: The act of Congress of June 14, 1864, authorizes the Surgeon-General and Commissary-General, for the purpose of obtaining supplies of whisky, brandy, and other spirituous liquors for the Army and hospitals, to establish distilleries for the manufacture of the same instead of resorting to contracts. I learn from the papers transmitted by you that under the authority of the act the Surgeon-General has established a distillery at Buchanan, in the State of Virginia, for the purpose of distilling spirituous liquors exclusively for the Army and hospitals, and that the circuit court for Botetourt County, under the authority of a law of Virginia prohibiting distillation, has issued an attachment ordering the sheriff to seize and take into his possession the distillery, grain, and all the material belonging to the Government, and that a criminal prosecution has been instituted in said court against the officer having the management of the distillery for the Government.

Upon examination of the several statutes of Virginia upon the subject of distillation it would seem to be the better construction that the prohibitions which they declare are directed not against the operations of the Confederate Government in manufacturing spirituous liquors by its own agents and exclusively for its own use, but against those of private citizens distilling under contracts with the Government. But admitting this view to be incorrect and assuming the action taken in this case to be authorized by those statutes, then they are in this respect plainly unconstitutional.

Virginia, in common with her sister States, has accepted the Constitution of the Confederate States as her supreme law, which displaces and overrules all other conflicting laws. That Constitution confers upon Congress in the fullest and broadest terms the power "to raise and support armies." Of what avail is this power if it can be so easily rendered nugatory by State legislation? If the Legislatures of the States can prohibit and prevent any one of the steps necessary in the process of raising and supporting armies, they may prohibit and prevent them all. If they can prohibit the manufacture by the Government of hospital supplies, they can prohibit the manufacture of powder, arms, and all the munitions of war, and the enlistment of men, and so the whole war power of the Confederate Government would be prostrate at the feet of the State Legislatures. I deem it unnecessary to elaborate the argument, as the very point in question has lately been twice presented for the consideration of the Attorney-General and decided in accordance with the views here expressed.

I have the honor to inclose you copies of the opinions of 18th of December, 1863, and 7th of March, 1864, in which you will find the subject fully considered. In regard to the course to be pursued by the Government, upon which I am requested to advise you, as a conflict of force with the authorities of a State ought only to be resorted to in a case of extreme emergency, if ever, there is but one remedy left, and that is to defend the suits in the court below, and, if necessary, take them by appeal to the highest tribunal of the State. I have every confidence that they will be adjudicated by that tribunal with a due regard to the constitutional rights of the Confederate States, as well as to those of the State of Virginia.

As the Surgeon-General intimates that delay may be injurious, and as the Legislature of Virginia is so soon to assemble, I respectfully suggest that the matter be laid before the Governor, with a request that he will call it to the attention of the Legislature, and thus give them an occasion, of which I doubt not they will readily avail themselves, so to modify their legislation as not to interfere with the exercise of the just powers of the Confederate States.

GEO. DAVIS,
Attorney-General.

[Inclosure No 1.]

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Richmond, December 18, 1863.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: It appears from the papers submitted for my opinion that in September, 1862, a contract was made with the medical purveyor, C. S. Army, by a citizen of Virginia to supply the Confederate Government with whisky for army purposes. On the 12th of March, 1863, the Legislature of Virginia declared it a penal offense for any person thereafter "to make or cause to be made any whisky or other spirituous or malt liquors out of any corn, wheat, rye, or other grain," and at a subsequent session, on the 31st of October, 1863, it expressly prohibited, under severe penalties, the fulfillment of any contract for making of ardent spirits which had been or might thereafter be made with the Confederate Government or any of its agents. The question presented is whether the present distillation of whisky from grain in Virginia under the contract subjects the contractor to the statutory penalties. It is a fundamental principle of our public law that sovereignty belongs only to the people of each State. The people of each State, by virtue of their sovereignty, have established two distinct governments—the State government, established by the separate action of the people of each State; the Confederate Government, by the people of each State, acting in a sovereign and independent character in conjunction with the peoples of the other States. Both governments were established for the benefit of those who created them, the State government for the benefit of the people of the State, the Confederate Government for the benefit of the peoples of the several Confederate States.

Certain powers were delegated to the Confederate Government, and certain powers were intrusted to the State government. It was not intended that either government should be a check or an obstacle to the legitimate action of the other, and hence it was declared that powers not delegated were reserved; and it was provided that the legitimate action of the Confederate Government should be the supreme law of the land. But neither government can act directly upon the other, except in certain judicial cases. They are distinct and independent governments, acting separately, but acting upon the same persons and the same things. Both are governments of powers limited in number, and in some cases at least limited in extent. The powers are express and implied, and so also are the limitations express and implied. Thus the power of the Confederate Government to raise armies cannot be so exercised as to destroy the State government by the conscription of the officers necessary to its existence; nor under the power to lay and collect taxes can Congress lay a tax upon a state-house, or upon a county jail, or upon the income of a State. These are but examples. So a State government, though its power of taxation be unlimited by express words, cannot tax the amount of customs received by the Confederate collector at a sea-port town within the limits of the State, nor the dock-yards, nor the foundries, nor the amount of direct taxes in the hands of a tax collector of the Confederate Government. These are but examples also, and to them may be added this further illustration. The State government has the power, unlimited by express words, to define and punish future offenses, and yet it cannot punish as an offense an act which the Confederate Government has the power to authorize and which is done under its authority. If the party exceeds the authority under which he acts or the authority itself exceeds the power, the party is, of course, amenable to the State law for his action so far as it is not within the constitutional authority of the Confederate Government. Powers cannot be executed by the mere written expression of legislative will. Men must be employed to execute and means must be used to fulfill, and any men may be employed and any means may be used not expressly nor impliedly prohibited by the principles of our public law. Thus, under the powers to declare war and support armies the Confederate Government is authorized to procure powder. It may employ agents to purchase it in foreign countries or it may establish mills and employ persons to manufacture it, or it may contract with citizens of the several States to manufacture it in mills of their own. There is no principle of public law which expressly or impliedly prohibits the Confederate Government from manufacturing powder within a State, nor any which prohibits the citizens of a State from contracting with the Confederate Government to manufacture it within the limits of a State. Nor is there any such prohibition upon the use of the materials employed in making powder. And therefore it is that a citizen of a State who is manufacturing powder exclusively for the use of the Confederate Government under a contract with it cannot be subjected to the penalties of a State law forbidding it. But if he were to manufacture also for himself or for other individuals or for other governments he would be liable to all the penalties of the State law. And so is the rule in regard to provisions, medicines, and other army supplies. Spirituous liquors being amongst the supplies required for the Army, my opinion is that persons who manufacture whisky in Virginia exclusively for the Confederate Government under a contract with it are not liable to the penalties of the State statutes. It is true that great frauds may be practiced upon the policy of a State under cover of such a contract. But all powers and trusts are liable to be abused, and abuse furnishes as little evidence of the non-existence of a power as the exercise of a power does of its existence.

Some of the difficulties in questions of this kind may be seen in McCulloch, of the State of Maryland, et al., 4 Wheaton, 316; Osborn vs. the U. S. Bank, 9 Wheaton, 738; Weston vs. the City Council of Charleston, 2 Peters, 449; License Cases, 5 Howard, 504; Passenger Cases, 7 Howard, 283, &c., and in the works of John Taylor, of Caroline. It is easy to find cases which may readily be determined in favor of the State, and as easy to find cases which may as readily be determined in favor of the Confederate Government, but the difficulties are in ascertaining the principle upon which they are determined and in giving to that principle a precision of expression. Take these cases: The Confederate Government has the power to raise armies by conscription, yet it cannot conscribe and liberate a person imprisoned under a criminal process of a State. It has the power to tax, yet it cannot lay a tax upon the public buildings of a State. It has the power to impress, yet it cannot impress the governmental property of a State nor property in the governmental use of a State. On the other hand, the State has the power to tax, and yet it cannot tax the Confederate ships of war which lie in its waters, nor can it tax a dock-yard belonging to the Confederate States, nor its foundries. It has the power to define and punish offenses, and yet, as has been said, it cannot punish an act done under the legitimate authority of the Confederate Government. In these cases it is the use of a person, or the use or ownership of a thing which excepts the person or thing from the operation of the other government. The use of a person by the Confederate Government, for example, does not discharge such person from other liability to State law. Hence, if the person employed by the Confederate Government to distill spirituous liquors commits murder or larceny, or exceeds, as has been said, the authority given in the particular case, he may be seized by the State and subjected to the penalties prescribed by its statutes. There are four classes of cases in which the exercise of powers may present questions of this kind:

First. Cases of exclusive power in one government.

Second. Cases of concurrent powers.

Third. Cases in which dissimilar powers are exercised upon the same person or thing.

Fourth. Cases in which the person or thing upon which the power is exercised is governmental, as in the cases above stated, of a state-house, &c.

In none of these cases, however, can there ever be a conflict of power, according to the true theory of the governments, for whenever there is a rightful exercise of power upon a person or thing by one government there is an absence of opposing power in the other. Many cases may be resolved by remembering, whether it be in one government or the other, that military authority is subordinate to civil authority, and that criminal jurisdiction is not affected by the other branch of civil authority, except where the civil authority itself is made penal, as in this case.

But I need not pursue the point. The contract was a lawful one at the time it was made, and the subsequent legislation of the State cannot have the effect to make the performance of it illegal and thus to render it null and void, for that would be a violation of the constitutional provision which prohibits a State from passing any law impairing the obligation of contracts. The prohibition is general, and excludes both executed and executory contracts. Any contract which can be impaired by a State law must, therefore, be an exception to the prohibitory provision. But there is no principle which excepts contracts with the Confederate Government for army supplies from the constitutional provision. The impairing of the obligation of such contracts is therefore prohibited to the States, and the prohibition in this way operates as a limitation upon the general powers of the States to define and punish offenses.

A State has, however, the undoubted right to make and enforce police regulations; not regulations which shall defeat the legitimate action of the Confederate Government, but regulations to inspect, for example, the conduct of the men and the use of the means employed by the Confederate Government, and to secure the punishment of any unauthorized action on the part of its agents, employés, or contractors which is in violation of the State laws. Both governments in this way exercise their legitimate powers and all conflict is avoided, and thus that harmony of action is preserved which the people intended, and which every good citizen desires so earnestly to promote in governments equally his own.

In conclusion it is perhaps well to say that the ground upon which this case ought to rest is the first one, viz, that the Confederate Government has the express power "to support armies;" that any means may be used which are "necessary and proper" to obtain supplies for that support; that a contract with a citizen of a State is a means of obtaining them, and that it is a means both necessary and proper; that a State has not the power to forbid the fulfillment of a contract which the Confederate Government has the authority to make, and that, therefore, the act of the 12th of March does not apply to such a contractor, and the act of the 31st of October, expressly forbidding the fulfillment of such a contract, is a nullity.

Your obedient servant,

WADE KEYES,
Attorney-General ad interim.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Richmond, March 7, 1864.

Hon. S. R. MALLORY,
Secretary of the Navy:

SIR: Your letter of the 3d instant informs me that the Navy Department is erecting a distillery in South Carolina for the sole purpose of distilling whisky for the use of the Navy of the Confederate States; that the Governor of that State has required your agent to discontinue the work on the ground that the laws of the State prohibit the establishment of distilleries, and the question you propose is, how far the State has the power to prohibit distillation for the purpose aforesaid. The question has very lately been before this Department and received a careful consideration. A contract had been made by the War Department with a citizen of Virginia to supply the Army with whisky. Afterward the Legislature of Virginia passed an act which expressly prohibited, under severe penalties, the fulfillment of any contract for distilling ardent spirits which had been or might thereafter be made with the Confederate Government or any of its agents. The question was submitted by the Secretary of War to the Attorney-General ad interim, Judge Keyes, who held, in an elaborate opinion (a copy of which I send inclosed*), that the act of Virginia was unconstitutional and void. In that conclusion I fully concur. That was the case of a citizen of the unwilling State contracting with the Government to furnish supplies; but the present case is much stronger. It is that of the Government itself, through one of its departments, manufacturing necessary supplies by its own agents and exclusively for its own use. I can see no foundation whatever for any authority in a State thus to obstruct the action of the Government. The States by their own voluntary consent have made the Constitution of the Confederate States their supreme law, before which all other laws must yield. That Constitution empowers Congress "to provide and maintain a navy." A State cannot prevent Congress from providing a navy by prohibiting the building of ships or the enlistment of seamen within its borders. Neither can it prevent the maintenance of a navy already provided by prohibiting the procurement of the necessary supplies. Both powers are full and complete, and are limited only by the exigencies of the public service. They were intended to be beyond the control of the States, and they must be so, or else they become a mere nullity.

*Next, ante.

Your obedient servant,

GEO. DAVIS,
Attorney-General.

---

OFFICE COMMANDANT OF CONSCRIPTS,
Montgomery, Ala., November 30, 1864.

JOHN C. BURCH,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Hdqrs. Reserve Forces, Montgomery, Ala.:

The unwillingness with which conscripts now take service in the Army, the tardiness with which men return to their commands at the expiration of furloughs, and the presence of a very large and increasing number of deserters from the Army, as well as the great reluctance with which citizens respond to the call for the impressment or employment of slave labor, make it absolutely necessary that officers employed in the conscription service should be supplied with an adequate and effective force to enable them to enforce orders prescribing and regulating their duties. There are now on the "Deserter book" of this office the names of 7,994 deserters or absentees from Alabama regiments in the armies of Tennessee and Northern Virginia. These names have all been recorded since the 1st day of April, 1864. The monthly report of this office for October, 1864, shows that 4,323 of these men have been returned to their commands, leaving 3,671 still reported as absent and in the State. Within the last two months, and since Atlanta fell, no lists of deserters have been furnished from the Army of Tennessee, though information from nearly every county of the State shows a large increase in the number of deserters and absentees from the Army, so that the number may be safely set down at 6,000, making an average of nearly 300 to the county. In many of the counties of this State bordering on Florida, Georgia, and Mississippi officers of the conscription service are totally unable to enforce orders, because of the presence of armed bands of deserters and tory citizens. In addition to the above, I have been furnished by Brig. Gen. D. W. Adams with a list of 351 absentees or deserters from eight companies of the Third Regiment of Alabama Reserves, whose furloughs expired on the 1st of November. These men are all over forty-five years of age and are residents of the counties of Marengo, Greene, Sumter, Pickens, Perry, Dallas, Shelby, Bibb, Tuscaloosa, Talladega, and Randolph. The lowest number of absentees given from any one company is thirty-seven; the highest sixty-nine.

No list has been furnished from one company of the regiment, as there are no officers present to furnish the list. Information from other companies of reserves shows a like number of absentees and deserters. These lists of absentees from the reserves exhibit proof of the fact that the orders of the major-general commanding and the Secretary of War are totally disregarded in some of the most wealthy and enlightened counties in the State. It devolves upon enrolling officers to return all those men to their commands and enforce the orders of the War Department in relation to the impressment and forwarding of slaves, in addition to their legitimate duties of enrolling conscripts and forwarding them to camps of instruction. Under existing orders and regulations only one commissioned officer is allowed to a county, and he must be a disabled officer. Each disabled county officer is allowed three light-duty men as assistants and three men over forty-five years of age to act as members of the Advisory Board. One company, composed of old men or men unfit for field service, is allowed to each Congressional district as a supporting force. These companies, divided into detachments, give an average of about twelve or fifteen men to each county. These detachments have never been furnished with arms or equipments by the Government, though requisitions have been repeatedly made. They are only partially armed with almost worthless guns, such as could be picked up through the country. The supply of ammunition is very small, and, of course, entirely unsuited to the guns in a majority of cases. So the force in each county may be summed up as follows: Commissioned officers (disabled), 1; assistants (disabled soldiers), 3; Advisory Board (old men), 3; supporting force (old men and disabled men, unarmed), 15; total, 22. It is plain that more armed men are required to perform the labor now required of the Bureau of Conscription in this State, and unless material strength is added it will be impossible to execute orders with that promptness which the necessities of the general service so imperatively demand. The failure on the part of the reserves to reassemble in obedience to orders gives hope to the disloyal and great encouragement to deserters from the Regular Army to remain at home and resist authority. I have written this much with the hope that the major-general in charge of conscription in this State may be able to provide an adequate remedy or make such representations to the Secretary of War as will secure the same.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. C. LOCKHART,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Commandant, Alabama.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES OF ALABAMA,

Montgomery, December 1, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded, earnestly invoking the attention of the Department to the deplorable condition of the conscript service in this State, as correctly represented in this communication. For the correction of the evil and enforcement of the laws the present system is most inadequate. A supporting force composed of parties unfit for field service or over forty-five years of age is absolutely worthless under the now existing circumstances. Those unfit for field service are physically incapacitated for the active, energetic, and continuous service demanded to be efficient; and those over forty-five years of age have no heart for the work, are discontented, undisciplined, homesick, selfish, and have shown themselves unreliable. In addition to the arms called for by the commandant (and which without radical changes in the system would avail nothing), if the Government will confer on me authority to raise and accept volunteer companies of boys sixteen years of age, officered by cadets from the university, and to organize into a brigade the entire reserve cavalry, so as to give force to the zeal of the boy companies, I do not hesitate to give assurances to the Government that the present disgraceful demoralization in the State, as truly represented by Lieutenant-Colonel Lockhart, shall not be permitted to continue many months.

J. M. WITHERS,
Major-General.

[Second indorsement.]

WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, December 28, 1864.

Respectfully referred for consideration of the Secretary of War.

There can be no doubt about the existence of the evils alluded to, but (as explained by Major-General Withers) the Bureau is without adequate means and agencies to remedy them. Perhaps the views expressed in the demerits of the material of the supporting force are too gloomy; but there is a difficulty about so officering them and controlling them as to attain energy and activity when we have to look mainly to disabled material. The practical suggestions of the general of reserves seem to merit consideration. As exhibiting the necessity for proper and sufficient material for this important work, it may not be inappropriate here to state that there has been issued from this Bureau since the 1st of September, 1864, a separate order in each case for the arrest and return of 30,000 absentees and deserters to their commands.

G. W. LAY,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Acting Superintendent.

[Third indorsement.]

DECEMBER 30, 1864.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

Do not the powers of the commandant of reserves authorize him to do all required above except organize youths of sixteen? I doubt the policy of that measure, and, besides, fear the President would not sanction officers so young, &c. Advise.

J. A. S.,
Secretary.

[Fourth indorsement.]

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
January 14, 1865.

Respectfully returned to the Honorable Secretary of War.

No returns or other information in regard to these supporting forces are forwarded to this office. They have been organized under the orders of the Bureau of Conscription, and were originally composed of light-duty men and men found unfit for field service. Since the reserves have been organized the generals commanding have been authorized to detail reserves for this service. It would seem, therefore, that General Withers has power to reform these organizations by the detail of men suited to the duty from the reserve force. Probably the demands for active service at Mobile have made it inexpedient for him to do so. If that be the case, it does not appear that any action of the War Department can remedy the difficulty, unless the organization he suggests be authorized. That authority would be contrary to the almost uniform policy of the Department.

By order:

JOHN BLAIR HOGE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Fifth indorsement.]

JANUARY 23, 1865.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

Indorsement of Major Hoge approved. Answer General Withers, as suggested, and say that though the Department has doubted the policy of enlisting youths under seventeen, he is authorized with assent of parents to do so as far he deems expedient.

J. A. S.,
Secretary.

WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, ———.*

Hon. WILLIAM PORCHER MILES:

My DEAR SIR: In submitting a portion of my last report on the matter of conscription, together with a few other papers,† to your inspection, will you allow me to add, by way of indirect comment, some reflections on the policy of the laws? In these papers the question at issue is not whether Major-General Kemper or Brigadier-General Preston shall control conscription, nor even whether the general of reserves or the superintendent of the Bureau of Conscription shall administer the law of Congress under the instruction of the Secretary of War, although I think, with respect to the latter, a question ought to be firmly made. The true issue is, whether the law of Congress is that conscription is to be determined by pure military authority and administered by military force, and on principles of mere military regulation, or whether it is a law covering and protecting civil and personal rights, and at the same time providing that the wants of the Government are to be supplied by a process which, after adjudication, may be enforced by military power. To my mind there can be no clearer exposition of the meaning of the law than is fairly deducible from its affirmations and omissions. The predominant and pervading principle, inferable from every clause, is that Congress intended to make a law which would keep as distinct as (under the circumstances of the country) could by possibility be achieved the creation and maintenance of the armies from their organization and movement. The principle is one which no nation, wise toward its strength and liberty, has ever departed from, except under the exigency of despotic military rulers, or the "last extremity," as it was called in Rome, when dictators were appointed.

In ordinary wars, where levies are made for foreign or local service, it is a matter of course that armies are raised by ordinary civil agencies; but in wars in which the whole population and the whole production of a country (the soldiers and the subsistence of armies) are to be put on a war footing, where every institution is to be made auxiliary to war, where every citizen and every industry is to have for the time but the one attribute—that of contributing to the public defense—then there must be established new forms of power, fitted for the grave duty of directing and controlling these contributions, with least injury to the citizen, least danger to public liberty, and most vigor in the public defense. The Congress has cautiously designated what these contributions shall be, and because we are in the state, in the circumstances, of war, has designated their supreme war minister to administer them. It is just here, then, where, in view of the public welfare, the public liberty, and the public defense (and the fact that the two first are dependent on the strength of the last), that the wisest caution and most prudent direction are to be exercised. The supreme Congress must yield largely to executive and ministerial authority; but the case has never occurred in modern days when it was deemed necessary to yield to the extent of giving to military force the authority to determine the rights of citizens, and to choose the means of creating and maintaining the armies. After such rights and such means are indicated by law, and the war minister determines them in a state of war, the provisions of the public defense may be enforced by military powers. The executive and ministerial departments are then bound to decide on these rights and means, according to the law, by tribunals instituted in the spirit of the law, and to enforce them so as to meet the requirements of the condition (of war) of the country.

* Without date, but probably written late in November or early in December, 1864.

† Papers referred to not found as inclosures and not otherwise identified. But see Preston to Davis and Seddon, October 18; Preston to Seddon, October 20; Preston to Seddon, October 22; Preston to Campbell, November 3, and Preston to Seddon, November 5, pp. 737, 742, 744, 780, 785.

As yet I am not aware that any wise or honest executive has ever given that decision to their military commanders in the field (to those whose commands may be enlarged, or sustained, by violating these rights, or wasting the means of public defense and thereby endangering public liberty), and who are supposed to be absorbed in the appropriate duty of organizing, disciplining, and moving the armies, the creation and subsistence of which are provided for by the state. The practiced and skilled Adjutant-General, the organizer of the armies, recognizes this by declining to have anything to do with conscription except clerically—to issue the general orders concerning it—which is of itself an error; for the Adjutant and Inspector General, the organizer, should have not even this connection with the levying and maintaining of armies. The admirably wise General Lee, the military leader of the armies, recognizes this principle in his whole course. He calls on the Government for men and arms and subsistence. He does not send out brigades to decide who are the men the law allows him, or what the law prescribes, to make him arms and food. He asks for the things, not the making of them; that is the business of the Congress and of Mr. Seddon. The whole tone and terms of the great law of April, 1862, and its amendments, and the law of 17th of February, 1864, with marked and unmistakable caution avoid every approach to the faintest shadow of military conscription. They provide modes of creating, maintaining, and organizing armies by "An act to provide for the public defense," and "An act to organize forces to serve during the war," their main features being to provide the means of maintaining these armies by cherishing and forcing the industrial productions of the country. The Adjutant-General's Office, the military office of the President and the Secretary of War, is charged with organization into armies of the men and means provided by Congress, and with the instruction of the military commanders as to the discipline and movement of those armies. This is strictly military business.

But war is not confined to merely the military business to organize, discipline, and movement. War embraces the legislative action and the civil process necessary to the creation of armies; it embraces the Treasury, the Department of Justice, the civil and social institutions, the industries and productions, the support and protection of the people. The military condition is a necessary, but merely incidental and partial, element of a state of war, and to be controlled always by the capacity of the country to maintain it. During the prevalence of that condition the machine of state must be conducted always with a view to the accumulated difficulties and dangers imposed upon it; and the armies are the result of the judicious working of the machinery, not the machine itself. Undertake to make or maintain armies by the means of the armies themselves and you establish military despotism or you certainly fail in the purpose. In free countries you will inevitably fail. No wise Government has ever permitted the experiment. Cromwell would not undertake it; and seventy years after his time England refused to allow Marlborough to enforce enlistments. But Bolingbroke, the war minister, created the armies with which Marlborough fought at Blenheim and Ramillies; and eighty years later (seventy years ago) Carnot, the war minister, sent 1,200,000 men to the borders of France, while French industry (the means of maintaining them) was improved beyond anything before known in France. In the intense state of war which exists in the Confederate States it is wise and necessary to refer every act of Government and to require, by law, every interest to be referred to strengthening the public defense by means of the military power. The efficiency of the public defense is made up of other elements besides the numbers of the military forces. Who shall judge of the aptitude and application of these elements? Surely not the military chiefs, whose vocation is to use them, not to make them. The absolute rule of all experience and logic is that the state makes armies, the generals fight them. A departure from this rule always has and necessarily must weaken the public defense and endanger the public liberty. And there can be no departure from it more dangerous than that of giving to purely military authorities the power to decide upon the necessities of the country in view of the maintenance of its armies.

Recognizing this course of argument and these principles, General Orders, Nos. 30 and 82, of 1862, and No. 26, of 1864, were issued. (It might be said very properly that these orders ought to have issued directly from the Secretary of War and not from the office of organization.) They gave a complete exposition of the purposes and policy of the laws and organized a system of administration of great innate energy. The impediments to their thorough execution have been the active opposition to the law by State authorities, the resistance of communities and individuals. The expanded territory and sparse population, the want of apt and efficient agencies, but above all, the interference, authorized and unauthorized, of the military authorities. I have no hesitation in saying that if there is a man to-day out of the service who ought by law to be in it, it is owing very largely to the failure to supply the conscription organization with proper agencies, to the authorized interference of military authority, and to the failure in recognizing conscription as disconnected from, independent of, and uncontrolled by military authority. I have doubted—even though we are in the “very circumstance” of war—the policy of employing officers holding military commissions in this service, except for enforcing the decrees of conscription tribunals. What these errors have led to west of the Mississippi is not of record. The pro-consul for that region is a wise statesman as well as a soldier, and it is believed he has been prudent and judicious. The results east of the Mississippi are known, and the conclusions I have indicated are most unhappily sustained by them. Four States were harried for eight months by a loose army of 6,000 men under the name of a conscription organization; millions of dollars were expended, the country wasted, the people vexed, and scarcely a soldier sent to the armies. And yet, during the whirlwind of clamor and dust, it was gravely urged by the highest military officers that the same system should be established throughout the Confederate States. Fortunately for the public service the system collapsed, and yet while the Secretary of War was engaged in gathering up the fragments from the storm in the west it burst out again at Richmond, under the erroneous construction of General Orders, No. 73, 1864, and the series which followed that order. There never has been, there is not now, and there never can be any necessity for placing the matter of conscription in the hands of military commanders; and it should be provided against by law. With this provision of law I am thoroughly convinced that the time now is when the Congress should transfer to the Executive full authority to declare and decide what classes and what individual citizens should be selected to be sent into the armies, and on what terms and for what consideration other classes and other individuals should be exempted from that service. I believe the Executive can establish a system for recruiting and maintaining the armies so distinct from, so independent of, the organization and movement of the armies as to avoid all danger to the social economy and the public liberty; indeed, that it may be so organized as materially to check any danger which might arise from the supreme and universal domination of the military power. These are matters for that exalted statesmanship which should mark the deliberations in which you are called to act so prominent a part. They are above the sphere of my humble ministerial functions.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 285. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, December 1, 1864.

* * * * *

XXVI. The general supply store in Richmond will not fill requisitions for the supply of troops in the field. All such requisitions will go as heretofore to the C. S. arsenal and will be filled there.

XXVII. Ordnance stores needed at the arsenal for the supply of troops in the field will be drawn from the supply store on requisition approved by the general commanding officer of the arsenal.

XXVIII. All issues to officers will be made at the supply store, and stores at the arsenal or any of its departments are not to be issued nor sold, but held subject to requisitions, except one complete set of arms and equipments as provided in paragraph 60, Ordnance Regulations.

* * * * *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR.]

WAR DEPT., BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
OFFICE INSPECTOR-GENERAL OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, December 1, 1864.

SECTION I.

1. As modified in its organizations by recent orders, the system of conscription, involving the most vital interests of the country, must henceforth mainly depend for thoroughness of working upon the full and enlightened discharge of duty by the inspecting officers attached to the special service. If these can be brought to realize the character and scope of their office, they will appreciate that seldom, if ever, in the history of nations, have trusts so delicate and weighty been assigned to commissions so unpretending in rank and title. It will be their duty, by searching inquiry, to ascertain for the final action of higher authority how the balance has been or should be adjusted in their respective districts of observation between the recognized demands of armies in the field, the necessities of manufacture, transportation, production, and supply, and the claims of law, equity, and humanity. In brief, they are to be the official advisers as to how every man shall be required to pay, and can most usefully pay, his tribute to his country's cause, whether in the first rank, or in the second class, or exclusively in industrial and mechanical pursuits that from their nature admit of no interruption. To attain these ends a power of censorship unparalleled in modern times, has been accorded to the War Department in the conduct of the conscript service, in view of public perils and needs such as have seldom appealed with equal force to the whole mass of any people. If such appeal fail to awaken in the class of agents herein addressed a pervading and ever-stimulating sense of patriotic duty, any system of regulations that may be propounded must likewise fail of effect.

2. The indications of paragraph IV, General Orders, No. 73, 1864, that inspectors should be appointed for each Congressional district, will be construed as an absolute direction.

So soon as the working of the system under the supervision of district inspectors can be tested, it will be the duty of generals of reserves and commandants of conscripts to report to this Bureau the names of all inspectors who appear to be, for any reason, inadequate to their position, and to ask for the substitution of other suitable officers, nominating such, if known and eligible. The assignment to such positions is a measure of selection, terminable at will, and no formality of charges or trials is requisite to rid the conscript service of subordinate agents who may fail to give satisfaction to the superiors responsible for their efficiency.

3. Some instructions are herewith subjoined (with an appendix) as landmarks for the guidance of inspecting officers in their path of duty and of study. These are, however, by no means exhaustive. No treatise of moderate dimensions could exhaust so vast a scheme, into which so many elements enter, and so many modifications have at intervals been introduced. It will be demanded of these officers that they shall bring to bear education, intelligence, patience, and study enough to master the system as developed in successive published orders and current instructions.

To furnish a convenient manual of reference for principles, a selection of laws, orders, and circulars is herewith printed as a digest of what may be styled the general law of the system of conscription.

For variations and minutiae, officers must depend on their own study of general orders, and special indorsements of instruction, in the official files and books of record, many of which have never been in print.

SECTION II.

1. An officer of this Bureau will be on duty as chief of the inspecting department of the conscript service. Any letters asking information or instruction on special questions of principle, or as to their general duties, may be addressed to him by all officers on inspecting duty; but, ordinarily, the generals of reserves, commandants of conscripts, or State inspectors will be addressed for such information. District inspectors will transmit to this office direct a copy of each periodical or other important inspection report rendered by them to their immediate superiors.

2. As early as practicable one or more inspectors will be appointed for each State as auxiliary officers of this Bureau. They will be subject to no other authority than that of the War Department, acting through the superintendent of conscription; and their communications will be made direct to the inspector-general of conscription at the Bureau. Their duties will be those of thorough inspection and supervision of the whole administration of the conscript service, and of the qualification of its officers (especially the district inspectors), reporting monthly the results of their month's observations. They will be authorized to correct any errors of enrolling or inspecting officers by issuing special instructions in conformity to existing regulations. In any case, however, of supposed error, where the enrolling officer is acting in the matter under express orders from the State commandant or general of reserves, the State inspector will take no further step than to report specially, for the action of higher authority, his views as to the necessity or propriety of changing or modifying such orders.

The principles hereinafter laid down for the guidance of district inspectors will also serve to guide the State inspectors.

SECTION III.

1. The leading duties of the inspecting officers may be classed under the general heads of visitation, scrutiny, revision, and report.

2. Visitations will be about equally distributed, but at unequal intervals and uncertain times. This system will afford the best practical test whether the local enrolling officers and their aids attend habitually at their posts of duty. Such constant attention is the primary and indispensable guarantee for the faithful discharge of duty. The subordinate agents of conscription should be made to realize that while their fellow-citizens in the field must hug their muskets day and night, in camps or in trenches, hot or cold, dusty or wet, it is deemed no hardship to exact from those at home a devotion of all day and every day to less trying tasks. The whole time of every conscript officer will be demanded to be bestowed on his own branch of service, and no diversion of any portion of it will be tolerated any more than in the case of a soldier in the field. No loose system of accumulating superfluous numbers at local offices and then dividing duty into reliefs is to be tolerated. Neither will any furloughs be recognized as valid if emanating from any authority less than that of the State commandants.

Wherever the inspecting officer finds a county enrolling officer on duty in the county of his own residence or estate (contrary to the general though not invariable rule respecting assignments) he will note and report the fact, and the reasons existing for the special exception, and will be vigilant to ascertain whether the circumstance of such location has led to absences detrimental to the interests of the service or to the convenience of the public. He will also specially note if there is reason to believe that the office is used to gratify neighborhood partialities or animosities, or if such impression prevails.

3. The scrutiny of the inspecting officer will be directed primarily to the punctuality, formality, accuracy, and fullness of the various registrations, correspondence, and reports demanded by existing regulations from enrolling officers, and to the industry and intelligence bestowed by them upon the collection of required information and in the execution of orders generally. He will often find occasion to correct the loose practice of mentioning an individual as "Lieut. A. B." simply, instead of describing him as First Lieut. or Second Lieut. A. B., of such and such a regiment or special service. He will often have occasion to impress the necessity of describing the antecedent as well as the present status, as, for example, in the case of a man over forty-five, when it should be stated whether or no he had been called on for military service before reaching that age and thus became liable to retention in service of the first class after reaching it. He should ascertain whether the local officer in forwarding applications to higher authority habitually completes the information of all descriptions due in the case, and accompanies it by a distinct and studied opinion or recommendation founded upon personal investigation. It is to failures in these respects—at the fountain head—that injurious delays and sometimes errors in the disposition of cases are usually due. The inspector will be relied on to act, to a great extent, as instructor to the enrolling officers, imparting and explaining, in a kind and patient spirit, the rules of a difficult system. It should not be too hastily assumed that imperfection has resulted from neglect or ignorance from incapacity. After a fair trial should follow an honest report of censure on all unfit agents. In cases where culpable misconduct is charged facts, names, and dates should be set forth as fully as known, in order that prosecutions may be instituted.

Any intelligent inspector will perceive that upon the fidelity, impartiality, and (within limits) considerate kindness with which the system is administered must depend, in great measure, the spirit in which the community will accept the claims of conscription; and it will be no small part of his duty to see that enrolling officers respect public feeling and individual rights, in manner and in substance. He must also appreciate and enforce the importance of exact data and full information in every case, that the action of the conscript authorities may be not only right, but susceptible of vindication against attack or misconception.

The organization of the local offices will be a periodical subject of inspection, to see that among the enrolling officers and their aids are found no persons liable to and capable of service in the field, unless specially so assigned by the War Department or by this Bureau.

In regard to all citizens not in the Army, the bulk of cases to be examined is divisible into two classes: The one of claims for exemption under laws mandatory and absolute (during the continuance of the cause of exemption and of compliance with its conditions); the other of claims or applications for temporary exemptions or details, as to which the law is permissive only, and which are at all times terminable at the discretion of the authority issuing them.

In regard to the first class (of exemptions claimed by law), the inspector must study and enjoin the principles of the Bureau circular of March 30, 1863, the capital points of which are that every citizen is entitled to the full benefit of the prescribed medical examination as to physical and mental capacity for service; that affidavits of parties affirming non-liability, of age or domicile, are not to be accepted as proof in doubtful cases, but have yet the force of suspending action and securing further investigation, with reference to higher authority for final decision; and that no one claiming exemption with any plausibility on grounds of the foregoing character is to be held to service pending the inquiry.

A special subject of attention will be the compliance of that class of exempts known as "bonded farmers" with the third condition of paragraph IV of section 10 of the act approved February 17, 1864, and published in General Orders, No. 26 (same year). With every periodical report of the inspector he will be required to mention what inquiries he has made on this head and with what results; nor will such reports be vague and general, but as individual and circumstantial as possible.

In regard to the second class (temporary exemptions or details), two leading rules are to be enforced. No application for the originating a new detail or continuing a revoked one will, under existing regulations, authorize suspension of action nor delay in sending the party to the field. No existing detail will be allowed to continue if its necessity be doubted or if its conditions appear not to be observed without a report to higher authority suggesting its revocation or a further inquiry in relation to it, nor will any irregular detail be respected for a day. All parties having control of detailed men must be made to understand that it is at the peril of their own interests if they slur over or neglect the requirements imposed on them in the premises. It will be held as prima facie evidence that a detail ought not to continue when the time of the party detailed is not devoted continuously and exclusively to the object assigned. Traveling physicians or school-masters, absentee detailed agriculturists, and any parties engaged in trade, commerce, or speculation while holding details will be treated as suspicious cases. The opinion and testimony of neighbors, if sought for, will usually lead to the truth. The inspectors will be full in their reports on such cases, and where an employé of any officer is concerned he will report the officer's name, corps, rank, and station.

Inspectors in acting under the first paragraph of General Orders, No. 81, current series, will not order to camp any parties holding certificates or details of a date subsequent to October 8, 1864, but will limit themselves to making a report of any such cases in their opinion falling within the spirit of the order, with the reasons for such opinion.

The detection and return of deserters and stragglers from the Army is one of the most important tasks imposed on the conscript officers and reserve forces, as also the prosecution of offenses (against Confederate or State laws) in the procuring or enticing of desertion, and the harboring of deserters. Every case of furlough or leave of absence overstaid is a prima facie case of desertion, wherever there has been a failure to comply with the provisions of the general orders of the series of 1863 (numbered, respectively, 51, 69, 141, and 157), or such of them as are applicable. The grade of commissioned officer will afford no protection against inquiry and report on this subject, nor even against custodial detention, where prolonged absence or suspicious appearances indicate a purpose to escape across our lines. This latter power must, however, be used with delicacy.

There exist in some States auxiliary statutes to second Confederate provision against the act and the harboring of desertion. The inspector must, by conference with the State authorities, learn the practical mode of working these and impart instructions to the enrolling officers. The Confederate States district attorney will be a proper person to consult.

The collection of arms or other warlike property that ought to be in Government hands will be another subject of attention.

The inspector will entertain and transmit, with his own views, to higher authority any collective appeals from respectable sources in favor of peculiar local exigencies within his district of observation, as, for instance, where the region has been unusually and extremely devastated, and the white male population is in unduly scanty proportion, or, in general, wherever special needs for subsistence or production seem to invite a relaxation of general rules. Such reports will, however, be valueless without somewhat minute statistics.

The action of medical examining boards will so far occupy the inspector as to call for inquiry and report whether their time is diligently and continuously applied to the prescribed objects, and whether their sessions are arranged with a proper view to the interests of the service and the convenience of the community. Over their judgments, under the law, as experts, upon questions of physical capacity, he can exercise no supervision further than to inform himself, from public report or by the investigation of criticism or complaint upon individual cases, whether there is reason to attribute a probable want of capacity or of good faith to the boards. Should his judgment be unfavorably impressed, he will report any matter that has reached him as a basis on which inquiry may be instituted, by higher authority, into the qualifications and fidelity of the medical examiners.

To guard against erroneous views which have had some prevalence, the inspectors are desired to bear in mind and teach to others the true doctrine of the exact effect of such certificates of disability as declare its cause to be permanent. These are not subject to dispute or review, unless in the special conditions and modes set forth by general orders. But, in practice as in theory, they will not be accepted as releasing the holders from all future claim by the Government on them for military service, nor as removing all objection to their quitting the country. Such exemptions are terminable, for the Government has released its lien on the parties for service only during the actual (not the probable nor speculative) continuance of the disability. Hence the holders are bound (unless it be otherwise ordered by the War Department in individual cases) to remain within reach of that call for re-examination to which they are at any time liable.

On any issue as to the legal right of a conscript to be discharged from military custody, the decree of a civil court will be respected in the individual case, but will not be a rule of action for the conscript officers, who must look to the Confederate Government for the construction of its laws. The release of A or B under mandate of a court will not prevent the conscription of C or D in like conditions, although the latter will in turn be yielded should the courts so specially decree. Where the judgment of inferior courts on questions of law is adverse to the Government claim, appeal will be taken to the higher courts. General Orders, No. 31, 1864, contain ample instructions on the questions of custody and proceeding. If doubt or difficulty arise the Confederate States district attorney should be asked for legal advice when practicable.

The foregoing enumeration includes some of the subjects only on which enrolling officers are to be enlightened and guided. From the omission of others it is not to be inferred that they do not exist. The inspector's own study of the service must disclose them to him.

4. Revision, by observation, inquiry, and report of all that has been doing in the local administration of the conscript service, and which may seem to require reconsideration, will be the continuous duty of the inspector. In exercising this office he is not expected to countermand what has been done, but only to inform higher authority what goes wrong. In some cases he may interfere, by instructions, under the principles laid down for the government of State inspectors in paragraph 2, section II, of this circular. The leading subjects to occupy his attention have been indicated in the remarks under the head of "Scrutiny." Minute inquiry is involved into the personal circumstances, occupations, and transactions of parties detailed and exempted, and into the conduct (so far as their employment of conscript material is concerned) of workshops and other establishments by Government officers and contractors. These tasks will be irksome, often painful, and might be well-nigh odious, if their recognized necessity and importance (in the circumstances of the country) had not already redeemed, justified, and dignified them, even in the enlightened eyes of a people little used to such censorship. The utmost delicacy of feeling and manner compatible with duty is, however, due in its performance.

5. Reports will be made at the end of each month by the inspector, setting forth his observation of the local administration of the conscript service in so much of his district as he has been able to visit during the month. As tabular statistics are required to be furnished monthly by enrolling officers to commandants, only a statement of general results will be looked for from the inspector.

Reports on individual cases or separate investigations demanding special review will ordinarily be made the subject of separate communications.

While the views of the inspector are invited as to the policy of changes in laws or general orders, such matter will be presented for consideration apart from any remarks on the administration under existing rules. In this way only can he fully avoid the appearance of censure on officers for faults or defects as to which they are not responsible if carrying out orders.

SECTION IV.

This circular with its appendix will form a manual, which the inspector will always keep about him for his own information and that of others. If relieved he is positively enjoined to turn it over to his successor, whose duty it will be to demand it.

For ready reference a list of subjects in their order, embraced in this circular, is added in a postscript;* also with the appendix will be a list of the subjects touched on in the digest of laws, orders, and circulars, in their order of publication.*

---

* Postscript omitted.

SECTION V.

Lieut. Col. G. W. Lay, assistant adjutant-general, has been assigned to duty as inspector-general of conscription at this Bureau, or in traveling under its orders.

Reports and communications to this Bureau on the business of inspection from all officers of the conscript service junior to the generals commanding reserves will be addressed to him accordingly. On the upper left-hand corner of the envelope will be indorsed the words "Inspection service."

The foregoing instructions have been drawn up by direction of the War Department.

G. W. LAY,

Lieut. Col., Asst. Adjt. Gen., Insp. Gen. of Conscription.

Approved.

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. S. PRESTON,

Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

---

*The appendix (here omitted) consists of the following papers:

General Orders, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office.—1862—No. 82 (with this note in addition: "N. B.—1. At the date of this order there was no Bureau of Conscription. With the subsequent establishment of that Bureau, December 30, 1862, the general powers vested separately in the several State commandants of conscripts, as representing the authority of the War Department, under this order passed into the hands of the collective central authority of the Superintendent of Conscription. 2. For the principal modifications of the laws of conscription and exemption herein cited, see General Orders, No. 26, of 1864"), November 3, Vol. II, this series, p. 160; No. 112, paragraph I, December 30, ibid., p. 266. 1863—No. 3, January 9, ibid., p. 308; No. 22, February 23, ibid., p. 408; No. 30, March 18, ibid., p. 430; No. 32, March 21, ibid., p. 448; No. 116, paragraphs I and II, August 31, ibid., p. 777; No. 119, paragraphs I and II, September 7, ibid., p. 793; No. 122, paragraph II, September 11, ibid., p. 801; No. 125 (except last paragraph), September —, ibid., p. 827; No. 141 (except last paragraph), October 29, ibid., p. 913; No. 147, November 17, ibid., p. 962; No. 150, paragraph II, November 21, ibid., p. 972; No. 153, November 25, ibid., p. 990; No. 157, paragraph II, December 1, ibid., p. 1021. 1864—No. 2, January 5, Vol. III, this series, p. 3; No. 7, January 23, ibid., p. 40; No. 11, February 1, ibid., p. 66; No. 16, February 6, ibid., p. 83; No. 22, paragraph IV, February 23, ibid., p. 163; No. 26, March 1, ibid., p. 178; No. 29 ("An act to prevent the procuring, aiding, and assisting persons to desert from the Army of the Confederate States, and for other purposes," only), March 5, ibid., p. 189; No. 31, paragraphs III and IV, March 10, ibid., p. 203; No. 33, March 15, ibid., p. 212; No. 35, paragraphs IV, V, and VIII (with the following foot-note: "For correction of paragraph V of this order, see paragraph VI of General Orders, No. 42, 1864"), March 19, ibid., p. 229; No. 40, March 29, ibid., p. 255; No. 42, paragraphs VI, VII, VIII, and X, April 14, ibid., p. 297; No. 45, paragraph IX, May 2, ibid., p. 369; No. 48, paragraph V, May 27, ibid., p. 449; No. 53 ("An act to furnish transportation to officers of the Army and Navy while traveling under orders," only), June 17, ibid., p. 491; No. 57 (with exception of paragraphs IX and XI—XIII), June 30, ibid., p. 517; No. 59, paragraph V (with the following foot-note: "See General Orders, No. 63, 1864, paragraph III"), July 8, ibid., p. 534; No. 63, paragraphs I and III (with the following foot-note: "Paragraph I amended by General Orders, No. 67, 1864, paragraph V"), August 6, ibid., p. 571; No. 67, paragraph V, August 16, ibid., p. 592; No. 69, August 27, ibid., p. 606; No. 71, paragraph I, September 6, ibid., p. 623; No. 73 (except last paragraph—with the following foot-note: "For paragraph IV, see paragraph XI, General Orders, No. 83, 1864"), September 22, ibid., p. 675; No. 77, October 8, ibid., p. 715; No. 81, October 14, ibid., p. 734; No. 83, paragraphs I, II, IV, and XI, November 1, ibid., p. 749; No. 84, paragraphs IV and V, November 21, ibid., p. 835. Circulars, Bureau of Conscription.—March 30, 1863, Vol. II, this series, p. 463; No. 3, January 19, 1864, Vol. III, this series, p. 36; No. 8, March 18, 1864, ibid., p. 217. Circular letter to generals of reserves, November 25, 1864, ibid., p. 847.

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., December 1, 1864.

Maj. P. MALLET,

Commandant of Conscripts for North Carolina:
 (Through Lieut. Gen. T. H. Holmes.)

MAJOR: Your letter of the 24th of November has been received. It is a matter of painful regret that the consolidated monthly reports from May to September should be acknowledged to be so utterly false and unreliable. They have already been forwarded to the Secretary of War and certified by me as the exact condition of the service within your command. They have been submitted to the President and Congress under like certificate. The gross errors now admitted falsify the solemn returns of this Bureau. Your explanation cannot be accepted as a palliation even of these errors. Article X of Circular No. 8, of 1864, of this Bureau, expressly and positively orders the exemption of State officers to be given by the commandant of conscripts. You admit them to have been given by enrolling officers. Article VII of that circular provides the mode of issuing certificates on account of physical disability, which mode brings such exemptions directly within the records of the commandant's office. Article VIII provides very distinctly for the proper record of the most essential classes of exemptions. The second paragraph provides expressly that the class therein mentioned shall receive exemptions direct from the commandant of conscripts; so with the class under the third paragraph. Under these plain provisions of the orders of this Bureau it cannot be admitted that false returns of enrolling officers, persisted in for five months, afforded a sufficient explanation for the certificate of those returns made in the consolidated reports of the commandant.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

CIRCULAR }
 No. 77. }

CONSCRIPT OFFICE,
Richmond, December 1, 1864.

In entering upon your duties many of you have made inquiries and asked for information upon various points. Instructions for the entire service will, it is supposed, be issued at an early date and forwarded to you, in which all the important duties intrusted to you will be clearly and accurately defined.* Doubtless these instructions will contain a reference to and digest of all the general orders and ruling decisions of the Department governing this branch of the service, embodied in a brief and convenient form for reference. To relieve you from any embarrassments, however, it is my duty, as far as I can, to furnish you with sufficient information to enable you to proceed in harmony with what will be your instructions hereafter from higher authority. You are informed that Major-General Kemper, in charge of conscription in Virginia, under the provisions of General Orders, No. 81, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, directs that you be intrusted with the execution of so much of that order as is embraced in paragraph I. I need not remind you that this is an important and delicate trust, requiring great prudence and the exercise of a sound discretion. Although I have no written instructions by which to direct you, yet I would advise you not to take any action at this time in reference to parties exempt by surgeon's certificate and detailed as light-duty men since the publication of General Orders, No. 77, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, current series. It is to be presumed that persons who have reported under that order, and who have been discharged or found for light duty by the select boards appointed under paragraph III of the said order, should not be liable to the inspection required by General Orders, No. 81. In reference to this matter, however, the general instructions to be issued will give you all the necessary information.

* See p. 887.

As before stated, I think it advisable to suspend action in all such cases unless it is very evident that the detail or exemption should not have been granted, and until the general instructions are received you had better make special report in each case which in your opinion requires immediate attention. If it should be supposed that the Department in dispensing with the services of the district enrolling officers intended to signify that the duties performed by such officers were not of great importance to the service, the conclusion would be erroneous. On the contrary, it is the object of the Department to effect by the change a more rapid execution of orders and to ascertain more directly whether the enrolling officers are prompt in the performance of their duties. To effect this end, as well as for other important considerations, the office of district inspector was created. A full, complete, and accurate monthly return from the enrolling officers will be required, and it will be your duty to see that such returns are made promptly to this office, and in case of failure you will report the fact without delay. It is unnecessary to go over in this circular all that is required in the regular monthly report. The instructions to the enrolling officers are full and complete in this particular, and in connection with this branch of your duty your attention is directed to Circulars Nos. 75 and 76 from this office, copies of which are inclosed. It will be your duty in the inspection of the office books, &c., of the enrolling officers to see that not only all the reports and returns are made required by the general instructions emanating from higher authority, but that Circular No. 75 is complied with in every particular.

It must be shown, both in the report of the local officer and your own, by what authority, stating the number of the order, &c., every officer, non-commissioned officer, private, or unassigned conscript has been assigned to this service. The guards being detailed both from the Army rolls and from the camp of instruction, it will be your duty to make a roll similar to the muster and pay roll of the Army, observing the necessary classifications, especially alterations since the last muster and inspection. This roll will be required at the end of every even month. No man detailed for this service will be mounted unless it is in your opinion necessary, and upon the muster-roll opposite to the name of the party it will be stated whether he is mounted; if so, by what order. You will make a monthly report of the number of horses necessary for the officers and guards and actually in service in your district, in order that arrangements may be made with the Quartermaster's Department for a regular issue of forage for the same. It will be recommended that the forage for the entire force shall be issued upon your requisition, and at such convenient points as you will designate. This course is rendered necessary because some

In this connection attention is called to Circular No. 8, headquarters Reserve Forces of Virginia, a copy of which is inclosed. In reference to organization, equipment, mustering, and the regulations of the guard, you will adhere to the system established for companies in the field, and in this particular all the duties of a company officer are enjoined upon you—such as property returns, reports of arms accouterments, ammunition, &c., adhering strictly to the Army Regulations. Until all these regulations are complied with it will be impossible to issue any property or clothing for the men, and it would be necessary that each man assigned to the service should have a descriptive list, and its correctness certified to by the proper officer. Should rations be drawn by any of the men detailed on this service it must be upon your requisition or approval, and care must be taken in certifying to the correctness of accounts for commutation that parties who have drawn are not included. You are informed that the entire service in your district falls within your duties as inspector, and for this reason it would be necessary that the medical boards should be in direct communication with you and that you should be informed of their appointments for examination, establishment of rendezvous, &c. To secure concert of action a copy of this circular will be forwarded to the boards for their information. You will observe that it will be impossible to enter upon a regular and systematic course of action, with regard to the payment of detailed men on this service, until your reports and muster-rolls are received. You will, therefore, have much work to do in the month of December, and it is earnestly desired that there shall be no delay or lack of activity on your part. The duties of the district inspector are varied and important. While he will be held to a strict accountability for the discharge of specified duties, he occupies a position which will enable him to render other important service.

From officers of your experience and intelligence much is expected, and I confidently hope that the record of your future services will prove that this confidence has not been misplaced.

J. C. SHIELDS,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Commandant.

(To Congressional District Inspectors.)

CIRCULAR }
No. 35. }

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, December 2, 1864.

Generals commanding reserves in the respective States will proceed forthwith and with the utmost vigor to organize for "continuous local service to be mustered in for the war" companies to consist of all men found for light duty and not otherwise assigned and actually employed, of men transferred to the Invalid Corps and found fit for the duties hereinafter indicated, and such men as are temporarily disabled for field service. The men of this latter class when found ready for the field to be forthwith restored to their proper commands. These companies, to consist of not less than sixty men, and officers of the Reserve Corps will be assigned by the generals commanding to a thorough inspection of them and the muster-rolls forwarded to this Bureau. Upon their reception the Secretary of War will assign officers to the command of the companies. It is the purpose of the War Department to assign these companies to duty as guards at posts, prisons, camps of instruction, on railroad trains, and such like service.

Prompt action is required of officers charged with the duties herein prescribed.

By command of the Secretary of War:

C. B. DUFFIELD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

Resolved, That the President of the Confederate States be respectfully requested to inform the Senate whether any and what restrictions have been imposed upon the exercise of the right of the Confederate States, or any of them, to export on their own account any of the articles enumerated in the act entitled "An act to impose regulations upon the foreign commerce of the Confederate States to provide for the public defense," approved February 6, 1864. Also, whether the regulations made under the first section of said act have caused any diminution in the number of vessels engaged in foreign commerce. Also, whether the said act of Congress, and the regulations made under its authority, have been beneficial or otherwise in their effect on the success of our arms and the supply of means necessary for the public defense. Also, whether experience has suggested the necessity of the repeal of said act of 6th of February, or any modifications or amendments of its provisions.*

[Passed December 5, 1864.]

---

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 86. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, December 5, 1864.

I. The chief of the Bureau of Conscription will continue with all practicable dispatch to bring into service the 20,000 slaves authorized by the act of Congress approved February 17, 1864. Enrolling officers will prepare correct lists in duplicate of the names, personal description, and ascertained value of the slaves, the county, district, or parish in which and the time when each was impressed, the name of the owner of each, and of the impressing officer. One of these lists will be forwarded monthly to the commandant of conscription in the State to which the slave belongs and the other to the superintendent of the Bureau, each of whom will cause them to be copied in some uniform manner convenient for reference.

II. When fifty or more slaves shall have been collected at any one station they will be forwarded, under the charge of discreet men detailed from the reserve forces, to such point as the superintendent of conscription may direct, and turned over to the engineer officer instructed to receive them, for labor in the engineer and other departments of the service. A copy of the descriptive roll of each slave will accompany his delivery to the engineer officer.

---

*A similar resolution was passed by the House of Representatives December 6, 1864. For reply thereto, see December 20, p. 948. A like message was sent to the Senate December 17, 1864 (here omitted to avoid duplication), in response to this resolution of December 5.

III. The chief engineer of each army or military department will, under the direction of the Engineer Bureau, have the general supervision and control of the slaves, and will organize them into gangs of 100 men each (selecting four of the number as foremen), over whom will be placed a manager and two overseers. Every eight gangs will constitute a section, for which a superintendent will be selected. Three sections will compose a force, over which will be placed a director. Two clerks will be employed or detailed for each director, and one for each superintendent.

IV. The directors, superintendents, managers, and overseers will be detailed or selected by the Secretary of War from men qualified by experience in the management of slaves, and who are fitted for the positions by their character for probity, energy, and intelligence.

V. There will be assigned, by orders from this office, a purveyor to each force and an assistant purveyor to each section, who will provide subsistence, clothing, and other necessary stores, making requisition therefor upon the Quartermaster's and Commissary Departments. These will be bonded agents. In like manner a medical officer will be assigned for each section, who will obtain supplies for the slaves from the Medical Department upon requisition as prescribed for surgeons and assistant surgeons of the Army. Provision returns and requisitions for quartermasters' stores will be signed by the manager, and when approved by the superintendent the purveyor of the section will make the issue.

VI. The Engineer Bureau will detail an officer of the engineer service, for each army or department, to organize, inspect, and muster the gangs, sections, and forces, and to make details of working parties in such number and for such objects as may be ordered by the commanding general. In this manner details of slaves will be made to perform labor in other departments of the service, it being intended that all such slaves shall be under the management and supervision of the Engineer Department. When slaves are detailed in other departments than the Engineer Department the manager will send with them descriptive lists, retaining their names, however, upon his muster-rolls.

VII. Managers will prepare a muster-roll and duplicate muster and pay rolls of the slaves on the last day of every even month. The first will be transmitted to the chief of the Engineer Bureau, the muster and pay rolls to the Quartermaster-General. Each will be forwarded through the superintendents, who will be held responsible for their correctness. The ascertained value of each slave will appear upon both the muster-roll and the muster and pay rolls. The rate of pay will be determined by agreement with the owners or by appraisement, as provided by law.

VIII. The value of the slave will be ascertained at the time of impressment, after careful medical examination (under rules prescribed by the Surgeon-General), by agreement between the enrolling officer and the owner, or by appraisement under the law regulating impressments, that, in the event of his loss while employed by the Government, "by the act of the enemy or by escape to, or by death inflicted by the enemy, or by disease contracted while in any service required of him," his owner may receive his full value from the Government. Slaves already impressed and in service without previous appraisement or ascertainment of hire, or who may hereafter be impressed or received without appraisement or special contract, will be appraised and their hires will be fixed by boards of disinterested slave-holders selected and organized by the Engineer Bureau. Enrolling officers will impress upon owners the propriety and advantage of having their slaves provided with one good new suit of clothing before they are turned over to the Government, the value of which will be estimated in the appraisement.

The loss of a slave from either of the causes enumerated, and the time and manner of it, will be reported in triplicate by the manager of the gang to which he belongs to the chief of the Engineer Bureau. He will at the same time note the casualty upon the next muster-roll.

IX. At the expiration of every six months the Quartermaster-General will send an officer to convenient places in each State to pay owners or their attorneys the hire of their slaves or, if lost, their appraised or agreed value.

X. Every effort will be made to induce contentment in the slaves. Their discipline will be considerate and mild for minor offenses. Cases of a grave character will be forwarded for the determination and instructions of the chief engineer of the army or department, who will in the meantime prepare and submit for the approval of his commanding general a code for the government of managers and others in charge of the slaves.

XI. The commanding general of each army or department will promptly remove and order to the ranks any manager or other employé having the supervision of slaves who is guilty of cruelty toward them, or malfeasance or of malpractice, and will impose such other penalties as the offense would justify under the Ninety-ninth Rule and Article of War.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

BUREAU OF SUBSISTENCE,
Richmond, December 5, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: Maj. S. B. French went to Wilmington on the 16th of November. He did so partly at the suggestion of Mr. Trenholm, the Honorable Secretary of the Treasury, and upon what he and I thought an assurance from that gentleman that he would be able to let him have sterling bills to meet whatever contracts he might be enabled to make for subsistence, especially meat and coffee, to run the blockade. He had full authority from you to make such engagements, and did accordingly make them. But on requesting the sterling Mr. Trenholm informs me that he has none, and cannot promise me that by a specified time. He thinks that he made a statement to that effect to Major French and myself. But Major French has no recollection of it; nor have I, though I do not mean to contradict him. What is material is that we now need £65,000 sterling, including £27,500-already drawn for, but including what we some time ago requested to be furnished Mr. W. G. Crenshaw in Liverpool.

The intimation of a deferred payment in sterling has repelled our largest contractor, who only awaits your and Mr. Trenholm's action to continue or cancel his orders, and others if they have not preceded will certainly follow him, whilst I am assured by Major French, whom I deem every way competent to the conclusion, that if he had the funds and could give his assurance that the money would be ready, he could import all bacon necessary to meet our wants.

I regret to find the credit of the Government so low, but I deal with facts, and knowing that the offer of sterling at an uncertain future period will prevent our getting meat from abroad at once, without which the Army must suffer, I respectfully ask that cotton which the Government can give shall be furnished me in lieu of sterling which it cannot give.

I know the policy has been to pay no cotton for goods, and I have felt it due to that branch of the Government with which I am connected to remonstrate against the policy as extremely injurious. But I do not now propose to argue against what has been decided, nor am I attempting to drive the Government from its position under the stress of peculiar circumstances. I am seeking only to provide for the present and near future.

But it may be well to state a fact as tending to abate the delusion that the present system can compel subsistence and as tending to clear the obstruction which this idea may offer to this application. A report lately made by Colonel Bayne shows that about 7,000,000 pounds of meat have been brought in. Now, first, this is only about one-twelfth part of what we consume; second, a very small proportion of what is reported has come in under the regulations.

I have not seen the report, but I have a statement from Colonel Bayne of the importations for October and November. From that it appears that under the regulations only 345 barrels pork and 340 packages of fish were imported, whilst under the Crenshaw contract there were imported 1,013 packages of bacon, 314 barrels pork, 126 tierces beef, and 1,664 cases preserved meats and vegetables.

Under my and Major French's agreement with Power, Low & Co. were received 340 boxes soap, 1,054 barrels pork and beef, 117 packages of bacon, and 147 packages coffee, which includes Wild Rover's cargo, consisting 150 barrels pork and 117 boxes bacon (whether on freight from our own accumulations at Nassau or on ship's account is not definitely stated, but presumed to be the latter), and under the old contract with Power, Low & Co. were received 98 boxes bacon and 228 barrels pork.

If the Atlanta had not been taken by the Government the disproportion would have been still greater against the regulations by the amount of her additional cargoes, and possibly from the ability derived from return cargoes to build more vessels under the contract which included her. This application finds an equity outside of its importance in the fact that this Bureau has never been supplied with its allotment of sterling, whilst others in no greater need have overdrawn both their allotment and the general account. But it finds increased importance in the fact disclosed in the accompanying letter, written by General Lee's order to the commanding general, that desertions are taking place in his army from short bread rations. How much they will increase from want of meat, partial or absolute, you can judge as well as myself, and how near we are to that the following table, viewed in connection with previous communications, will show:

Statement of meats on hand.

	Pounds.
At Richmond, say .....	100,000
En route to Richmond, say .....	200,000
At the islands .....	2,500,000
Expected at Nassau from Halifax .....	300,000
	<hr/>
	3,100,000
Of which of beef, say .....	1,000,000
Pork and bacon .....	2,100,000

This, at three rations to a pound, will be 6,300,000 rations, and of beef, 1,000,000 rations. Total rations, 7,300,000, or 13 days' for 100,000 men, without estimating for losses in introducing the same by blockade; these supplies to be devoted to subsistence of troops stationed in North Carolina and Virginia.

Since writing the above I have received telegram from Major French as follows: "I am informed this morning by Bee & Co. that they cannot send out orders for commissary supplies and that we cannot rely on them for importations; their funds are exhausted. This cancels the last contract."

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

FRANK G. RUFFIN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Commissary of Subsistence.

[First indorsement.]

DECEMBER 19, 1864.

SECRETARY OF TREASURY:

The perusal of this copy of an official letter in regard to the want of funds to supply the Army with the meat ration leads to refer it to you for attention. Colonel Wood will deliver it and may furnish you other facts.

JEFF'N DAVIS.

[Second indorsement.]

DECEMBER 23, 1864.

The PRESIDENT:

When Colonel Ruffin applied for sterling the account of the Treasury Department with the depositaries in England was overdrawn £120,000. This was fully explained to Captain Strother, who applied for the £27,500, and if it was not made known to Colonel Ruffin also it should have been.

Had all of Colonel Ruffin's requirements been complied with, however, it would have contributed nothing to the relief of the Commissary Department, it being ascertained that the parties who offered to contract for the delivery of meat have no supplies in the islands. And if the supplies are to be procured from the British North American Provinces and from England, this can be accomplished as speedily and more economically by the Government.

I am informed by the Secretary of War that the Commissary Department will send out a special agent, and arrangements have been made to place at his disposal £100,000 to be used partly in the British North American Provinces and partly in England to procure supplies. An order for £20,000 has also been sent to Messrs. Crenshaw & Co., in Liverpool, to apply that amount from the proceeds of cotton to the purchase of commissary stores.

Major Walker, in Bermuda, and Mr. Heyliger, at Nassau, have also been furnished with £10,000 each for the purchase of supplies—in all, £140,000, capable of purchasing four times as much meat as the same sum could pay for at contract prices.

G. A. TRENHOLM,
Secretary of the Treasury.

[Third indorsement.]

MARCH 7, 1865.

SECRETARY OF WAR:

This is sent to you for your information in relation to a matter which has now only the interest which attaches to a just understanding of the past.

J. D.

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES OF MISSISSIPPI,
Enterprise, December 5, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: On receipt of yours of the 12th ultimo I immediately addressed Governor Clark on the subject of his accepting the men of the reserve classes and the military age in the State organization of six-months' volunteers and the militia, at the same time supplying him with a copy of your letter of instruction to me. He telegraphed me to meet him at Meridian. The day following I had an interview with him in the presence of Major-General Gardner, and at his headquarters, Jackson, Miss. His Excellency stated his case very elaborately. I replied. I dissented from his views, both in regard to his rights and the expediency, but for obvious reasons waived a discussion. He then proposed to make a case and test the question under writ of habeas corpus. I told him my orders were positive and I doubted my authority to wait the issue. The Governor promptly replied, "Then you must use force." General Gardner remarked that, without advancing an opinion in regard to the merits of the case, he would say that it would be unfortunate at this time to have a collision, as the men of every class were going to the front, and it would be better to let the matter stand until this emergency was passed. I said I would necessarily be compelled to stay proceedings, as all the reserve forces were turned over to the commander in the field, and beyond my control.

At a subsequent interview in the attorney-general's office the Governor remarked if Judge Handy (the chief justice of the supreme court of Mississippi) decided adversely to him he would turn over the men to me at once, but reserving the right to take the case up to the supreme court of the State. I consented then to make a case and at once communicated with the Hon. W. P. Harris on the subject, and authorized him to make the proper arrangements to try the case. I also instructed the enrolling officer at Jackson to put himself under the directions of Judge Harris and make such arrests as he would direct. Since returning to this place I am in receipt of a communication from Judge Harris, a copy of which I forward to you herewith, which will put you in possession of all the facts in the case and the grounds on which the Governor bases his claims.

Although the Governor's action in this matter has almost entirely frustrated my exertions to get the men into the field, yet I believe he was actuated by patriotic motives and an overweening solicitude for the defense of the State (which has greatly suffered), and not from a factious spirit of opposition.

It will probably be the 1st of January before anything can be done toward getting these men, unless the judge decides adversely to the Governor, when they will be placed at once in the service. In the meantime I would be greatly relieved by having your instructions in case the judge sustains the Governor in his position. I will keep you advised of the progress of this case.

I have the honor to be, with great regard, your obedient servant,

W. L. BRANDON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Indorsement.]

DECEMBER 22, 1864.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY:

Will you prepare an appropriate answer, approving, as I suppose will be best, the temporary delay and the trial of the question, but not conceding the legal claims in any event?*

J. A. S.

[Inclosure.]

JACKSON, December 3, 1864.

Brig. Gen. W. L. BRANDON,
Commanding:

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication through Doctor Buck. Very soon after this communication was delivered to me I chanced to meet Governor Clark on the street, and he at once pressed me to confer with him touching the subject of it. The Governor's object seemed to be to convince me that he was actuated in his purpose to resist the claim of the War Department to conscribe persons enlisted in the military service of the State by a sincere conviction of his duty as the Executive of the State, and not by any feeling of jealousy or spirit of obstinacy. He took the occasion to explain his attitude by giving the history of the State organization. From his statements, and from what I know of the subject, the facts are as follows: The Legislature of the State passed an act authorizing the Governor to raise troops for State defense by commissioning persons to raise volunteer companies, regiments, &c., for active service. (Act December 9, 1863.) Under this act the Governor has raised sixteen companies of volunteers—some for the war, some for twelve months, and others for six months. The composition of these companies embraces men of every class and liable under all the acts of conscription of the Confederate States, but chiefly persons belonging to the class of reserves, and enlisted subsequent to the act of February, 1864. It is asserted by the Governor that although he has thus enlisted persons liable to be enrolled in the service of the Confederate States, they were not actually enrolled—"brought under the authority of the Confederate States" (to use his language)—at the time of their enlistment in the State service. On this state of the facts the Governor contends that the State, having reserved power to raise troops in time of war, was at liberty to appropriate any class of her citizens not actually brought under the control of the Confederate States by enrollment in the service. The Governor was unable to furnish to me the correspondence with the Secretary of War, as that correspondence consisted in brief telegrams and verbal communications, through the Hon. Mr. Watson, of the C. S. Senate, but I am assured, however, by the letter of instructions of the Secretary to which you refer me, and other instructions from that quarter, that the Secretary of War has determined to deny practically the claim of the Governor to retain persons in the State service who are liable to conscription.

I make this statement of the facts in order that you may see whether I am sufficiently informed of the points in controversy.

If there are other features of the case not indicated here and deemed by you to be necessary to enable me to act under your letter, I should be glad to be informed by letter or otherwise.

The Governor informs me distinctly that he would resist the attempt to place the State troops in the Confederate service under the conscript act, and would employ force. While I am persuaded that the Secretary will exhaust every fair expedient to avoid a collision, I refrain from giving any advice on that point. The proposition of Governor Clark to allow proceedings under the late order of the War Department to be stayed until his claim shall be tested by a judicial decision, as it does not seek to bind you by such decision and offers a means of avoiding a collision, should be accepted under the circumstances in which you are placed at present. At the same time I think it would be well to take the earliest opportunity to inform the Secretary of War of the reasons for the temporary forbearance to put his order into execution.

I take the occasion to say that I think the claim of the Governor is without foundation. The act of the Legislature was never designed to interfere with the ground covered by the acts of Congress, and is indeed but part of the militia system of the State. But the position of the War Department has been deliberately taken, and it is of no importance that my opinion accords with that of Mr. Seddon.

I will remain here until Wednesday morning and you can inform me by telegraph whether I can proceed as heretofore directed or come to you for further information.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, &c., your obedient servant,
W. P. HARRIS.

Act of the General Assembly of South Carolina.

AN ACT to alter and amend the militia laws of this State.

I. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives now met and sitting in General Assembly and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passage of this act all free male white persons within this State between the ages of sixteen and fifty, not exempt from active service without the limits of the district in which they reside by the militia laws of this State, shall be liable to active military duty without the limits of this State at the call of His Excellency the Governor.

* * * * *

III. That all free male white persons within the State between the ages of sixteen and sixty, not embraced in the active militia, shall be liable to military duty in cases of alarm, invasion, insurrection, or as the posse comitatus, anywhere within the limits of the State.

* * * * *

Passed December 6, 1864.

CONFEDERATE STATES DEPOSITORY,
Wilmington, N. C., December 6, 1864.

E. MURRAY, Esq.,
Wilmington, N. C.:

SIR: Your letter of this date stating that a rumor exists that the Advance when captured had on freight a large amount of specie, and asking if I can give any light on the subject, is to hand. In reply I beg to state that I do not know that the Advance had any specie or freight when she was captured. I did not ship any on her that trip.

Very respectfully,

HENRY SAVAGE,
Depository Confederate States.

AN ACT in relation to the public defense.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Florida in General Assembly convened, That whenever a demand shall be made by the Confederate States Government for slaves to labor on the public works in this State, and such demand be in conformity with the laws of the Confederate States and with the constitution and laws of the State of Florida, the Governor of this State shall order an impressment pro rata, which shall be strictly uniform and equitable of the free negroes and slaves of this State.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, That such impressment shall be made on the orders of the Governor, by the sheriff of the several counties. Any sheriff failing to obey said order shall be punished, on conviction, by fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court, and the Governor shall, on failure of any sheriff to obey said order, direct the duty to be performed by the coroner, or such other civil officer of the county as he may select, who shall be subject to the like penalties in case of failure.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, That no demand as [or] impressment of slaves or free negroes in the State shall be made except in conformity with the provisions of this law, and if any shall be made in violation thereof, it is hereby declared unlawful and void.

Approved December 7, 1864.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., December 7, 1864.

GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF DELEGATES:

I am gratified that you have again met in General Assembly to take into consideration the condition of our afflicted Commonwealth. At the period of your last adjournment our enemy was engaged in vast preparations for the capture and occupation of this proud city. Having completed his preparations by the organization of one of the most formidable armies ever assembled on this continent, he, about the 1st of May last, commenced his march. He relied with confidence upon his vast numbers and thorough equipment for an early consummation of his long-deferred hopes. Led by the greatest of his captains, flushed with numerous successes, it was entirely natural that he should fearlessly look to the future, while we should contemplate it with uneasiness and apprehension. He had, however, scarcely crossed the Rapidan before our noble army, led by that great and good man, General R. E. Lee, breaking up their camp, dashed upon his haughty columns, and, after one of the bloodiest and best-contested battles of the war, taught the enemy to respect the army he had affected to despise, and to know that his march to Richmond would be attended with difficulties and dangers he had not anticipated. I shall not undertake to detail the series of bloody battles which were fought on the road to Richmond, nor tell how the enemy, although continually strengthened by heavy re-enforcements, was compelled to leave the city to his right, until finally he crossed the James and undertook by a coup de main to carry the city of Petersburg; nor how, after nearly a seven months' campaign of unexampled slaughter of his men, he still finds himself with hope deferred, and but little prospect of realizing expectations so confidently entertained for the last three years. Suffice it to say that you, gentlemen, are here in safety; here in calm deliberation; here to digest those measures which are still required by the dangers we have yet to meet.

It is right, however, that I should warn you that the enemy is diligently engaged in strengthening his army and in recovering from the exhaustion caused by his repeated defeats. It is difficult, really, to comprehend our foe. The right of self-government was established by the blood of our Revolutionary fathers, was proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence, and is ingrafted in the constitutions of all the States; and yet the United States, with reckless extravagance in men and money, unparalleled in the world's history, is denying this right, and seeking to overthrow and subjugate the people who proclaim it, and who only ask to be let alone—who, for simply asserting and maintaining this principle, are pursued with a venom, malignity, and hate unknown in civilized war.

With everything dear to man at stake, I cannot suppose that there will be any hesitation on your part to embody the whole resources of the State, in men and means, in order to enable us successfully to avert the awful doom our enemy has in store for us. One of your first duties, gentlemen, will be to take into consideration the measures to bring into the field all able-bodied men who are not necessary to the State government. It is utterly impossible for me to understand the logic which exempts State officers who are not necessary for the State government; and yet it is the fact that the judges are undertaking to turn loose from the grasp of military authority men without any duty to perform, upon the ground that they are officers provided by the constitution and the laws. There are some forty or fifty counties of Virginia within the enemy's lines, most of them under a regular government of the enemy. The State officers therein have been, where loyal, of course, expelled from office and are refugees. Most of them have acquired new homes and formed new social and business relations, and may not return to their counties until this war shall terminate. Many will never return even with peace, and it may be a question, if they should do so, whether they would have a right to resume their offices. Under the laws and the constitution the counties will average about sixty officers, furnishing within the enemy's lines a number equal to about 2,000, constituting a force sufficient, it may be, to turn the tide of a great battle. Yet, according to the decisions of some of the judges, these officers would be exempt from military duty, although without civil duties to perform, and with a great probability that they will have none during the continuance of the war.

The court of appeals in the case of Burroughs vs. Peyton, &c., has well said:

The obligation of the citizen to render military service is a paramount social and political duty. It is a matter in which the whole body politic is interested. "The citizens have a right, collectively and individually, to the service of each other to avert any danger which may be menaced. The manner in which the service is to be apportioned among them is a matter for legislation." The Government, as the agent and trustee of the people, is charged with the whole military strength of the nation, in order that it may be employed so as to insure the safety of all. The power which it has to enforce the performance of the obligation to render military service is given that it may be used, not abdicated. No right has been conferred on the Government to divest itself, by contract or otherwise, of the power of employing whenever, and as the exigencies of the country may demand, the whole military strength that has been placed at its disposal. As the nature and extent of those exigencies cannot be foreseen, and it is impossible to say in advance that the services of every citizen capable of bearing arms may not become indispensable for the defense of the country, the Government has no right to enter into any contract precluding it from requiring those services, if they should be needed. If there be such right, the spectacle might be presented of a nation subjugated and destroyed at a time when it had within its limits citizens amply sufficient to defend it successfully against all the assaults of its enemies, but whose services could not be commanded because, forsooth, the Government had contracted with them that they should not be required to serve in the Army.

Again: -

The power of coercing the citizen to render military service for such time and under such circumstances as the Government may think fit is a transcendent power; but so far from being inconsistent with liberty, is essential to its preservation. A nation cannot foresee the extent of the dangers to which it may be exposed. It must, therefore, grant to its government a power equal to every possible emergency; and this can only be done by giving to it the control of its whole military strength. The danger that the power may be abused cannot render it proper to withhold it, for it is necessary to the national life.

It would seem to me that the doctrine of these extracts covers the whole question; but should there be a doubt remaining, the following extract from the same able opinion, repeating a well-established rule of law, must dispel it:

The well-established rule of construction is, that all grants of privileges and exemptions from general burdens are to be construed liberally in favor of the public, and strictly as against the grantee. Whatever is not plainly expressed and unequivocally granted is taken to be withheld.

Taken in this view, how can there be a question? The officers referred to are local officers; their duties are local; they forfeit their offices if they leave their counties. The justices of the peace are compelled to reside in the districts from which they are elected, and yet these officers are refugees; that is, resident out of their counties. In undertaking to protect them against the forfeiture provided by law the courts have to assume that they are excused from the residence required in consequence of the compulsion of the enemy. Is not this inference judicial legislation? At any rate, no act of Assembly authorizes such an inference; and is it to be supposed that the law would not have provided for such a case had the Legislature deemed it proper to do so? At least, can it be said that there is no doubt upon the subject; and if a doubt, that it should not, in the language of an extract already quoted, be construed liberally in favor of the public? How can the State be injured by the view for which I contend? How it may be prejudiced by the converse of the proposition all can see. But to exempt this large class of officers, or any portion of them, when they have no service to perform, is, it seems to me, plainly unconstitutional. The fourth article of the bill of rights reads as follows:

That no man or set of men are entitled to exclusive or separate emoluments or privileges from the community but in consideration of public services.

Will not these officers, without civil duties to perform, enjoy personal privileges? Surely it may legitimately be argued that, so far from being exempted, they are under a special obligation, in addition to the general one attaching to every citizen, to fight for the recovery of their counties. They have been ousted of their offices, have consequently suffered a personal injury, and will realize a special advantage in the recovery of the counties from which they have been expelled. I know it is contended that these officers are entitled to exemption under the decision of the court in the case from which I have so freely quoted, and the following extract is relied upon in support of the position:

It is absurd to suppose that the Government of the Confederate States can rightfully destroy the government of the States which created it; and all the powers conferred on it must be understood to have been given with the limitation that in executing them nothing shall be done to interfere with the independent exercise of its sovereign powers by each State. Congress can have no right, therefore, to deprive a State of any officer necessary to the action of its government, and the State itself is the sole judge as to the officers that are necessary for that purpose.

I entirely concur with the doctrine here expressed; but can it be said that the officers of a locality within the enemy's lines, and under the regular supervision of the agents of a foreign Government, are necessary to the action of the government of the State? And under this doctrine can any officer of a county within our own jurisdiction be entitled to exemption unless he be necessary? It is said, however, that all the officers named in the constitution and provided by the law are pronounced necessary by the very highest authority, and can under no circumstances be questioned, and whether employed or not cannot be required to perform any other duties than those for which they were elected. Surely this will strike the reflecting mind with surprise. The constitution intended to provide a frame of government for those on whom it was to operate. It was necessarily experimental. The offices authorized were doubtless presumed to be necessary; but if found to be otherwise, why should those appointed to fill them be relieved from the performance of other duties required by the wants of the community? Indeed, I lay it down as a broad proposition that no person occupying office is exempt from the other duties of a citizen, except on the score of incompatibility. I ask with confidence, why should a citizen be excused from other obligations when they do not interfere with the performance of those to which he is specially elected? If a man can perform more than one duty, why should he not do it? I would like to hear a good and sufficient reason in answer to this interrogatory. It would be a great reflection upon those who framed the constitution to suppose that they intended any such conclusion, and in the absence of all provisions to that effect it cannot be presumed. Nowhere in the constitution is provision made in terms for exemption. It is inferential merely, and then only upon the ground of incompatibility of service. The same remarks will apply to the Legislature. The doctrine contended for may lead to the most fatal results. If all the officers designated in the constitution and in the laws made in pursuance thereof are to be exempted because they are State officers; if all the justices of the peace who, by the by, were never exempted until the 1st of October, 1862, having from the Revolution to that period been required to perform military duty; if all sheriffs and clerks and their deputies; all commissioners of the revenue; all surveyors and Commonwealth's attorneys; all constables and overseers of the poor; all county agents for supplying soldiers' families; all salt agents, commercial agents, &c.; all employés of banks, cities, towns, &c., are to be exempt indiscriminately, and without reference to their necessity, then, indeed, in the language of the decision so frequently quoted, "the spectacle might be presented of a nation subjugated and destroyed at a time when it had within its limits citizens amply sufficient to defend it against all the assaults of its enemies, but whose services could not be commanded, because, forsooth, the Government had contracted with them that they should not be required to serve in the army." So far in this State the number of exempts is comparatively small, but in other States we are told it is widely different. At this time a powerful army of the enemy is sweeping over the State of Georgia, in which, under the doctrine contended for, there is now an army of exempts—exempts because officers and employés of the State government.

At this time the pressure of the service inspires a very common desire to escape from it; and the remedy by habeas corpus, designed for extraordinary acts of official tyranny or individual acts of oppression, is daily resorted to, to extricate the citizen from the holy duty of defending the country. Lawyers of every degree hie to the feast thus spread before them, and judges in chambers and in court feel constrained to apply the principles of the writ to those but little better than moral deserters from the standard of their country, and at a time, too, when she is struggling in a death grapple with her gigantic foe. But do the judges [agree] amongst themselves in a uniform application of the same principle? In North Carolina exemption assumes the broadest form, while in Alabama a much narrower rule is adopted; and even in Virginia some differences exist. But all, I believe, concur that the judges have the right to pronounce who are exempted from military duty by reason of their office, notwithstanding the Legislature and the Executive may entertain a different opinion. It does not matter what the Legislature may declare by law; it does not matter who the Executive may deem necessary to enable him to see the laws faithfully executed, the court understands better than their coequal and co-ordinate departments what is necessary to preserve the State governments. Against this I enter my firm yet respectful protest.

The second article of the constitution reads as follows:

The legislative, executive, and judiciary departments shall be separate and distinct, so that neither exercise the powers properly belonging to either of the others; nor shall any person exercise the powers of more than one of them at the same time, except that justices of the peace shall be eligible to either House of Assembly.

The Massachusetts constitution still more emphatically declares that "in the government of this Commonwealth the legislative department shall never exercise the executive and judicial powers, or either of them; the executive shall never exercise the legislative or judicial powers, or either of them; the judicial shall never exercise the executive and legislative powers, or either of them; to the end that it may be a government of laws, and not of men." Of course, all intermixture of these departments, except as provided in the constitution, must be in violation thereof. These departments are co-ordinate, and each is supreme and independent of the others within their respective spheres. This is the theory of the constitution at least; and it is the universal sentiment of the American people that their complete separation is essential to public liberty. The Federalist has strongly said that "the accumulation of all powers, legislative, executive, and judicial, in the same hands, whether of one, a few, or many, and whether hereditary, self-appointed, or elective, may be justly considered the very definition of tyranny." Can it be, then, that the judiciary can properly prescribe its own bounds as well as those of its co-ordinate departments? Where is the authority for it? It cannot be found either in the constitution or the law—a fact conclusive against the jurisdiction assumed. I know the general sentiment is otherwise, and that it is insisted that the power is essential, and must therefore exist. This, I submit, is begging the question, and cannot be conceded. Were it so, then the independence and equality of the departments would no longer exist. The power in one to give law to the other demonstrates this too clearly to require argument.

While, however, it may be conceded that the judicial department, in the last resort, is the final expositor of the constitution as to all questions of a judicial nature, it is equally clear that it cannot assume jurisdiction of political questions. This doctrine was quite elaborately treated in the case of Luther vs. Borden et al. (7 How. R.)

In the celebrated Dorr Case, out of which the one quoted sprung, this doctrine was treated, and it was declared that the court could not take jurisdiction of questions of political power. For instance, that it was the right of the political power to decide which was the rightful constitution of the State of Rhode Island, the charter or that known as the Dorr constitution; that it was not a judicial question. So it was conceded that the President alone had the right to decide when such insurrection or rebellion existed in a State as required him to call out the militia; that it was not a judicial question. So in cases of contested elections before the Senate, they involved a question of political power to be decided by that body. So likewise in case of a treaty or the recognition of foreign nations, they involved questions of political power over which the judiciary could not take jurisdiction. I respectfully submit that this important distinction should be taken by our judges. When the Legislature declares who shall be subject to military duty, it is an act of political power with which, it seems to me, the judiciary should not interfere; and when the Executive, to whom the special duty is assigned of seeing the laws faithfully executed, decides that a certain officer or employé is not necessary, it is an act of political power which should equally command the forbearance of the courts. It was objected in the case just quoted that in conceding to the President the decision as to which was the rightful constitution of Rhode Island, it was yielding him a dangerous power which might be abused. The learned judge who pronounced the opinion of the court emphatically said in reply:

All power may be abused if placed in unworthy hands; but it would be difficult, we think, to point out any other hands in which this power would be more safe, and at the same time equally effectual. At all events, it is conferred upon him by the Constitution and the laws of the United States, and must therefore be respected and enforced in its judicial tribunals.

You, gentlemen, can apply this quotation; but I may be pardoned—as the several departments take the same oath of office, that of fidelity to the Constitution, and are all, in the view of the constitution, equally honest, capable, and faithful—if I claim for the legislative and executive departments the same right to judge of their own powers that is exercised by the judiciary as to theirs. This is indispensable to preserve the equilibrium of the several departments—a matter of the last importance, as upon it depends the preservation of constitutional liberty, according to all writers upon free government.

My conclusions, then, are that the several departments have no right to define the political powers of each other; that political power is not of a judicial nature; that there is no authority in the Constitution or the laws which gives to the judiciary the right to define its own boundaries and those of the other branches of the Government; that whatever may be the necessity of having a tribunal clothed with such powers, none has been provided and cannot be provided by judicial construction; that the right on the part of the several departments to refuse to co-operate in the unconstitutional measures of each other, of which each has an equal right to judge, is eminently proper, healthful in action, and well calculated to preserve intact that division of powers guaranteed in the second article of the Constitution. That the Constitution contains no exception, confers no privilege, except “in consideration of public services;” that election to office does not protect any man against other duties, except so far as they may be in conflict with those to which he was elected; that, in the language of the court of appeals, “the obligation of the citizen to render military service is a paramount, social, and political duty,” from which no man can be discharged, except on account of his civil duties, and only to the extent required by such duties; that military service “is a matter in which the whole body politic is interested;” that “the citizens have a right, collectively and individually, to the service of each other to avert any danger which may be menaced,” of which they cannot lawfully and ought not to be deprived by any authority whatever. And I here, in the name of patriotism, of our manhood, of our dear old State, rent and torn by a vandal foe, and of our bleeding country, protest firmly, but respectfully, against the entire doctrine which would give to able-bodied men the legal right to walk abroad untouched amid the general suffering and desolation.

I have uniformly acted upon the principle that the State government had an inherent right of self-preservation, which involved the right to all the officers and employés of every description necessary thereto. I have never hesitated to claim all such persons, and to assert a right to judge for myself as to the necessity of such persons as against the Confederate Government. I understand this principle to have been broadly conceded by the act of Congress of the 17th of February, 1864. This act did not undertake to grant power to the Governors of the States, who could not accept power from such a source, even had such been the design of the act. But I repeat, I do not understand it to have had any such purpose in view. The certificate spoken of in the act was merely designed to obtain information of the Governors of the States of the persons claimed by the States as their officers and employés, and such certificates are very properly conceded by that act to be conclusive upon the Confederate authorities. Recognizing in the Confederate Government the right to the whole military power of the States, except to the extent of such persons as are necessary to the preservation of the State government and the execution of her laws, I have uniformly confined my certificates of exemption or claim to such persons as I regarded necessary therefor. In the case of justices of the peace I did not and do not believe that the number authorized by law was necessary to the execution of the duties imposed upon them. I know perfectly well that three, instead of four, are amply sufficient for all the purposes of the State; and I aimed, as a general rule, to confine myself to that number. I recognized the right of all, however, to be commissioned; and deeming such to be my constitutional duty, commissioned those who had been duly elected by the people.

It is not a little curious that justices of the peace, at least from the first Revolution up to the present one, have never been regarded otherwise than subject to military service. They have been treated uniformly as a part of the militia. They fought in the first Revolution; they fought in the year 1812; they mustered at cross-roads and other places of meeting, and the exempting favor of the Legislature never reached them until the 1st of October, 1862. It is strange that in the midst of a deadly struggle your predecessors should have deemed it proper for the first time to protect these gentlemen from military service, pronounced by the highest judicial authority of this State to be "a paramount social and political duty." It is also strange that for the first time it should be treated as a judicial question, and that our judges should likewise concur in pronouncing them exempt from military service, and that, too, notwithstanding the same high authority to which I have just referred has pronounced military service "a matter in which the whole body politic is interested."

But so it is, and yielding to the force of this combined opinion, I respectfully suggest for your consideration the passage of a law which will diminish the number of these officers, and restrict their selection to persons of an age usually beyond the period of military service. I propose the passage of a law diminishing the number of the districts in the several counties, and confining the election of magistrates to persons over forty-five years of age. There is no question of your power to enact such a law; there is no doubt of its giving great satisfaction to the people, and the discreditable efforts which were made in certain localities by hale and hearty young men to obtain their election as justices of the peace, thereby to secure their exemption from the honor of defending their country, would no longer reflect upon the patriotism of our people. But many of our best citizens are unwilling to yield any of our State officers or employes to the claims of the Confederate Government. They are entirely willing to see such persons embodied in a State force, to be called out on great emergencies, because under State authority they can be returned to their civil functions as soon as the emergency shall have passed. Apart from the great principle of the salus populi, they insist that it is entirely in the power of the Legislature to embody the State officers, &c., as an auxiliary force, under the circumstances to which I have referred. In Georgia this principle is acted upon, and under it Governor Brown has been enabled to embody an army of considerable size, which has rendered and is rendering valuable service in the campaign in his great State. In Mississippi the same doctrine prevails with the like results, in which, indeed, the power is claimed, without question by the judiciary, to assign supernumerary State officers to the Confederate service. In an act passed by the General Assembly of that State of the 13th of August, 1864, the preamble thereto reads as follows:

Whereas, in the present situation of affairs it is not necessary to the proper administration of the State government that the officers members, and agents hereinafter named, shall be held exempted from the military service of the Confederate States; and in the absence of such necessity the State is willing to waive her rights in the premises to all officers, members, and agents not named in the constitution, and not necessary to the preservation of our form of Government.

This preamble fully recognizes the policy for which I have been arguing, and in giving up a part of her State officers the State impliedly asserts a right to do so with all, under the qualifications stated. Should it not be the pleasure, however, of the Legislature to adopt my views, I respectfully urge, in this dark hour of our fortunes, that the entire male population of our State may be embodied for the purpose of co-operating in our great struggle. The second-class militia, authorized under a special act, restricted in its operations to a few localities, has been of great advantage, and has rendered most efficient service. Perhaps no regular force in the Army has performed more arduous duty since the 6th of May than those portions of it, including the Nineteenth Virginia Militia, organized in the cities of Richmond and Petersburg. In consequence of the frequent and extensive raids of the enemy, often in small parties, and the great destruction and outrages perpetrated by them, it has become indispensable to organize our whole male population. Were such an organization made, even of the force now left at home, the country would be saved from the ravages which lay waste our fields, certainly to a large extent; and the enemy, who respects in no degree the laws of civilized war, sparing neither age nor sex, would be compelled to contract his lines of march, move in larger masses, and range over a much more limited amount of our territory. I most respectfully submit a bill for your consideration, designed to provide for this important object.

First. It proposes that the reserve force of the State should be organized by the Governor, and when completed to be reported to the Assembly for such change as it may see fit to make.

Second. That the Governor shall not move said force beyond the limits of the State.

Third. That no portion of such force shall be called out for a longer period than thirty days.

Fourth. When practicable, said force shall be assigned to duty in the several counties from which it may be drawn.

Fifth. The particular duties to which this force may be assigned are designated.

Sixth. That the county court and county officers shall aid in the enrollment.

Seventh. That the Governor shall provide for the proper discipline and order of said force.

Eighth. This bill being a war measure, it is proposed that it shall expire with the proclamation of peace, only suspending in the meantime the general militia law.

It will be observed that this bill asks for no appropriations, nor for commissaries or quartermasters. My plan is to make an arrangement with the Secretary of War to pay off such portion of the reserve force as may be called out, when its particular service is ended, by marching it to the post quartermaster of its county for that purpose, who would be instructed accordingly; and my purpose would be, when necessary, to appoint respectable old gentlemen quartermasters and commissaries for the particular occasion, and for them to settle up any accounts they may have created with the post quartermaster, and be likewise paid off, thus closing up the transaction without perplexity or delay, and to the entire satisfaction doubtless of both the Government and the people.

Many of the citizens of Virginia were in other States and countries at the beginning of the war. Not a few of them returned to join in her defense and to share her fate, and some have sealed with their blood their patriotic devotion to our beloved Commonwealth. A record should be made of such as an evidence of our high appreciation of their conduct and transmitted to posterity. But I regret to inform you that many who owe loyalty to our State are still absent unmindful of their duty in the terrible struggle in which we are engaged. Many have left since the beginning of the war, leaving their families and property behind them. It is doing no injustice to such recreants to assume that their purpose is to escape the demands of military service, and that they leave their families with us as the means of preserving their property. Shall such unworthy and treasonable policy succeed? Shall such men, abandoning the holiest and noblest of duties, that of defending their country, escape without penalty, and their property be preserved and protected by our laws and arms until, under more propitious circumstances, they can return to it? I earnestly recommend the passage of a law authorizing the issue of a proclamation warning all citizens of Virginia now in foreign parts to return without delay to the State, failing in which, besides personal penalties, their property of every description should be confiscated and their families sent into the enemy's lines.

There are some persons whose fidelity to the State is much questioned, and who, if arrested, can rarely be convicted in consequence of the difficulty of having the testimony present when the day of trial arrives. They very generally escape from want of evidence, although there is the strongest moral assurance of their guilt. I hope that you will give the subject your attention and pass such a law as this condition of things requires. In this connection I would respectfully call your attention to the Code, page 118, in reference to the arrest of suspicious persons. The sixth section should be enlarged so as to comprehend all foreigners, as well as citizens, with authority to remove such as may be thought fit beyond the limits of the State. There is great necessity for some such measure, and I hope it will engage your early attention.

Our free negroes are very disorderly, many of them doubtless disloyal. In the towns, and especially in the city of Richmond, they are guilty of many outrages upon persons and property, full proof of which it is difficult to procure. They sometimes are found co-operating with the enemy, and occasionally indulging in the utterance of treasonable sentiments and threats against our fellow-citizens. The laws are inadequate to their proper management, and will, I hope, be made to cover such cases.

When this war began it was confidently believed by our enemy that it would be of short duration. Relying upon his vast superiority in numbers and material of war, he expected to overrun us with facility and ease. But the result of a single year's operations corrected this expectation and impressed him with the conclusion that he had on hand a contest of great magnitude, full of danger and difficulty. Having soon exhausted his floating population, he openly recruited his armies on the continent of Europe. Not satisfied with this, he seized our slaves and, in violation of all civilized war, armed them against us. Under every disadvantage the war has been protracted deep into its fourth year, and we find ourselves looking around for material to enlarge our armies. Whence is it to come? The laws of natural accretion will not furnish a sufficient supply of men. Foreign countries are in effect closed against us. Recruiting from the prisoners we capture will not, except to a limited extent, supply our wants, and the public attention naturally turns to our own slaves as a ready and abundant stock from which to draw. This policy, however, has given rise to great diversity of opinion. Some consider it as giving up the institution of slavery. Others declare that to put our slaves in the ranks will drive our fellow-citizens from them and diffuse dissatisfaction throughout the country. In reply, it is said that this policy will effectually silence the clamor of the poor man about this being the rich man's war; that there is no purpose to mingle the two races in the same ranks, and that there cannot be a reasonable objection to fighting the enemy's negroes with our own; that as to the abandonment of slavery, it is already proclaimed to be at an end by the enemy, and will undoubtedly be so if we are subjugated, and that by making it aid in our defense it will improve the chance of preserving it.

This is a grave and important question and full of difficulty. All agree in the propriety of using our slaves in the various menial employments of the Army, and as sappers and miners and pioneers, but much diversity of opinion exists as to the propriety of using them as soldiers now. All agree that when the question becomes one of liberty and independence on the one hand or subjugation on the other, that every means within our reach should be used to aid in our struggle and to baffle and thwart our enemy. Isay every man will agree to this; no man would hesitate. Even if the result were to emancipate our slaves, there is not a man that would not cheerfully put the negro into the Army rather than become a slave himself to our hated and vindictive foe. It is, then, simply a question of time. Has the time arrived when this issue is fairly before us? Is it indeed liberty and independence or subjugation which is presented to us? A man must be blind to current events, to the gigantic proportions of this war, to the proclamations of the enemy, who does not see that the issue above referred to is presented now. And, I repeat, the only question is, Has the time arrived? Are we able beyond a question to wage successful war against a power three times our own in numbers, with all Europe from which to recruit, and who unhesitatingly put arms in the hands of our own negroes for our destruction? I will not say that under the providence of God we may not be able to triumph, but I do say that we should not from any mawkish sensibility refuse any means within our reach which will tend to enable us to work out our deliverance. For my part, standing before God and my country, I do not hesitate to say that I would arm such portion of our able-bodied slave population as may be necessary, and put them in the field, so as to have them ready for the spring campaign, even if it resulted in the freedom of those thus organized. Will I not employ them to fight the negro force of the enemy? aye, the Yankees themselves, who already boast that they have 200,000 of our slaves in arms against us. Can we hesitate, can we doubt, when the question is, whether our enemy shall use our slaves against us or we use them against him; when the question may be between liberty and independence on the one hand, or our subjugation and utter ruin on the other?

In the meeting of the Governors the following resolutions upon this subject were unanimously adopted:

And whereas, the public enemy, having proclaimed the freedom of our slaves, are forcing into their armies the able-bodied portion thereof, the more effectually to wage their cruel and bloody war against us: Therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the true policy and obvious duty of all slave-owners timely to remove their slaves from the line of the enemy's approach, and especially those able to bear arms, and when they shall fail to do so that it should be made the duty of the proper authorities to enforce the performance of this duty, and to give to such owners all necessary assistance as far as practicable.

Resolved, That the course of the enemy in appropriating our slaves who happen to fall into their hands to purposes of war seems to justify a change of policy on our part, and whilst owners of slaves under the circumstances should freely yield them to their country, we recommend to our authorities, under proper regulations, to appropriate such part of them to the public service as may be required.

The object of these resolutions, as understood by me, was to call public attention to the consideration of the policy of bringing our slaves into this war. It seems that a change of policy on our part was contemplated; and we determined, in reference to our slaves, to recommend to our authorities, under proper regulations, to appropriate such part of them to the public service as may be required. I am aware that a clamor has been raised against the policy of putting the negroes into the Army by good and loyal men, because, they say, "the end is not yet;" that our Army of citizen soldiers is still competent to make good our defense. No one would advocate the policy of thus appropriating our slaves except as a matter of urgent necessity; but as public opinion is widely divided on this subject, does not common prudence require us to fear that those opposed to this extreme measure may be mistaken? Suppose it should so turn out, how deep would be their responsibility to the country, to freedom and independence everywhere! I know it is the opinion of some of the highest military authorities that the time has come when we should call our slaves to our assistance; and I hold it to be clearly the duty of every citizen, however much he may doubt the wisdom and necessity of the policy, to co-operate in strengthening by every means our armies. I repeat, I know this policy is looked to with anxiety by some of the ablest military men of the age, who believe that it is of the last importance that it should be adopted without delay. I therefore earnestly recommend to the Legislature that they should give this subject early consideration, and enact such measures as their wisdom may approve.

As an additional auxiliary to the successful prosecution of the war I deem it of the gravest consequence that our currency should be improved. I am entirely satisfied that it may be effected. With the great staples at our command as the basis of such purchases abroad as are necessary to our defense, with a judicious system of taxation and public credit, the blunders of the past may be speedily reformed and the public confidence assuredly revived. I bring this subject to your consideration, as you may promote the policy of improving the currency by lending the aid of co-operative legislation to that of the Confederate Government.

There is a measure now pending before Congress proposing to reduce the currency by the issue of tithe certificates, in effect pledging the tithes in cotton, wheat, and corn to the redemption of such certificates, and continuing the tax in kind after the war shall terminate, until they shall be fully paid off and discharged. The security must necessarily be ample, and all persons not needing the currency for immediate use will find such investment a most judicious one.

The legislation I would suggest is in aid of that policy, and I submit the following plan for your consideration: Let the State go into the market and purchase up the currency at its market value for gold—say twenty in currency for one in gold. The effect of this would be to reduce the price of gold at once to that standard as a maximum which would necessarily involve a reduction in the prices of all commodities, thereby securing a general benefit to every individual in the community. The question will naturally be asked, how is the gold to be obtained? The reply is easy. It is known that our State banks have a large amount of specie on hand entirely unproductive, not even contributing to sustain their credit, and a source of constant anxiety to the officers in charge of them. In this state of things the banks, I have no doubt, would cheerfully surrender their specie to the State, upon her obligation to return it at the end of the war and the assignment of the tax-in-kind certificates of the Confederate Government issued to the State from time to time for the currency which she might acquire. The faith of the State with this collateral security would, I am persuaded, be entirely acceptable to the banks under the circumstances which imperil us. Should we triumph in our present struggle, which I doubt not, the security would be ample; and should we fail, of course the security would be valueless, and all would be lost, except in the diffusive benefit to the people from the circulation of the coin now excluded from all useful purposes.

It is no objection that this measure may not be adopted by the other States. Its wisdom is so obvious that it is hardly to be presumed that they will refuse to co-operate. But happily, it is a measure that must be highly beneficial to the State which engages in it, even if alone, while it would tend to aid the important effort to reduce and improve the currency. I will not dwell upon this subject, but believing it a measure of great importance, well calculated to aid in the public defense, as well as beneficial to the State and people thereof, I ask for it your careful consideration.

Allow me, gentlemen, particularly to commend to your favorable consideration the absolute necessity of regulating prices. I know this policy is destined to meet a stout resistance; but fully impressed with its great importance, under existing circumstances, I may be pardoned, I hope, for pressing it upon your attention. I felt myself at liberty shortly after your adjournment, in consequence of the failure of the bill making an appropriation to engage in the acquisition of supplies, for want of a constitutional, not a numerical, majority, under the crying necessities and sufferings of the people for bread, &c., to use such portion of the contingent funds under my control as would partially relieve their wants. With this fund, and means otherwise acquired, I engaged in this business and am gratified to believe that I contributed a considerable amount of relief to the destitute families of soldiers and other suffering poor. Among the articles purchased was about 300,000 pounds of rice. At the time I got it to this market the retail price of the grocers was $2.50 per pound. This price, extortionate in a high degree, was the practical result of untrammelled competition under the laws of trade. By my purchase I was enabled to put it upon the market, under certain restrictions as to the quantity to be purchased, at 50 cents per pound, which covered the cost and all expenses, including a small advance to provide against accidental losses. This involves the principle of the maximum. The same result occurred in the corn I bought and distributed. I sold one large lot at $15 a bushel, even sending a considerable quantity to the county of Tazewell. I mention these facts as practical illustrations of the value of the measure I urge upon your consideration.

Having, however, discussed this question in my inaugural message, I content myself by making an extract therefrom, with the single remark, that if it be the pleasure of the Legislature to appropriate the requisite sums, I can no doubt place supplies here which will greatly reduce the present market value and protect our suffering State from the danger of absolute starvation:

While, however, the people of the State have acquiesced in the prices fixed by the public commissioners, others have been unwilling to accept them, in consequence of higher prices being offered by speculators and others. This very naturally produces discontent on the part of the more liberal and patriotic portion of the people, while others resort to hoarding, hiding, and other disreputable shifts and evasions, to avoid their contribution to the support of our own gallant Army. This state of things is very demoralizing, and may, I think, be easily corrected by the establishment of a State maximum, which, taking the Confederate maximum as a basis, shall be extended to all the productions of human industry. I know that this proposition has always met with the most determined opposition, and yet it has always prevailed in times of public trouble. I know it is said that France tried, and France gave up this policy. And yet she first tried it upon corn; then enlarged it, but never made it general; adhered to it through all the dark hours of her revolution, when she was rent by intestine dissensions and engaged in war with the whole of Europe, and never abandoned it until she had resumed a specie currency, composed her intestine feuds, and brought continental Europe to her feet. What occasion had France to adhere to this policy when she fed her armies from the stores of other nations and replenished her treasury by contributions upon them?

But it is the duty of wisdom to comprehend the force of circumstances. What is our situation? We are cut off from the world by our enemies, insulated as completely as if we were on an island in mid-ocean, and no productions from abroad like those raised by us are allowed to come in competition with our own. Can it be contended with any propriety that there can be, in such a state of things, a market price for commodities in the sense of the economists? Again, the supply of our own productions is inadequate for a liberal consumption. Bread, meat, shoes, cotton, and woollen cloths are painful illustrations of this stern fact; and, I ask, where is the competition to be found which is to put these articles within easy reach of the naked and the hungry. It is sometimes said that it is the currency which causes this great exaggeration of prices. To some extent this may be so; but where the supply of actual necessities is deficient, and the price of them is fixed by the conscience of the seller alone, the currency is of but little significance. The hungry must be fed, and the seller knows it; and the price must be paid in whatever currency required.

Nor is the maximum unknown in daily life. It was the law that the person who took out a license as a tavern keeper should keep proper accommodations for the traveler, and then should not charge him for meals at pleasure, but only the rates fixed by the county courts. So in the case of bridges and ferries, where the prices are fixed by law. But there is a very remarkable case of maximum which seems to have escaped general observation—I mean interest upon money. No lender shall take more than $6 for the loan of $100 for one year. Should the lender bargain for more the contract is void. If he takes more he forfeits double the sum loaned. Here is a maximum of great antiquity on money, the token or representative of all property; and yet it is not proper to set a maximum on the property so represented.

That the law of maximum will be difficult to enforce, I readily admit. So is the whole criminal code. So is the law which forbids the loan of money at more than legal interest. So is that bright, hopeful, and glorious plan of salvation for which a Savior died. But shall we for such reasons abandon our efforts to reform, benefit, and save mankind?

But the maximum would have other important advantages. It would put an end to discontent among the people; it would extinguish the practice of hoarding and hiding. Without any hope of increasing prices producers would cheerfully furnish to consumers their surplus. Uniformity of price and the application of the maximum to all things would, I am persuaded, inspire general satisfaction, and relieve the necessary duty of collecting supplies for the Army of that irritation which has heretofore, in many cases, made the duty most unpleasant, and restore those kind and agreeable relations which should always exist between the people and their Government. Surely, when such must be the happy consequence of this measure, the States will speedily adopt it.

The act entitled "An act to provide for the purchase and distribution among the people of the State of cotton, cotton yarns, cotton cloths, and hand cards," passed March 9, 1864, was put in operation shortly after your adjournment by the appointment of S. Bassett French, esq., as commercial agent. It was somewhat delayed by the difficulty of obtaining a suitable agent, not a single application for the agency having been made, in consequence, chiefly, of the large amount for which a bond was required, and I was compelled to press it upon Colonel French, then acting as my aide. The agency, although very much embarrassed for the want of transportation, and restricted in the extent of its operations, has been a source of very great relief to the people. Its operations, limited as they have been, have had a decided effect upon the markets of the articles in which it dealt. It has saved thousands of dollars to the people and greatly improved their comforts. The report of the agency, which will soon be laid before you, will be a powerful argument in favor of a maximum, inasmuch as they have to a very large extent prevented the shameless extortion practiced upon our fellow-citizens in the enumerated articles, clearly demonstrating its necessity, or the appropriation of large sums for the purchase and sale by the State at cost of all the leading articles of consumption.

I have already mentioned that I had engaged in some operations designed to relieve the distress of our fellow-citizens, and I will now add, have also supplied to some extent the penitentiary and State guard. I also, with a view to aid in furnishing materials to the workshops of the penitentiary, shipped several small lots of cotton abroad, and imported in return leather, steel, and a variety of other articles intended for the purposes stated and the other uses of the State. I have also ordered cloth for the State guard, which for want of proper clothing presents a very discreditable appearance. The result so far of these operations is highly satisfactory. The difficulty in this business is in obtaining transportation on the railroads, their whole capacity being generally engrossed by the Confederate Government. With a train the exclusive property of the State and a moderate appropriation I could put supplies of bread and meat here which would greatly relieve the distresses and wants of our people. With an appropriation of an amount sufficient to enable me to purchase a steamer and to load her with cotton and other staples, I could clothe our volunteers in comfort and decency and enable the State to redeem the pledge made to our volunteers by the resolution adopted January 17, 1862. It is mortifying to the pride of the Virginian to see our gallant soldiers in the field in a state of want and destitution, while the soldiers of other States more enterprising have every comfort which they require. With these facilities I could easily supply all of our State institutions abundantly and upon the best of terms. I shall be prepared to submit to a committee of the Legislature an account of these operations which I flatter myself will be entirely satisfactory.

In the management of the purchases I have made, within the Confederacy as well as abroad, and in the distribution thereof, I have called to my aid the quartermaster's department, the members of which have cheerfully performed all the duties required of them. The report of the acting quartermaster-general, Major Fitzhugh, will disclose the character and extent of these operations, and is herewith respectfully submitted.*

In connection with this subject I have to call your attention to the rights of the State over the railroads within her limits. By the twenty-third section of chapter 41 of the Code it is provided that "troops, persons, and munitions, &c., and other property of the Confederate States shall in time of war be required to pay only one-half of the regular tolls payable by other persons." The construction put upon the railroad law by the managers of these roads, sustained by the opinion of the attorney-general, is that Virginia is not included in this provision, and that freights upon her goods and persons traveling in her service are charged as the persons and property of private individuals. This discrimination is certainly very unjust to the State, especially as she is a large stockholder in all of said roads. Some of the roads, it is true, have put the State upon the same footing with the Confederate Government, but that is at the pleasure of the management of the road, and ought to be regulated by law. In North Carolina and other States the practice obtains, I suppose by authority of law, that whenever the Governor requires a train on the road for the public use he issues his order to the particular road upon which transportation is required, and it is promptly furnished to the exclusion of all other demands whatever. I respectfully suggest that a similar law be enacted, conferring upon the Governor the same authority.

Allow me to suggest a careful examination into the business operations of our railroads. Undoubtedly they are far from affording to the traveler that comfort, celerity, and dispatch which was expected at the time of their construction. This is hardly denied by the managers of the roads, and their excuse is the pressure of the Government business and the difficulty of obtaining the requisite materials and hands to keep them in proper order. Others say, however, that the fault consists in their failure to apply their receipts to repairs, equipment, and construction, growing out of their eagerness to pay off their debts. Without professing to know how the fact is, the inconvenience to the public calls for a careful investigation.

I have the honor to lay before you for your consideration the annual report of the adjutant-general.* It embraces the report of the ordnance department. Like all the reports of this old and valuable officer, it abounds in wise and practical suggestions, which I recommend to your favorable consideration.

I submit likewise the report of the attorney-general.*

From my late connection with the Army I could but learn the great inconvenience and expense to which our soldiers are put in the adjustment of their claims against the Confederate Government. The claims of the widows and orphans of those who had died or been killed in battle were also difficult of adjustment for want of proper information and the great expense of prosecuting them before the Government, resulting frequently in their abandonment, or in the employment of agents at a ruinous compensation. I felt that some provision should be made for an easier and cheaper collection of these highly meritorious demands. With this view I ordered Col. Henry Hill, paymaster-general of the State, without existing employment, to undertake the adjustment of all such claims free of charge. He was also directed to attend to all claims on the part of any soldier of the Virginia forces, also free of charge. And I authorized him to provide himself with whatever was necessary to the efficient performance of his duty. Colonel Hill being in the pay of the State, the additional expense will be inconsiderable; but still, if such an agency should meet with your approbation, some legislation will be necessary to perfect it. I am satisfied that it has already produced much good, and I recommend it to your favor.

---

* Not found.

After your adjournment I was repeatedly called upon to take steps to make a record of the Virginia forces, which should include not only a full list of all those gallant spirits who had dedicated their lives to the defense of their country, but also a list of deaths by disease and battle; of those wounded, and at what places; of those distinguished by acts of extraordinary gallantry; of desertions; of traitors; in short, to make a roll of honor as well as dishonor, so as to transmit to posterity a complete record of the conduct of the sons of Virginia. Completed and carried out, as it is important it should be, it will be a book of valuable reference and of profound interest to us all.

Yielding to what seemed to be public sentiment, and instituting an examination to see what laws, if any, had been passed upon the subject, I found an act passed February 7, 1862, entitled "An act to empower the Governor to have made out and filed in the state department complete lists of Virginia forces."

In the preamble to the act the policy indicated above seems to have been intended by the Legislature; and as the power is conferred by that act upon the Governor to do all things necessary to carry out such intent, I organized a board accordingly, by the appointment of Joseph Jackson, jr., as the head thereof, with an assistant, and specified the salaries to be received by them—inadequate, it is true, but conforming substantially to the compensation provided by law for the officials in the several departments of the State government. I subsequently authorized other appointments, still, however, not in sufficient number to proceed with proper dispatch in the execution of this noble work. The plan and progress of the work will, however, be disclosed in the official report of Mr. Jackson, to which I invite attention.

In consequence of the great atrocities of the enemy, of every description known to savage war, I enlarged the duties of the recorder by directing him to take evidence of the outrages referred to, that an undoubted memorial thereof might be preserved and the truth might stand forever vindicated. I deem this the more necessary, as posterity will not believe, without the clearest proof, that a powerful people, boasting of its civilization, was capable of perpetrating acts that should damn them throughout all time and with every Christian nation. This organization, however, requires legislation to perfect it.

The penitentiary report will also be laid before you. I flatter myself it will exhibit very gratifying results. I believe that under the management of its present efficient superintendent it will soon develop a high degree of prosperity. It has labored under great disadvantages from want of supplies and proper managers, from which causes heavy losses have been sustained. When large shops are without material and the hands consequently without employment, when an unskilled manager of a shop permits work to be imperfectly finished, heavy losses must be inevitably incurred. Such has been the case with this institution under its present organization on several occasions. It is almost impossible to obtain materials in the existing condition of the country, and true economy requires us to encounter the hazards of the blockade business that we may draw our supplies from abroad. Another disadvantage to the institution grows out of the number of convictions for short terms. The period is too short for the convict to learn a trade, and his labor is consequently wasteful and unproductive. I trust, gentlemen, that you will correct this evil by increasing the minimum term for which imprisonment in that institution is permitted.

I have exercised the pardoning power with liberality in the short-term cases, especially when the convicts were soldiers or would make such. I thought it better to restore them to their commands or to the enrolling officer, as the case might be, after a confinement sufficiently long to vindicate the majesty of the law, than to protract an unprofitable confinement. A list, however, of the convicts who have been pardoned, with the reasons therefor, will be laid before you.

The mode of supplying the penitentiary through a purchasing agent has been most judicious, and has in a degree protected that institution against the effect of advancing prices. I have found it very difficult to provide proper clothing for the State guard, in consequence of which their appearance is not such as could be desired. I have, however, recently made a temporary arrangement to obviate this difficulty, which I hope will not again occur. A most expensive system existed of supplying the guard with rations, which I deemed it my duty to change. I directed the purchasing agent of the penitentiary to purchase for this organization also, which has been done so satisfactorily as to save a large sum to the treasury. The appropriation need not be as large for the coming year as for that of the preceding one.

I herewith communicate the report of the rector and visitors of the University of Virginia.* It is so full and satisfactory that it requires no comment.

I also lay the report of the Central Lunatic Asylum before you.* I invite attention to its suggestions. One of them is to sanction the purchase of supplies by the obligations of the institution, payable after the war. This is rather an interesting question, and without entirely adopting the suggestion I commend it to your attention. I regret that this great public charity should feel the influence of an expanding currency in the enlarged appropriation which it needs. You will not, I am sure, refuse it.

The report of the Virginia Military Institute will of course be laid before you. This valuable and interesting institution has suffered severely from the inflictions of this war. Her gallant corps of cadets have illustrated their training by conspicuously participating in the hard-fought battle of the 15th day of May, 1864, at New Market, under Major-General Breckinridge, and given a foretaste of what may be confidently expected of them when new fields may demand their valor and maturer manhood may call for its display. Subsequently, however, the advancing power of the enemy swept up the Valley, and in its desolating path destroyed their fine buildings, making it necessary to obtain other quarters. After much difficulty the almshouse near this city, admirably fitted for the purpose, has been obtained, where the exercises of the school will be resumed as soon as the proper preparations can be made.

---

* Not found.

The report of the auditor of public accounts shows that the revenue standing to the credit of the Commonwealth proper on the 1st day of October last amounted to $5,416,734.87. The same officer estimates receipts into the treasury during the fiscal year ending 30th of September next, from the several sources of revenue, at $4,612,010, making a total sum of $10,028,744.87. He estimates that the disbursements during the same period will be $21,509,090.61, leaving a deficiency of $11,480,345.74.

Since the 1st of October, at the beginning of the fiscal year, the commissioners, consisting of the Governor, treasurer, and auditor of public accounts, in pursuance of "An act to authorize the funding of certain currency belonging to the State in Confederate bonds, and to authorize the sale of such bonds if necessary, and to authorize the conversion of other notes into other issues," passed March 3, 1864, caused $5,000,000 of the currency then standing to the credit of the Commonwealth to be funded in 6 per cent. Confederate bonds; and although they were authorized by act of Assembly to make sale of the bonds, they have neither deemed it necessary or prudent to do so. This funding has withdrawn $5,000,000 of the currency which stood to the credit of the Commonwealth on the 1st of October, and would apparently enlarge the above deficiency to $16,480,345.74 were it not that the Legislature may satisfy a part of the present demands upon the treasury due to the commissioners of the sinking fund by a transfer of the said Confederate bonds to that corporation, under the provisions of the twenty-ninth section of the fourth article of the constitution of Virginia, which provide that—

There shall be set apart annually from the accruing revenues a sum equal to 7 per cent. of the State debt existing on the 1st day of January, in the year 1852. The fund thus set apart shall be called the sinking fund, and shall be applied to the payment of the interest of the State debt and the principal of such part as may be redeemable. If no part be redeemable then the residue of the sinking fund, after the payment of such interest, shall be invested in the bonds or certificates of debt of this Commonwealth, or of the Confederate States, or of some of the States of this Confederacy, and applied to the payment of the State debt as it shall become redeemable. Whenever after the said 1st day of January a debt shall be contracted by the Commonwealth, there shall be set apart in like manner annually for thirty-four years a sum exceeding by 1 per cent. the aggregate amount of the annual interest agreed to be paid thereon at the time of its contraction; which sum shall be part of the sinking fund, and shall be applied in the manner before directed. The General Assembly shall not otherwise appropriate any part of the sinking fund, or its accruing interest, except in time of war, insurrection, or invasion.

It must be remembered that no part of the State debt is redeemable except at the pleasure of the General Assembly, in which event the commissioners of the sinking fund may invest the funds, as well for redemption as for investment, in the bonds of the Confederate States. This disposition of the Confederate bonds would diminish the present demand upon the treasury by the sum of $2,269,772.80, now due for redemption and investment, and relieve the treasury from the obligation of making further provision for such fund until after the year 1868.

I deem it right to say that this large deficit may not be expected to be called for during the coming year. Indeed, I am satisfied that there will be no difficulty in meeting all demands upon the treasury, with the aid of proper arrangements. Besides other large claims against the Confederate Government, the auditing board of the State report a balance against it for moneys paid out or cash articles supplied amounting to $8,154,601.01. Some of the vouchers for this amount have not yet been obtained, but there will be no difficulty in procuring them. This large claim should no longer be neglected, but to some one should be assigned the special duty of settling and collecting it. Its payment would greatly relieve the treasury.

The statement of the treasurer is herewith submitted, characterized by its usual intelligence and perspicuity.* It requires no comment.

The second auditor's report will also be laid before you. It exhibits a clear and lucid condition of the public debt.

Under the operation of the tax laws of the Confederate Government the right is asserted to tax the stock of the State in her various corporations. This claim was made during the administration of my predecessor and was then abandoned, but is now revived. It is not pretended that the Confederate Government has a right to tax State property, but it is insisted that her property in banks, railroads, and other corporations being in the form of stock, she has merged her sovereignty, and consequently that she has only the rights of private corporations, and is subject to the taxation imposed upon them. This distinction is merely technical, and I forbear criticising it as I might. The opinion of the attorney-general is strongly against it. As the amount involved is large it should receive prompt attention.

A strong disposition has been evinced from time to time to suppress distillation of grain, &c., but unfortunately the distillation of undried fruit was not included in the prohibition. The recent crop of apples was the most abundant we have had for many years, and would have furnished a large amount of healthy succulents and an ample supply of vinegar, so essential as an anti-scorbutic for our soldiers. But a frenzy almost seems to have seized upon the people for converting this fine crop into brandy, which in its effects upon our Army is most pernicious. I earnestly recommend that the law may be enlarged so as to comprehend an inhibition of the distillation of all fruit.

Difficulties still exist in connection with the State salt-works, and the transportation to and from them. It is very much to be regretted that this gift of God to man cannot be enjoyed in peace. The States of North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Tennessee, through their agents, complain of their treatment in relation to their trains, and believe that they do not obtain that liberal justice which they think the comity between the States should give them. This impression originates, from what I can learn, in the manner in which transportation is conducted on the Virginia and Tennessee road, and in the belief that the private salt of the State superintendent is transported thereon contrary to the spirit of the acts in relation thereto. By the law as it now stands it is expressly declared "that whenever the superintendent shall become interested, directly or indirectly, in the manufacture or sale of salt his office shall be declared vacant." By a contract between the board of supervisors and said superintendent they hire from him 121 negro men, at ten bushels of salt each per month, and twelve negro women, at five bushels per month, each, making an aggregate of nearly 1,300 bushels of salt per month, which necessarily must find a market or be useless to the owner. The right as well as the policy of such a contract may well be questioned. Undoubtedly it nullifies the restriction referred to, and moreover inspires an impression on the part of those interested in the production and transportation of salt that it is to the interest of the superintendent to appropriate the transportation to his own private benefit, and to embarrass its production and transportation on the part of others. However unfounded this suspicion may be—and I have great confidence in the fairness and integrity of Colonel Clarkson—yet the policy of the act prohibiting the superintendent from any interest in the sale of salt, so as to protect him from all suspicion, ought undoubtedly to be sternly enforced. I respectfully suggest that a different mode of compensation than that of salt should be adopted. It will not do for Virginia, controlling as she does this great necessity of man, to allow such a state of things as may even plausibly subject her superintendent to the imputation of using the great power which must be confided to him for his private ends. It does not look well, after impressing the property of Stuart, Buchanan & Co., to protect the country against what was thought to be their extortion, to allow in any degree a similar power to her agent.

---

* Not found.

I respectfully submit that we, the State of Virginia, ought not to embarrass in any respect the trains of our sister States strictly engaged in the transportation of their own salt, which we have authorized them to make. I cannot doubt that the Virginia and Tennessee road, when it is necessary to do so, can easily obtain by private arrangement the use of such trains, when not engaged in transporting their own salt. Nor can I see the difficulty which seems to prevail in getting fuel to the salt-works, or removing the salt when made therefrom. A single train of cars per day, I am informed, will carry more wood to Saltville than our works will consume, while a single train therefrom carrying 3,000 bushels will transport one-third more than the whole supply needed by the Confederate Government and the State of Virginia. Manifestly something is wrong, and I respectfully invite your careful attention to the matter. I think the operations at Saltville would be greatly simplified by the State undertaking to supply her sister States with salt, deliverable at Saltville, they sending by their trains supplies for the use of the works at that place. I have no doubt such an arrangement would give satisfaction to all concerned.

I have now, gentlemen of the Assembly, frankly presented to you my views upon all measures to which I deem it necessary to invite your attention. I cannot hope that you will concur with me entirely; but no measure has been suggested which, after careful consideration, does not strongly impress me as either necessary to the improvement of our condition, or calculated to strengthen our hands in the fearful struggle in which we are now engaged. Our national life depends in no slight degree upon the separate action of the several States of the Confederacy; and I would not have our beloved State in any of her departments to betray a want of the purest and highest heroism in her official conduct. Let us, gentlemen, remember, in the eloquent language of our court of appeals, that "the obligation of the citizen to render military service is a paramount social and political duty," and pass all laws which are necessary to give a military organization to our whole people. If in any proposed measure we doubt our power or its propriety, let us remember that it is a well-established rule of construction "that all grants of privileges and exemptions from general burdens are to be construed liberally in favor of the public, and strictly as against the grantee."

And now, gentlemen, firmly relying upon a merciful God to crown our efforts with a safe deliverance from the perils which threaten our dearest hopes and most precious interests, I invoke the favor of Heaven upon your labors, not doubting but that all your aims will be your country's, your God's, and truth's.

Respectfully,

WM. SMITH.

[Inclosure.]

AN ACT to provide for a State guard.

Whereas, the State of Virginia has suffered severely during the present war by the hands of our uncivilized foe, in the desolation of the homes, the waste, consumption, and robbery of the property of many of our people; and whereas, large districts of our territory are in the hands of such enemy, while the people thereof, because of such barbarian conduct, have been, in many instances, reduced to poverty and want, and not unfrequently imprisoned in loathsome dungeons, for no other reason than their detestation of the wretched tyranny by which they are outraged and oppressed; and whereas, the conduct of our foe clearly indicates that he has no expectation of reconstruction nor desire of reunion with us, and looks only to our impoverishment and subjugation, thus imposing upon us the noble duty of organizing our whole strength in aid of our gallant brethren in the field, that by our combined exertions we may establish our liberty and independence, or failing in which, may find a patriot's grave; and whereas, the able-bodied men of the State, designated as the militia thereof, are now in the service of the Confederacy or subject to her control, while we have a large number of men and lads who are able to render most important service in repelling raids, arresting deserters, and other military delinquents, relieving posts and assisting in the defense of cities, towns, &c., are unorganized and subject to no military duty whatever: Now, therefore:

1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly, That all white male inhabitants of the State, of sixteen years and upward, who are not enrolled in the Army of the Confederate States, or who have been discharged therefrom, and all refugees and persons sojourning within the State, shall be immediately organized by the Governor in such manner as to him may seem best. It shall be the duty of the several county and corporation courts to convene immediately after the passage of this act, and with the aid of the commissioners of the revenue, sheriffs, and sergeants, and, by way of assistance to the Governor, cause all the persons before mentioned to be enrolled. And it shall be the duty of all persons subject to enrollment to report themselves to said courts without delay, stating their respective ages. Any person who may fail or refuse to report himself shall be fined by the court not less than $50 nor more than $100, to be levied and collected as militia fines. In execution of the duty required of them by this act, the courts are empowered to require the attendance of their clerks, the sheriffs, sergeants, and commissioners of the revenue of their several counties and corporations, whose presence shall be entered of record. And should any one of the officials before enumerated fail in their attendance in whole or in part, without good and sufficient cause, of which the court shall be the sole and exclusive judge, such delinquent shall be fined $100, to be collected as the other judgments of their courts, and paid into the treasury of the State. The enrollment hereby required shall be preserved in the clerk's office, and a copy thereof shall be forwarded to the adjutant-general of the State.

2. The special character of the service herein provided for leaves but little room for exemptions or substitutes, and therefore they are left to be provided for, in peculiar cases, by the Governor, by such regulations as he may deem expedient. But all professors of religion, of whatever denomination or creed; all physicians, all shoemakers, tanners, blacksmiths, wagon makers, millers, and engineers, millwrights, operators in wool and cotton factories, paper mills, and all teachers of colleges, academies, schools and theological seminaries; all artisans, mechanics, and employés in the establishments of such persons as may be engaged under contracts with the State or Confederate Government; all managers, mechanics, and miners employed in the manufacture of salt, of lead, and iron; those engaged in burning coke, miners in coal mines, and all those engaged in attending upon cattle, mules, horses, and sheep; all who may be engaged for police purposes, and such as have been or may be exempted by the President on the ground of justice, equity, or necessity, and exempted under and by virtue of the act of Congress passed 11th of October, 1862; all men detailed for special duty by order of the Secretary of War, his assent thereto being first had and obtained, and all who shall have furnished substitutes in the State or Confederate service, refugees and persons sojourning within the State, shall be embraced in the enrollment directed by this act.

3. The Governor is authorized and required to organize the force provided by this act in all respects as to him may seem best. As soon as he shall complete the organization herein directed he shall report the same to the General Assembly for their information, and for such action, if any, as to them may seem fit. This force shall be denominated the "State Guard," and may be called out by the Governor, in part or in whole, whenever in his judgment it is necessary in defense of the State; in resisting raids and sudden invasion; in preserving order and domestic tranquillity; in relieving the Confederate Government from the necessity of providing guards for the protection and security of prisoners; for the various posts and other necessary organizations; to arrest deserters, absentees, and other military delinquents. Such portions of the State Guard as may be raised in their respective counties, cities, and towns shall be assigned to duty therein, if not inconsistent with the public interests, when necessary. No portion of such guard shall, under any circumstances, or at any time, be required to go beyond the limits of the State; nor shall such guard or any portion thereof be called into service for a longer period at any one time than thirty days.

4. Such enrolled men as possess private arms may be required to use them in the public service, and shall be compensated for any loss or damage they may sustain by so doing. The remainder shall be armed by the State, and all shall be furnished with the requisite ammunition. It shall be the duty of the Governor to see that the arms and other public property which may be issued from time to time to the State Guard, shall be promptly accounted for and delivered up, when thereto required, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe.

5. The Governor may establish such rules and regulations for the promotion of discipline and efficiency in this organization as he may deem necessary. And if any person who is held to service under this act shall fail or refuse to perform any of the military duties required by its provisions, he shall be imprisoned in the jail of the county or corporation not less than ten nor more than thirty days, at his own proper costs and charges, and shall be fined not less than $10 nor more than $100; and if he be not a native of any of the Confederate States, shall be required to leave the State of Virginia forthwith. The commandant of each regiment shall detail a board, consisting of one field officer and two commandants of companies, and the commandant of the battalion, where there is no regiment, shall detail a board, consisting of three commandants of companies, who shall take cognizance of and decide upon all such cases. All fines imposed by these boards shall be promptly collected by the sheriff or sergeant as militia fines, upon certificate of the presiding officer.

6. This act being a war measure, will cease and be of no effect from and after the proclamation of peace. So much of the act passed March 7, 1862, entitled "An act to authorize the Governor to organize and call out certain military forces for the defense of the State," as provides for the organization of a second-class militia, and the act passed May 14, 1862, entitled "An act to organize a home guard," be and are hereby absorbed in the organization authorized by this act; and all other acts and parts of acts in conflict therewith shall be and are hereby suspended. All commissions under the acts above specified shall be and are null and void.

7. This act shall be in force from and after its passage.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., December 10, 1864.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

I have the honor to submit my answer to the inclosed resolutions of the Senate, transmitted by you to me. (Resolutions adopted on 5th instant, in relation to act of 6th of February, 1864.*)

First. The tenth clause of the regulations established under the act of February 6, 1864, is as follows:

Nothing in these regulations shall be so construed as to conflict with the proviso of the law which declares "that nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit the Confederate States, or any of them, from exporting any of the articles herein enumerated on their own account, nor shall a bond be required of a State in any case."

In executing this clause no restriction has been imposed upon any State, and no State has been asked to give a bond, as required of all private owners. All vessels except those owned exclusively by States are subject to the regulations and compelled to carry out cotton and bring a supply for the Confederate States Government. If a State should be a subscriber to one of the joint stock companies for running the blockade or in partnership with private individuals in a vessel, such vessel would be held as subject to the regulations, but all vessels and cargoes belonging to States are held to be entirely exempt, and no restriction attaches to them.

Second. The number of vessels engaged in running the blockade has steadily increased since the establishment of the regulations and is now larger than at any time before. Many new steamers are understood to be on the way to engage in the business. This, too, though the stringency of the blockade is supposed to be constantly augmenting.

Third. The regulations have been beneficial to the Confederate States Government in furnishing the means abroad to purchase supplies and munitions of war and the tonnage required to transport them to our ports. Prior to the passage of the act owners of steamers, upon application of the Secretary of War, conceded to the Confederate States Government a portion of their tonnage for outward and inward cargoes, but the act of Congress and the regulations under it were necessary to secure uniformity and to compel such persons as were reluctant to make the concession. The annexed statement, showing (1) quantity of cotton exported for the Confederate States Government and its estimated value, and (2) the leading articles imported, exhibits some of the substantial advantages that have accrued to the Confederate States Government. [The report of Lieut. Col. T. L. Bayne (the officer specially assigned to so much of the duty as devolves upon the War Department under the act and regulations), hereto attached, will present the subject more in detail.<sup>a</sup>]

---

* See p. 897.

Our agents abroad represent that the act and regulations have been in the highest degree beneficial in appreciating the public credit and enabling them to procure additional supplies at reduced rates.

Fourth. It would be exceedingly inexpedient to repeal the act, and experience has not suggested to me any modification or amendment as necessary. On the contrary, the act and regulations are just becoming well understood, and the Confederate States Government is appreciating more and more the benefits resulting from them.

The duty attaches peculiarly to the Confederate States Government to provide supplies and munitions of war for the public defense, and it is better in every respect that the duty should be wholly performed by the Confederate States Government, especially when in devolving any portion of it upon the States the means to that extent are withdrawn from the Confederate States Government. If a concession is made to the States to charter vessels, and if such vessels be exempted from the operation of the regulations, each State becomes a competitor with every other State and the Confederate States Government. The uniformity contemplated by the act of Congress will be destroyed. Competitive charters will be made, not only to secure ships, but to secure the entry to particular ports. If one State undertakes to supply its troops, every other State will be compelled to undertake the same duty. Unequal provision for the soldiers of different States will create jealousy and dissatisfaction among them, and ultimately the Confederate States Government will have to reimburse the States. The competition of the States with each other and with the Confederate States would, I fear, extend to transportation over the railroads when it was inadequate to the delivery at the sea-ports of cargoes for all vessels partially owned or chartered by them. Agencies at home and abroad would be largely multiplied, which would aggravate the competition in every form. It may be safely assumed that all vessels will run under the regulations, carrying cotton and bringing in supplies for the Confederate States Government, unless they can make more advantageous arrangements with particular States. Whatever, therefore, is gained by such arrangements will accrue to individuals and will be so much subtracted from the Confederate States Government.

The resolutions are general in their character and seem to justify—indeed, to call for—the expression of these views.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

<sup>a</sup>The sentence in brackets stricken out, before transmitted to the President, by direction of the Secretary of War.

Shipments of cotton since March 1, 1864.

	Bales.
Account Niter and Mining Bureau .....	873
Account Medical Department .....	328
Account Engineer Department .....	57
Account Commissary Department .....	1,248
Account Quartermaster's Department .....	1,829
Account Ordnance Department .....	1,776
To, say, War Department .....	6,111
To, say, Navy Department .....	4,861
To, say, Treasury Department, 12,840, and one-half of contract steamers (6,974), 3,487 .....	16,327
Total .....	27,299
27,299 bales at £40 average = £1,091,960, at $4.85 .....	$5,296,006
Equal in currency at 25 to 1 .....	132,400,150

Importations of leading articles at Wilmington and Charleston since November 1, 1863.

	From last state- ment, Oct. 26, 1864.	From Oct. 26 to Dec. 8, 1864.	Total.	Estimated quantity or weight.
Leather ..... packages .....	666	3	669
Lead ..... pigs .....	12,396	150	12,546	1,507,000 pounds.
Do ..... casks .....	54		54
Saltpeter ..... packages .....	9,226	473	9,699	1,933,000 pounds
Revolvers ..... do .....	97		97
Boots and shoes ..... do .....	2,915	857	3,772	545,000 pairs.
Blankets ..... bales .....	2,921	322	3,243	316,000 pairs.
Meat ..... packages .....	15,194	6,085	21,279	8,632,000 pounds.
Rifles ..... cases .....	2,818	328	3,146	69,000.
Coffee ..... packages .....	2,453	540	2,993	524,000 pounds.
Cannon ..... .....	43		43
Copper ..... packages .....	1,452	24	1,476
Swords ..... cases .....	134		134
Rope ..... coils .....	816	104	920
Medicine ..... packages .....	2,222	417	2,639

BUREAU OF SUBSISTENCE,
Richmond, December 12, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: In response to the inquiry contained in the Senate resolution of December 5, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs be instructed to inquire whether the daily ration issued to the men of the Army is sufficient, and if not, whether any legislation is necessary in regard thereto,

I have to reply—

First. There has been no serious complaint or suffering from defect of subsistence in any armies outside of Virginia, the territories from which they draw being comparatively undesolated by the enemy.

Second. As to the armies in Virginia, the ration for 100 men is as follows: 100 pounds flour or meal per day; 100 pounds fresh beef or 33½ pounds bacon per day; 10 pounds rice; 2 pounds soap; 1 gallon vinegar; 2 quarts salt.

The troops in the trenches are furnished with the same ration as other troops of the Army, with the addition of six pounds sugar and three pounds coffee to the hundred men. This is the best that can be done under the existing state of things. The law regulating the rations is most liberal and the ration table is superabundant, but for over two years it has been impossible to meet their requirements and the ration has been gradually declining. As time advances the funds for procuring subsistence become less and less devisable and available, and the obstacles to collecting what is in the country increase in like ratio.

In addition to the depreciation in the currency, a further and very great difficulty has been experienced in obtaining money. The Treasury has generally failed, and particularly since April 1 ultimo, to respond with promptness to requisitions, until now it owes this department $35,500,000, and though this Bureau has paid out more bonds and certificates of indebtedness than all other bureaus of the War Department put together, it has yet been unable, owing to the above-stated deficiency in funds, either to make sufficient purchases or enforce impressments when they have been resisted. The cure or mitigation of these evils is matter of legislation in finance, taxation, and impressment. My policy, as exhibited in my letter to Major Moses and the accompanying circular, herewith inclosed,* is what I would recommend for impressments. Still another difficulty arises from the actual scarcity of supplies. There is not enough meat for a full supply for all, and this excites the fears and avidity of all, individually and collectively, to change their depreciating currency into substantial commodities, and while all others crave and are generally allowed a full supply the commissariat must do its best in gleaning industriously. But this deficiency of meat is not the most formidable feature. Bread threatens to be deficient at an early day, as has been often reported to you, and had the ration not been kept to one pound for the last five months there would not now be one pound on hand. At present there is not here or en route over twenty-five days' rations for 100,000 men, whilst the area for subsistence is being steadily desolated by the enemy. These deliberate attempts to destroy the fruits of the earth, begun cautiously and, as it were, experimentally at first, have now become the system; this renders us more than ever dependent on transportation which has been steadily failing.

Our connection with Southwest Georgia and Alabama has not been adequate to collect supplies of corn here, and these resources are now cut off, and the Danville and Greensborough railroads are our only connection with the two Carolinas. All inland contracts or attempts at contracts for supplies of meat from the enemy's country have proved abortive; in two instances by the interference of our generals, and in others by changes of circumstances and by views of general policy. It appears now that our generals are authorized to regulate the trade. Foreign importations ought to be pressed. These have been resorted to as far as funds could be procured or contracts made. But the Treasury has refused to furnish cotton and has been unable to furnish cash except in very limited quantities, and its policy to import under the regulations has failed to get meat. Blockaders seek freight of great condensed value and little specific gravity; therefore meat is not brought in when it can be avoided, and the regulations, whether appropriate or not for other departments, have not succeeded in bringing meat from abroad, either as original purchases or as freight. In fact, what has been accumulated at the islands has not been brought in fast enough to keep it from spoiling. The conclusion that the same regulations which may be suitable for the stores of other departments will not suffice for the introduction of subsistence is set forth in a report made by Lieutenant-Colonel Ruffin on this subject and in an indorsement by me thereon, which is herewith referred to you. Legislation is also required in respect to those agriculturists who are exempt by law, but who evade their obligations to devote their time, capital, and labor to raising supplies for the Government. I called attention to this point some time ago, and now urge that exemptions be revoked or placed under the control of the War Department, with power to revoke them when the parties do not zealously devote themselves to advancing the ends of the Government rather than their own. These parties now assert their independence of the War Department, and claim that their exemption is by act of Congress, and that the remedy against them for failure to comply with their obligations is by suit on their bond. But few of them in Virginia, at least, have any marketable surplus, and many are devoting their time, skill, capital, &c., to speculation or to supplies not embraced in the law. The organization of the bureau for collecting and distributing supplies is as near perfection as is possible under the general plan that has been adopted for all purchases. Its working has been constantly crippled by the abstraction of trained men and assigning them as privates in the field, under the idea that anybody can do anything, and that any system can be worked well, though harassed by constant changes of its laborers. If the Army is not as well fed as the condition of the country will allow, or if at any time it should be without food, it will be the result of these influences in overruling an efficient and comprehensive system which has proved and maintained itself against constant and potent opposition.

---

* Inclosure not found.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. B. NORTHROP,

Commissary-General of Subsistence.

P. S.—The officer who has been for some time in North Carolina with the object of determining more definitely the prospect of affairs there has returned. He was expected on Saturday night, and arrived after signing this paper to-night. He reports that the State of North Carolina has been purchasing largely of corn and wheat at 100 per cent. over schedule rates, and our officers have been unable to get anything; that impressments are impracticable; that the people will not supply grain under notices of impressment which cannot be enforced, and will not prepare their crops for sale unless market prices are given. Governor Vance was asked by one of the district commissaries who waited on him to cease buying at the rates being paid, which he declined unless the commissariat should supply from that district 20,000 bushels. The officer could not make such engagement, and nothing seems left us but to yield to the demand and appeal to the people to supply the Army on the terms they exact. The effort to sustain the Treasury and the policy of Government in the establishment of the commissioners of appraisement has reached its limit.

The people in both Carolinas and Georgia have vehemently opposed impressment. I see nothing but to admit the force of present necessity and strain every nerve to get in the grain or await the calamities consequent on a deficiency of bread.

CIRCULAR } CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
 No. 36. } WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., December 12, 1864.

I. Paragraphs I and II, of General Orders, No. 86, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, current series, herein recited, are made parts of this circular.*

II. Generals of reserves in the respective States are required to proceed forthwith to execute the above orders, employing therefor all enrolling officers and all other officers under their command not actually on service inconsistent with this duty. It is supposed that the Congressional district inspecting officers and those provided under Circular No. 35, of this Bureau, current series, may be made available.

III. The number of slaves to be obtained in each State is as follows: Virginia, 2,250; North Carolina, 2,250; South Carolina, 2,500; Georgia, 2,500; Alabama, 2,500; Florida, 500; Tennessee, 500; Mississippi and East Louisiana, 1,500. Total, 14,500.

Forms of returns accompany this circular, which can be printed and furnished to the proper officers. Each return must be in triplicate.

IV. When fifty negroes are collected in any locality, either by one or more officers having contiguous districts, they will be forwarded to the nearest camp of instruction in the State, where a complete record will be made, and they will thence be forwarded to points hereinafter stated. In no case will the gangs of slaves be kept over forty-eight hours at a camp of instruction. Generals of reserves are authorized to send a proper officer to such localities from which it may be more convenient to send the slaves direct to the Army, who shall make the record and forward the slaves without passing them through the camp. The impressing officer is authorized to make requisition on the most convenient agent of the Commissary Department for the subsistence of the slaves while under his charge, at the rate of one ration per diem of meat and flour, or meal, and also on the proper quartermaster for transportation, without reference to this Bureau.

V. Impressing officers will require the owner or hirer of the slave to furnish to each slave one good suit of clothes before he is received, the value of which will be estimated in the appraisement. Congressional district examining boards may depute single members of the boards to make examinations in presence of the owner and hirer and the impressing officer under regulations to be prescribed by the Surgeon-General.

VI. Slaves will be appraised by the impressing officer, together with the advisory boards of the county. In localities where there are no such boards the appraisement may be made by persons selected for the purpose, on agreement between the impressing officer and the owner. The hire of slaves is fixed by the Secretary of War not to exceed $25 per month.

VII. In distributing the impressment in the various localities regard will be had to the wants, the condition, and the position of the localities. Credit must be given, of course, for all slaves procured under the instructions of the Secretary of War, dated the 23d of September ultimo, but not for any other existing impressment. This levy is provided for by special act, and its operation is not to be referred to any other proceeding. Negroes of refugees may be credited to the county in which they are found, or to the county from which they have been removed, after investigation of circumstances, at the discretion of the generals of reserves.

* For paragraphs mentioned (here omitted), see p. 897.

VIII. Generals of reserves will see that their impressing officers exercise an intelligent and thoroughly informed discretion in selecting for impressment negroes who may be most conveniently spared with least prejudice to productive and mechanical industry, and that they conduct this service in the most conciliatory mode consistent with a prompt and firm performance of their duties, receiving the slaves proffered by the owners, if physically competent.

The impressment should be made in all cases according to the rules and regulations provided for the impressment of slaves in the States; and also in all cases an effort should first be made to procure the slaves to be hired by the consent of the owner.

By command of the Secretary of War:

C. B. DUFFIELD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[DECEMBER 12, 1864.—For Taylor to Watts, urging the necessity of action by the Legislature of Alabama to strengthen the military authorities, see Series I, Vol. XLV, Part II, p. 683.]

RICHMOND, VA., December 13, 1864.

His Excellency President JEFFERSON DAVIS:

Your letter of the 21st ultimo, addressed to me at Crawfordville, Ga., did not reach me before I left there for this place. It has been forwarded here and was received by me only a few days ago. This will explain the delay of my answer. I now avail myself of the earliest opportunity under the press of other duties to reply to your inquiry. In doing this you will of course not expect me to go into a general review and minute specification of everything on your part, including what has not been done as well as what has been done by you in connection with the subject that contributed in bringing my mind to the belief and conclusion referred to. This would be as difficult and tedious as useless. I shall therefore confine myself to two points only.

The first of these was your action in regard to the case of David F. Cable. That you may the better understand what I say on this point, I refer you to our correspondence on the subject. And that you may be the better enabled to appreciate the nature of the impression produced on my mind in the matter, an abstract of the prominent facts in that correspondence by way of recital may very properly be here presented.

You will then recollect that on the 9th day of April, of this year, I called your attention to a communication I had received from this man. He had written to me on the 20th of March, 1864, stating that he was then a prisoner at Andersonville, Ga.; that he was from the State of Ohio, and had accompanied the forces of the enemy that invaded Florida as a non-combatant; that his object, amongst other things, was to cross our lines and to have a conference with prominent men on our side by which concert of action could be procured between our authorities and the peace men at the North, in the then approaching Presidential election, so as to secure, if possible, the defeat of the Abolition Administration at Washington. Such concert he thought might insure the success of a peace party in that election and eventually lead to an honorable peace. He stated that he was taken as a prisoner at Ocean Pond, in Florida, and was then held as a prisoner of war. He wished a parole and a conference with me and others on our side upon what he styled his mission. For he stated that he had come on this mission after advisement and consultation with the leading peace men in the Northwest, New York, and the Federal Capital. He gave a sketch of the terms on which such concert of action should be based in the opinion of the leading peace men at the North, whom he represented, and sought the interview and conference to see if any concert of action as was desired could be effected, &c.

This letter, the substance of which I recall to your mind, I inclosed to you, accompanied by one from myself to you on the 9th of April. In my letter I urged upon you the importance, in my opinion, of granting to Mr. Cable the parole and conference he asked. Upon the main points in his letter I gave it to you as my judgment that he should be paroled and assured by the highest authority in our Government, even that which alone could initiate peace, &c., that it was the earnest wish and desire of our Government to end the war, which was not of our seeking from the beginning, and to adjust all matters of difference between us and the Government at Washington upon the principles of State sovereignty and the legitimate results of those principles. That the ablest champions of peace at the North were then standing on the principles of the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798 and 1799, denying the power of the Federal Government rightfully to coerce a State.

I gave it to you as my opinion that it was of very great importance to us to defeat the Abolition party at the North if possible. My view was that the peace men at the North should have every assurance and every aid that it was in our power to give them, by which, if possible, a States' rights organization might be brought into power there, on the defeat of the consolidationists whose present hobby is abolition. In my letter I stated to you that I knew some of our people—and some of those opinions were entitled to consideration—took a different view of the subject. They thought quite as much danger, if not more, was to be apprehended from the election of a so-called conservative Northern President than from one of the dominant party; that the policy of such a man would be not to abandon the war, but to obtain peace through a restoration of the Union by offering terms that would be acceptable to our people. In these views I stated I did not concur; that I apprehended no danger from that quarter. Should the peace party there once get into power a suspension of arms would immediately ensue. Negotiations in some way would commence and the war would certainly after a while end upon the principle of a full, perfect, and final separation of the States. Reunion or reconstruction would be found to be out of the question and would ultimately be abandoned by the most ardent advocates of it on that side of the line. This is the purport of my letter, as you will doubtless recollect.

In conclusion I solicited your views upon the subject, and stated if it met with your approval, and Cable should be paroled, I would hold the conference with him and report to you.

My opinion then was and now is that if hostilities were once suspended and negotiations of almost any sort looking to peace should be inaugurated, that both sides would ultimately and without more fighting come to the same conclusion that the British authorities and our common ancestors came to after the protracted struggle of the Revolution, to wit: "That reciprocal advantage and mutual convenience are to be found by experience to be the only permanent foundation of peace and friendship between states."

This great truth, found by them after the most painful analysis of years in the crucible of blood, was set forth in the preamble of the provisional treaty of peace at the end of the first war for the principles of self-government on this continent. This truth for the statesman at all times, in my estimation, is far more useful than was ever the fancied philosopher's stone for the alchemist. I did not and do not doubt if reason and passion should once be permitted to have its full and legitimate sway on both sides that this same great political and moral truth would be again affirmed and established as the basis of permanent peace between the several sovereign States now at war with each other.

But to proceed with the recital:

On the 19th of April you replied to my letter of the 9th, saying that Mr. Cable's statement of his case would indicate the propriety of my recommendation in relation to his release; but it so far happened that persons made representations which did not accord with the facts that it seemed to you proper to make an inquiry into the case before action upon it; that orders had been given to a staff officer to investigate the matter, and if it should be found as stated, to put the prisoner on parole, giving him permission to visit me, and then requiring him to go to Savannah and report to the commanding officer at that place to be sent home on parole for exchange, &c.

Two things in this letter, you will allow me to say, struck me as strange. The first was that you confined your approval of my recommendation or views to the point only of his parole or release, and said not one word either approving or disapproving on the subject of the propriety or policy of having the conference he sought or the nature or character of the assurances that should be given him on his being permitted to visit me. Not a word was said on the policy indicated in my letter of our aiding and encouraging as far as possible in bringing into power at the North a party upon the principle stated in my letter. Your views upon this subject I had requested in view of the probable conference.

The other thing in the letter that struck me as strange was that you should have thought that any staff officer was more suitable or competent to make an investigation into the truth of the prisoner's statements than the second officer in the Government. Still I thought both these matters might have escaped your consideration, and I held myself in readiness to confer with him when he should be sent to me after the investigation. I had very little doubt from the internal evidence of his communication that his statements as to his character and objects would upon proper investigation be found to be true. I accordingly wrote to you, immediately after the receipt of your letter, that I should wait at home to have the conference, which would probably prevent my being in Richmond on the opening of the session of Congress in May. Some days passing, and hearing nothing from Cable or the officers at Andersonville in regard to him, I addressed a letter to the commandant at the post there, informing him that I was waiting at home to see Mr. Cable, and asking him to send him on as soon as possible after the investigation should be made. To this letter the commandant of the post at Andersonville replied on the 30th of April, informing me that on the same day that he had received my letter he had also received a communication on the same question from Richmond; and that he was enabled to inform me officially that Mr. Cable would not be able to visit me soon, and that I need not wait any longer, taking it for granted that the preliminary investigation ordered had not proven satisfactory. I also wrote you immediately on the receipt of this letter and informed you that I should wait no longer. I heard nothing more of this case until the latter part of June. I then received another letter from Mr. Cable, dated the 21st of that month. In it he stated that he was still in prison at Andersonville. He complained of having heard nothing of his other communication. He said he had come to the South as a champion of peace; that he came here in a representative capacity to subserve the interests of the peace party; that he had suffered in position and property by his active exertions in maintaining the great principles upon which the Government was founded, and when he turned his course South he had no doubt that he should find open-hearted friends and all due encouragement; but on the contrary he had been rigidly treated as a prisoner of war and subjected to all the hardships and indignities which unavoidably attach to such a position, and that he had become from these causes and attendant mental anxiety so much reduced that he had no hope for surviving in his then position very long. He asked that relief to which in all justice and equity he thought he was entitled. If his mission here should fail, there was much important work for him to do in the North during the then pending Presidential campaign. At all events, he implored that he should not be permitted to perish in that place for his family's sake.

This is the substance of his letter. On its receipt I immediately wrote to the commandant of the post to know the result of the investigation which you had informed me had been ordered in his case. I wished to know if anything had been disclosed in it which rendered him unworthy of further efforts on my part in his behalf so far as a release was concerned; if not, I intended, for the sake of humanity at least, to call your attention again to his case. The commandant at the post promptly answered my letter, informing me that no investigation had ever been made in his case.

I need not say to you in this recital how much surprised and astonished I was on receiving this information, for I immediately addressed you upon the subject, inclosing a copy of Cable's letter of the 21st of June, and stated to you my surprise that no such investigation had been made in this case as you had informed me on the 19th of April had been ordered, and which, as I had written to you, I had taken for granted had been made and had proven unsatisfactory, from the letter of the commandant at the post that he had heard from Richmond upon the subject, and that I need wait at home for Cable no longer.

I again urged the case upon your consideration as one deserving prompt attention. To this communication, sent on the 5th of July, you made no reply. Matters so remained until I got a letter from the commandant of the post, dated the 23d of July, informing me that Cable was dead.

Now, sir, I assure you that all the facts of this case taken together, of which I have recited only a brief statement (but with the whole in detail you must be familiar), made the very decided impression on my mind that you did not favor the proposed conference with Mr. Cable, though he averred that he came on a special mission as the representative of the leading peace men at the North; that you did not approve of having him receive the assurance which I thought it best he should receive, even from yourself, and that you did not consider it to be consistent with our best interests to foster, encourage, and to aid in bringing into power a peace party at the North, on the principles stated in my first letter to you—which party was then struggling into existence and which, after all its embarrassments and discouragements in its organization under the denunciatory epithets of “traitors” at the North, and the ridicule and reproach of “copperheads” by many at the South, as well as North, finally presented the name of McClellan as its candidate.

The fact that you had not said anything in approval of my views on the subject when requested, and when it was important that I should know them, in case the proposed conference should take place, tended to produce that impression; and then the fact that no investigation, such as you wrote me on the 19th of April had been ordered, had taken place up to the 21st of June; and after my sending to you Cable's second letter of that date, the fact that he was still kept in prison and permitted to die there without any conference, any release, or any investigation, increased that impression almost, if not quite, to a conviction.

But if I had been in doubt on this subject and your preference as between Lincoln and McClellan, it seemed to me that your speech at Columbia, S. C., as reported in the papers, could not have left me in that condition long.

This brings me to the second of the points I said in the outset I should confine myself in answering your inquiry.

The peace party at the North had planted themselves at Chicago, virtually, upon a States' rights platform. In their resolutions they opposed the policy of continuing the effort to restore the Union by force. McClellan was their candidate. Whatever may have been his individual opinions, his success would have been a triumph of their principles. They announced in effect as their purpose as an initiation of negotiations for peace a general convention of all the States. It was on this line of policy they evidently intended to rally and unite, if possible, all the conservative elements at the North. This proposition you in your Columbia speech publically, decidedly, and unqualifiedly opposed.

The question now before us is not the constitutionality, expediency, or policy of such a mode of inaugurating negotiations of peace. It is simply the object you might be presumed to have had in view in speaking of it as you did on that occasion. Looking at it in this light, what you said there on this subject to me seems to admit of but one construction, that was that you felt impelled from a sense of duty not only to withhold that encouragement and aid which a favorable response to this proposition from you would give its friends, but not even to withhold that silence on your part which might not have done them any positive damage. Such a declaration from you could have no effect at the North but to weaken and cripple the peace party. How could their leading men urge the people to rally upon their proposed policy with any hopeful prospect of success in opposition to the potent argument of their adversaries that it would be utterly useless because the President of the Confederate States had declared in advance that he would not entertain such a proposition as they proposed to offer? Had you desired or preferred the election of McClellan would it not have been the clear and plain dictate of reason not to have said anything upon the subject even if you entertained the sentiments which you expressed? Would it not have been time enough to speak when the offer was made? It so seems to me. Had he been elected and the proposition made the control of the question would have then been in your hands. You could then have alluded to it or rejected it as you thought proper. The only rational conclusion I could draw from this rejection of the proposition in advance was that you really intended and desired to accomplish by it what seemed to be its natural and legitimate results. But this was not all. Not only was the proposition, on which the peace and States' rights party at the North had planted themselves, thus rejected by you in advance, but the rejection, you will allow me most respectfully to say, was accompanied by words that must, to say the least of them, have grated very harshly on the feelings of all those who advocated it and favored it as a means of terminating the war. The tone and substance of your speech then upon the subject of peace were, in short, that there was no prospect of peace but by the sword; that a peace party at the North could only be made by a success of our arms over theirs; "that the only way to make spaniels civil was to whip them." The natural and legitimate tendency of such language, it seemed to me, was not only to dampen the ardor of the peace men there, but even to excite and arouse in them bitterness of feelings against us and our cause. Who would be willing in his advocacy [of] peace upon the principles announced at Chicago to submit himself to the taunts of the war champions that he had been whipped into his conciliatory mood, and in the estimation of our Chief Magistrate he was then no better than a spaniel, and a whipped spaniel at that, it being, as I consider it, the natural tendency of your language on this subject to strengthen the opponents of peace instead of its friends there. I could form no other conclusion but that it was intended to produce that effect. I could not suppose that such words on such an occasion escaped you unintentionally or unwittingly.

Taking, therefore, all these things into consideration—your whole course in the case of Cable and this speech at Columbia—you have some of the reasons springing from some of your acts that induced me to "think" that you did belong to that class among us who, for the reasons stated in my letter to Senator Semmes, preferred Lincoln's election to McClellan's. I could say a great deal more, but it is unnecessary.

What I have said has been most frankly said, though most painfully said. For I assure you that the conviction on my mind that you did not favor the policy of encouraging and bringing into power at the North, if possible, a party on the States' rights and States' sovereignty line has caused me deep regret and pain. The belief that you, like many others alluded to, did prefer Lincoln's election to that of McClellan, caused me like regret and pain. If this opinion on my part is not correct as to yourself, I deeply regret it, not only on my own and your account personally, in view of a proper sense of justice to both, but much more from the firm belief that a like opinion and conviction, North and South, has done great injury to what I deem the best interests of our country.

I cannot think, however, that the publication of my opinion as to your preference between the Northern candidates will add anything

BUREAU OF SUBSISTENCE,
Richmond, December 14, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON:

In reply to the request of the President to be informed as to the state of the rations, I have to say that on the 5th of this month I sent you in letter of that date statement of rations on hand as follows:

	Pounds.
At Richmond, say.....	100,000
En route, say.....	200,000
At the islands.....	2,500,000
Expected at Nassau from Halifax.....	300,000
Total.....	3,100,000
Of which say, beef.....	1,000,000
Pork and bacon.....	2,100,000

This, at three rations to a pound, will be 6,300,000 rations, and of beef, one pound to ration, 1,000,000 rations; total, 7,300,000 rations, or seventy-three days' rations for 100,000 men, without estimating for losses in introducing same by blockade. These supplies to be devoted to subsistence of troops stationed in North Carolina and Virginia.

You will observe that the amount stated as at Richmond [and] en route is 300,000 pounds, or nine days' rations for 100,000 men, which number we are feeding.

From the 5th to the 14th of December is nine days, and our calculations have proved, unfortunately, too accurate.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

FRANK G. RUFFIN,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Commissary of Subsistence.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, TREASURY DEPT.,
Richmond, Va., December 15, 1864.

Hon. F. S. LYON,

Chairman Committee on Ways and Means:

SIR: The near approach of the end of the quarter admonishes me strongly of the condition to which the Treasury will then be reduced. By reference to page 6 of the report I had the honor of submitting to Congress, it will be seen that the expenditures of the current quarter will absorb all that remains of the resources in ready money. Nothing will remain at the end of the year but the certificates of indebtedness and the non-taxable bonds. For the first, the demand is extremely limited, and the amount to be realized from this source need hardly be taken into account. For the bonds, the demand is by no means equal to the sum allowed in my estimate of resources of the year. I beg to refer you to page 11 of the report, by which it will be seen that I rely upon the sale of bonds for $409,000,000.

From the 1st of January, 1865, to the 30th of June, the demands upon the Treasury, upon the most moderate estimate, will be as follows, viz:

Arrear of debt.....	$114,000,000
Redemption of notes as proposed (one-half).....	30,000,000
Expenditures, six months.....	300,000,000
Total.....	444,000,000

To meet these demands, I rely upon—

Receipt of the tax in kind .....	$145,000,000
Half the money tax proposed ($215,000,000) .....	107,500,000
Half the sale of bonds estimated for the year ($409,000,000) .....	204,500,000
Total .....	457,000,000

I beg the committee to take notice that on the 1st day of January the Treasury will be entirely empty; and that there will be nothing after that day to satisfy the requisitions but the funds to arise from the sale of bonds.

Assuming that the recommendations I have ventured to submit in relation to the money tax (which is clearly indispensable) shall be adopted, the collection from that source will not begin to come in before the month of June; but I rely with confidence upon the ability to anticipate the collections to the extent of $107,000,000 by temporary loans.

There is obviously some risk of embarrassment in depending upon this expedient, but it is all that can be done apparently under existing circumstances, and I would respectfully and earnestly impress upon the committee the importance of acting with promptitude, and thereby inspiring confidence in the adequacy of our future resources.

That a money tax is indispensable is plain; that less than the sum mentioned in the report will be insufficient seems equally clear, and I venture with great deference to suggest that the plan of taxation proposed will raise the requisite amount, and is strongly recommended by the consideration that it makes the smallest possible departure from the existing system.

With renewed thanks to the committee for the patient attention they have accorded to the communications I have been impelled by a sense of duty to address them,

I have the honor to remain, your most obedient servant,

G. A. TRENHOLM,
Secretary of the Treasury.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 297. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, December 15, 1864.

* * * * *

XXXV. To facilitate missionary operations in the Army, post quartermasters and commissaries are allowed to receive from any religious denomination such amount of forage and subsistence as may be offered by the denomination, and to receipt for the same, to be returned in kind in rations to be issued in the field to properly accredited missionaries, under such regulations as will hereafter be prescribed by each department.

* * * * *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION, WAR DEPARTMENT,

Richmond, Va., December 15, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War:

SIR: In confirmation of a statement I made to you this morning I have the honor to submit the inclosed abstract from the monthly reports of the commandant of conscripts for the State of Virginia.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,

Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

[Inclosure.]

Abstract from the monthly reports of the commandant of conscripts for the State of Virginia.

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION, WAR DEPARTMENT,

Richmond, Va., December 15, 1864.

Deserters and absentees without leave arrested and returned to the Army in the State of Virginia: May, 287; June, 350; July, 344; August, 629; September, 358; October, 266.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,

Richmond, Va., December 16, 1864.

The PRESIDENT:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the following extract of a resolution of the House of Representatives, adopted on the 23d ultimo, being so much as relates to the War Department, viz:

Resolved, That the President be requested to cause to be communicated to this House as far as is practicable * * * also the number of civil and military officers on duty in the War Department in the city of Richmond, and at the hospitals and camps in its immediate vicinity; their rank, ages, and from what State they entered the service or were appointed; the number of bureaus there are now in the War Department in Richmond, the particular acts of Congress under which they were created, and the rank and number of officers composing them, their general power and duties as authorized by law; distinguishing disabled and detailed officers from privates and citizens, and the number employed in each bureau.

The annexed tabular statements furnish most of the information desired by the House of Representatives.* In addition it is proper, in order to a full response, to give a general statement of the organization of this Department:

I. The bureaus of the War Department established by law are:

First. The offices of the heads of the general staff of the Army, viz:

1. The Adjutant and Inspector General's Department.

2. The Quartermaster-General's Department.

3. The Subsistence Department.

4. The Medical Department. These are organized respectively under the second, third, fourth, and fifth sections of the act "For the establishment and organization of a general staff of the Army of the Confederate States," approved February 26, 1861.

Second. The offices of the chiefs of special service, viz:

1. The Chief of Ordnance. The Bureau of Ordnance is organized under the forty-fourth article of the Regulations of the Army. It has

---

* Statements not found.

néver been organized by law, though it has been repeatedly referred to in legislation as existing. The act of the 5th of April, 1832, of the Congress of the United States has not been adopted by the Congress of the Confederate States. The officers on ordnance duty, as well as those connected with the Bureau, as those serving with troops, are commissioned in the artillery.

2. The Chief of Engineers. The Engineer Corps is authorized by the second section of the act approved March 6, 1861, "For the establishment and organization of the Army of the Confederate States of America."

3. The Chief of the Niter and Mining Bureau. This Bureau was established under the act "To establish a Niter and Mining Bureau," approved June 9, 1864. Chapter XXX.

4. The Chief of the Signal Corps. This corps was organized under the act "To organize a Signal Corps," approved April 19, 1862, amended by the act approved September 27, entitled "An act to increase the Signal Corps."

Third. The civil offices of the Department.

1. The Bureau of Indian Affairs, established by the act "To establish the Bureau of Indian Affairs," approved March 15, 1861. It consists of a "Commissioner of Indian Affairs" and one clerk. The clerkship is vacant.

2. The War Office is the immediate office of the Secretary of War and the Assistant Secretary of War. It is organized under the act approved March 7, 1861, "To create the clerical force of the several Executive Departments," &c. The chief office under the Secretary of War and the Assistant Secretary is the "Chief of the Bureau of War." His office is created by the fourth clause of the first section of the act last cited.

II. In addition to the foregoing, the exigencies of the public service have occasioned the establishment of certain additional offices in connection with the War Department, which are not authorized as independent bureaus by any act of Congress, the duties of which are discharged by officers detailed for that purpose. Of these the most important is:

First. The Bureau of Conscription. After the passage of the act of the 16th of April, 1861, known as the first conscript law, the attempt was made to deal with the questions arising under it directly in the War Office. The experience of several months demonstrated the necessity of relieving the War Office of the details of this business, which, under the successive amendments to the original act, rapidly increased to a great volume. These could be best dealt with by an officer whose time and attention should be given especially to them, under the direction of the Secretary of War. A general officer with a competent number of assistants was assigned by orders to this duty, and was announced in General Orders, No. 112, December 30, 1862, a copy of which accompanies this report.*

Second. The office in charge of procuring foreign supplies for the Army. As the use and export of cotton for purchasing supplies abroad enlarged, it became necessary to assign an officer to duty pertaining to this subject. This mode of supply was first used in connection with the Ordnance Bureau. It was soon found that we should need supplies also for the Quartermaster's, Medical, and Subsistence Departments, to provide which vessels had to be procured and cotton exported. The officer of the Ordnance Bureau, who had acquired experience there in this duty, was put in general charge of the business and the operations enlarged. They were still further increased under the act of the 6th of February, 1864, "To impose regulations on the foreign commerce of the Confederate States, to provide for the public defense," and the regulations made by the President in pursuance thereof. These devolved on this department the purchase, compression, and repairs of all cotton for export; its transportation and shipment, and the receipt and disposition of the foreign supplies.

* See Vol. II, this series, p. 266.

Third. The army intelligence office. After the great battles of the summer of 1862 numerous inquiries, personal and by letter, were addressed to the Department by the relatives and friends of our soldiers to learn their fate. To afford relief to such natural anxieties, a chaplain on duty in this city was authorized to establish an office where information respecting the individual casualties of battle should be collected promptly, at what hospitals wounded men were, and such general information as would enable friends to learn their safety, or the extent of their injuries, and where, if wounded and alive, they could be found. This office, which has been a great gratification to our people, is conducted by a chaplain, one clerk, and disabled soldiers detailed for that purpose.

Fourth. The office of the agent for the exchange of prisoners. The cartel agreed upon by Maj. Gen. D. H. Hill for the Confederate States and Maj. Gen. John A. Dix for the United States on the 22d of July, 1862, provided by the eighth article that, "for the purpose of carrying into effect the foregoing articles of agreement, each party will appoint two agents, to be called agents for the exchange of prisoners of war, whose duty it will be to communicate with each other by correspondence or otherwise, to prepare the lists of prisoners, to attend to the delivery of prisoners at the places agreed on, and to carry out promptly, effectually, and in good faith all the details and provisions of the said articles of agreement."

Under this agreement a principal agent, to represent this Government and to have general charge, under this Department, of the business arising under the cartel and in connection with the subject of prisoners of war, was appointed.

Tabular returns of the civil and military persons on duty in the camp and hospitals in the vicinity of the city of Richmond also accompany this report.* It was considered that the House of Representatives did not design to embrace in their resolution any of the camps of the troops now in the vicinity of this city. The delay in forwarding this report has been occasioned by the time required to procure the accompanying returns from the numerous and extensive hospitals in and about the city of Richmond.

Respectfully,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

---

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, December 16, 1864.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS:

I inclose you a copy of a communication* informing me that the House of Commons of the General Assembly of this State has passed a resolution requesting me to correspond with you, protesting against the cruel and inhuman manner in which slaves conscribed from our citizens are now treated, and request that the evil be immediately remedied. Rumors and statements are constantly arriving here that the slaves conscribed and assigned to labor on the works at and near Wilmington are treated with great cruelty and inhumanity by being overworked, almost starved, not half clad, and lodged without shelter, by reason of which they are suffering great mortality. Not only the interest of their masters and the country, but also humanity forbids the continuance of such a state of things. And I cannot doubt that as soon as your attention is called to it you will take the necessary steps to remedy the evil complained of.

---

* Not found.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Z. B. VANCE.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., December 18, 1864.

The PRESIDENT:

DEAR SIR: A very imperative necessity for a few days' attention to my private interests has induced me to ask a leave of absence, which Mr. Seddon has kindly granted. Your condition of health has deterred me from seeking an interview, which I desired for the purpose of asking your attention to a concerted effort now on foot, not to modify, but to abolish the whole system of conscription as it now exists, and, of course, to effect my removal from its control by operation of law. As to the latter I feel but little concern, for I can rely on your giving me such service as will be honorable to myself and to the extent of my ability, and beneficial to the country. You know the full extent of the little I am able to do, and I am quite sure of your absolute confidence in my zeal. I do feel the most anxious solicitude in regard to the proposed changes in their bearing on the public service. I have seen a programme of them, which I was told had high military sanction. The system is one of mere military conscription, not adapted to the condition of the country, repulsive to public sentiment, inefficacious and certainly weakening, if not disastrous to the public defense. It will be resisted by States, communities, and individuals to an extent which will render it inoperative. But even if it be not thus resisted, it will fail because of its total want of adaptation to the duties prescribed for it. In legal administration military organizations and action never have the attributes either of celerity or efficiency. Executive strength is always best, based on the exercise of civil rule. Military power may hold laws in subjection; it cannot administer them, at least not under our system of civil polity. The present system of conscription, if allowed to be thoroughly organized and supplied with proper agencies, is not only the most efficient and active, but the strongest which can be instituted for our purposes. It is active and energetic in principle, simple and orderly in structure, uniform and rapid in operation. Besides this, it contains the great element, now so necessary, of giving the administration of a civil law directly into the hands of executive agencies neither purely military nor judicial. It bears in its construction more real pervading executive power and responsibility than is held by the control of the armies of the Confederacy. You may not think this feature desirable. It is at this time unquestionably necessary.

I trust the present system will be adhered to and fully organized for all duties charged upon it. I am willing to be an agent in its administration, but if you think it can be improved in operation by the selection of others, I am sure you will neither do me nor the country the wrong of hesitating to find other service for me.

My desire is to serve the country under your dictation. To that I have devoted myself. I believe I can render good service in the line you have intrusted to me. I am sure the system in which I have been working is the best for the purposes of the country, and do earnestly hope it will be maintained, with only such modifications as will make it more rigorous in execution without affecting the principle on which it is based.

With high and cordial esteem, your friend and obedient servant,
JNO. S. PRESTON.

---

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., December 18, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

DEAR SIR: I am aware that there is a project on foot, under high military sanction, to abolish the existing system of conscription, and substitute for it a military organization, to be regulated by purely rigid military rules, and by the operation of law to remove me from the control delegated to me by you. The latter may be no loss to the service, but the institution of such a system will be fatal to it. As far as I have been able to ascertain the features of the scheme, it is a cumbrous, confused mass of indigested regulations, the offspring of utter ignorance of the nature of the duties to be performed, of the condition of the country, and the wants of the public service in the department of the public defense—a mere military experiment on the vitals of the country. If tried it will fail; but the fear is that the experiment in failing will destroy the subject. It was a maxim of certain Greek philosophy that wisdom is the reaction from folly. Our misfortune is that we have neither time nor strength to practice folly, in the hope that wisdom will grow out of it. Whatever ignorant and discontented or malignant persons may say, we know that the present system has been efficacious; we know that with proper agencies it can with great certainty and celerity bring all the elements of strength in the matter confided to it to bear upon the public defense. We know that before it was rudely disturbed by the pestilent interference of ignorant and presumptuous persons in high position, it had commended itself to the approbation of the people, the States, the Congress, yourself, and the President, and that all admitted if furnished with proper officers it would meet all the demands to the full extent of the capabilities of the country. Why change it, then, upon the presumption that it is not fitted to a more stringent exigency now existing? And above all, why change it for a scheme which has already failed, and which has done as much to chill the patriotic ardor of the people as any one error or misfortune which has befallen us, and which has no one principle, element, or instrument adapted to the duties growing out of the law.

I am sure that with you I need not deprecate official dignity or plead my entire freedom from official interest when I earnestly call on you to look narrowly and fully into this matter before you give it your sanction. If this scheme, which I have heard designated as General Bragg's or General Kemper's, is adopted it will be met by legislative resistance in the States before it is in operation sixty days, and Congress will be forced to repeal it; but it may be too late when States have nullified a law of the Confederacy. To this grave issue it will surely lead. The integrity of the Confederacy is necessary to the achievement of our independence. Nothing will tend more rapidly to disintegrate the Confederacy than the adoption of these petulant, indigested, and revolting schemes of military conscription. I pray you do not think my terms too strong or my manner too familiar. We are in a very grave condition. I have some experience in these matters, and it seems the proper duty of all earnest men to express their strong convictions.

With high and cordial esteem, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,

Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

---

RICHMOND, VA., December 20, 1864.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:*

I herewith transmit the reports made by the heads of the Treasury and War Departments,† in response to your resolution of the 6th instant, making various inquiries relative to the subject embraced in the act of February 6, 1864, entitled "A bill to impose regulations upon the foreign commerce of the Confederate States to provide for the public defense."

The importance of this subject induces me to present, at some length, my views upon the policy of the law, and upon its effects as developed by experience.

The first section of the law (which was passed at the fourth session of the First Congress and was the expression of its matured judgment) prohibits the exportation of the principal products of the Confederate States, except under uniform regulations, and the reason for this prohibition is expressed in the preamble to be this: "That the condition of the contest demands that the Confederate States should call into requisition whatever resources of men and money they have for the support of their cause."

The fifth section of the law indicated that the purpose of Congress in granting power to allow or refuse permission to export the produce of our country was to enforce a return, in whole or in part, of the value of the produce exported "in military or other supplies for the public service."

But a full understanding of the policy of your predecessors can be attained only by taking into consideration another act passed on the same day, and entitled "An act to prohibit the importation of luxuries or of articles not necessities or of common use." This last-mentioned act actually prohibited during the pending war the importation of any articles not necessary for the defense and subsistence of the country; and among those excluded from importation were wines, spirits, jewelry, cigars, and all the finer fabrics of cotton, flax, wool, or silk, as well as all other merchandise serving only for the indulgence of luxurious habits.

---

* A similar message was communicated to the Senate under date of December 17, 1864, in response to its resolution of December 5, 1864, for which see p. 897.

† For Seddon's report see December 10, 1864, p. 928, excepting the clause referred to in footnote (a), p. 929.

In a word, the two acts were an exercise of the power to regulate commerce so as to make it subservient to the success of our struggle, by prohibiting the importation or exportation of merchandise or produce for any other purpose than national defense and necessary subsistence, until these vital objects should be placed beyond the reach of danger. The two laws form one common system, and they should be so regarded in considering the propriety of the repeal or modification of either.

When signing my approval of these acts I considered them as measures eminently wise and proper, and as well adapted to remedy existing evils. Complaints were rife through our country that its foreign commerce was almost exclusively in the hands of aliens; that our cotton, tobacco, and naval stores were being drained from the States, and that we were receiving in return cargoes of liquors, wines, and articles of luxury; that the imported goods, being held in few hands and in limited quantities, were sold at prices so exorbitant that the blockade-runners, after purchasing fresh cargoes of cotton, still retained large sums of Confederate money, which they invested in gold for exportation and in foreign exchange, and that the whole course of the trade had a direct tendency to impoverish our country, demoralize our people, depreciate our currency, and enfeeble our defense. Congress believed these complaints well founded, and in that belief I fully concurred. None doubted that a remedy was desirable, and your present inquiries seek information in relation to the efficiency of the remedy provided by the legislation then devised, as developed by actual experience.

My conviction is decided that the effect of the legislation has been salutary; that the evils existing prior to its adoption have been materially diminished, and that the repeal of the legislation or any modification impairing its efficiency would be calamitous. This opinion is shared by every Executive Department that has been intrusted with the execution of these laws and regulations, and thus enabled to form a judgment based on observation and experience.

The propriety and justice of a claim on the part of the Government that a share of all the vessels engaged in the blockade trade should be held subject to its use for the benefit of the whole people was so obvious that even before the legislation of Congress few owners refused to place at its disposal one-third of the tonnage, both outward and inward, for the importation of supplies and the exportation of the produce necessary to pay for them. On the passage of the laws it was deemed proper to increase the demand of the Government to one-half. This decision was based not only on the consideration that the Government was burdened with the entire expense of defending the ports of entry, but on the further reasons that the enormous gains of the commerce were monopolized by foreigners, free to engage in commerce at their pleasure while our citizens were engrossed in the sacred duty of defending their homes and liberties, and therefore unable to compete for the trade. It was foreseen that this increase would be resisted, and in a message on the subject, addressed by me to the House of Representatives on the 10th of June last, it is stated that—

For some weeks after the adoption of these regulations strenuous efforts were made by parties interested in the business to induce a relaxation of the regulations. Many of the vessels remained unemployed on the allegation of the owners that the terms imposed by the regulations were so onerous as to render impossible the continuance of the business. The regulations remained unchanged, for I was satisfied from an examination of the subject that this complaint was unfounded and that the withdrawal of the vessels was an experiment, by a combination among their owners, on the firmness of the Government. The result proved the correctness of this view, for after various attempts to obtain increased advantages the vessels resumed their voyages. Their number has been largely increased. The ability to export produce and import supplies on Government account has been developed to a greater extent than had been anticipated, and the credit of the Government has been so improved in foreign markets that the quotations for its loan have rapidly advanced.

In the same message it was also stated that—

Among the efforts made to induce a change of the regulations was a warning given to officers of the Government that the owners of vessels could make better bargains with the Governors of States than with the Confederate Government, and that if the regulations were not relaxed in their favor they would transfer their vessels to the Executives of the several States, and thus withdraw them from the operation of the regulations.

Reverting now to the precise inquiries contained in your resolution, I answer—

First. That no restriction whatever has been placed on the exercise of the right of any Confederate State to export on its own account any of the articles enumerated in the act entitled "An act to impose regulations," &c., approved 6th of February, 1864.

Each State not only exports whatever it pleases, but the obligation imposed on private individuals to bring back into the country necessary supplies equal in value to one-half of the produce exported is not extended to the States. They are in these respects on a footing of absolute equality with the Confederate Government.

I am aware that complaints have been made of the effect of these regulations by the Governors of some of the States, but their objections are, in my judgment, without foundation.

It is not denied by any of them that when a State purchases a vessel it is left under the exclusive control of the State authorities, and that the Confederate Government claims no share of the outward or inward tonnage. It is also admitted that when the States purchase or charter any part of a vessel, not exceeding one-half, the Confederate States Government does not interfere with their enjoyment of the portion so purchased or chartered, and confines itself to exacting from the private owner the use of that half not conveyed to the State; but the complaint is that the Confederate Government will not further consent to yield, for the benefit of a single State, any part of that moiety of the tonnage of each vessel which it has secured under the regulations for the common use and benefit of all the States of which it is agent.

By the regulations, as now existing, half the tonnage of all the vessels engaged in the trade has been conveyed to the use of the Confederacy. Why should a single State be allowed to take for its separate use from the Confederacy any part of this half? Is it not enough that the remaining half is left open for purchase or charter by the State?

It is plain that a State and the owner of a vessel can have no motive for contracting in such manner as to diminish the tonnage claimed by the Confederacy, unless for a profit that is to be shared by both. Any concession, therefore, made on this point is in effect the loss of an interest which is the common property of all the States for the joint gain of a single State and of a private capitalist.

Again, the army in the field is the army of the Confederacy, which is charged with the duty of supplying it with clothing, subsistence, and munitions of war. The performance of this duty demands the most strenuous exertions and the command of all the resources that can be reached. Any diminution of our command of those resources by a modification of the existing legislation might lead to disastrous consequences. Under our present arrangements we are barely able to supply to our brave defenders a moderate share of those comforts which are indispensable to their efficiency. As long as privations are endured by all alike, there is a noble and patriotic emulation in the display of cheerful fortitude in enduring them. But if the common supply now distributed among all is diminished for the purpose of enabling any one State to add to the supplies furnished her own troops, the effect will be pernicious to an extent that can scarcely be appreciated in advance. I leave it to others to imagine the state of feeling which would ensue if the soldiers of the sea-board States were to be found amply supplied with all necessities and comforts, standing side by side with the troops of interior States, who would be deprived of a part of what they now receive in consequence of a diminution of our present means of providing for all alike. If to this it should be answered that the interior States could enjoy the same advantages as the sea-board States by sending agents to the ports to represent them, thus placing all on an equal footing, the reply is obvious. The result would then be to bring all the States back to the same condition in which they now are; that is to say, each possessing its fair share of the advantages derived from the tonnage used by the Confederate Government.

It appears to me that any change in the present regulations so as to affect the rights of the Confederate Government must necessarily be either useless or mischievous—useless, if no advantage is to be gained by any one State over the others; mischievous in the extreme, if such an advantage is to be the effect of the change.

It has been suggested that there are many articles required by the people of the different States which can only be obtained through the aid of their governments, and that the efforts of the Confederate Government are confined exclusively to the supply of the needs of the Army. This is true; but one-half of all the tonnage of private owners remains open to employment by the States for the purpose suggested, though, perhaps, at somewhat greater cost than would be charged if they were permitted to use the portion reserved for the Confederacy. But I repeat that there is no justice apparent in the demand that all the States should sacrifice a common right for the profit of a single State, nor in diminishing the necessary comforts of the soldier for the benefit of those who remain at home. It is also competent for each State to purchase vessels for its own use or to purchase shares in common with one or more other States for the introduction of supplies necessary for the people without encroaching on the means used by the Confederacy for supplying the Army.

Second. Upon the second question, whether the regulations have caused any diminution in the number of vessels engaged in foreign commerce, the report of the Secretary of the Treasury gives such information as satisfactorily establishes the reverse to be the case.

In addition to the statements made by him, derived from official returns, the Secretary of War reports that many new steamers are understood to be on the way to engage in the trade, notwithstanding the impression which prevails that the stringency of the blockade is constantly increasing.

The number of vessels which arrived at two ports of the Confederacy between the 1st of November and 6th of December was forty-three, averaging more than one per day, and indicating no check in the trade. A further and conclusive proof that the profits of this commerce under present regulations are sufficiently tempting to secure its increase, is afforded by the fact that the shares of the companies engaged in it have greatly advanced in value. The shares of one company, originally of $1,000 each, were selling in July last for $20,000 each, and now command $30,000. Those of another company have increased in the same period from $2,500 to $6,000; and all exhibit a large advance.

Third. Your third inquiry seeks information whether the legislation and regulations have been beneficial or otherwise in their effect on the success of our arms and the supply of means necessary to the public defense.

My opinion has already been indicated on this point, and the reports of the Secretaries are decided in the expression of their own convictions of the wisdom of the laws, and the beneficial effects produced by them, in connection with the regulations established for giving them effect.

These laws and regulations have enabled the Government not only to provide supplies to a much greater extent than formerly, and to furnish the means for meeting the installments on its foreign loan, but to put an end to a wasteful and ruinous contract system, by which supplies were obtained before Congress determined to exercise control over the imports and exports.

Instead of being compelled to give contractors a large profit on the cost of their supplies, and to make payment in cotton in our ports at 6 pence per pound, we now purchase supplies abroad by our agents at cost in the foreign market, and pay there in cotton, which sells at a net price of 24 pence per pound. When all the elements of calculation are taken into consideration, it is by no means an exaggeration to say that 100 bales of cotton exported by the Government will purchase abroad the same amount and value of supplies that 600 bales would purchase delivered to contractors in the Confederacy. A reference to the report of the Secretary of the Treasury shows that of 11,796 bales of cotton shipped since 1st of July last, but 1,272 were lost; not quite 11 per cent. If this be taken as a fair average, and it is believed to be so, out of 600 bales of cotton exported, 534 would arrive abroad and yield, at £40 per bale, £21,360, while the same 600 bales delivered on payment at a home port, at 6 pence per pound, would yield less than £6,000.

There are other advantages derived from buying abroad, rather than contracting with blockade-runners, of no small magnitude, but the foregoing statement will show the enormous profits that were made by them when the Government was forced to contract instead of purchasing for itself, and will suggest a motive for the strenuous efforts they have not ceased to make to get rid of the regulations and procure a change in the policy of the Government. It is to the law and regulations that the Government owes its ability to command freight room, and then buy and sell for itself instead of being forced to make contracts so extravagant as those above described. It requires little sagacity to perceive that with temptation so great the owners of vessels would spare no pains to obtain contracts from the several States, if allowed to do so by law, with the view of again withdrawing from our use as far as possible the tonnage of their vessels, and thus compelling a return to the ruinous contract system.

The reports of the Secretaries will fully inform you of the quantity and nature of the supplies obtained by the Government under the present system, and their importance to the national defense will be perceived at a glance.

Fourth. To the fourth inquiry, whether experience has suggested the necessity of the repeal of said act, or any modification or amendment of its provisions, the foregoing remarks would seem to furnish a sufficient answer. But I conclude, by renewing the expression of my conviction that the result of any legislation checking or diminishing the control now exercised by the Government over our foreign commerce would be injurious to the public interest and would insure the renewal in aggravated form of the evils which it was the purpose of your predecessors to remedy by the laws now in force.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

[Inclosure No. 1.] *

[Inclosure No. 2.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, TREASURY DEPT.,
Richmond, December 12, 1864.

The PRESIDENT:

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following reply to the inquiries contained in the resolutions of the House of Representatives of the 5th [6th] instant in relation to the foreign trade:

First. "Whether any and what restrictions have been imposed upon the exercise of the right of the Confederate States, or any of them, to export on their own account any of the articles enumerated in the act entitled 'An act to impose regulations upon the foreign commerce of the Confederate States to provide for the public defense,' approved 6th of February, 1864."

No restrictions whatever have been imposed upon the exercise of this right by the States. The tenth article of the regulations, adopted in pursuance of the act of 6th of February, provides:

That nothing in these regulations shall be construed to conflict with the proviso in the fifth section, "That nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit the Confederate States, or any of them, from exporting any of the articles herein enumerated on their own account."

By the first and second articles of the regulations it is provided that vessels belonging to private parties shall carry one-half the cargo, both outward and inward, on account of the Confederate States.

It has sometimes been supposed that this provision operates as a restriction upon the freedom of action of the States; that if a State acquire, by purchase or charter, the use of one-fourth of a steamer the Confederate States should relinquish an equal proportion of the moiety claimed under the regulations and reduce the share reserved for its use to one-fourth.

This Department does not concur in that opinion. It is held that a vessel engaging in this trade charges one moiety to the Government and has no power while she continues therein, by a sale or another charter, to deprive the Government of the use of that moiety. The exercise of such a power would be incompatible with the design of the act of February 6 and in direct violation of the regulations made in pursuance thereof. It would be impossible for the Government to secure the use of any portion of a vessel if the owner was permitted thus to alienate it at will. Nor would it be consistent with the equality to be observed among the States in matters of common interest that this should be conceded. The moiety reserved by the Confederate States is for the use and benefit of all the States without distinction. The cotton exported is common property. When sold the product is nearly all clear gain. The supplies brought back in return add little or nothing to the expenditures of the Government and are distributed among the troops of all the States indiscriminately.

---

* See Seddon to the President, December 10, p. 928.

But when any part of this moiety is transferred to one State it operates as a relinquishment of the share of each of the others for the benefit of that one. The part thus acquired is then used to supply the troops of that State only, and as these supplies are, nevertheless, paid for by the Confederate States it follows that, besides making this valuable concession, those from whom it is obtained are drawn thereby into an unnecessary expenditure. In other words, in the one case the troops of all the States participate in the benefit and without cost to any; in the other the benefits are confined to the troops of one State, and all the others contribute to the cost and without any reduction being made for the profits on the outward cargo.

Second. "Whether the regulations made under the first section of said act have caused any diminution in the number of vessels engaged in foreign commerce."

The regulations were adopted on the 7th of March, and the largest number of arrivals occurred in the months of May and June ensuing, during which period forty-three steamers entered the ports of Wilmington and Charleston. The prevalence of yellow fever both in the islands and in our own ports caused a serious interruption to the trade during the summer months; but the abatement of the epidemic has been followed by the immediate return of activity, and from the 1st of November to the 6th of December there have been forty-three arrivals at the ports above named.

It would appear, therefore, that no discouragement has been given to the trade by the regulations.

This conclusion is supported by other evidence. The freight of 5 pence per pound in gold paid by the Government is nearly equal to $3 per pound. So that the freight paid for carrying out 500 bales of cotton for the Government will purchase for the vessel 1,000 bales at the market price, and the great profit realized on these terms is exhibited in the enormous price commanded in the market by shares in all the blockade stocks.

Third. "Whether the said act of Congress and the regulations made under its authority have been beneficial or otherwise in their effect on the success of our arms, and the supply of means necessary for the public defense; also, whether experience has suggested the necessity of the repeal of said act of 6th of February or any modification or amendment of its provisions."

My impressions are that they have been in the highest degree beneficial. Before the passage of the act vessels were required to devote one-third of their tonnage to the use of the Government, by authority of the War Department. The principle was the same as that of the regulations, and the statistics of the two periods have not been kept separate. The following summary, embracing a period of about twelve months, from the 1st of November, 1863, to the 25th of October, 1864, exhibits the results attained under both. These details are derived from the report of Col. T. L. Bayne, chief of the Bureau of Foreign Supplies of the War Department.

The leading articles imported are as follows:

Lead .....	pounds..	1,490,000
Saltpeter .....	do.....	1,850,000
Meat .....	do.....	6,200,000
Coffee .....	do.....	408,000
Boots and shoes .....	pairs..	420,000
Blankets .....	do.....	292,000
Arms (muskets, rifles, and carbines) .....		136,832

Since the date above mentioned, viz, the 25th of October, up to the 6th of December, further supplies of importance have been brought in, of which a detailed account is appended, marked A.

When the regulations were first adopted each Department was charged with the duty of managing its own exports and imports, but experience indicated the propriety of consolidating these operations and placing the whole under the control of the Treasury Department. This was accordingly done on the 1st of July, and from that date to the 1st of December the quantity of cotton exported was 11,796 bales. Of this quantity 1,272 bales were lost, and 10,522 bales have arrived safe at foreign ports. At a moderate computation the value in gold is £320,000 sterling, or $1,500,000; a sum capable of purchasing supplies of the value in currency of $45,000,000.

The results attained appear to establish the beneficial character and effect of the act of February 6, and the regulations adopted in pursuance thereof; and I am strongly of the opinion neither "the repeal of the act, nor any modification or amendment of its provisions," has been suggested by experience to be necessary.

G. A. TRENHOLM,
Secretary of the Treasury.

A.—Cargoes received from abroad, on Government account, from 25th of October to 6th of December, 1864.

PORT OF WILMINGTON, N. C.

Date.	Name of vessel.	Foreign port.	Articles.	Quantity.	For account of—
1864. Oct. 31	Hope a .....	Nassau .....	Steel .....	15	Navy.
			Do .....	3	Do.
			Lignum vitæ .....	8	Do.
			Glue .....	1	Do.
			Chemicals .....	10	Do.
			Do .....	8	Do.
			Do .....	3	Do.
			Do .....	1	Do.
			Quicksilver .....	1	Do.
			Tools .....	2	Do.
			Hose .....	10	Do.
			Rope .....	64	Do.
			Twine .....	3	Do.
			Belting .....	2	Do.
			Canvas .....	2	Do.
			Sole leather .....	3	Do.
			Zinc, tools, &c .....	22	Do.
			Tools .....	4	Do.
			Saws .....	2	Do.
			Saws, &c .....	2	Do.
			Tools, screws, &c .....	12	Do.
			Do .....	2	Do.
			Iron .....	5	Do.
			Oil .....	20	Do.
			Alcohol .....	10	Do.
			Chemicals .....	3	Do.
			Do .....	1	Do.

a Captured.

A.—Cargoes received from abroad, on Government account, from 25th of October to 6th of December, 1864—Continued.

PORT OF WILMINGTON, N. C.—Continued.

Date.	Name of vessel.	Foreign port.	Articles.	Quantity.	For account of—
1864. Oct. 31	Hope .....	Nassau .....	Machinery .....cases..	15	Ordinance.
			Castings .....do....	15	Do.
			Grate bars .....	200	Do.
			Bearers .....	6	Do.
			Boiler .....	1	Do.
			Steam chest .....	1	Do.
			Picks .....	1	Engineer.
			Blankets .....	23	Quartermaster.
			Samples .....	1	Do.
			Steel .....	11	Niter and Mining.
			Bagging .....	8	John Seixas.
			Twine .....	1	Do.
31	Little Hattie .....	do .....	Saltpeter .....	213	Niter and Mining.
31	City of Petersburg .....	do .....			(a)
31	Beatrice .....	do .....	Grate bars .....	143	Ordinance.
			Hosiery .....	10	Quartermaster.
			Bunting .....	3	Navy.
			Belting .....	1	Do.
			Screws, &c .....	1	Do.
			Mill picks .....	1	Do.
			Wire cloth and files, do. ....	1	Do.
			Boots .....	4	Do.
			Provisions .....	50	Do.
			Beans .....	105	Do.
			Life-boat .....	1	Do.
			Bearers .....	6	Ordinance.
Nov. 8	Talisman .....	Bermuda .....	Rifles .....	222	Do.
6	Armstrong .....	Nassau .....	Beef .....	399	Navy.
			Do .....	70	Do.
			Bagging .....	10	John Seixas.
			Wire .....	70	Navy.
			Life-boat .....	1	Do.
			Vises .....	8	Quartermaster.
			Hardware .....	23	Do.
			Do .....	6	Do.
			Do .....	1	Do.
8	Banshee .....	do .....	Rifles .....	23	Ordinance.
			Life-boat .....	1	Do.
			Soap .....	340	Vessel.
			Provisions .....	904	Do.
			Coffee .....	97	Do.
			Do .....	11	Do.
			Coffee .....	32	Do.
			Casks .....	7	Do.
			Shoes .....	15	Do.
5	A. E. Fry .....	Bermuda .....	Bacon .....	173	Commissary.
			Beef .....	126	Do.
			Crushed sugar .....	158	Private account.
			Rope .....	40	Do.
			Stationery .....	18	Do.
			Sugar .....	6	Do.
			Hams .....	1	Do.
5	Blenheim .....	Nassau (first trip).			(b)
24	Little Hattie .....	Nassau .....	Hardware .....	15	Quartermaster.
			Do .....	10	Do.
			Vises .....	7	Do.
			Bellows .....	18	Do.
			Anvils .....	13	Do.
			Alcohol .....	43	Medical.
			Tin plate .....	50	Do.
			Stationery .....	8	Bureau of Conscrip- tion.
			Copper .....	3	Navy.
			Tallow .....	4	Do.
			Tools .....	1	Do.
			Varnish .....	1	Do.
21	Old Dominion .....	Halifax .....	Pork .....	210	Commissary.
29	Emma Henry .....	Bermuda .....	Saltpeter .....	130	Niter and Mining.
			Shoes .....	50	Do.
			Packages .....	58	Navy.
			Do .....	18	General Whiting.

a No freight on Government account.

b No Government freight.

A.—Cargoes received from abroad, on Government account, from 25th of October to 6th of December, 1864—Continued.

PORT OF WILMINGTON, N. C.—Continued.

Date.	Name of vessel.	Foreign port.	Articles.	Quantity.	For account of—
1864. Nov. 29	Armstrong .....	Bermuda .....	Preserved meat ..cases..	1,370	Commissary.
			Gunny cloth.....bales..	10	Seixas.
			Iron ties.....bundles..	200
30	Vulture .....	do .....	Crockery.....cases..	5	S. Imp'g Co.
			Rifles.....do.....	15	Ordnance.
			Carbines.....do.....	15	Do.
Dec. 1	Ella a .....	Nassau .....	Bismuth.....case..	1	Medical.
			Pork.....barrels	147	Navy.
			Beef.....tierces..	40	Do.
			Horseshoe nails.....pkgs..	30	Niter and Mining.
			Life-boat.....	1	Navy.
			Coffee.....sacks..	225	Ordnance.
			Spool cotton.....case..	1	Do.
			Enfield rifles.....cases..	23	Do.
1	Owl.....	Bermuda via Nassau.	Shoes.....do.....	220	Quartermaster.
			Cloth.....bales..	34	Do.
			Shirts.....do.....	60	Do.
			Blankets.....do.....	161	Do.
			Flannel.....do.....	21	Do.
			Hosiery.....do.....	2	Do.
1	Virginia.....	do .....	Meat.....boxes..	275	Commissary.
			Bacon.....casks..	76	Do.
			Iron ties.....bundles..	500
			Bagging.....bales..	30
2	Wild Rover.....	do .....	Thread.....cases..	5	Ordnance.
			Buckles.....cask..	1	Do.
			Buttons.....cases..	9	Do.
			Lead.....packages..	150	Niter and Mining.
			Puncheons.....	2
			Shoes.....hogshead..	1
			Bacon.....cases..	117	Commissary.
			Pork.....barrels..	150	Do.
			Bridles.....casks..	7	Ordnance.
			Electro-stalls.....cases..	5	Do.
4	Stag.....	England via Bermuda.	Cases.....	9	Navy.
			Drums.....	5	Do.
			Cases.....	24	Quartermaster:
			Do.....	17	Do.
			Boots.....cases..	75	Do.
			Woolens.....do.....	7	Do.
			Rifles.....do.....	30	Ordnance.
			Saltpeter.....sacks..	130	Niter and Mining.
			Pig-iron.....tons..	5	Do.
			Blankets.....bales..	10	Navy.
			Cases.....	27
4	Hansa.....	do .....	Blankets.....bales..	52	Quartermaster.
			Cloth.....do.....	3	Do.
			Flannel.....do.....	26	Do.
			Boots.....cases..	68	Do.
			Stationery.....do.....	7	Do.
			Paper.....bales..	9	Do.
			Boots.....cases..	2	Medical.
			Silk.....do.....	7	Do.
			Ammunition paper.do.....	26	Ordnance.
			Ammunition.....bales..	9	Do.
2	Caroline.....	Bermuda .....	Merchandise.....cases..	2	Navy.
			Sheet-iron.....bundles..	5	Do.
			L copper.....casks..	18	Do.
			Copper bolts.....bundles..	4	Do.
			L tin.....casks..	8	Do.
			Pig lead.....do.....	7	Do.
			Saltpeter.....do.....	8	Do.
			Zinc.....cases..	7	Do.
			Metal.....casks..	6	Do.
			Lead.....rolls..	10	Do.
			Blankets.....bales..	10	Do.
			Iron ties.....bundles..	100	John Seixas .....

a Beached.

Very respectfully,

THOS. L. BAYNE,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

Cargoes received from abroad, on Government account, from 25th of October, 1864, to date, 7th of December.

PORT OF CHARLESTON.

Date.	Name of vessel.	Foreign port.	Articles.	Quantity.	For account of—
1864. Nov 7 4	Fox.....	Nassau .....	Rasps.....cask	1	Niter and Mining.
			Horseshoes.....kegs	35	Do.
			Horseshoe nails.....do.	10	Do.
			Spades.....casks	2	Engineer.
			Shoes.....cases	75	Quartermaster.
			Beef.....tierces	100	Navy.
			Bagging.....bales	6	Seixas.
5	Julia .....	do.....	Shirts.....do.	2	Quartermaster.
			Blankets.....do.	25	Do.
			Cloths.....do.	11	Do.
			Caps.....do.	2	Do.
			Thread.....case	1	Do.
			Shoes.....cases	40	Do.
			Books.....box	1	Do.
			Samples.....packages	2	Do.
			Adhesive plaster.....case	1	Do.
29	Beatricea.....	do.....	Sample paper.....package	1	Do.
			Beef.....barrels	71
			Pork.....do.	50
			Steel shot.....cases	24	Navy.
			Iron ties.....bundles	200	John Seixas.
			Alcohol.....barrels	5	Medical.
			Axes.....casks	3	Engineer.
			Do.....cases	4	Do.
22	Syren.....	do.....	Horseshoe nails.....kegs	30	Niter and Mining.
			Bismuth.....case	1	Medical.
			Alcohol.....barrels	67	Do.
			Tin plate.....boxes	68	Do.
			Acid.....carboys	5	Navy.
			Do.....box	1	Do.
			Copper.....casks	3	Do.
			Stationery.....cases	7	Bureau of Con-
Dec. 1	Laurel b.....	do.....			scription.
1	Druid.....	do.....	Beef.....barrels	50
1	Kate Gregg.....	do.....	do.....do.	130	Navy.
			Pork.....do.	60	Do.

a Destroyed by the enemy.

b In ballast.

[DECEMBER 20, 1864.—For proclamation of Governor Vance, calling on all the men of North Carolina to hasten to the defense of Wilmington, see Series I, Vol. XLII, Part III, p. 1284.]

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,

Raleigh, December 21, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: I have the honor of inclosing to you a copy of a resolution of the House of Commons of the General Assembly of the State* requesting me to communicate with the authorities at Richmond with a view to relieving our unfortunate, maimed, and disabled veterans from the cruelties consequent upon rigid enforcement of an order recently issued by the Adjutant and Inspector General, by which all wounded and sick soldiers, who can without serious detriment to their health, are required to report to their respective commands. In doing so you will permit me to express the confident belief that there can be no hesitation in relieving these noble veterans, who bear on their persons the permanent marks of their devotion to their country, from those hardships and indignities which are too great to permit me to believe that they could have been intended by said order, but which must necessarily follow the rigid enforcement of all its provisions.

* Inclosure not found.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Z. B. VANCE.

---

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Richmond, December 21, 1864.

FRED. A. PORCHER, Esq.,
Charleston, S. C.:

MY DEAR SIR: I have your favor of the 16th instant,* and have read your views with the more interest from the fact that for a year past I have seen that the period was fast approaching when we should be compelled to use every resource at our command for the defense of our liberties. Without entering into any lengthened discussion of the considerations which should guide our policy on this point, it appears to me enough to say that the negroes will certainly be made to fight against us if not armed for our defense. The drain of that source of our strength is steady, fatal, and irreversible by any other expedient than that of arming the slaves as an auxiliary force. I further agree with you that if they are to fight for our freedom they are entitled to their own. Public opinion is fast ripening on the subject, and ere the close of the winter the conviction on this point will become so widespread that the Government will have no difficulty in inaugurating the policy foreshadowed in the President's message. The effect of that message, followed up by that of Governor Smith, has been great, and if you could get your newspapers, or any one of them, to commence a discussion on this point the people would rapidly become educated to the lesson which experience is sternly teaching.

While agreeing with you thus far, I cannot concur in your opinion that the Confederate Government should assume powers not vested by the Constitution, on the allegation that our safety depends on the exercise of such power. Without dilating on this point it is enough to say that I do not see the necessity for such assumption. Matters of this sort are always best settled by degrees, and it is enough for the moment that the Confederacy should become the owner of as many negroes as are required for the public service and should emancipate them as a reward for good services. The next step will then be that the States, each for itself, shall act upon the question of the proper status of the families of the men so manumitted. Cautious legislation providing for their ultimate emancipation after an intermediate stage of serfage or peonage would soon find advocates in different States. We might then be able, while vindicating our faith in the doctrine that the negro is an inferior race and unfitted for social or political equality with the white man, yet so modify and ameliorate the existing condition of that inferior race by providing for it certain rights of property, a certain degree of personal liberty, and legal protection for the marital and parental relations, as to relieve our institutions from much that is not only unjust and impolitic in itself, but calculated to draw down on us the odium and reprobation of civilized man. It is well known that General Lee, who commands so largely the confidence of the people, is strongly in favor of our using the negroes for defense, and emancipating them, if necessary, for that purpose. Can you not yourself write a series of articles in your papers, always urging this point as the true issue, viz, is it better for the negro to fight for us or against us? The action of our people on this point will be of more value to us abroad than any diplomacy or treaty making, even if we had the power to treat upon this point. In the absence of the power the President would never consent to open this subject, nor would I consent to be his agent for such a purpose under any circumstances. If the Constitution is not to be our guide I would prefer to see it suppressed by a revolution which should declare a dictatorship during the war, after the manner of ancient Rome, leaving to the future the care of re-establishing formal and regular Government.

---

*Not found.

I am, with great regard, your old friend and classmate,
 J. P. BENJAMIN,
Secretary of State.

RICHMOND, December 21, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to submit for your information the following statement:

In the present emergency, when the resources of the country are so far exhausted, it becomes a question of paramount importance as to where recruits can be had for our armies, and every effort should be made to fill up our decimated ranks. With this view I would suggest the following plan as affording one field of recruiting not yet resorted to. The only section where men of Southern birth can be raised in large numbers, who sympathize with us and who would join us in this struggle, is Southern California and New Mexico. A considerable number might be raised on the Rio Grande. The only plan for getting those men from Southern California is to send an expedition for the recapture of Arizona. This would open the route into Southern California and enable those who are disposed to join us to do so, and I am confident that one or two brigades of New Mexicans could be raised. As to the number of men that could probably be raised in Southern California (including the mines), I am governed by the opinion of prominent men from that country, who are well acquainted with the sentiment of the people, such as Judge Terry, Colonel Showalter, and many others, who assert that from 15,000 to 20,000 men could be raised. But I would not put the numbers at more than 10,000 nor less than 5,000, but, including the New Mexican population, I would not think there would be any doubt about raising with certainty 10,000 or 15,000 men. In order to accomplish this it would be necessary to send an expedition of 2,500 men and retake Arizona and, if possible, New Mexico. The troops used for this purpose could be returned to Texas so soon as the forces raised could be organized for holding the Territories. This plan for recruiting when I was in command of Arizona was perfectly feasible, and I know of no reason why it might not be accomplished now.

Another field for recruiting would be Mexico. I know of many Californians, New Mexicans, and Arizonians who would not hesitate to join a force to recapture those Territories who would not join the Confederate Army for the war to serve in Louisiana or Arkansas, but who would join for this particular service.

Should the Government conclude to make the effort for the double purpose of retaking the Territories and raising a force, the present seems a favorable time for such a move. The Trans-Mississippi Department is comparatively free from the enemy at the present, and the large proportion of cavalry in that department—the number being greatly augmented by the forces brought out of Missouri by General Price—would indicate that the troops could be spared without inconvenience. Should the Government conclude to make such a move as I have indicated, I would suggest that a formidable alliance might be made with the numerous Indian tribes on the route between Missouri and New Mexico. Those Indians now hostile to Texas and continually committing depredations upon the citizens might, in my opinion, be induced to join us in breaking up the overland travel in that route, thus giving us strong assistance and forcing the enemy to use a large force in keeping open this route by which to supply the Territories, and at the same time relieve the frontier of Texas from the desolating war now waged upon them by these hostile tribes, who are incited and armed by the enemy to rob and murder our citizens.

As to the resources of New Mexico and Arizona and their ability to sustain the forces sent or raised there I have no question. An abundance of wheat, corn, and stock is raised in the country to subsist any force the Government would send there, except, perhaps, the beef, which can be driven from Texas with great ease.

I would suggest that the superiority of the grass in that country does away with the necessity for the amount of corn that would be required for the same force anywhere else.

The plan I have submitted is, in my opinion, the surest means of obtaining any considerable force and one that would increase our army in the Trans-Mississippi Department and enable us to assume the offensive instead of the defensive. I cannot do more, in the brief space of a letter, than call your attention to this important matter and leave for the Government to take such action as it deems best.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

JNO. R. BAYLOR.

[First indorsement.]

DECEMBER 30, 1864.

Respectfully submitted for the consideration of the President. This matter was earnestly commended and pressed on my attention by Colonel Harrison during his recent visit to this city, and, through deference to a request from him as well as due respect to the writer, is submitted to you. I fear no resources for such an enterprise can be now spared and that existing exigencies demand that, if practicable, instead of sending off any forces on a distant expedition on the mere contingency of obtaining recruits, all the trans-Mississippi forces at command should be either brought over to this side or used to create diversion in our favor.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

[Second indorsement.]

JANUARY 5, 1865.

SECRETARY OF WAR:

It is certainly desirable to secure friendly relations with all the tribes on the borders of the Texas, and to make them auxiliary to operations against the enemy on the plains might best relieve the people of Texas from their depredations. The treaties made with many of the prairie tribes, if faithfully observed, would in part secure the object suggested within and would facilitate further arrangements. The best means would probably be the employment of a battalion of the Creeks or the Cherokees, accompanied by a competent agent to secure co-operation of the nomadic tribes. The commanding general of the Trans-Mississippi Department could best judge of the propriety of detaching any portion of his command for the proposed expedition into New Mexico and Arizona. We can here decide that if a large force would be requisite that it would be impracticable to spare it. If it be possible to raise in Mexico and in New Mexico and Arizona a number of Southern refugees from California and elsewhere equal to the smallest number named, and who would organize themselves for service with our armies in the field, it would certainly invoke every feasible effort to accomplish such an end. Colonel Harrison thought that could be done and suggested the peculiar capacity of the Hon. Mr. Baylor for the service indicated—that of raising the force and putting it in service.

JEFF'N DAVIS.

[Third indorsement.]

JANUARY 6, 1865.

Noted. For inquiry and conference with the honorable Mr. Baylor.
J. A. S.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., December 22, 1864.

Hon. S. A. MILLER,
Chairman, &c.:

The resolution of the Senate to which you have called my attention directs that the Committee on Military Affairs be instructed to inquire and report what additional legislation (if any) is needed to secure prompt payment of dues to the Army.

The reply of the Quartermaster-General to this resolution correctly refers the retardation of the pay of the Army, in a great degree, to the delay of this Department in satisfying his requisitions. The causes of this delay are also explained by him, but may be made more clear and intelligible by the following statement:

It will be remembered that as a necessary consequence of the change made in the currency the Treasury was left without ready money on the 1st of April last. A new beginning had to be made on that day, and the resources relied upon to meet future demands consisted of so much of the new issues of the Treasury notes as would remain after the exchange of the old, and of the money to arise from the sale of non-taxable bonds. Very little was expected from taxation, as the 4 per cent. bonds and certificates were made receivable in payment of taxes. Nine months have elapsed since the 1st of April, and the current expenditures for that period are moderately stated at $486,000,000. In addition it was estimated by the late Secretary (report of May 2, 1864, p. 4) that the arrear of debt at that date was $75,000,000, making a total of $561,000,000.

The proposition of new issue applicable to the payment of these demands upon the principle stated could not be estimated at more than $200,000,000. From taxation a further sum was expected of about $50,000,000, leaving a very large amount—viz, about $311,000,000—to be raised from the sale of bonds and from call loans and payments in certificates of indebtedness.

The arrear of indebtedness existing on the 1st of April was undoubtedly caused in a very great degree by the refusal of the Army and creditors generally, during February and March, to receive payment in the old issue. After the 1st of April the evil was aggravated by the unavoidable delay incident to the preparation of the new issues; and on the 1st of July the arrear of debt was at least $114,000,000, as stated in my report of November 7 (p. 4).

The difficulty of meeting the current expenditures and extinguishing at the same time the pre-existing debt resulted from the insufficiency of the means immediately available, and the payment of the troops insensibly participated in the consequences of the general deficiency. A very large proportion of the funds furnished in March for the pay of the Army, being refused by the troops, was returned into the Treasury in April.

This at once established an arrear of pay for a very large sum. During the two succeeding quarters, for the reasons already stated, the amount furnished was again inadequate; and though the amount paid during the present quarter—viz, $35,000,000—has been sufficient for the quarter's pay, the pre-existing arrearages remain undiminished.

The income tax and the tax on sales for the last quarter of 1864 are relied on to some extent to meet the payments to the Army. Being payable on the 1st day of January, 1865, they are not supposed to be receivable in 4 per cent. bonds, this medium of payment being limited to "taxes payable in the year 1864." Should no change be made in the law, the revenue from this source will amount to $44,000,000, according to the best estimates to be made, and contribute materially to the reduction of the arrear of indebtedness.

Should this amount be collected as proposed, in Treasury notes, and the measures I have had the honor of recommending to Congress be adopted, I indulge in the confident belief that the pay of the Army will be made hereafter with more punctuality and in a better medium.

I have the honor to remain, your obedient servant,

G. A. TRENHOLM,

Secretary of the Treasury.

---

Act of the General Assembly of South Carolina.

AN ACT to repeal all acts and parts of acts heretofore passed by the Legislature of this State on the subject of furnishing slave labor on the coast and fortifications within this State, and otherwise to provide for furnishing such labor.

I. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives now met and sitting in General Assembly and by the authority of the same, That in order to furnish the necessary slave labor to work on the coast of this State and the fortifications within the limits of the same there shall be organized a force consisting of male slaves between the ages of eighteen and fifty years, liable, under existing laws, to road duty, not exceeding in number at any one time of one-tenth part of said slaves, to serve for the term of twelve months from the date of their impressment; subject, however, to the right of their respective owners, at the expiration of every three months of said term of service, to substitute other slaves so liable to road duty in their place, and who, by such substitution, shall constitute a portion of the whole of said force, as the case may be, from the respective dates of such substitution. This force shall be raised by a general impressment throughout the whole State whenever His Excellency the Governor may order or direct such agent of the State as he may appoint to make such impressment under the provisions of this act. But if the impressment of a less number than one-tenth would produce should be found to be sufficient, then the impressment shall be made on the State at large, according to one uniform rule of equality, to be prescribed in the order of the Governor directing such impressment to be made by the State agent; and whatever number greater than ten shall be so prescribed as a divisor to make the apportionment by, no fraction of slaves, either below or above such number selected as a divisor, shall be considered or taken into the apportionment unless it is at least one-fifth or more of such divisor; and in such cases the fraction of one-fifth shall be taken by requiring the party owning it to furnish one hand for two months, with the same right of substitution as in case of whole numbers, and the same rule as to fractions shall be observed where the number ten is used as the divisor in making the apportionment.

*       *       *       *       *       *       *

XI. If the Confederate Government should make any impressment of slave labor over and above what is to be furnished by the provisions of this act in view of greater emergencies than are contemplated in this act, then and in that event the owners of such slaves shall have credit as for so much labor furnished for coast duty.

XII. That all acts and parts of acts heretofore passed by the Legislature of this State on the subject of furnishing labor on the coast or fortifications be and the same are hereby repealed.

Passed December 23, 1864.

---

HEADQUARTERS GEORGIA RESERVES AND
MILITARY DISTRICT OF GEORGIA,
Macon, Ga., December 25, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

MY DEAR SIR: I hope you will pardon me for repeating at this time the suggestion I have heretofore made of resorting to the volunteer principle to recruit and increase our Army. What I see and realize around me so strongly illustrates the correctness of the views I have so often and urgently pressed upon the Government upon this subject, that I am constrained again to urge them even upon unwilling ears. At the hazard of incurring the criticism that I have not been equal to the duty of enforcing the conscript law in Georgia, I say to you that you will never get the men into the service who ought to be there through the conscript camp. It would require the whole Army to enforce the conscript law if the same state of things exists throughout the Confederacy as I know is the case in Georgia and Alabama, and I may add Tennessee. As much as I regret that such are the facts, I state them frankly to you that you may adopt the only policy of meeting them. The old organizations can never be filled up. Two years of earnest effort have demonstrated the utter impracticability of doing it. It is time to give it up, and let the old organizations be consolidated. The country cannot afford to consider the question of injustice to meritorious officers who are left without commands. They must try to get new ones. If you want to fill up your Army you must accept new organizations. If the authority does not exist, get Congress to give it. I honestly believe that I could raise between 5,000 and 10,000 men in Georgia in a very short time if I could announce that the Government would receive companies, battalions, or regiments, and that all men liable to conscription were permitted to join them, and those who did not join would still be conscribed. The effort to conscribe and send men to old organizations is a failure, and if persisted in will end in a continually reducing Army. Of this you may rest assured there does not remain a reasonable doubt.

With sincere esteem, yours, truly,

HOWELL COBB.

[First indorsement.]

DECEMBER 31, 1864.

Respectfully submitted for the consideration of the President.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

[Second indorsement.]

Presented to the President in person. He does not coincide with General Cobb. For answer. Return.

J. A. S.,
Secretary.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., December 25, 1864.

Brigadier-General BRANDON,
Commanding Reserves, Enterprise, Miss.:

GENERAL: Your letter of the 5th instant has been received. The Department can oppose no objection to the interposition of the courts in the determination of questions which properly arise in cases that may regularly come before them for adjudication.

Unfortunately the Confederate States have not organized their judiciary so as that questions arising under the Constitution and laws of the Confederacy shall be finally settled by their own tribunals, nor have they provided that they shall be brought to adjudication, exclusively, by their own courts.

This has compelled the Department to submit to decisions by courts that are not under the Constitution the ultimate arbiters of such questions. But the Department has not usually regarded the decisions as authoritative over the question decided, but only in the particular cases. It has yielded to the judgment of the court, but not to the opinion that might be pronounced as settling all similar cases.

If the Department had adopted any other rule it would have found itself compelled to administer the same law differently in the different States; for in different States diverse opinions upon the same questions have been more than once expressed by their highest courts.

The act of Congress of February last placed in the service all persons between seventeen and fifty years of age for military service under different circumstances. The reserved classes were designed for the defense of the States in which they were to be organized. These men were withdrawn from their militia organizations and placed under Confederate control. The act of Congress is constitutional and is the supreme law of the land.

The Department has no power to dispense with the execution of this law, or to submit its action under it to the final decision of any State tribunal.

The decision of the State courts of Mississippi will be respected in any case within the jurisdiction of the court, and the opinion of the judge will be considerably examined in respect to the cases that are likely to arise, but the Department cannot pledge itself to adopt it as the basis of its action. Please send the opinion of the court in the case to be submitted.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 306. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, December 27, 1864.

* * * * *

X. The following-named persons (disinterested slave-holders) are hereby appointed, under paragraph VIII, General Orders, No. 86, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, current series, a board for the appraisement and ascertainment of hire of slaves already impressed under act of February 17, 1864, and now in service with the Army of Northern Virginia without previous appraisement or ascertainment of hire, or who may hereafter be impressed or received without appraisement or special contract: Mr. Turnbull, presiding justice of Dinwiddie County, Va.; Maj. E. B. Branch, quartermaster; Capt. A. W. Dunn, assistant quartermaster. Surg. O. A. Crenshaw, Provisional Army, C. S., will act with the board and make a careful medical examination of each negro before appraisement. The members of the Board and Surgeon Crenshaw will report to Brig. Gen. W. H. Stevens, chief engineer Army of Northern Virginia, who will designate the time and place of the assembling of the Board.

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., December 27, 1864.

Hon. W. T. DORTCH,
C. S. Senate:

SIR: I have received your letter of the 19th instant presenting the following inquiry:

Is bonded farmer for one farm required to sell the surplus of other farms he may own at schedule prices, besides the one designated in the bond?

I have the honor to state in reply that no question has been presented for decision in this Department on this point. The third condition of the exemption to agriculturists is:

Such person shall further bind himself to sell the marketable surplus of provisions and grain in hand, and which he may raise from year to year while his exemption continues, to the Government or the families of soldiers at prices fixed by the commissioners of the State under the impressment act.

There is no limit in this obligation to the surplus or to products of any plantation, but seems to refer to the entire property of the kind described that is possessed or may be raised by the party exempted.

The clause in reference to exemptions or details that may be made by the Department is more explicit. The exempt or detailed is required to employ in good faith his own skill, capital, and labor exclusively in the production of grain and provisions to be sold at the ascertained prices. No reason occurs to the Department for making any distinction in the obligations of the two classes in this particular, and it is probable that Congress designed that they should be the same.

The language of the article above quoted as to the owners of plantations of a specific description bears this interpretation, and the Department inclines to the opinion that this is the proper construction of the act of Congress.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

GRIFFIN, GA., December 27, 1864.

Hon. JEFFERSON DAVIS,

President Confederate States of America, Richmond, Va.:

DEAR SIR: From a sentiment contained in your speech at Macon, in this State, viz, that you read all letters written to you, I am emboldened to address this note to you. Unless something is done, and that speedily, too, there will be thousands of the best citizens of this State, and heretofore as loyal as any men in the Confederacy, that will not care one cent which army is victorious in Georgia. I say this with heartfelt sorrow and deep regret. I cannot believe that you are fully aware of the true state of things in Middle Georgia. Let me enumerate some facts which have been and are yet being enacted in the section where I live.

Since August last there have been thousands of cavalry and wagon trains feeding upon our corn-fields, and for which quartermasters and officers in command of trains, regiments, battalions, companies, and squads have been giving the farmers their receipts, and we were all told that those receipts would pay our Government taxes and tithing; and though many of those receipts were signed by bonded quartermasters, yet not one of them will be taken by our collector. But again: When General Sherman left Atlanta Wheeler's cavalry commenced their retreat before him, and but a handful of Sherman's men ran W[heeler's] whole command down to Griffin, and while S[herman's] army was marching through Fayette, Clayton, Henry, and Butts, Wheeler's cavalry was burning up all the corn and fodder, driving off all the stock of the farmers for ten miles on each side of the railroad, all of from ten to twenty-five miles to the right and rear of Sherman's forces. Worse than all, the stock of mules and horses which General Wheeler's forces carried off, nine out of ten they have appropriated to their own use. In consequence of which there will be thousands upon thousands of acres of lands uncultivated the next year for the want of plow stock, which has been stolen from them by men claiming to act under orders from those high in authority. There are hundreds of families that have not one ear of corn left, whose husbands are now in the Army, and have been for the last three years, and now we are notified that our tithing must be paid.

Our corn eaten up, or rather wasted or burnt, our fattening hogs shot down because too fat to drive, I ask, how can we pay our tithing? And yet we are threatened with having our lands sold for taxes. Our scrip for corn, used by the orders of our generals, will not be taken.

Again, there is another thing giving great offense. Two days since a soldier's wife wanted to pay her tax, which was $87. She had a certificate for $100 for that amount of the old issue which she had deposited. The collector refused to give her the change, even in the old issue. She then offered the collector the certificate of $100 for her tax, which was only $87, and he would not do that. The wife of the poor soldier had to submit to a shave by one then present of 50 cents on the dollar upon her certificate and then borrow $37 to pay her taxes, paying $137 for her tax of $87 only. Is this law? Can it be so? I then protested against it, and I still do. If that is the law of the Confederacy I do not wonder that there are so many men absent from the Army. Once more. How is it that we have certified claims upon our Government, past due ten months, and when we enter the quartermaster's office we see placed up conspicuously in large letters, "No funds"? Some of these said quartermasters [who] four years ago were not worth the clothes upon their backs are now large dealers in lands, negroes, and real estate. I speak of facts. Again. How is it, sir, that many of our brave men who fought with the immortal Taylor at Buena Vista have been sacrificed by drunken officers high in command now in Georgia? This I assert is true.

In conclusion, let me ask you what is to become of the families of our soldiers whose corn has been destroyed? I know of one man, though he has suffered seriously by Wheeler's robbers, he is now, as he has been for three years, selling corn to soldiers' families for $1.50 per bushel in the old currency; and I do hope and pray that Congress will pass a law that any man or woman who sells corn for more than $2 per bushel and wheat over $3, pork over 20 cents, oats $2, fodder $1.50 per hundred pounds—if a man, he shall be sent to the front, and if a woman she shall forfeit $100 for every bushel sold above $2, and any merchant or trader that shall sell any article above 400 per cent. what that article was worth before the war shall either be sent to the front or pay a fine of ten times its value. Such a law would send thousands of absent soldiers back to their commands. I have not put down aught in malice. That you may know who I am and my standing, I refer you to the names found below.

With a sincere desire and prayer to God that your life may be spared for many years,

I am, very truly, your obedient servant,

P. A. LAWSON.

References: His Excellency J. E. Brown, Milledgeville, Ga.; Hon. E. A. Nisbet, LL. D., Macon, Ga.; Hon. R. P. Trippé, Forsythe, Ga.; editors Intelligencer, Atlanta, Ga.

---

PRESIDENT'S OFFICE,
CHARLOTTE AND SOUTH CAROLINA RAILROAD,
Charlotte, N. C., December 27, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War:

DEAR SIR: The occupation of Savannah by the Federals as well as Port Royal, with a portion of the Savannah River, place the Charleston and Savannah as well as the South Carolina Railroads in their reach. The former is occupied and the latter imminently threatened. The urgent necessity of a more interior line has doubtless presented itself to your mind. The Legislature of South Carolina appears deeply impressed with the importance of such a step. I presume that the resolutions on this subject, unanimously passed a few days since by it, have been forwarded to you by Governor Magrath. These resolutions invite your co-operation in the speedy construction of the direct road now under way from Columbia to Augusta. You will doubtless recollect that I, as president of the Columbia and Augusta Railroad Company, have invited your attention to the subject on former occasions. In my last you gave the authority to detail not exceeding forty contractors, upon certain conditions. In July and August I made a fair beginning, and by October we had about 600 hands. General Orders, No. 77, took off many of our contractors and hands. We still had increased the number of hands to about 400 when Sherman started from Atlanta. The military authorities at Augusta took about 300 of them to fortify that city. These contractors, being from Georgia, returned with their slaves to their homes after being discharged at Augusta. We still have between 500 and 600 hands at work, and are adding to the force every week.

The great difficulty has been in getting contractors exempt or definitely detailed since Order No. 77. I have not exceeding eight or nine contractors now detailed. The others are exempt from other causes or over age. If the Department can definitely and absolutely detail or exempt not exceeding sixty contractors, I think I can get from 1,500 to 2,000 slaves on the work, and have a portion of both ends of the line ready for the rails by April, and grade the remainder as fast as the track could be laid. Some of the iron would be to haul one mile and a half at this terminus until the bridge across the Congaree near Columbia could be finished. The distance from Columbia to Augusta by the line adopted is seventy-nine miles, but we propose to connect with the South Carolina Railroad at Graniteville, ten miles this side of Augusta, and cross the Savannah at Augusta on the bridge of that road. This would leave only sixty-nine miles of road to construct for Government purposes. The great desire of this company now is to subserve the military purposes of the Government, and with a view of pressing the work vigorously it would respectfully request that the War Department would authorize the detail or exemption while at work of not exceeding sixty contractors and laborers. I believe a lesser number will answer, as I require every grading contractor to bring not less than twenty-five hands. Give the company the right to subsistence and clothing for hands at Government prices, with the privilege of transportation of all supplies on the railroads second only to military transportation. With these privileges granted the Government will bring a large amount of private capital to the vigorous prosecution of the work. But contractors must be exempt from being impressed into the Army and their slaves from coast defenses, when <sup>was</sup> practicable. The hands can be had now if the authority with the privilege of providing for them is granted. The Government will have to provide the iron, chairs, and spikes, and can lay it down on the track should you deem it best. If in our disasters we should be unable to save the iron of the Charleston and Savannah, or that portion of the South Carolina Railroad iron below or south of Branchville, the rails of the Union and Spartanburg Railroad, seventy-five miles long, would be more than sufficient to lay the entire track of the Columbia and Augusta Railroad. I have been pleased to hurriedly submit these views as information to you in connection with the resolutions which I presume the Governor has forwarded to you, and to offer the ready co-operation of the company to the policy of the Government, while

I am, very truly, &c.,

WM. JOHNSTON,
President.

P. S.—In the absence of my clerk you will excuse the manner of this.

W. J.

[First indorsement.]

JANUARY 1, 1865.

Engineer Bureau for consideration and report.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

[Second indorsement.]

ENGINEER BUREAU,
January 2, 1865.

Respectfully returned to the Honorable Secretary of War.

In consideration of the great exposure of the railroads passing through Branchville, S. C., I think every assistance consistent with other interests should be given by the Government in aid of the direct line of road between Columbia and Hamburg. The details (sixty men) asked for by President Johnston should, in my opinion, be granted at once. Facilities for transporting materials over adjacent railroads should also be extended to the company, and this can best be done by putting them on the same footing as Government freights.

J. F. GILMER,
Major-General and Chief Engineer Bureau.

[DECEMBER 28, 1864.—For Mallory to Vance and resulting correspondence, in relation to "coals of the steamer Advance," see message of the President, February 3, 1865, p. 1055, post.]

RICHMOND, VA., December 28, 1864.

General S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General:

GENERAL: Please have inquiry made so as to ascertain the number of men turned over for field service under the operation of General Orders, No. 82, designating the place from which and the officer by whom the men were turned over; to what command they were sent; whether they were subsequently detailed, and, so far as can be ascertained, whether they are now serving in the field. The heads of bureaus from the posts of which these men were drawn can probably furnish you aid in obtaining this information.

Very respectfully and truly, yours,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, POST-OFFICE DEPT.,
Richmond, December 29, 1864.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:

The inclosed letter was addressed to General Ewell instead of sending him a list of clerks to be redetailed. He, as will be seen from his indorsement, advises me that my letter should have been sent to the Secretary of War, by whom I was requested to communicate with him.

I respectfully call Your Excellency's attention to the facts disclosed in my letter to General Ewell and to the necessity of some action which will put an end to this anomalous condition of things which is paralyzing the Department for the want of a few men, indispensable on account of their skill and experience, and subjecting the heads of departments to the control of military officers of any grade who may have to act on their applications for the detail of their own clerks, and subjecting them to the receipt of such suggestions as that contained in the last paragraph of General Ewell's indorsement about the employment of ladies. If he had been well informed on the subject on which his advice is volunteered, he would have known that it would not have been more absurd to propose to appoint ladies to perform the duties of his staff than to propose that they should perform the duties of a number of the officers and clerks of this Department.

I must also say that with the very few men in this Department liable to perform military duty, but who are indispensably necessary to it, no inconsiderable portion of my time for a year past has been spent in asking for details and passes and in repeating these requests every few days or weeks only to have them revoked and then going over the work of obtaining them again. The policy is most injurious to the public service, and is embarrassing and degrading to the heads of departments who have to submit to it.

With greatest respect, your obedient servant,

JOHN H. REAGAN,
Postmaster-General.

[Indorsement.]

MARCH 2, 1865.

Secretary of War for his perusal as stating matters which have heretofore been embarrassing.

J. D.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

CIRCULAR.] CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPT., ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., December 23, 1864.

Maj. Gen. J. F. GILMER,
Chief of Engineer Bureau:

GENERAL: By direction of the Secretary of War the men belonging to the Local Defense Troops and now on detailed duty in this city will assemble to-morrow at 10 a. m. at their respective regimental rendezvous for the purpose of rejoining their commands in the field. A list of the most important, not to exceed one-half of the number from each bureau, will be sent to the headquarters of General R. S. Ewell, in this city, which will be detailed and kept on duty.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. W. RIELY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Respectfully submitted to the Postmaster-General.

JOHN W. RIELY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, POST-OFFICE DEPT.,
Richmond, Va., December 28, 1864.

Lieut. Gen. R. S. EWELL,
Headquarters, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: Referring to a circular from the Adjutant-General's Office of the 23d instant, which came to hand yesterday, I beg to say that the following-named men, clerks in the Richmond city post-office, are now in the trenches, Company B, Third Regiment Local Defense Troops, to wit: John R. Currie, A. R. Tarborough, D. S. Cabell, James R. Thom, Edwin Pleasants, James ———, and W. L. Walker.

The following-named clerks in that office—to wit: William B. Reed, P. P. Frayser, R. L. Noel, R. W. Crittenden, J. R. Wilkinson, M. M. French, W. H. Crawford, and L. E. Hough—have been allowed to remain in it or detailed and returned to it upon my urgent solicitation, as being clerks of special skill and experience and indispensably necessary to keep the city post-office in operation. Without them the mails for the Government, for Congress, for the Army, and the country cannot be made up and sent from Richmond or distributed and delivered to those to whom they are due in Richmond.

Under these circumstances I feel constrained to ask you to allow the clerks now detailed in the city post-office to be kept on duty in it.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN H. REAGAN,
Postmaster-General.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, POST-OFFICE DEPT.,
Richmond, December 28, 1864.

Lieut. Gen. R. S. EWELL,
Headquarters, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: Referring to the communication of John W. Riely, assistant adjutant-general, of the 23d instant, which came to hand yesterday, requesting that one-half of the men detailed from the Local Defense Troops should be returned to duty in the trenches, I beg to say that the following-named clerks of this Department are now in the trenches and have been since the 29th of September last, to wit, Col. John McAnerney, jr., Sergts. B. F. Perry, F. Wise, Privates Samuel Hanson, G. F. Eubank, Edwin Sheppard, and the following-named clerks of this Department have been assigned and are now performing guard duty in this city, to wit, Lieut. T. P. A. Bibb, commanding guard; Privates J. Newton Lewis, J. N. Clark, B. S. Howard, L. D. Hill, making eleven of the clerks of this Department who have for three months past been withdrawn from their appropriate duties, to the great injury of the service of the Department.

The following-named officers and clerks of this Department, to wit, Lieut. H. St. George Offutt, chief of Contract Bureau, Post-Office Department; Private J. L. Lancaster, principal clerk of Finance Bureau, Post-Office Department; Sergt. S. T. McNair, Privates A. G. Cantley, J. S. Douglas, J. T. Taylor, R. A. Fennell, were absent from their important duties here serving in the trenches in Company B, Third Regiment Local Defense Troops, for the greater part of the last three months, until the Department became so embarrassed for the want of their services that on my earnest solicitation made from time to time they have been detailed to return to their duties here.

I have been urged by the heads of bureaus for some time past to ask for the return of other clerks of this Department to their duties here, as indispensably necessary to carry on the business of the Department, but have delayed this request, much to the detriment of the service of the Department, on account of the great need of troops to man the trenches. I must therefore ask that you allow those now in the Department to remain on duty in it; and even with them I am greatly embarrassed in the effort to discharge my duties in the absence of the large number of my clerks now in the military service.

I ought to add that no one has been appointed to a clerkship in this Department who was able to do military service since the early part of the year 1862, and that fully three-fourths of the clerks of this Department are either men over fifty years of age, ladies, wounded and disabled soldiers, or invalids from some other cause; and fully one-half of them who belong to the Local Defense Troops are either disabled soldiers or invalids from other causes.

The few who are really able to do military duty are men who have been in the Department from the time of its organization in 1861, and nearly all of those had resigned positions in the Post-Office Department at Washington to accept service in and to contribute their skill and experience to the postal service of the Confederacy. When the local defense organization was gotten up it was understood that the clerks and officers who joined it were only to be called out on special emergencies, and no one contemplated that they were to constitute, as they have since last spring, a part of the Army, and to be withdrawn for months at a time from their proper and necessary duties.

I would not trouble you with a statement of these facts but for the reason that they show that the policy being pursued with reference to the clerks of the departments is operating most injuriously to them, and should be changed or their usefulness must be destroyed.

If it is determined to make soldiers of the clerks and to deprive the departments of their skill and experience, this should be done, and the departments should know that they must do the best they can without them, and thus avoid paying them their salaries as clerks while using them as soldiers. If not, they should be allowed to continue in the performance of their duties, unless when called out for a few days at a time to take their part in any pending battle. It is to be remembered, too, that the departments—at least this one—can, under the law, appoint but a limited number of clerks. It has no authority, therefore, to make other appointments in lieu of those sent to the trenches, and the business must in consequence remain untended to.

I hope you will allow those now in this Department to remain, as I cannot go on without them; and I hope it will be found practicable soon to return the other clerks to their duties in the Department. All the clerks I have named above, whether in the trenches or in the Department, have been, on my application, permanently detailed by the Secretary of War, under General Orders, No. 77, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN H. REAGAN,
Postmaster-General.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, December 29, 1864.

Respectfully returned to honorable Mr. Reagan.

This is a subject over which I have no control. These troops are turned out by order of the Secretary of War on account of the emergencies in the front, and the application should go to him. I would observe, however, that I have frequent applications from ladies, who are well recommended and in great want, and are apparently well fitted for clerical duty.

R. S. EWELL,
Lieutenant-General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, December 29, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to hand you, as requested, a statement showing the amount of unpaid requisitions for funds made by this department and now in the Treasury Department, and of those made but which have not yet reached that Department, viz:

In Treasury Department awaiting signature .....	$108,300,700.84
Issued from this office and between War Department and the Treasury .....	20,059,884.03
Total .....	128,360,584.87

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, SUBSISTENCE DEPT.,
Richmond, December 29, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: In reply to your inquiry I have to report that the unpaid requisitions of this Bureau amount to $34,002,684.65. The debt of the Bureau is largely in excess of the requisitions issued, for the following reasons, viz: No estimates have been received from several districts for November and December, and in nearly every district the estimates for December will fall short, from the fact that officers are now paying vicinage appraisement prices instead of schedule rates for all subsistence delivered prior to 1st of February, 1865. Requisitions for the full amount of the indebtedness of some officers have not been issued, because it was known that the Treasury would not meet them. For example, the indebtedness in the State of Georgia is $12,000,000 or $13,000,000, of which there are requisitions for only about $7,000,000. In response to an inquiry from the War Department, $12,500,000 of the appropriation for the Subsistence Bureau was appropriated for the Trans-Mississippi Department, and Maj. W. B. Blair, chief commissary of subsistence for that department, was designated as the officer to draw for that amount. The Treasury Department sends the funds across and arranges the distribution of the funds on Major Blair's order.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. B. NORTHROP,
Commissary-General of Subsistence.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., December 29, 1864.

Hon. G. A. TRENHOLM,
Secretary of the Treasury:

SIR: I have examined the paper of General E. Kirby Smith, referred by you the 23d instant, in which the indebtedness of the Trans-Mississippi Department is approximately stated for the year ending September 30, 1864, at $60,333,099. He includes under the title of amounts due $20,277,465, and from estimate $40,055,634. To this amount is to be added the debts contracted since that date. A portion of this sum has been remitted, but it is supposed that the debt is quite as large now or larger than it was September 30, ultimo.

The requisitions of the Quartermaster-General, unanswered, now amount to the sum of .....	$128,360,584.87
Those of the Commissary-General .....	34,002,684.65
The Ordnance service is in arrears .....	5,640,388.00
The Medical service is in arrears .....	3,090,333.00
The Engineer service is in arrears, exclusive of trans-Mississippi ..	5,000,000.00
The Niter and Mining service .....	5,600,000.00

The Department is constantly importuned for the payment of money due for necessary supplies which have already been furnished, and is constantly advised that supplies cannot be obtained for the want of the requisite funds. Its whole service is in a fair way to perish from inanition.

I am satisfied that the discredit of the Government has arisen, in a measure, from the delay that has been made in the liquidation of these pressing, urgent, and meritorious claims. I am aware of the many strong considerations that induce a restriction of issue as far as practicable; but I venture to suggest that the currency itself probably suffers more discredit from the failure to meet the engagements of the Government than could result from inflation by the issue necessary to redeem them.

You can scarcely realize to what extent the inability or failure to meet the obligations of the Department has been prolific of mischief. It has been the occasion or excuse for desertion, marauding, sale of clothing and equipments among soldiers; it has prevented the accumulation of supplies; it has affected the efficiency of transportation; it has produced carelessness or indifference among contractors; officers are resentful, and soldiers reckless, discontented, and suffering.

Most seriously apprehensive that unless the indebtedness of this Department now existing can be provided for without delay, that its operations cannot, with daily increasing obstructions, embarrassments, and antagonisms among the people themselves be carried on, I am constrained to invoke your earnest attention to the subject, and to urge the immediate application of all practicable measures of relief.

Very truly, yours,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

OXFORD, MISS., December 29, 1864.

Hon. J. W. C. WATSON:

MY DEAR SIR: I redeem a promise made you some time since. In the discharge of my duties in the Inspector-General's Department I have been brought immediately in contact with most of the abuses and grievances herein mentioned, and I therefore speak with some knowledge and confidence. I regard the conscript department in Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi as almost worthless. I believe if the officers and men engaged in it were sent to the field more strength would be added to the Army than will probably be afforded by the conscripts who will be sent forward. In this State, for the past five months, only 235 men between eighteen and forty-five years have been started to the field, and if the desertions from this number were in proportion to those from the officers and camps of instruction, not a company is in the Army. It is true that 537 were conscripted of this class, but 302 of them deserted before starting from the State. A want of efficiency and energy is everywhere perceptible. I fear that medical boards have in many instances done disservice to the cause. The Board at Brookhaven, Miss., from April to October last, examined 1,125 men, and of these discharged 807 (over 70 per cent.) as unfit for any duty.

The details made by the department are very numerous and are very inaccurately reported. In repeated instances I find that district enrolling officers, and in some instances county officers, have made details which have not been reported to the commandant of conscripts. As a matter of course, the reports made to Richmond are very inaccurate. These defects exist also in Georgia and Alabama. One defect exists in this State which is not found in them. I allude to the number of State exempts reported in this State. That number is only 205. We know that each county in this State is entitled to five members of the board of police, ten magistrates, ten constables, one sheriff, deputy sheriff, probate judge, probate clerk, circuit clerk, coroner, tax assessor, tax collector, treasurer; and each county is allowed some five poor commissioners. These aggregate over 2,300 exempts; they are county officers only. The State officers would swell the number to at least 4,000, and yet but 205 were reported. This abuse is greater in Georgia, but that State shows in the conscript reports; the truth, however discreditable. Mississippi enjoys the benefit but avoids the stigma. The Conscript Department claims the credit of having sent over 1,000 deserters to their commands in the past five months. Many of these voluntarily surrendered themselves, still more were mere stragglers overstaying their furloughs, and others were arrested when on their way to the army. Many others were arrested by the State officers or the militia. The department is therefore entitled to but little credit on this score. I have but barely alluded to some few of the many abuses of this department. I believe, too, that the system of conscription is failing from want of material on which to operate. I believe that the conscript has been conscribed generally. The department might be abolished without material injury to the service. You will ask me, if such be the fact, how are the ranks of our Army to be filled.

This leads me to mention other abuses that are frightful in character.

First. The number of deserters is alarmingly large. From a careful examination on this subject I am prepared to say that the number in this State is not less than 7,000.

Second. The number of skulkers under details is also very large. Every post is full of them. The Quartermaster, Commissary, Ordnance, Medical, and Post Departments are full even to repletion. These details are generally young and healthy. I have been ordered to send this class to the Army. How can I effect it? I approach a detail to every appearance sound, and he thrusts into my face a certificate of disability. The disease is occult, the name scarcely known to me. He looks strong enough to brain an ox with his knuckle and eat him afterward. I have the prima facie evidence of my senses against the prima facie evidence furnished by the certificates. I can act earnestly, but I act blindly. I have asked for a medical officer to accompany me in the discharge of this duty. My request has not been granted. I believe the medical profession as free from corruption as any other officers. The improvement in this department has been wonderful during the past two years. Still they are human. It is an erroneous policy to force the question of fitness of details at a post upon the surgeons there. They are dependent upon the quartermaster there for home, office, fire, pay, clothing, and transportation, and receive from the commissary the food that feeds them. They would be less or more than human could they listen without prejudice to the petition of these officers for details, backed by assurances that they know the subject to be suffering from nearly "every ill that flesh is heir to." I could correct the evil could I see through the eyes of an intelligent physician not subject to these influences.

Third. Large numbers of supernumerary and unnecessary officers are found everywhere. Posts are created for them to fill. Each little town in the State has its commandant of post, its conscript officer, its adjutants, its guards; in a word, its little army around it. One of these officers could perform the duty of the whole. Send off the others, and more than a regiment of troops will be added to the Army from this source in this State alone. When an officer becomes wholly worthless in the front he is sent as a curse to fill some post in the rear.

For a time, as you know, I filled the position of adjutant-general for one of our armies. Necessity compelled the consolidation of regiments occasionally. Whenever this occurred, I sent for the commanding officers, and selecting the best of their subordinates for the field, I scattered the worst to the rear. They could not be forced into the ranks; to permit them to remain with the Army was only to retain a class who could cause mischief in producing discontent at orders which circumstances rendered imperative. They are wandering through the land, worthless to the country and reflecting discredit on the service. Send them to the ranks. Displace young, healthy, lazy quartermasters and commissaries by disabled officers in the field.

Fourth. There is another great evil in all the States. Congress has passed severe laws against the employment of able men by quartermasters and commissaries. This law is evaded not only by false certificates of disability, but by equally false certificates on the part of officers that these employ  s are indispensably necessary to them, and details are thereupon made by the Secretary of War. The number of these details is very large, and the facility with which these certificates are given is wonderful. I have seen many disabled officers and privates well qualified to discharge these duties refused employment to screen a useless favorite from the field. These are some of the evils of the service. They must be corrected or I fear the loss of our cause. Pardon me a single suggestion as to the remedy. Consolidate your regiments in the field. Place them in the Confederate Army. Force the supernumerary officers not specially marked for merit into your corps élite. Send some of peculiar merit to fill the important posts in the rear. Repeal all exemptions, and let other meritorious officers be sent home to organize and then command new companies to be raised from this class. Place these in the Confederate Army. The soldiers in the field will thus be thrown with their old companions in arms, and the new troops from home will fight by the side of their friends from home. Take hold of the militia; organize it; make it your conscript arm. Offer to each of its members a limited furlough for every deserter he may arrest. I believe you can thus call into service the military strength of the nation. Let the men and officers who have been disabled in the field become your civil officers, your overseers, your quartermasters and commissaries in the rear. I believe there are this day in Mississippi alone a sufficient number of deserters, skulkers, idle officers, improper details, and useless exemptions to give victory to any army to which they are sent. I have served since the first day of this war; am beyond conscript age; am partially disabled; but I will cheerfully resign my commission and once more seek the ranks with these men; but should it be my lot in any way to lead, I will place them where some acquaintance with the smell of powder will be added to their knowledge.

I beg leave to allude to one or two subjects disconnected with the Army. Our taxes are heavy, but I do not think unnecessarily so. The burthen is certainly an unusual one. Nothing should be done to make it odious to the citizen, and yet I fear some regulations are making it so. Those holding the 4 per cent. certificates complain that the Government, as far as possible, discredits them. Fractions of hundreds cannot be paid with them. I saw a widow lady a few days since offer to pay her taxes of $1,271.31 with a certificate of $1,300. The tax-gatherer refused to pay her the change of $28.69. She then offered the whole certificate for the taxes. This was refused. This apparent injustice touched her far more than the amount of the taxes.

Again. Many of our planters have been able to raise but a small surplus. They have cheerfully sold the surplus to the Government and have been compelled to take certificates of indebtedness. The Government will not pay them and refuses to receive them in payment of taxes. The planter has no money, and his property must be sold. He throws the certificate first on the market, and they can be purchased in many places at a discount of 75 per cent. The people complain of their Government as oppressing them, not so much by what it requires as the manner of making the requisition and of its refusal to pay a class of its debts that were contracted for currency.

Again. Portions of this and other States have been repeatedly overrun by the foe. Scarcely half our planters have had the ability to till the soil.

In this and the northern tier of counties of this State sufficient food is not found for the home population. The tithes are being paid. Do not remove them from these counties, else starvation will be literally thrust on our people. Sell the tithes to the county police (?). This would be an act not only of justice but of mercy.

Pardon this long letter. Your position gives you a voice in the correction of abuses, and I know your patriotism will prompt you to use all means in your power of promoting the efficiency of the service and the happiness of our people.

I am, dear sir, truly, your friend,

H. W. WALTER.

[Indorsement.]

MARCH 28, 1865.

Referred to the Adjutant-General, whose attention is specially called to the statements made within, and which are probably more specifically set forth in the inspection reports of this officer.

J. D.

---

COLUMBIA, S. C., December 29, 1864.

Mr. SEDDON:

MY DEAR SIR: I inclose you two acts of the Legislature of South Carolina.* The exemption act, you perceive, is intended and will have the effect to nullify the existing law of Congress and to forestall any future legislation of Congress looking to citizens of South Carolina for an increase of the Army, except by express permission of the Governor of the State. The slave-labor act is also intended, and has the effect, to prevent the accession of one slave to the Confederate service as a contribution to the public defense. By comparing these two acts with the act of Congress, the general orders, and your instructions, you will at once detect the purpose to contravene Confederate action in the matter. This legislation is an explicit declaration that this State does not intend to contribute another soldier or slave to the public defense, except on such terms as may be dictated by her authorities. The example will speedily be followed by North Carolina and Georgia, the Executives of those States having already assumed the position. Alabama and Mississippi will follow, and it will not now need General Bragg's and General Kemper's military conscription to drive the people and the States to resume their own defense. The folly and wickedness of Governors Brown and Vance, and the Legislature of South Carolina have done that already which military conscription would have effected before March—disintegrated the Confederacy. They have saved the Confederacy the shame of an idiotic suicide. With no enrolling officers, and the reserves in the field, I must do with conscription and its cognates what General Taylor proposed to do to keep Captain Bragg from running away from Buena Vista—"Colonel Bliss and myself will re-enforce you." Captain Duffield and myself will try to carry on the recruiting and furnishing labor to the Army. It is a matter of pain to me that the first treason to the Confederate States in the form of law has been perpetrated in South Carolina. I believe it has been thrust on the Legislature by designing knaves, but I have no hope that the Governor will or can administer these laws in any other spirit than that in which they were designed. Pardon the freedom of an unofficial note.

Most respectfully and truly, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON.

---

* For inclosure No. 1 (here omitted), see Series I, Vol. XLIV, p. 981.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

The following is the exemption act passed at the recent session of the South Carolina Legislature:

AN ACT to authorize the Governor to require the exemption of certain State officers and other persons from Confederate service.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, now met and sitting in General Assembly, and by the authority of the same, That the Governor be, and is hereby, authorized and required to claim the exemption from Confederate military service of the officers and members of both branches of the General Assembly of this State, and the following State officers, to wit: Lieutenant-governor, judges of the courts of law and equity, attorney-general and solicitors, secretary of state, comptroller-general, state auditor and two assistants, treasurers of the upper and lower division, adjutant and inspector general and one assistant, quartermaster-general, commissary-general, state engineer and one assistant, aides-de-camp to the Governor (not to exceed one to each militia brigade), private secretary of the Governor and his clerk, sheriffs, clerks of the court, ordinaries, masters, registers and commissioners in equity, tax collectors, president, cashier, book-keeper, and one teller of the bank of the State and each of its branches, officers and cadets of the State military academies, professors of the South Carolina College, superintendent, physician, and keepers of the lunatic asylum, and superintendent, steward, and teachers of the Asylum for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind.

SEC. 2. That the Governor be and is hereby authorized, if the same be in his judgment necessary, and under such regulations as he may prescribe, to require the exemption of the following State officers and other persons, to wit: Members of the Board for the Relief of Soldiers' Families (who are over forty-five years of age), president, cashier, book-keeper, and one teller now in the employment of each of the several banks in the State, the presidents and treasurers now in the employment of the two savings institutions in the State, such deputy sheriffs as may be indispensable to the execution of the laws of the State (not to exceed one in each judicial district), State agent for the supply of slave labor, one editor for each newspaper being published at the time of the passage of this act, and such printers and pressmen as said editor may certify upon oath to be indispensable to the publication of said newspaper; the public printer of the State government, and such journeyman printers as said public printer shall certify upon oath to be indispensable to the public printing; the chief of the South Carolina Hospital Bureau at Richmond and his assistant, the officers and members of the police and fire departments of Charleston and Columbia, and such artisans, mechanics, and persons of scientific skill, and other employes as may be indispensable to the carrying on of the manufactories and public works belonging to the State; the professors and teachers of all incorporated colleges in the State; every minister of religion authorized to preach according to the rules of his church, and who was, on the 1st day of May, 1861, and at the passage of this act, shall be regularly employed in the discharge of his ministerial duties, and is not engaged in any traffic.

SEC. 3. That for the proper police of the country the Governor is hereby authorized, under such regulations as he may prescribe, to require the exemption from Confederate military service of such persons as he may adjudge indispensable for the government of the slaves, and the protection of the citizens and property of the State: Provided, That such exemptions shall not exceed in any district one for every two hundred slaves in said district: And provided further, That the rights of overseers now having both Confederate and State exemptions shall not be changed nor altered by the provisions of this act, nor shall such persons be included in the estimate of the above proviso.

SEC. 4. That all officers and persons who shall be so required by the Governor, pursuant to the provisions of this act, be, and they are hereby, declared exempt from Confederate military service during the period for which their exemption shall be so claimed.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ENGINEER BUREAU,
Richmond, Va., December 29, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: I have the honor to state that the claims against the Engineer Department will, at the close of the present month, amount to $5,000,000. This does not include the Trans-Mississippi Department, which will increase it to $7,000,000.

The above information is derived from the requisitions awaiting the action of the Honorable Secretary of the Treasury, and the proposed operations of officers who have not submitted their estimates for the month of December. It is therefore only approximate, but as near as can be ascertained at present.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. GILMER,
Major-General and Chief of Bureau.

---

WAR DEPARTMENT, NITER AND MINING BUREAU,
Richmond, December 29, 1864.

Hon. J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to report that the sum of $5,600,000 will be necessary to meet arrearages due by this department.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

RICHARD MORTON,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Acting Chief of Bureau.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., December 30, 1864.

Maj. Gen. HOWELL COBB:

GENERAL: Permit me to urge your special attention to the enforcement of conscription in your State. I fear that the withdrawal of Colonel Browne for the command of the local brigade, operating now in South Carolina, may cause some relaxation of effort on the part of enrolling officers in your State, since the supervision of them and of the details of the conscript service has, I presume, been for some months past mainly exercised by him. I know that you have many other arduous duties, especially under the present circumstances of the war and its recent ravages in Georgia, but there are really none of such immediate and vital importance as those which minister to the recruitment of our armies. The President takes a special interest on this subject, and shares a belief common with many that considerable numbers of men liable to conscription have not yet been reached by its operation in your State. I hope this may prove correct, and that through your efficient efforts they may be speedily placed in the field, where they are so much wanted.

I should be pleased to have your views as to the prospects from this quarter, as likewise your counsel as to any other possible mode of recruiting our armies. Soldiers are our greatest necessity. What is your opinion as to the practicability and policy of employing negroes as soldiers; and if to be resorted to, should they be held as slaves, be promised emancipation, or be at once freed? This is a question of the gravest import in every aspect, and the opinions of one whose judgment is so justly valued would be highly appreciated by,

Yours, truly,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 309. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, December 30, 1864.

* * * * *

XXXIII. The following schedule of prices for articles named therein, adopted by commissioners appointed pursuant to law for the State of Virginia, are published for the information of all concerned, and the special attention of officers and agents of the Government is directed thereto:

RICHMOND, VA., December 3, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON:

SIR: Upon consultation we have concluded to readopt for December and January our last schedules for October and November, thus continuing the same rates, with a few exceptions, relative to the prices to be paid for hired negro laborers. These changes will be found in Schedule B. The policy you proposed for impressing from producers only one-half of their surplus productions is eminently proper, and all impressing officers should scrupulously observe the rule and never go beyond it. If this rule is strictly adhered to by impressing officers it would greatly benefit the non-producers and tend to reconcile the producing classes to whatever appeared harsh in our system of impressments, for they would have one-half or their surplus productions to dispose of at neighborhood market rates.

As requested by your Department, we conferred with commissioners of North Carolina, and had the good fortune to adjust prices upon a basis calculated to harmonize the leading interest of both States. The just and enlightened views entertained by the North Carolina commissioners were practically illustrated by the liberal spirit and wise terms upon which they agreed to co-operate with us. In this revolutionary crisis we should all agree to aid each other and the Government. To rescue the country and save the people from the dangers that environ both is clearly the duty of all. Our honor, rights, and independence are at stake. Let us bend all our energies to defend and secure them. To attain this invaluable end the people must be fed and clothed. Our producers, manufacturers, and tradesmen certainly can afford to work for moderate compensation while our gallant soldiers dare to confront our savage adversaries in their defense. Certainly if our brave men throw their protecting arms around our family altars and gallantly defend their country for a sum too insignificant to mention, those who remain at home enjoying the benefit of their valor can afford to feed them and their families on the most moderate terms. The question should be, How little will you ask or take for your productions? Fidelity to all the best interests of our country points to the observance of this maxim as the best test of our charity and patriotism. Let the watchword be everything for our country and away with money-making. In this final and desperate struggle for liberty beware lest in hoarding up money and neglecting the cause of the people you exchange your birthright for a mess of pottage. Believing that our cause appeals to all parties and interests alike, we trust the people will unite and act in concert in achieving our independence. What we will to do we can accomplish. United we are invincible—triumphant, what a glorious destiny opens to our view; conquered, how abject and forlorn our condition. Who, under existing circumstances, is not willing to sacrifice a few paper dollars to gain the most enviable victory that civilization ever witnessed?

Entertaining the conviction that the popular mind is favorable to every effort calculated to advance the success of our cause, we venture to place before you the annexed schedules of prices for the months of December and January, which, though imperfect, because there are so many and such varied views and interests to harmonize, yet we indulge the hope may be properly received by the people.

The following prices are to be the maximum rates to be paid for the articles impressed in all cities and the usual place of sale, and when impressed on the farms or elsewhere the same prices are to be paid.

Under existing circumstances we deem it not only just, but most likely to favor increased production, that producers in future should not be required to transport their surplus productions when impressed, but that the agents of the Government should impress or employ the neighborhood or county wagons and teams to haul such articles and so divide the work between the owners of wagons and teams as to be least prejudicial to those successfully engaged in agriculture.

SCHEDULE A.

No.	Articles.	Quality.	Description.	Quantity.	Price.
1	Wheat.....	Prime.....	White or red.....	Per bushel of 60 pounds.	$7.50
2	Flour.....	Good, fine.....	.....	Per barrel of 196 pounds.	33.00
2	do.....	Superfine.....	.....	do.....	37.50
2	do.....	Extra superfine.....	.....	do.....	39.75
2	do.....	Family.....	.....	do.....	42.00
3	Corn.....	Prime.....	White or yellow.....	Per bushel of 56 pounds.	5.00
4	Corn-meal.....	Good.....	.....	Per bushel of 50 pounds.	5.20
5	Rye.....	Prime.....	.....	Per bushel of 56 pounds.	5.00
6	Cleaned oats.....	do.....	.....	Per bushel of 32 pounds.	4.00
7	Wheat bran.....	Good.....	.....	Per bushel of 17 pounds.	.75
8	Shorts.....	do.....	.....	Per bushel of 22 pounds.	1.05
9	Brown stuff.....	do.....	.....	Per bushel of 28 pounds.	1.35
10	Ship stuff.....	do.....	.....	Per bushel of 37 pounds.	2.10
11	Bacon.....	do.....	Hog round.....	Per pound.....	2.75
12	Pork, salt.....	do.....	.....	do.....	2.30
13	Pork, fresh.....	Fat and good.....	.....	Per pound, net weight.....	1.82
14	Lard.....	Good.....	.....	do.....	2.75
15	Horses and mules.....	First class.....	Artillery, &c.....	Average price per head.....	800.00
16	Wool.....	Fair or merino.....	Washed.....	Per pound.....	8.00
17	do.....	do.....	Unwashed.....	do.....	6.00
18	Peas.....	Good.....	.....	Per bushel.....	5.00
19	Beans.....	do.....	.....	do.....	5.00
20	Potatoes.....	do.....	Irish.....	do.....	4.00
21	do.....	do.....	Sweet.....	do.....	4.00
22	Onions.....	do.....	.....	do.....	8.00
23	Dried peaches.....	do.....	Peeled.....	do.....	8.00
24	do.....	do.....	Unpeeled.....	do.....	4.50
25	Dried apples.....	do.....	Peeled.....	do.....	5.00
26	Hay, baled.....	do.....	Timothy or clover.....	Per 100 pounds.....	3.90
27	do.....	do.....	Orchard or herd grass.....	do.....	3.90
28	Hay, unbaled.....	do.....	do.....	do.....	3.00
29	Sheaf oats, baled.....	do.....	do.....	do.....	5.25
30	Sheaf oats, unbaled.....	do.....	do.....	do.....	4.75
31	Blade fodder, baled.....	do.....	do.....	do.....	3.90
32	Blade fodder, unbaled.....	do.....	do.....	do.....	3.00
33	Shucks, baled.....	do.....	do.....	do.....	2.60
34	Shucks, unbaled.....	do.....	do.....	do.....	1.70
35	Wheat straw, baled.....	do.....	do.....	do.....	2.20
36	Wheat straw, unbaled.....	do.....	do.....	do.....	1.30
37	Pasturage.....	do.....	Interior.....	Per head per month.....	3.00
38	do.....	Superior.....	do.....	do.....	4.00
39	do.....	First rate.....	do.....	do.....	5.00
40	do.....	Good.....	Near cities.....	do.....	5.00
41	do.....	Superior.....	do.....	do.....	6.00
42	do.....	First rate.....	do.....	do.....	7.00
43	Salt.....	Good.....	.....	Per bushel of 50 pounds.	5.00
44	Soap.....	do.....	.....	Per pound.....	1.00
45	Candles.....	do.....	Tallow.....	do.....	3.00
46	Vinegar.....	do.....	Cider.....	Per gallon.....	2.00
47	Whisky.....	do.....	Trade.....	do.....	10.00
48	Sugar.....	do.....	Brown.....	Per pound.....	3.00
49	Molasses.....	do.....	New Orleans.....	Per gallon.....	25.00
50	Rice.....	do.....	.....	Per pound.....	.50
51	Coffee.....	do.....	Rio.....	do.....	3.00
52	Tea.....	do.....	Trade.....	do.....	7.00
53	Vinegar.....	do.....	Manufactured.....	Per gallon.....	1.00
54	Pig-iron.....	do.....	No. 1 quality.....	Per ton.....	350.00
55	do.....	do.....	No. 2 quality.....	do.....	314.00
56	do.....	do.....	No. 3 quality.....	do.....	278.00
57	Bloom iron.....	do.....	do.....	do.....	710.00
58	Smith's iron.....	do.....	Round, plate, or bar.....	do.....	1,030.00
59	Railroad iron.....	Serviceable.....	do.....	do.....	400.00
60	Leather.....	Good.....	Harness.....	Per pound.....	3.90
61	do.....	do.....	Sole.....	do.....	3.60
62	do.....	do.....	Upper.....	do.....	4.20
63	Beef-cattle.....	do.....	Gross weight.....	Per 100 pounds.....	30.00
64	do.....	Superior.....	do.....	do.....	35.00
65	do.....	First rate.....	do.....	do.....	40.00
66	Salt beef.....	Good.....	.....	Per pound, net.....	1.50
67	Sheep.....	Fair.....	.....	Per head.....	35.00
68	Army woolen cloth, 3-4 yard.....	Good.....	10 ounces per yard.....	Per yard.....	5.00
69	do.....	do.....	.....	.....	(a)
70	Army woolen cloth, 6-4.....	do.....	20 ounces per yard.....	.....	10.00
71	do.....	do.....	.....	.....	(a)

a Pro rata as to greater or less width or weight.

SCHEDULE A—Continued.

No.	Article.	Quality.	Description.	Quantity.	Price.
72	Flannels, 3-4.....	Good .....	6 ounces per yard.....	Per yard .....	$4.00
73	Cotton shirtings, 3-4.....	do .....	4½ yards to pound.....	do .....	1.11
74	Cotton shirtings, 7-8.....	do .....	3½ yards to pound.....	do .....	1.35
75	Cotton sheetings, 4-4.....	do .....	3 yards to pound.....	do .....	1.75
76	Osnaburgs, 3-4.....	do .....	6 ounces per yard.....	do .....	1.50
77	Osnaburgs, 7-8.....	do .....	8 ounces per yard.....	do .....	1.93
78	Osnaburg tent cloths.....	do .....	10 ounces per yard.....	do .....	2.53
79	.....	.....	.....	.....	(a)
80	Army shoes .....	Good .....	.....	Per pair.....	15.00
81	Shoe thread .....	do .....	.....	Per pound.....	3.00
82	Wool socks, for men.....	do .....	.....	Per pair.....	2.00
83	Corn-top fodder, baled.....	do .....	.....	Per 100 pounds.....	2.40
84	Corn-top fodder, unbaled.....	do .....	.....	do .....	1.50
85	Wheat chaff, baled.....	do .....	.....	do .....	2.40
86	Wheat chaff, unbaled.....	do .....	.....	do .....	1.50
87	Sorghum molasses.....	First quality .....	.....	Per gallon.....	8.00
88	Pasturage for sheep.....	Good .....	Interior.....	Per head.....	.40
89	do .....	Superior .....	do .....	do .....	.50
90	do .....	First rate.....	do .....	do .....	.60
91	Apple brandy .....	.....	.....	Per gallon.....	10.00
92	Peach brandy.....	.....	.....	do .....	10.00
93	Butter.....	Good .....	.....	Per pound.....	5.00 a On the above enumerated cotton cloths pro rata as to greater or less width or weight.

In assessing the value of first-class artillery and wagon horses and mules at $800, we designed that the terms should be accepted and acted upon according to its obvious common-sense import. In other words, that they should be selected and then impressed accordingly as their working qualities and adaptation to army service, together with their intrinsic value, would warrant a judicious purchaser in considering them as coming within the contemplation of the commissioners when they assessed the average value of such horses as the Government needed at $800. But cases might arise, however, when the public exigencies would be so urgent as to demand that all horses at hand should be impressed; yet under ordinary circumstances, when family or extra-blooded horses or brood mares of admitted high value are impressed, we respectfully suggest to the Secretary of War to have instructions forwarded to the impressing officers to propose and allow the owners to substitute in their stead such strong, sound, and serviceable horses or mules as shall be considered and valued by competent and disinterested parties as first-class artillery horses or first-class wagon mules.

The term average value per head is in contradistinction to a fixed and uniform price for each horse or mule. We suppose that in impressing a number of horses or mules, whether owned by several persons or one individual, that some might be estimated at $600, and others at different advanced rates, according to their worth, up as high as $1,000, thus making an average value or price for a number of good, sound, and efficient horses or mules $800 each.

In illustration of our views, we will add, that a horse with only one eye sound might, in all other respects, be classed as a first-class artillery horse, yet the loss of one eye would justly and considerably curtail his value. So a horse from ten to eighteen years of age might be deemed in all other particulars as a first-class artillery horse, but of course, however efficient and able to render good service for a year or two, yet his advanced age would justly and materially impair his value. Any horse, however he may approximate the standard of a first-class artillery horse, must, according to deficiency, fall below the maximum price; and as few comparatively come up to the standard, and are therefore entitled to the maximum price, so of course in all other instances the price should be proportionately reduced, as imperfections place them below the standard of first class, &c.

The first quality of sorghum molasses is of the consistency of honey and free from all acidity to the taste; but second and inferior qualities of molasses should be reduced in price from 10 to 20 per cent. accordingly as they shall fall below the standard of first quality.

SCHEDULE B.—Hire of labor, teams, wagons, and drivers.

		Quantity and time.	Price.
1	Baling long forage .....	Per 100 pounds....	$0.30
2	Shelling and bagging corn; sacks furnished by Government.....	Per 50 pounds....	.05
3	Hauling .....	Per cwt. per mile..	.08
4	Hauling grain.....	Per bushel per mile.	.04
5	Hire of 2-horse team, wagon, and driver; rations furnished by owner.	Per day.....	10.00
6	Hire of same; rations furnished by Government.....	.....do .....	5.00
7	Hire of 4-horse team, wagon, and driver; rations furnished by owner.	.....do .....	13.00
8	Hire of same; rations furnished by Government.....	.....do .....	6.50
9	Hire of 6-horse team, wagon, and driver; rations furnished by owner.	.....do .....	16.00
10	Hire of same; rations furnished by Government.....	.....do .....	8.00
11	Hire of laborer; rations furnished by owner .....	.....do .....	5.00
12	Hire of same; rations furnished by Government .....	.....do .....	2.50
13	Hire of same; rations and clothing furnished by owner .....	Per month.....	100.00
14	Hire of same; rations and clothing furnished by Government .....	.....do .....	75.00
15	Hire of teamster; rations furnished by Government .....	.....do .....	75.00
16	Hire of laborer; clothing and rations furnished by Government .....	Per year.....	500.00
17	Hire of ox-cart, team, and driver; rations furnished by owner.....	Per day.....	10.00
18	Hire of same; rations furnished by Government.....	.....do .....	5.00

REVISION OF THE SCHEDULES OF FEBRUARY AND MARCH LAST.

Since the adoption of our schedules for the months of February and March last the financial bills passed by Congress, taxing the currency, have seriously impaired the value of the old issues of Confederate Treasury notes. At this juncture large numbers of horses and mules were impressed and paid for in a currency which was a few days thereafter to be taxed 33 $\frac{1}{3}$  per cent.

The Board of State Commissioners having adjourned, and one of its members being out of the State, it could not be convened in time to review our schedule of prices. Under this state of facts we have re-examined and rearranged our tariff of prices, so far as we have been advised of recent impressments, proposing, in this mode, to remedy any diminution of valuation which may have resulted from the action of Congress upon the currency. Therefore we assess the average value of artillery or wagon horses or mules, impressed since the passage of the currency bill of the 17th of February last, at $600. This award will entitle each person to receive higher compensation accordingly as each horse or mule recently impressed may be considered as being a first, second, or third class artillery or wagon horse or mule, whether the parties appeal to our Board or not; and the impressing officers and agents should forthwith call on all those persons of whom they impressed horses or mules and propose a settlement on the foregoing basis, but allowing to each person only such prices as first, second, or third class artillery or wagon horses or mules may have been estimated at by the local or county appraisers, assuming our average appraisement of $600 as a fair medium of valuation. This, then, would allow a maximum price of $800, and a minimum price of $400, making $600 the average price—thus allowing more for first-class horses or mules, and proportionately less for the inferior, as they may fall below the grade of first class. The county appraisement will be the guide in making these settlements, but within the limits of our maximum price of $800 and our minimum price of $400. This plan, perhaps, would be most satisfactory to the people, for whatever price the county appraisers agreed upon should be deemed fair within the range of our minimum price of $400 and our maximum price of $800, payment of whatever amount awarded to be made in the new issues of Treasury notes.

The impressing officers in those instances where there were no arbitrators or local appraisements for horses or mules impressed should in all such cases themselves re-estimate the value of horses or mules thus impressed, and allow in each case such additional compensation as would, within the limits of our schedule rates, appear just and proper. But if, after this revaluation and settlement, any person should not be satisfied, the party could then appeal to our Board and have the case reconsidered.

All appeals and communications should be addressed, post-paid, Mr. D. K. Whitaker, secretary of the Board, box 995, Richmond post-office, Va., and who may be consulted at his office in the department of the Quartermaster-General.

The next meeting of the Board will be held on Tuesday, the 31st day of January next.

E. W. HUBARD,
ROBT. GIBBONEY,
Commissioners for Virginia.

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., December 31, 1864.

General S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General:

GENERAL: I am directed by the Secretary of War to inform you that the Senate has adopted in secret session a resolution inquiring as to the condition of the Army and the probability of recruiting the same, and to request that you will confer with him at once relative to the response to be made. It is important that the information should be furnished as soon as practicable.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

V. E. SHEPHERD.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, ORDNANCE BUREAU,
Richmond, December 31, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: In reply to your inquiry for information as to the means of supplying munitions of war, "confining the answer to the munitions" furnished by this Bureau to the cis-Mississippi, I have the honor to state, first, as to arms: There are enough arms on hand of a mixed character—that is, arms most of which are not as good as those now in the hands of troops in the field—to arm and equip some additional force. The returns of November, 1864, showed on hand at the various arsenals and depots:

Rifles of caliber .58	3,882
Rifles of caliber .54	2,759
Smooth-bore muskets .69	3,564
Smooth-bore muskets .75	636
All other infantry arms	10,504
Carbines	2,596

This amount can be probably increased by 10,000 or 12,000 by a vigorous system of collecting the arms scattered about through the country.

IMPORTATIONS.

We have hitherto had no difficulty in importing arms through the blockaded sea-ports. The total importations for the year have been:

Rifles	39,798
Pistols	1,716
Carbines	4,740

The want of funds necessary to purchase has greatly limited the importations of the expiring year. There are probably not more than 10,000 or 12,000 on the islands awaiting shipment.

MANUFACTURED.

The number of arms manufactured and made up of parts derived from capture and other sources for the year ending November 30, 1864, were:

Rifles, caliber .58 .....	12,778
Carbines .....	5,354
Pistols .....	2,353

There is machinery enough under the control of this Bureau to manufacture 55,000 rifles and carbines per annum, provided a sufficient mechanical force be employed as follows:

Armory.	Number of rifles.	Number of workmen.
Richmond .....	25,000	450
Fayetteville .....	10,000	250
Columbia, S. C. ....	4,000	125
Athens, Ga. ....	10,000	250
Tallahassee, Ala. ....	6,000	150
Total .....	55,000	1,225

α Carbines.

The proviso is the workmen, and these must be permanently attached to those establishments and excused from the performance of all military duties, except perhaps local guard duty. The number actually employed is about 425, about 300 less than were employed, say twelve months since. Defection from service in the local forces and losses on the battle-field have thus greatly reduced our force of workmen.

By General Orders, No. 82, over 700 men were placed in the ranks; of these perhaps one-half were competent mechanics, many of them valuable for the service of the armories. The product could not at once be raised to the maximum figures above indicated, but could, with the 800 additional workmen, be so raised, allowing for the time it would take to teach and organize them.

For our cavalry arms we have chiefly to rely on importations, although pistols are being made at several points with success. Want of workmen alone prevents additional results. Sabers can be produced in sufficient numbers, and of pretty good quality, by the detail of a very few workmen from the field.

POWDER.

The manufacturing capacity at the disposal of the Bureau is ample for all purposes, viz:

	Pounds.
Augusta mills .....	per day 5,000
Selma mills .....	do 500
Raleigh mills .....	do 600
Richmond mills (in a few weeks) .....	do 1,500
Total .....	7,600

There is, besides, a private mill at Charlotte, N. C., and an excellent mill belonging to the Navy Department at Columbia, S. C. The products could be nearly doubled by running the mills day and night. The quantity of small-arm ammunition in the hands of troops in the field is about eighty to ninety rounds to the man. The most obstinate and protracted battles, such as Chancellorsville and Gettysburg, exhibit an expenditure of about twenty-five rounds per man for the former battle, and about thirty rounds per man for the latter.

The quantity of small-arm ammunition on hand at the several arsenals and depots shows an aggregate of 5,376,034 small-arm cartridges on the 12th of November. There are 50,480 rounds of siege and sea-coast projectiles, and 133,962 rounds of field-artillery ammunition on hand same date. No uneasiness is felt on this head, provided the supply of powder (dependent on saltpeter) is kept up. As to the means of keeping up the supply of saltpeter and the data in reference to production and importation, I beg leave to refer you to the Niter and Mining Bureau.

LEAD.

The supply of lead is derived from importation and the Wytheville lead mines. The other mines are insignificant, though the whole mineral region has been explored. Should Wilmington be closed and the Wytheville mines captured the Army could not be supplied with ammunition on the present scale; though the Bureau would not even then despair of opening avenues of supply for a reduced scale of operations.

OTHER SUPPLIES.

Copper, steel, &c.: These articles must be obtained chiefly from abroad, and the stock on hand is very small. The Bureau is constantly making substitutes of iron in every possible way to diminish the consumption and eke out the supply.

Leather must be imported to some extent by this Bureau, as it has yielded its claim on hides obtained from the Army to the Quartermaster's Department, in order that the soldiers may be shod. While the supply is scant, there is no absolute deficiency of material. There is, however, a deficiency of accouterments very damaging to ammunition, because workmen were taken from their benches to fill the trenches about Richmond, and are in part still detained there. The chief detriment the operations of the Bureau have had has arisen from interference with its workmen for military purposes.

J. GORGAS,

Brigadier-General and Chief of Ordnance.

Statement of funds expended and required for the support of the conscript service to 31st day of December, 1864.

States.	Amount drawn.	Balance on hand.	Amount required.	Total amount.
Bureau .....	$58,730.00			$58,730.00
Virginia .....	350,000.00	$146,888.81	$30,000.00	233,111.19
North Carolina .....	134,829.52		39,394.53	174,224.05
South Carolina .....	127,288.21		50,000.00	177,288.21
Florida .....	118,144.00			118,144.00
Louisiana .....	27,700.00			27,700.00
Mississippi .....	203,590.00		42,000.00	245,590.00
Georgia .....	256,000.00			256,000.00
Alabama .....	420,000.00		118,000.00	538,000.00
Tennessee and East Kentucky .....	87,384.00		11,644.00	99,028.00
Total .....	1,783,665.73	146,888.81	291,038.53	1,927,815.45

GEO. F. MAYNARD,

Major and Quartermaster.

Consolidated abstract from returns of the Confederate Army on or about December 31, 1864.

[Compiled from such returns as are on file in the War Department.]

Command.	Present for duty.		Aggregate present.	Aggregate present and absent.	Date of return.
	Officers.	Men.
Army of Northern Virginia a (Lee) .....		60,334	71,854	150,373	Dec. 31, 1864
Department of Western Virginia and East Tennessee (Breckinridge) .....	333	3,062	3,782	7,138	Nov. 10, 1864
Department of Richmond (Ewell) .....	373	4,985	6,658	16,601	Dec. 30, 1864
Department of North Carolina b (Bragg) .....	423	6,327	7,539	11,916	Jan. 31, 1865
Department of South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida (Hardee) .....	746	11,309	14,680	21,678	Nov. 20, 1864
Wheeler's cavalry division in South Carolina .....		4,919	6,356	6,944	Jan. 2, 1865
Army of Tennessee c (Hood) .....	1,795	16,913	25,053	77,366	Jan. 20, 1865
Department of Alabama, Mississippi, and East Louisiana (Taylor) .....	1,381	10,459	15,592	32,148	Dec. 1, 1864
Western District of North Carolina (Martin) ..	96	1,216	1,448	2,226	Dec. 18, 1864
Trans-Mississippi Department d (E. K. Smith) ..	2,132	28,107	43,054	74,397	Dec. 31, 1864
Total .....	7,279	147,631	196,016	400,787

a Including the Valley District, under Early. The officers and men are not reported separately under the head of "present for duty."

b Less Hoke's division, already accounted for in the Army of Northern Virginia December 31, 1864, with an aggregate "present and absent" of 11,891.

c Exclusive of Forrest's cavalry, not reported.

d With incomplete returns from Churchill's and Parsons' divisions, and no returns from Marmaduke's and Fagan's divisions. The latter two divisions were estimated at about 3,500 effective.

C. S. Niter and Mining Bureau.—Iron return from January 1, 1863, to January 1, 1865.

State.	Force employed.			Returns of iron received by bureau officers (in tons).
	White.			Receipts during first, second, third, and fourth quarters, 1864.
	Reserves.	Conscripts.	Slaves and free negroes.	Pig (2,240 pounds).	Bloom (2,000 pounds).	Rolled (2,000 pounds).	Hammered (2,000 pounds).	Skelp (2,000 pounds).	Scrap (2,240 pounds).
Virginia a .....	90	751	941	2,388.8	143.3	348.4	217.3	1	465.8
North Carolina .....	3	227	448	716.0	407.5	71.0	107.0
South Carolina b .....		83	166	20.0		150.0
Alabama b .....	58	322	2,252	4,866.0	22.0	1,047.7	7.6
Georgia c .....
Mississippi .....
Tennessee d .....		269		43.4		8.9	40.0
Trans-Mississippi .....
Total .....				8,034.2	572.8	1,626.0	371.9	1	465.8

a A large portion of the Virginia conscript force was for a long time in the lines of the enemy, being cut off by their advance down the Valley while the furnaces were in blast. Ten of the furnaces having been burned, much of this force is still employed in the work of rebuilding.

b No returns from South Carolina and Alabama for the fourth quarter owing to the interruptions of communication.

c Georgia works destroyed by the enemy. The railroad tracks being taken up under General Beauregard's order, the work of rebuilding is prevented.

d No yield in Tennessee in the last quarter, the entire force having been kept in the field.

e Returns not received. Two furnaces in blast.

C. S. Niter and Mining Bureau.—Iron return from January 1, 1863, to January 1, 1865—Continued.

State.	Returns of iron received by bureau officers (in tons).
	Total receipts to date.
	Pig (2,240 pounds).	Bloom (2,000 pounds).	Rolled (2,000 pounds).	Hammered (2,000 pounds).	Skelp (2,000 pounds).	Scrap (2,240 pounds).
Virginia a .....	8,020.5	418.4	2,139.6	225.4	7.4	1,076.2
North Carolina .....	1,023.0	692.6	71.0	162.6
South Carolina b .....	20.0		150.0
Alabama b .....	10,230.1	22.0	2,124.7	28.2
Georgia c .....			485.4
Mississippi .....
Tennessee d .....	245.0		8.9	40.0
Trans-Mississippi .....
Total .....	19,538.6	1,133.0	4,979.6	456.2	7.4	1,076.2

a A large portion of the Virginia conscript force was for a long time in the lines of the enemy, being cut off by their advance down the Valley while the furnaces were in blast. Ten of the furnaces having been burned, much of this force is still employed in the work of rebuilding.

b No returns from South Carolina and Alabama for the fourth quarter owing to the interruptions of communication.

c Georgia works destroyed by the enemy. The railroad tracks being taken up under General Beauregard's order, the work of rebuilding is prevented.

d No yield in Tennessee in the last quarter, the entire force having been kept in the field.

e Returns not received. Two furnaces in blast.

OTHER METALS.

Metal.	Whence obtained and remarks.	Quantity.
Copper .....	Chiefly from Ducktown mines, now in the hands of the enemy .....	Pounds. 746,805.0
	Collections of scrap copper in last quarter .....	50,336.0
	Imports to date .....	31,208.7
	Total .....	828,349.7
Lead .....	From Wytheville mines, last quarter .....	226,360.0
	From Wytheville mines and Silver Hill Mine, N. C., previously .....	1,610,264.0
	Total to date .....	1,836,624.0
	Trans-Mississippi Department (pig-lead, scrap, and Mexican, included with Arkansas lead):
	Returns up to September 30 only .....	390,587.0
	Scrap lead collected .....	658,320.0
	Total amount produced in Confederate States .....	2,885,531.0
	Imported 18,353 pigs and 7,450 bars lead, averaging—pigs, 100 pounds; bars, 10 pounds.	1,909,800.0
	Total .....	4,795,331.0

Zinc.—Furnace was in operation at Petersburg; work suspended because of proximity of the enemy. As soon as the weather moderates the works will again be put in operation in North Carolina. Collections of scrap zinc are meanwhile conducted throughout the country.

Sulphur.—The sulphur supply still holds out, but to guard against fire and other contingencies sulphur furnaces have been established and preparations made to bring the production up to 20,000 pounds per month.

Sulphuric acid.—Sulphuric acid chambers are in operation at Charlotte, N. C., with average yield of from 4,000 to 5,000 pounds per month.

Respectfully submitted.

RICHARD MORTON,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Acting Chief of Bureau.

HEADQUARTERS GEORGIA RESERVES AND
MILITARY DISTRICT OF GEORGIA,
Macon, Ga., January 2, 1865.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

I acknowledge the receipt of letters from your Department of the 27th of October (No. 1645), and 19th of December last (No. 1965), on the subject of the authority granted by me to Col. J. A. Glenn to raise a brigade of mounted men for the reserve force of this State. When the letter of the 27th of October was received the original paper was in the hands of Colonel Glenn, and he was immediately called upon to return it to these headquarters. He did not return it, however, until Sherman's army was on the march from Atlanta to this place. At the time I was in the field with the troops. All the papers of my office (in anticipation of an attack on this place) were put up for safety, and the accumulation was such that I have been able only recently to give my attention to those thus laid aside. This will account for the delay in answering your first letter. The second (of the 19th of December) has just reached me. Inclosed you will find the original application of Colonel Glenn, with the indorsement made by my authority. This is the only authority granted by me, and constitutes all my action on the subject, except my refusal to allow my companies or other organizations to go into camp until the minimum number required by law should be reported on the muster-roll, and the additional injunction that none would be permitted to join any company who were liable to conscription, or who were deserters or absentees from other commands. When the movement of Sherman from Atlanta became evident I consented that he should collect his men at Athens, and allowed him a limited number of days to effect it. I have ordered an inspection of the troops assembled at Athens to be had by one of my staff officers on the 16th of this month, with full instructions for purging the rolls and organizing whatever men may be there into proper commands.

I desire to call your attention to the fact that I had no power to grant any authority beyond what is contained in my indorsement, and that is simply a statement that I will receive such companies of reserves and non-conscripts as may be offered. My object was to get as many men into the service as practicable from that section of the State—particularly that was then in the occupancy of the enemy. I knew Colonel Glenn by reputation as a brave soldier, but was not at the time aware of the proceedings of a court-martial against him, of which I have since heard, and which is of file in your Department. I have endeavored to place before you as succinctly as possible all the facts within my knowledge.

I inclose copies of two letters addressed to Colonel Glenn from this office.

I am, very respectfully yours, &c.,

HOWELL COBB,
Major-General, Commanding.

[First indorsement.]

To Adjutant-General for examination and report.

J. A. S.,
Secretary of War.

[Second indorsement.]

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
January 23, 1865.

Respectfully returned to the Secretary of War.

The letter of Major-General Cobb dated January 2, 1865, is in answer to letters to him from this office asking what authority had been given to Jesse A. Glenn to raise a brigade of cavalry from Georgia Reserves. These inquiries were made in accordance with the indorsement of the Honorable Secretary 19th of October, 1864, on papers herewith returned. It appears from Major-General Cobb's report that no authority has been given to Jesse A. Glenn to raise the proposed brigade. A letter from this office was addressed to him October 27, 1864, giving the instructions required by the latter part of the Honorable Secretary's indorsement. Major-General Cobb states that he has ordered a careful inspection and muster of the mounted men raised, to take place 16th of January, 1865.

By order, &amp;c.:

JNO. BLAIR HOGE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Third indorsement.]

JANUARY 27, 1865.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

The late conduct of this officer in breaking up a public meeting of citizens in Georgia, assembled to instruct their representatives, was so unadvised and improper as to make the revocation of any informal authority he may have necessary. So instruct General Cobb.

J. A. S.,
Secretary.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

GREENSBOROUGH, GA., *June 27, 1864.*His Excellency President DAVIS,
Richmond, Va.:

MR. PRESIDENT: I am satisfied I can raise a brigade of mounted men from the reserves and non-conscripts, if you will grant me authority to raise the brigade. I think I can enlist most of the men in North Georgia, in rear of our army. I respectfully refer you to recommendations in my favor for promotion now in the office of Secretary of War.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JESSE A. GLENN.

[First indorsement.]

JULY 18, 1864.

Respectfully referred, by direction of the President, to the Honorable Secretary of War for attention.

J. C. IVES,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

[Second indorsement.]

JULY 20, 1864.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

Refer to Major-General Cobb.

By order:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

[Third indorsement.]

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
July 23, 1864.

Respectfully referred to Maj. Gen. Howell Cobb, commanding reserve forces Georgia, for consideration and such action as he may deem expedient.

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. BLAIR HOGE,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Fourth indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS GEORGIA RESERVES,
Macon, August 5, 1864.

All the cavalry raised from the material of the reserve corps not in companies now in service will be received.

By command of Major-General Cobb:

LAMAR COBB,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

HDQRS. GEORGIA RESERVES AND MIL. DIST. OF GEORGIA,
*Macon, Ga., October 15, 1864.*JESSE A. GLENN,
Greensborough, Ga.:

SIR: Your favor of the 12th instant received, and in reply I am directed by Major-General Cobb to say that he has no authority to issue rations, or order them issued to you, until the muster-rolls of your command are forwarded. As soon as they are ready to be mustered in he will appoint a place for them to rendezvous, and then rations, &c., will be issued. Men are greatly needed now, and you will hurry forward your organization.

I am, sir, very respectfully, &amp;c., your obedient servant,

LAMAR COBB,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

HDQRS. GEORGIA RESERVES AND MIL. DIST. OF GEORGIA,
*Macon, Ga., October 26, 1864.*JESSE A. GLENN,
Greensborough, Ga.:

SIR: Your letter of 20th instant received, and I am directed by General Cobb to say, in reply, that it is impossible to furnish you with muster-rolls at present. You will make out the rolls on informal ones, and when you rendezvous your command you can then have the proper ones furnished by the inspecting officer. The major-general has been so much annoyed with companies below the minimum number that he directs me to warn you that he will receive no companies that do not have the minimum number present at the muster and inspection, and those that have not the minimum number will be disbanded and put in other companies. The enlistment of deserters is positively prohibited, and if presented will be turned over to their proper commands. You will rendezvous your command at as early a date as practicable at Griffin, Ga.; direct them to rendezvous as companies and not individually. There have been a good many complaints in regard to men representing themselves as belonging to Colonel Bryan's regiment. You will see that this is rectified.

I am, sir, very respectfully, &c., your obedient servant,

LAMAR COBB,

Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., January 3, 1865.

Hon. J. S. DICKINSON,
Member of Congress:

SIR: I have examined the joint resolution of the Congress submitted by you to this Department. By the act of Congress of May 1, 1863, certain persons were exempted as overseers for the police and management of slaves on each farm or plantation, the sole property of a minor, a person of unsound mind, a femme sole, or person absent in the military service of the Confederacy on which there are twenty or more slaves. One of the conditions was that the sum of $500 should be paid annually during the exemption by the owners of the slaves for the persons so exempted. The tenth section of the military act of 17th of February last provided that all laws granting exemptions from military service be, and the same are hereby, repealed and hereafter none shall be exempted except those mentioned in that act. The first section of the act provides that all persons between the ages of seventeen and fifty (white men and residents) shall be in the military service for the war.

No provision was made in this act for the overseers who had been exempt under the act of May 1, 1863. This Department decided that under the military act of 17th of February last the exemption in favor of overseers could no longer be claimed. It directed that in making of details for agricultural purposes the fact that an overseer had been employed and the tax paid should be considered as an equitable circumstance, and if the plantation or farm on which he was provided a surplus, that he might be detailed for duty as an agriculturist. In some cases it has granted a furlough to the overseer till the expiration of his term.

The confusion that has been produced arises from the fact that many of the persons who paid the tax paid it in the latter part of 1863, or early in 1864, and they claim exemption from the date of this payment. But it is to be observed that in the most of these cases practically the exemption was operative from the date of the act of May, 1863, and only the payment deferred. The Conscription Bureau should have prescribed that the payment was for an exemption from 1st of May, 1863, to 1st of May, 1864.

No case has come to the knowledge of the Department in which more than one tax of $500 has been paid by any overseer. The number of cases in which overseers have been placed in service between 17th of February, 1864, and 1st of May, 1864, is not believed to be great. The only claim that the owner has is for a ratable proportion of the $500. The services of the overseer were rated at $500, and the measure of the damage is the loss of a part of that sum in the removal of the overseer. I see no just ground for the cancellation of the bonds under the act of 17th of February, 1864.

Very respectfully,

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

---

[JANUARY 3, 1865.—For Davis to Seddon, in relation to recruiting in North Carolina west of the Blue Ridge, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 1005.]

---

[JANUARY 3, 1865.—For Cooper to Seddon, in regard to the condition of the Army and the probabilities of its being recruited, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 1007.]

---

MERIDIAN, MISS., January 4, 1865.

Hon. JEFFERSON DAVIS:

DEAR SIR: You appointed me the presiding judge of a military court designed for Major-General Lee's cavalry division, then in this State. Previous to the organization of the court the larger portion of that cavalry had been transferred to the Army of Tennessee. My court was retained by the then commanding general in Mississippi. Since that time there has been devolved upon it the general business of the department. The position is anomalous, and I ask that you give it more definiteness. There is no department court in the department that I know of, and I request that you appoint the court of which I am judge to the duties of that position. (Act May 1, 1863.) If there is any objection to the granting of this request, of which I am not advised, then I request that the court be appointed for the State of Mississippi under act of February 16, 1864. The public interest cannot be injured by a definite appointment to do what the court is already irregularly performing. It is not without question whether the court under its present status can legally try cases originating in the general operations of the department. Again, consistently with the duties of my position, I desire to remain during the ensuing year in Mississippi to assist, as far as I can, in strengthening the spirits of our people under the deep despondency which has settled upon them since our late reverses. You can hardly magnify their gloomy condition. I solicit your attention to the above requests

Yours, truly,

JAMES PHELAN.

[First indorsement.]

JANUARY 21, 1865.

Adjutant-General for remarks.

J. D.

[Second indorsement.]

FEBRUARY 9, 1865.

Respectfully returned to the President.

I can see no objection to the temporary assignment of this court for the State of Mississippi, and under all the circumstances I recommend such assignment.

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

[Third indorsement.]

FEBRUARY 10, 1865.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

Is not the cavalry corps formerly commanded by General Lee now in Mississippi under General Taylor? It seems to me better to assign the court either to General Taylor's corps or to the division of cavalry in Mississippi rather than to make a temporary assignment.

J. D.

RICHMOND, VA., January 5, 1865.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

In response to your resolution of the 2d ultimo, relative to the impressment of slaves, I herewith transmit a communication from the Secretary of War, which conveys all the information I have on the subject.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

[Inclosure.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, December 20, 1864.

The PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

SIR: I have received a resolution of the House of Representatives relative to the impressment of slaves, adopted on the 2d instant, a copy of which is herewith inclosed.

The superintendent of conscription, to whom the resolution was sent for report, furnishes in his reply copies of the orders issued by him on that subject, but states he is not in possession of the information demanded. Major-General Kemper, commanding the reserves, also makes a report as to the impressment of slaves in Virginia. Copies of both these letters are herewith transmitted, and furnish all the information at the command of this Department.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

[Sub-inclosure No. 1.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., December 5, 1864.

HONORABLE SECRETARY OF WAR:

SIR: I have the honor, by direction of the President, to forward for your attention and the proper action a copy of a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 2d instant, as follows:

RESOLUTION.

Resolved, That the President be directed to inform this House whether at this time there are in the employment of the Confederate States slaves impressed exceeding one in five of the male slaves between the ages of eighteen and forty-five of one owner, and whether any slaves have been impressed and are now in service on a basis of calculation including female slaves between the ages of eighteen and forty-five; and if such impressments have been made, by what authority it has been done, and whether the credit directed to be allowed in the impressment of slaves by the provisions of the act of February 17, 1864, has been allowed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

BURTON N. HARRISON,

Private Secretary.

[First indorsement.]

DECEMBER 16, 1864.

Major-General KEMPER:

Furnish as complete an answer as possible to this resolution.

By order:

J. A. CAMPBELL,

Assistant Secretary of War.

[Second indorsement]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES OF VIRGINIA,

December 19, 1864.

Respectfully returned, inviting attention to inclosed report.*

J. L. KEMPER,

Major-General.

[Sub-inclosure No. 2.]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES OF VIRGINIA,

December 19, 1864.

General S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector-General:

GENERAL: In compliance with the inclosed order of the Assistant Secretary of War, dated the 16th instant, I have the honor to report that the impressment of slaves in Virginia for twelve months' service has been conducted in strict conformity to the inclosed circular letter (marked A)—that is to say, the impressment has been apportioned ratably among all the slave-holders of each county so as to charge each slave-holder with the same proportion of his male slaves between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years capable of performing ordinary labor, but in no case has any one person contributed more than one out of five male slaves between the ages specified. It is true that by an error the impressment was begun in two counties of the State on a basis of calculation which included female slaves within the ages specified, but the error was promptly corrected, and the slaves thus improperly impressed were all released and restored to their owners.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. L. KEMPER,

Major-General.

A.

CIRCULAR LETTER.]

CONSCRIPT OFFICE,

Richmond, October —, 1864.

To ————,

Enrolling Officer, ———— County:

Circular No. 70, from this office, is hereby revoked and the following is the apportionment of slaves to be taken from your county, under the provisions of Circular No. 69, Conscrip Office, current series. Circular No. 69, Conscrip Office, current series, is in full force.

* Next, post.

County.	Slaves.

This requisition will be apportioned ratably among all the slave-holders in your county, so as to charge each slave-holder with the same proportion of his male slaves between the ages specified capable of performing ordinary labor, but in no case will this requisition take more than one out of five male slaves between the ages specified from any one person. Care should be taken that the slave impressed is able-bodied. These slaves must be collected and forwarded with the utmost possible expedition.

You will cause the advisory board of your county to use extraordinary diligence in the collection of these negroes, and forwarding them to Capt. W. H. Fry, adjutant of the post, at Camp Lee, with full descriptive list, giving the name of owner. Receipt should be taken in each case. It is suggested that the commissioners' books be taken as a guide.

By order of Lieut. Col. J. C. Shields:

Lieutenant and Adjutant.

[Sub-inclosure No. 3.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., December 16, 1864.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: The following resolution of the House of Representatives has been referred to this Bureau for attention.*

The Bureau is not in possession of the information demanded by this resolution.

Only two impressments of slaves have been made by the direction of this Bureau.

The first was under your instructions of the 21st of September, ultimo, for 5,000 slaves from the State of Virginia, for service with the Army of Northern Virginia, for thirty days. The following direction was given to the commandant of conscripts for Virginia, by the Bureau, for the execution of your order:

SEPTEMBER 21.

Respectfully referred to Lieutenant-Colonel Shields, to take immediate steps for compliance with the within order of the Secretary of War. The urgency of the matter, as represented by General Lee, should cause the utmost promptitude. Return this paper for the files of this office.

The second was under your instructions of the 24th of September, ultimo, to procure negroes under the act of Congress of February 17, 1864, authorizing the employment of free negroes and slaves in certain capacities, to increase the efficiency of the Army. In communicating * Embodied in Harrison to Secretary of War, p. 996.

these instructions to the generals of reserves the Bureau accompanied them with an order, of which the following is an extract:

SEPTEMBER 30.

GENERALS OF RESERVES:

Respectfully referred * * * to direct the officer of conscription to proceed immediately and with vigor to the completion of the enrollment of the free negroes in the State under your command, between the ages of eighteen and fifty, and to deal with them in accordance with the instructions herein contained. Enrolling officers will also be instructed to procure from the owner, by contract, as many of the slaves herein required from your State as can be obtained thereby, and to make the necessary arrangements to procure the deficit by impressment. If the Legislature of your State has passed any law for the collection of slaves for military service in the Confederate States, the Bureau desires to be immediately informed of its provisions. It is desired that the within instructions and the regulations that may be prepared by the Bureau or the general commanding, &c., and charged with the business of conscription for their enforcement, will not be published in any newspaper.

Under these orders no returns have yet been made to this Bureau, though repeatedly called for from the generals of reserves.

I have the honor to be, sir, your very respectful, obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,

Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 1. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, January 6, 1865.

I. Soldiers furloughed, who fail on their return home to report to the nearest enrolling officer, as required by paragraph II, General Orders, No. 141, 1863, will forfeit their furloughs, be arrested by enrolling officers, and returned to their commands as absentees without leave. Commanding officers will express this requirement and penalty upon the face of all furloughs thus issued.

II. When extensions of leaves or furloughs shall have once been recommended, under paragraph II, General Orders, No. 157, 1863, examining boards will not recommend further extensions, except after a personal examination by one of the Board of the officer or soldier certified to be incapacitated for duty. Where, however, this is impracticable, the Board will call on the enrolling officer of the county, who will make the examination in person, or through a subordinate, and report to the Board the facts of the case—all of which will be embodied in the certificates of recommendation.

III. Soldiers incapacitated for active duty in one arm of the service, upon evidence of such disability, may be transferred by the general commanding the army or department to which they belong to that service they prefer and for which they are best fitted. Medical examining boards, before retiring or recommending for discharge disabled soldiers, will consider the degree of their disability, with the view to their transfer under this order.

IV. Persons holding appointments as chaplains and drill-masters in the Provisional Army of the Confederate States, or as cadets in the C. S. Army, will report without delay by letter to this office their present assignment to duty, and by what authority they are so assigned. Any future change in their assignment will in like manner be reported by them.

V. Plans for hospital buildings will be submitted, through medical directors, for the approval of the Surgeon-General.

VI. Commanders of armies and departments and officers of the Conscript Bureau will not molest employes of the tax-in-kind service, the officers of which will be held responsible that men between eighteen and forty-five years are not employed therein, unless they are exempt or detailed because of disability.

VII. To prevent the loss from disease of animals in the service, cavalry and other private animals will be included by inspectors of field transportation in their inspections. They will dispose of those affected with contagious diseases, as prescribed by paragraph 925, Army Regulations. Those otherwise unfit for present service will be mustered out by the inspectors, or, as they may elect, sent from the field, to be recruited with the public animals. Commanding officers are required to send from their commands animals not mustered into the service. Inspectors will report all cases in which this order is violated.

VIII. Generals commanding armies and departments will require company commanders to furnish descriptive lists to soldiers sent to hospitals.

IX. Sick or wounded soldiers in hospitals may be paid, as heretofore, four months' pay, if due, upon receipts supported by their affidavits, but company commanders will provide them with descriptive lists before they leave their commands, if it be possible; if otherwise, they will as soon thereafter as practicable forward such lists to the surgeon in charge of the hospitals of which the soldiers may be inmates.

X. Articles of clothing issued during the year to soldiers will be stated, with the prices annexed, on company muster-rolls, upon which annual settlements on clothing accounts are made.

XI. Payment of the bounty of $50, allowed by the act of Congress approved December 11, 1861, will not be paid to persons between seventeen and fifty years subject to conscription. It will be limited to those not liable to service, who enter the Army for the war as non-commissioned officers, musicians, or privates. All who enter the general service from the reserves must do so by transfer, and in no case will bounty be paid upon such transfers or enlistments.

XII. Quartermasters performing duty exclusively as paymasters will be under the control of chief quartermasters of armies or military departments. They will not be subject to orders from other quartermasters. If from any cause the paymaster of a corps or division is unable to discharge the duties appertaining to his office, the chief quartermaster of the army with which such corps or division may be serving will designate a quartermaster or an assistant quartermaster to perform such duty temporarily, in which event the name of the officer so assigned will be communicated to the Quartermaster-General.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., January 6, 1865.

Hon. A. H. STEPHENS,

Vice-President of the Confederate States:

SIR: My recent illness and the arrearages of pressing business resulting therefrom have prevented an earlier answer to your letter of the 13th ultimo. The letter is much longer than seems necessary for an answer to my simple inquiry, asking to be informed which of my acts you referred to when you stated in your publication that "judging from my acts" you should think I belonged to the "class" who preferred Lincoln to McClellan. I find on perusal that many pages are occupied with an exposition of your views of public policy and of the points of difference which you suppose to exist between us in relation to the conduct of public affairs. You must pardon me for declining to enter into any controversy on this subject. It does not appear to me to be useful nor becoming the two highest executive officers of the Government, especially when the country is engaged in a foreign war.

You confine yourself to "two points only" in your answer. Neither of them seems to me to have any bearing on the question addressed to you. First, my "action in regard to the case of David F. Cable." Your comments on this are very strange, and your statement of facts imperfect. I give the facts in order of date.

April 9 you wrote me on the subject of Cable. Your letter reached me, I believe, on the 14th. April 16 General Bragg was instructed to cause Cable to be examined by a discreet officer, and if his story was found true to parole him and send him to you. April 18 General Bragg issued an order to Col. J. P. Jones, assistant adjutant-general at Charleston, directing him to send Captain Hammond to make the examination, and if proper act on the suggestion of sending him to you. April 19 I answered your letter, informing you of what had been done and suggesting my doubt whether the representations of this prisoner were true. April 27, your letter to me (received on the 3d of May) you "would wait for Cable a few days, in case he shall be paroled," and then start for Richmond. May 7, your letter to me (received on 21st) you learned from correspondence with Colonel Persons, commanding prisoners' camp, that "there was no prospect of Cable being able to visit you for some time," and you expected to start for Richmond "day after to-morrow." In the meantime Grant crossed the Rapidan, the series of terrible battles on which the fate of Richmond depended were being fought; and as you announced that you were on the eve of starting for Richmond, I had no reason for answering your letters, as it was fair to presume my answers would not reach you. You, however, did not come to Richmond, and did not inform me of your change of purpose. July 5, your letter to me, received on the 16th of same month. Cable died on the 16th, but I was not aware of the fact. In your letter you inclosed one from Cable dated on 21st of June, expressed surprise that he had not been examined, and urged "prompt attention to the case." July 16 I ordered inquiry made as to the cause of the delay, and directed the Secretary of War "to give this matter attention." July 20 report received from General Bragg's headquarters. On inquiry of Captain Hammond it was learned that he had never received the order to make the examination; that the order was presumed to have been lost in the disturbance of mail communication by enemy's cavalry operations. July 21, letter to you by Assistant Secretary of War, explaining the miscarriage of General Bragg's order, and communicating report of Cable's death.

In addition to the above correspondence the following letters were written to you from Andersonville: July 2, General Winder, in answer to your letter to him of 27th of June, informed you that the examination had not been made, and said: "I will take pains to inform myself as to the character of Mr. Cable, and will endeavor to give all the information to you about him that you desire." July 11 General Winder, in answer to your letter of 6th of July, again informs you that the examination by staff officer had not been made. "I presume the momentous events transpiring about Richmond have prevented it. I have taken some pains to inform myself about Mr. Cable and am satisfied that he would be a dangerous man to permit to go at large. I could not recommend that he be paroled." July 23 General Winder informed you that Cable "died a few days ago."

The above is, I believe, a sufficient statement of the facts. From them it appears that one of my "acts" from which you "judge" that I "preferred Lincoln to McClellan" was "my action" as above explained, in regard to a Yankee prisoner who died on the 16th of July, six weeks before McClellan was nominated as a candidate, six weeks before the platform of the Chicago Convention was framed, six weeks before anybody knew what candidate it would select or what principles it would announce. I make no comment on this.

But I cannot leave this point without remarking on the extraordinary inferences you are pleased to draw from what I omitted to say in my letter to you of the 19th of April, and the still more singular omission to draw the natural inference from what I did say. The "two things that struck you strange" were that I—said not one word either approving or disapproving on the subject of the propriety of having the conference he (Cable) sought, or the nature or character of the assurance that should be given him on his being permitted to visit me. Not a word was said on the policy indicated in my letter of our aiding and encouraging as far as possible in bringing into power at the North a party upon the principles stated in my letter. Your views upon this subject I had requested in view of the probable conference. The other thing in the letter that struck me as strange was that you should have thought that any staff officer was more suitable or competent to make an investigation into the truth of the prisoner's statements than the second officer in the Government.

To the first of the "strange things" I will presently give answer. As to the second, it scarcely seems possible that you should take umbrage at my not assigning to you a duty which was the appropriate function of a subordinate officer of the inspection service. You wrote to me that "if Mr. Cable's statement be true (which might be easily ascertained), it would be proper to grant him a parole until he can be exchanged." You further said, "If he shall be paroled, and it meets your approval, I will invite him to my house and confer with him," &c. It was plain that you did not know the man, and therefore suggested that the truth of his statements should be ascertained before he was paroled, and that he should visit you for conference after he was paroled. If you had intimated any willingness to go to the prison and ascertain the truth for yourself, you might have been assured by the readiness with which I accepted your proposal to visit Mr. Lincoln that I could have had no possible objection; nor can I suppose that you deem a permission from me necessary to authorize you to visit any Yankee prisoner at his prison. You certainly did not, from your letter, contemplate that I should do so imprudent a thing as to parole this man to go at large before examination into his character was had, nor did you ask to see him before his parole was granted. This "strange thing" that you found in my letter of the 19th of April is as unintelligible to me now as it ever could have appeared strange to you.

What I did say was, "It so often has happened that prisoners make representations which do not accord with the facts, and it seemed to me proper to make an inquiry into the case before action upon it." The plain inference that I took it for granted you would draw from this statement was that I did not believe the story of the prisoner; that I suspected it to be a trick to get out of prison, and I must confess that I wondered how you could attach any importance or credit to the tale of a man who was taken prisoner with the troops that had been sent to invade Florida from South Carolina coast, and who, notwithstanding his being captured in arms, represented himself as on a mission from the peace party of the Northwest. The report of General Winder shows that I was not mistaken in my estimate of the prisoner, and it was because I did not deem his tale at all probable, sir, that I judged it useless to enter into any exposition of the proper mode of treating with him until the result of the examination into his case was made known. This is my answer, and to the inferences that you draw from my omission to repeat to you in a private letter the desire that I had often publicly manifested for the only peace which we both declared to be possible, namely—peace with independence and eternal separation from the enemies whom, I doubt not, we equally desire to drive from our country.

Your second "point," sir, may be more summarily dismissed. I made a speech at Columbia, S. C., on the call of the citizens early in October last. Its contents I do not pretend accurately to remember; and I never saw a report of it until on receipt of your letter I caused search to be made for it, and it is now before me in the Charleston Mercury of the 7th of October.

You first say that you judged I "preferred Lincoln to McClellan" because in this speech I opposed the scheme of a convention of all the States, North and South, as a means of obtaining peace. I cannot spare the time to refute a conclusion so manifestly without warrant in the premises from which it is drawn. Your next reason, that "the tone and substance of your (my) speech there upon the subject of peace was, in short, that there was no prospect of peace but only by the sword; that a peace party of the North could only be made by a success of our armies over them;" that "the only way to make spaniels civil is to whip them." If my speech were really such as represented by you in this extract, if it had really been directed against the peace party at the North, this fact would not bear out your assertion that my "acts" showed a "preference for Lincoln over McClellan;" but my speech was not such as you represent it, and I now quote the passage from which you have torn a few words that form the latter half of a sentence. I said:

Does any one believe that Yankees are to be conciliated by terms of concession? Does any man imagine that we can conquer the Yankees by retreating before them, or do you not all know that the only way to make spaniels civil is to whip them?

And toward the close of the speech I plainly intimated my desire for the success of the peace party in the following words:

Let fresh victories crown our arms, and the peace party (if there be such) at the North can elect its candidates.

These passages must suffice without comment to satisfy any fair-judging man whether you have correctly stated its "tone and substance."

The truth is, sir, that your inferences from this speech are so strained and unnatural as to evince the difficulty you found in answering my simple question for a statement of any "acts" of mine on which you thought proper to base your published assertion.

The speech at Columbia in the report before me is an appeal to the people to trust to their own courage and fortitude for the maintenance of their rights. It was delivered after the publication of McClellan's letter avowing his purpose to force reunion by war if we declined reconstruction when offered, and therefore warned the people against delusive hopes of peace from any other influence than that to be exerted by the manifestation of an unconquerable spirit. There is nothing in the speech, as I now read it, that I would wish unsaid, and there is not in it the remotest allusion to a choice between Lincoln and McClellan. It does, however, contain denunciations of Lincoln, and no mention of McClellan is to be found in it.

I now say that, knowing I had never done an act nor uttered a word that could justify you in attributing to me a preference for Lincoln over McClellan, I addressed you my note of 21st of November in the hope that you would admit your mistake.

I must accept your letter of the 13th ultimo as a substantial admission that you have no just ground for your statement, though it would have been much more acceptable to me to find the admission made frankly instead of having to infer it from the unsubstantial character of the "points" on which you seek to base it.

I close by expressing regret that this correspondence should have been forced on me. I am aware that I was unfortunate enough to incur your disapproval of my policy. I should not, however, have departed from my rule of bearing all animadversion in silence, and leaving my defense to the future, if it had not seemed to me that a publication by the Vice-President, intended quite plainly to disparage me and to inspire distrust in me among the people, was calculated to do public injury. It was therefore necessary to show, as this correspondence has done, that your statement that you judged from my "acts" that "I preferred Lincoln to McClellan" was unfounded; and that you are equally without justification for the expression in the letter to which this is a reply, that you "could form no other conclusion" than that it was my intention in my remarks at Columbia to "strengthen" among the people of the North "the opponents of peace instead of its friends."

I have felt much reluctance in calling your attention to the subject, as my earnest wish is, if it be impossible to avert, at least to postpone to the close of the war all discussion or dispute with those who are united with me in a common hostility against the enemies of our country. I assure you that it would be to me a source of the sincerest pleasure to see you devoting your great and admitted ability exclusively to upholding the confidence and animating the spirit of the people to unconquerable resistance against their foes.

I am, very respectfully and truly, yours,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA,
 ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Columbia, S. C., January 6, 1865.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have been ordered by His Excellency the Governor of South Carolina to give you notice that under the third section of the act of the General Assembly of this State, entitled "An act to authorize the Governor to require the exemption of certain State officers and other persons from Confederate service," and for the purposes of the said section of said act, he requires the exemption of the following persons for the proper police of the State:

Benjamin A. Andrews, Jones' company, Williams' battalion, Reserve Corps of the State.

Irvine Keith Heyward, Ashley Dragoons, Colcock's regiment South Carolina cavalry.

I am also directed by His Excellency to forward to you a copy of the act of the General Assembly referred to, which you will find herewith inclosed.*

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. C. GARLINGTON,

Adjutant and Inspector General of South Carolina.

[Indorsement.]

JANUARY 19, 1865.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY:

This claim of right to exempt soldiers in service cannot be conceded. Will you, if you concur, prepare a proper answer.

J. A. S.

PURCHASING OFFICE, FIRST DIVISION OF VIRGINIA,
Charlottesville, January 6, 1865.

Maj. R. W. N. NOLAND,

Chief Commissary of Subsistence, Second Dist. of Virginia:

MAJOR: Permit me respectfully to call your attention to a subject which needs immediate attention. The interest of the Government in the division under my charge is suffering incalculable injury for want of funds to relieve its indebtedness. I now owe $1,200,000. A great portion of this sum has been due since early last spring. During the past summer the railroad connections were cut by the enemy, and large supplies were promptly loaned by the people to sustain the Army in its emergency. From the exhausted condition of the country I have been unable to return a very large proportion of these borrowed stores. They have expressed a readiness to receive payment instead, yet in but few instances have I had it in my power even to do this, for want of funds. Whilst such delay naturally causes much dissatisfaction and want of confidence in those who have heretofore acted with patriotic energy in support of the Government, the future is more unpromising. The recent order to purchase at contract rates can avail little, with nothing to pay, and the impressing power useless for the same reason. Hence my position and that of my agents is painfully embarrassing. Our usefulness to the Government (by an increasing distrust on the part of the people in intentions to fulfill obligations) is seriously impaired. I therefore earnestly appeal in behalf of the interest of the Government, that of its people, and in justice to myself and agents, that funds be furnished to liquidate my present liabilities and prevent a future recurrence of this condition of affairs.

Respectfully, yours,

CHARLES S. TAYLOR,

Captain and Assistant Commissary of Subsistence.

---

* See p. 980.

[First indorsement.]

The attention of the chief commissary of subsistence of Virginia is called to the inclosed letter of Captain Taylor. Have made repeated requisitions for funds to meet the indebtedness of the district, but these requisitions have never been fully met. I have hardly been furnished with an amount sufficient to defray current expenses, and thus the indebtedness of the district has increased, and loud complaints are constantly made against the agents of the Government for a non-compliance with their contracts. This condition of things has seriously interfered with purchases, and has prevented altogether, in several instances, impressment of subsistence that ought to have gone to the Army.

R. W. N. NOLAND,

Major and Chief Commissary of Subsistence, 2d Dist. of Virginia.

[Second indorsement.]

OFFICE CHIEF COMMISSARY OF SUBSISTENCE FOR VIRGINIA,
Richmond, January 23, 1865.

Respectfully referred to the Commissary-General of Subsistence for consideration and such reference as he may deem proper, and with the remark that there is no district or division in Virginia from which similar complaints are not made. We owe enormously, and until we pay this indebtedness we cannot purchase further.

B. P. NOLAND,

Major and Chief Commissary of Subsistence for Virginia.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Richmond, Va., January 7, 1865.

[Hon. J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:]

SIR: I wish to call your attention to a subject of great moment to the States of Florida and Georgia, and one that will have a favorable influence upon the Confederate Government itself. Savannah being now in the possession of the enemy, and likely to remain so—for I cannot see any immediate or remote prospect of relief, although there may be expectations in this respect not shared in by me, the value of which is well known to our authorities. But assuming, as I do, that Savannah is lost to us now for and during the war, it will be seen, then, that the long line of roadway reaching from Savannah to Thomasville is rendered useless to us, and will remain so for and during the war. The counties of Monroe, Lowndes, Brooks, Echols, and adjacent counties are rich and abound in subsistence stores, nearly the whole of which, with the supplies contained in the rich counties of Florida adjoining Georgia, will be lost to the Government if some way is not provided to secure its transportation. The nearest railroad connection is at Albany, Ga., the terminus of the Southwestern line of railroad. The distance from Thomasville to Albany, Ga., by the wagon road is about fifty-six miles. The country intermediate these points is low, flat, and sandy—not marshy. It is covered with a luxuriant growth of yellow pine. There will be but little heavy grading; the timber will be found by the road-side. I would recommend the building of a road from Albany to Thomasville at once.

The supply of iron could be obtained from the Savannah and Thomasville road, tearing up the rails at a point nearest Savannah and working west toward Thomasville until a sufficient number of rails were taken up. When finished we would have a line of railroad from Macon to Thomasville and beyond Valdosta, in Lowndes County, a distance from Thomasville east about seventy-five miles. This would connect with the Florida system of railroads by means of the Live Oak railroad, just on the eve of completion. Thus the stores from this rich country and a great part of Florida would at once seek an outlet over this line. The transportation of troops and munitions of war, as the theater of action is constricted, would of itself recommend the subject to your immediate and favorable consideration.

Respectfully, yours,

WM. E. SMITH,
Member of Congress from Georgia.

I concur in the foregoing views.

R. B. HILTON,
Member of Congress from Florida.

[Indorsement.]

ENGINEER BUREAU,
January 13, 1865.

Respectfully returned to the Honorable Secretary of War.

The connection of Albany with Thomasville, Ga., by rail would have many advantages, but the resources of the country will not justify undertaking a work of that magnitude at this time. One of the main supplies to be expected from Florida is beef. The cattle can be driven over that distance with less expense than they could be transported. The amount of corn in Southwest Georgia is greater than existing roads can transport. Troops going to and from Florida can be marched over the line proposed.

J. F. GILMER,
Major-General and Chief of Engineer Bureau.

---

RICHMOND, January 7, 1865.

General R. E. LEE:

DEAR GENERAL: I regret that in the succession of stirring events since the commencement of the present war I have had so little opportunity to renew our former, to me at least, exceedingly agreeable acquaintance, and particularly that I have so rarely if ever met with a suitable occasion to interchange views with you upon the important public questions which have been and still are pressing upon us with such intense interest.

It would have demanded, indeed, in view of the scarcely less than awful weight of care and responsibility Providence and your country have thrown upon you, and which you will pardon me for saying has been grandly met, no ordinarily favorable opportunity to have induced me to intrude upon your overburdened time and attention for such a purpose; and in approaching you now in this form upon a subject which I deem may prove of vital importance I offer no other apology than the momentous character of the issue forced upon the mind and heart of every Southern patriot.

I refer to the great question now stirring the public mind as to the expediency and propriety of bringing to bear against our relentless enemy the element of military strength supposed to be found in our negro population; in other words, and more precisely, the wisdom and sound policy, under existing circumstances, of converting such portions of this population as may be required into soldiers, to aid in maintaining our great struggle for independence and national existence.

The subject is one which recent events have forced upon our attention with intense interest, and in my judgment we ought not longer to defer its solution; and although the President in his late annual message has brought it to the attention of Congress, it is manifestly a subject in which the several States of the Confederacy must and ought to act the most prominent part, both in giving the question its proper solution and in carrying out any plan that may be devised on the subject.

As a member of the Virginia Senate, having to act upon the subject, I have given it much earnest and anxious reflection, and I do not hesitate to say here, in advance of the full discussion which it will doubtless undergo, that the general objections to the proposition itself, as well as the practical difficulties in the way of carrying it out, have been greatly lessened as I have more thoroughly examined them.

But it is not to be disguised that public sentiment is greatly divided on the subject; and besides many real objections, a mountain of prejudices growing out of our ancient modes of regarding the institution of Southern slavery will have to be met and overcome before we can attain to anything like that degree of unanimity so extremely desirable in this and all else connected with our great struggle.

In our former contests for liberty and independence he who was then at the head of our armies, and who became the Father of his Country, did not hesitate to give his advice on all great subjects involving the success of that contest and the safety and welfare of his country, and in so doing perhaps rendered more essential service than he did in the field; nor do I perceive why, upon such a subject and in such a crisis as the present, we should not have the benefit of your sound judgment and matured wisdom.

Pardon me, therefore, for asking, to be used not only for my own guidance, but publicly as the occasion may require, Do you think that by a wisely devised plan and judicious selection negro soldiers can be made effective and reliable in maintaining this war in behalf of the Southern States?

Do you think the calling into the service of such members of this population as the exigency may demand would affect injuriously to any appreciable or material extent the institution of Southern slavery? Would not the introduction of this element of strength into our military operations justify in some degree a more liberal scale of exemptions or details, and by thus relieving from active service in the field a portion of the intelligent and directing labor of the country (as seems to be needed) have a beneficial bearing upon the question of subsistence and other supplies?

Would not, in your judgment, the introduction of such a policy increase in other regards our power of defense against the relentless and barbarous warfare the enemy is now waging against us?

These are but some of the leading inquiries which suggest themselves. But I beg you, general, if, from a sense of duty and the promptings of your elevated patriotism, overriding all motives of unwise and ill-timed delicacy, you consent to reply to these inquiries for the purpose before frankly indicated, that you will give me your views, as fully as your engagements will allow, upon every other question or point of inquiry that may occur to you as likely to conduce to a wise decision of this grave and, as deemed by many, vitally important subject.

With the highest esteem, your obedient servant,

ANDREW HUNTER.

HDQRS. GEORGIA RESERVES AND MIL. DIST. OF GEORGIA,
Macon, Ga., January 8, 1865.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: Your letter of the 30th of December received by yesterday's mail. I beg to assure you that I have spared no efforts or pains to prosecute vigorously the recruiting of our Army through the conscript camp. It is true, as you say, there are many liable to conscription who have not been reached, and for reasons I have heretofore given I fear never will be reached. Rest assured, however, that I will not cease my efforts in that regard. In response to your inquiries, how our Army is to be recruited, I refer with strength and confidence to the policy of opening the door for volunteers. I have so long and so urgently pressed this matter that I feel reluctant even to allude to it, and yet I should not be true to my strong convictions of duty if I permitted any opportunity to pass without urging and pressing it upon the proper authorities. It is in my opinion not only the best but the only mode of saving the Army, and every day it is postponed weakens its strength and diminishes the number that could be had by it. The freest, broadest, and most unrestricted system of volunteering is the true policy, and cannot be too soon resorted to. I think that the proposition to make soldiers of our slaves is the most pernicious idea that has been suggested since the war began. It is to me a source of deep mortification and regret to see the name of that good and great man and soldier, General R. E. Lee, given as authority for such a policy. My first hour of despondency will be the one in which that policy shall be adopted. You cannot make soldiers of slaves, nor slaves of soldiers. The moment you resort to negro soldiers your white soldiers will be lost to you; and one secret of the favor with which the proposition is received in portions of the Army is the hope that when negroes go into the Army they will be permitted to retire. It is simply a proposition to fight the balance of the war with negro troops. You can't keep white and black troops together, and you can't trust negroes by themselves. It is difficult to get negroes enough for the purpose indicated in the President's message, much less enough for an Army. Use all the negroes you can get, for all the purposes for which you need them, but don't arm them. The day you make soldiers of them is the beginning of the end of the revolution. If slaves will make good soldiers our whole theory of slavery is wrong—but they won't make soldiers. As a class they are wanting in every qualification of a soldier. Better by far to yield to the demands of England and France and abolish slavery, and thereby purchase their aid, than to resort to this policy, which leads as certainly to ruin and subjugation as it is adopted; you want more soldiers, and hence the proposition to take negroes into the Army. Before resorting to it, at least try every reasonable mode of getting white soldiers. I do not entertain a doubt that you can by the volunteering policy get more men into the service than you can arm. I have more fears about arms than about men. For heaven's sake try it before you fill with gloom and despondency the hearts of many of our truest and most devoted men by resorting to the suicidal policy of arming our slaves.

Having answered the inquiries of your letter, let me volunteer in a few words a suggestion. Popularize your administration by some just concessions to the strong convictions of public opinion. Mark you, I do not say yield to popular clamor, but concede something to the earnest convictions of an overwhelming, and, I will say, an enlightened public opinion. First, yield your opposition to volunteering in the form and manner which I have heretofore urged; second, restore General Johnston to the command of the Army of Tennessee, and return General Beauregard to South Carolina.

With Lee in Virginia, Johnston here, and Beauregard in South Carolina you restore confidence and at once revive the hopes of the people. At present I regret to say that gloom and despondency rule the hour, and bitter opposition to the Administration, mingled with disaffection and disloyalty, is manifesting itself. With a dash of the pen the President can revolutionize this state of things, and I earnestly beseech him to do it.

Sincerely, yours,

HOWELL COBB,
Major-General.

---

CUTHBERT, GA., January 10, 1865.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS:

SIR: I think you said in your speech in Macon, Ga., that you read all letters from your friends, though you could not undertake to respond to them; so, though a stranger, I hope you will pardon me for these few lines. I will premise by saying that I was a Democrat and secessionist in '60 and '61, and all that has transpired since has but served to convince me that I was right—to confirm me in the faith. I am an agriculturist by profession, well stricken in years, and have lost two noble sons in this bloody war. Sir, I think the matter of the highest moment now is to take measures to recruit our armies for next spring's campaign. How can this be done is the great overshadowing question. Congress and the State Legislatures have put in service all white men between the ages of sixteen and sixty years. We can't get them from the Old World or from any other country. We are thrown upon our own resources. The recruits must come from our negroes, nowhere else. We should away with pride of opinion; away with false pride, and promptly take hold of all the means that God has placed within our reach to help us through this struggle—a bloody war for the right of self-government. Some people say negroes will not fight. I say they will fight. They fought at Ocean Pond, Honey Hill, and other places. The enemy fights us with the negroes, and they will do very well to fight the Yankees. But some say that will be giving up the question. What, giving up the question to grip it the tighter? Giving up slavery to have slaves defend it? To have them shoot down the enemies of slavery? Strange notion, indeed! From the outset of the war we have used the negro to defend the institution by making him raise provisions for the Army, &c. Let him be used still further, and put the sword and the musket in his hand, and make him hew down and shoot down those who come to destroy the institution and enslave us. Would this be giving up the question? I opine not. True, our slaves are our property. True, too, that our Government takes our fathers, our brothers, and our sons and exposes them to shot and shell and sword, to mutilation and to death, in defense of our dear country. Why can't it take our property for the same purpose? He who values his property higher than his life and independence is a poor, sordid wretch; a gold worshiper; a slave in spirit.

Sir, our Congress should make haste and put as many negro soldiers in the field as you and General R. E. Lee may think necessary. I would not make a soldier of the negro if it could be helped, but we are reduced to this last resort. It is not worth while to blink or evade the question. The negro must be put into the Army or we shall be subjugated by the hated foe. Demoralization is rife in our armies, and among the people at home the sign of succumbing may be seen. Reconstruction and separate State action is boldly talked, and treason is stalking in the land. Sir, I tell you these unwelcome facts not to discourage you, but to put you on the alert that you may prepare to meet them. I am for fighting out this war to the bitter end. If we had been united as we should have been, the hated foe would have been driven from our country long ago. Governor Joseph E. Brown, by his perverse and factious course, has done our cause much harm. To some extent he has divided and broken the spirit of the people. Sir, let us not pass under the yoke of Lincoln; rather let our country be ceded to France and England. I had rather live with any people than the Yankees, and so every one talks whom I hear speak on the subject. I will close, and let my letter be short. I could say more. God preserve you and give you good health.

Your friend,

SAMUEL CLAYTON.

---

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., January 10, 1865.

Maj. Gen. D. H. MAURY,
Comdg. Dept. of Alabama, Mississippi, and East Louisiana:

GENERAL: The letter of Maj. M. O. Tracy, Thirteenth Louisiana Regiment, relating to the subject of recruiting prisoners of war, has been forwarded to this Department with your indorsement asking instructions in such cases.

The Secretary of War directs me to say that the Department considers it desirable in general that prisoners of war, if received as recruits, should not be placed in new organizations nor collected in large numbers in those now existing, but should be distributed as much as possible among companies, regiments, and brigades of undoubted fidelity.

In one case in which a new battalion was formed from such material a conspiracy was discovered; and although it was promptly crushed, yet it was found expedient to disband the battalion.

Nevertheless, the experiment is now in course of trial by other officers, who believe that by recruiting chiefly among Catholic Irish and other foreigners and obtaining the influence of the Catholic priesthood they may secure faithful soldiers.

As to the material to be received as recruits, it is recommended that Catholic Irish be preferred, and next to them other foreigners.

Men born in the United States should not be received unless known to have sincere and positive predilections for the South. Natives of the Southern States may be received more freely.

After giving these general instructions the Honorable Secretary sums up his views in the following words:

That if separate organizations be ventured at all, they be only small battalions; that in recruiting largely for a brigade or any much reduced organization, every possible precaution should be taken in selection, and that some previous trial of these men should be made where they would be surrounded by our men before they are fully relied on in positions of trust and importance.

Very respectfully, general, your obedient servant,

JNO. BLAIR HOGE,

Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,

January 11, 1865.

Hon. ANDREW HUNTER,
Richmond, Va.:

DEAR SIR: I have received your letter of the 7th instant, and without confining myself to the order of your interrogatories, will endeavor to answer them by a statement of my views on the subject. I shall be most happy if I can contribute to the solution of a question in which I feel an interest commensurate with my desire for the welfare and happiness of our people.

Considering the relation of master and slave, controlled by humane laws and influenced by Christianity and an enlightened public sentiment, as the best that can exist between the white and black races while intermingled as at present in this country, I would deprecate any sudden disturbance of that relation unless it be necessary to avert a greater calamity to both. I should therefore prefer to rely upon our white population to preserve the ratio between our forces and those of the enemy, which experience has shown to be safe. But in view of the preparations of our enemies, it is our duty to provide for continued war and not for a battle or a campaign, and I fear that we cannot accomplish this without overtaxing the capacity of our white population.

Should the war continue under existing circumstances, the enemy may in course of time penetrate our country and get access to a large part of our negro population. It is his avowed policy to convert the able-bodied men among them into soldiers, and to emancipate all. The success of the Federal arms in the South was followed by a proclamation of President Lincoln for 280,000 men, the effect of which will be to stimulate the Northern States to procure as substitutes for their own people the negroes thus brought within their reach. Many have already been obtained in Virginia, and should the fortune of war expose more of her territory, the enemy would gain a large accession to his strength. His progress will thus add to his numbers, and at the same time destroy slavery in a manner most pernicious to the welfare of our people. Their negroes will be used to hold them in subjection, leaving the remaining force of the enemy free to extend his conquest. Whatever may be the effect of our employing negro troops, it cannot be as mischievous as this. If it end in subverting slavery it will be accomplished by ourselves, and we can devise the means of alleviating the evil consequences to both races. I think, therefore, we must decide whether slavery shall be extinguished by our enemies and the slaves be used against us, or use them ourselves at the risk of the effects which may be produced upon our social institutions. My own opinion is that we should employ them without delay. I believe that with proper regulations they can be made efficient soldiers. They possess the physical qualifications in an eminent degree. Long habits of obedience and subordination, coupled with the moral influence which in our country the white man possesses over the black, furnish an excellent foundation for that discipline which is the best guaranty of military efficiency. Our chief aim should be to secure their fidelity.

There have been formidable armies composed of men having no interest in the cause for which they fought beyond their pay or the hope of plunder. But it is certain that the surest foundation upon which the fidelity of an army can rest, especially in a service which imposes peculiar hardships and privations, is the personal interest of the soldier in the issue of the contest. Such an interest we can give our negroes by giving immediate freedom to all who enlist, and freedom at the end of the war to the families of those who discharge their duties faithfully (whether they survive or not), together with the privilege of residing at the South. To this might be added a bounty for faithful service.

We should not expect slaves to fight for prospective freedom when they can secure it at once by going to the enemy, in whose service they will incur no greater risk than in ours. The reasons that induce me to recommend the employment of negro troops at all render the effect of the measures I have suggested upon slavery immaterial, and in my opinion the best means of securing the efficiency and fidelity of this auxiliary force would be to accompany the measure with a well-digested plan of gradual and general emancipation. As that will be the result of the continuance of the war, and will certainly occur if the enemy succeed, it seems to me most advisable to adopt it at once, and thereby obtain all the benefits that will accrue to our cause.

The employment of negro troops under regulations similar in principle to those above indicated would, in my opinion, greatly increase our military strength and enable us to relieve our white population to some extent. I think we could dispense with the reserve forces except in cases of necessity.

It would disappoint the hopes which our enemies base upon our exhaustion, deprive them in a great measure of the aid they now derive from black troops, and thus throw the burden of the war upon their own people. In addition to the great political advantages that would result to our cause from the adoption of a system of emancipation, it would exercise a salutary influence upon our whole negro population, by rendering more secure the fidelity of those who become soldiers, and diminishing the inducements to the rest to abscond.

I can only say in conclusion that whatever measures are to be adopted should be adopted at once. Every day's delay increases the difficulty. Much time will be required to organize and discipline the men, and action may be deferred until it is too late.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. E. LEE,
General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., January 11, 1865.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

SIR: I have received the following resolution of the House of Representatives referred by Your Excellency to this Department:

Resolved, That the President be respectfully requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to inform this House whether or not the Secretary of War, or any other officer of the Executive government, has ever granted permits or safe-conducts to one or more youths of the Confederate States who were about to attain the age that would render them liable to conscription or military service to go beyond the limits of this Confederacy, and if any youth or youths of the age designated have been or are about to be suffered to depart from the Confederacy to inform this House of the reasons for their being permitted to go abroad.

Some delay in replying has been caused by the desire to make as thorough a research as possible for any cases to which the resolution may be applicable. The only officers besides myself who, in the practice of the Department, exercise the power of granting passports to leave the Confederacy are the provost-marshal of this city and the Assistant Secretary of War. Reports from both accompany this and give full information of the only cases acted on by them to which the resolution can be supposed to have application.* These cases were acted on in the regular course of official business without reference to me and without knowledge on my part until the inquiries caused by the resolution of the House.

The only cases which are recollected, or after a search can be found to have been acted on by me, are two:

First. That of John S. Poulson, allowed in March, 1864. He was a son of a citizen of Accomac County, resident within the lines of the enemy, represented at that time to be sixteen years of age, and satisfactorily shown by medical testimony to be a victim of epilepsy, of weak intellect and physical disability. It was sought to restore him to his father's care, and a passport was given him to pass by the boat bearing flag of truce. As this required the assent of the Federal authorities likewise, it seems to have been ineffectual, as the same youth appears subsequently to have applied to the provost-marshal for a more general pass, and is among those named by him as having received passports. He had then attained the age of seventeen years, but, as appears from the provost-marshal's report, was from disease unfit for military service.

Second. The case of Henry Grant, a youth of sixteen years of age, on the 24th of September, 1864, the son of a most estimable and loyal citizen in this city. He was stated to be backward in his studies and so diverted by the incidents and distractions of the times as to make his application almost hopeless. His uncle, formerly an officer of our Army, now residing in England in the prosecution of business important to the Department, had offered to receive him and see to his proper training and education. This passport was allowed December 6, 1864, on the understanding, however, that should the war continue he should be liable to recall on attaining military age. I am not positively informed whether his passport has been used, but presume it has been.

It will be seen that no passports have been granted in cases where it can be properly said "youths were about to attain the age that would render them liable to conscription" to go beyond the limits of the Confederacy. Where there was even an approach to that age care was observed to obviate evasion of future liability to service. At the same time it is deemed not inappropriate to add that no law or obligation exists by which the Department is required to refuse passports to go to neutral countries to any loyal citizen of the Confederate States not liable to military service.

---

*Accompanying documents not found.

Passports are required, from considerations of military police alone, to preclude the passage of dangerous or disaffected persons, and it might, perhaps, with justice be deemed an offensive and gratuitous presumption to attribute to any loyal citizen the design of evading a patriotic duty, as also an unwarrantable assumption of authority by the Department to preclude expatriation or intercourse with neutral countries by the refusal of passports to those not liable to military service. So high a prerogative, it may be justly claimed, can only be imparted, and should only be exercised, under the regulation of law. If therefore it be deemed important that passports be refused (except from military police) to any class of our citizens, it is due alike to the Department and the citizen that it should be prescribed by appropriate legislation.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

---

RICHMOND, VA., January 14, 1865.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

In response to your resolution of the 8th of November, 1864, I herewith transmit, for your information, a communication from Hon. Howell Cobb, who was President of the Provisional Congress, relative to the preparation of copies of the Journals of that body, and of the Proceedings of the Convention which framed the Provisional and Permanent Constitutions of the Confederate States. And I invite your attention to the suggestions he makes in reference to funds to be expended in the further prosecution of the work.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

[Inclosure.]

HDQRS. GEORGIA RESERVES AND MIL. DIST. OF GEORGIA,
Macon, Ga., December 17, 1864.

Hon. JEFFERSON DAVIS,
President, &c., Richmond, Va.:

SIR: In response to a resolution of the House of Representatives of Congress of the 8th of November last, asking for information in reference to the Journals, &c., of the Provisional Congress, &c., I beg leave respectfully to report: -

In compliance with that resolution I employed Mr. J. J. Hooper, clerk of the Provisional Congress, to do the work. The papers were already in his possession; and I regarded him, under the circumstances, as the most suitable person to undertake it. In a short time he died, leaving the work almost untouched and the papers scattered and difficult of access. I then employed Maj. John C. Whitner, of West Point, Ala., a most faithful and competent person, who immediately entered upon the discharge of the duty, and who has devoted his time earnestly to the business from that period to the present time. I herewith inclose his report, which is so full and satisfactory, that it is unnecessary for me to add anything by way of explanation of the causes which have led to the delay in completing the work.

I would respectfully call the attention of Congress to the fact that Major Whitner has up to this time received no compensation for his services, and has, in fact, advanced money from his own funds for necessary expenditures. I would recommend that the amount which he returned to the Treasury of the old issue be at once placed in his hands, and that an additional appropriation of $20,000 be made to complete the work. This sum is indicated without consultation with Major Whitner; and it may not be sufficient, in view of the present high prices; but at present I will not ask for a larger sum. I would also recommend that the other requests of Major Whitner should be complied with by Congress, as they are both reasonable and proper.

It is but simple justice to myself to state that before and since the adjournment of the Provisional Congress I have been in the constant military service of the country, and therefore had no time to give the business my personal attention. It is at the same time due to Major Whitner to say that he has spared no effort or pains to do the work as rapidly as circumstances beyond his control would admit. I am sure that I could not have procured the services of a more faithful or competent officer.

I am, very respectfully, yours, &c.,

HOWELL COBB,
President of the Provisional Congress.

[Sub-inclosure.]

AUGUSTA, GA., November 18, 1864.

General HOWELL COBB,
Macon, Ga.:

GENERAL: In compliance with the resolution adopted by the House of Representatives on the 8th instant, which you have referred to me, asking the President to "inform Congress whether the Hon. Howell Cobb, President of the Provisional Congress, has complied with the act of 17th of February, 1862, by which he was instructed to have prepared two copies of the Journals of Congress and the Proceedings of the Convention which framed the Provisional and Permanent Constitutions of the Confederate States, one copy of which was to be deposited in the office of the Department of Justice; and if not, to communicate to Congress any information he may have as to the present state of the work; also whether the originals of the Journals have been sealed and deposited for preservation with the Secretary of State, in accordance with law," I have the honor to make the following statement:

As soon as I received the boxes containing the papers belonging to the Provisional Congress I entered upon the work of complying with the law above referred to. Much matter, as I have before informed you, was missing—all or nearly all the Journals of the Convention and many important papers forming a part of the Journals, as well as some of the Journals themselves of the Congress. It was some time before any of these could be found; and for securing them at all I am indebted to the cordial assistance rendered by Messrs. Robert E. Dixon and A. R. Lamar, both at one time connected with the Provisional Congress as assistant clerks. Mr. Dixon informed me that he himself as clerk had copied the Proceedings of the Convention in a bound book, which, however, could not be found. Fortunately he had preserved in his possession the originals from which this copy was made, only a few being missing. These missing Journals he was doubtless prevented from sending to me by his sudden death, and it has been but comparatively recently that I have gotten possession of them.

Many papers, such as messages, reports, resolutions, treaties, memorials, communications, petitions, &c., referred to and forming a part of the regular proceedings of Congress, and which had probably been slightly attached or only placed within the leaves of the original Journals, could not be found amongst the papers in the boxes sent me. Through the courtesy and labor of the gentlemen above mentioned and others, I hope the most, if not all, have been gathered up. Only in one case so far, and that not important, have I failed to get the original paper referred to or an authentic copy. Many of these papers also were gathered up by Mr. Dixon, and were in his possession at the time of his death, and have since been secured through the courtesy of his family and friends.

The cause of the confused and scattered condition of these papers I cannot explain. The lamented death of Hon. J. J. Hooper, to whom the work was first committed, together with the general confusion then existing in Richmond in consequence of the near approach of the enemy and the sending off to other points important Government papers, had doubtless much to do with it. Mr. Hooper had but barely entered upon this work—possibly not long enough to gather up what was necessary for its accurate completion.

These matters have delayed me very much—far more than would at first appear. For instance, whilst writing any day's proceedings I find an important document referred to missing. A thorough search through all the mass in my possession shows it is not on hand. Not knowing its length, it is impossible for me to leave room for it. I must therefore necessarily delay further copying until that paper is found, which may be at Richmond or elsewhere. This occurring frequently and involving in some cases months of search, I have been delayed in a most annoying manner. I endeavored to procure assistance at first, but, unable to furnish exemption, no one would remain with me, and but for the voluntary aid of Messrs. Dixon and Lamar and other gentlemen I don't see how I could have gotten on.

Another cause of delay has been the recent movements of the enemy. As you directed me to take good care of these papers, I left Atlanta about a month before its fall and went to West Point. Hearing of a threatened raid upon that place, I went farther down into Alabama, and was surrounded and cut off by Rousseau's raid. Fortunately everything escaped, and I have all in safety here.

You placed in my hands $2,000. Of this I expended $370 for materials. The remainder, $1,630, I deposited with J. W. Duncan, depositary in Atlanta, about the last of March, in order to have it exchanged for new currency, and sent the certificate on to the Secretary of the Treasury, but never received any order on the depositary for the amount in new issue. I would respectfully ask your attention to this, as I have had to use my own means in paying expenses.

I have written up a portion of the Proceedings of the Convention and two-thirds of the Journals of Congress, both open and secret. If not interrupted, I will soon complete one copy, which will enable me to deposit the originals, as required by law, and then rapidly work up the other copy. I trust all missing papers have been secured necessary to the accuracy of the work.

I would respectfully call your attention to the fact that I have been working on this business over a year, and have received no compensation, nor do I know what I am to receive. I would request a fixed pay and a return of amounts already expended.

As you are aware, I have frequently been interrupted by the military, though through your influence have generally been relieved. Once, however, I had to submit to examination and discharge for physical disability by a board of conscript surgeons. I beg you would secure for me from Congress special exemption whilst engaged on this work, with privilege of going to places of safety from those threatened by the enemy. The importance of this must be apparent, both for the security of the work and its early completion. If possible, I would like to have the appointment of an assistant, and would recommend Clinton I. Brown, esq., who has already given me voluntary aid; has been pronounced unfit for field service, and would add no expense whatever to the Government. This would enable me to proceed more rapidly, and at the same time have the originals arranged preparatory to early turning them over to the Government.

It is impossible to express my deep concern to have this work finished, and thus be relieved of so cumbrous and at the same time important responsibility. You have repeatedly urged upon me the importance of its early completion; yet I have not hesitated to take time for gathering all important materials, believing that a full and accurate record of its proceedings was the first object aimed at by the Provisional Congress. To secure this delays have been unavoidable; but I think they will not occur again.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

JNO. C. WHITNER.

---

COLUMBIA, S. C., January 15, 1865.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,

Secretary of War:

SIR: I have used the detention forced upon me at this place by the condition of the roads in the attempt to effect some reasonable adjustment of the slave labor levy, so seriously impeded by the Legislature of the State, and, as I feared, by the temper of the Executive and the people. I have the honor to inclose you certain documents bearing on the matter.

After repeated and very full conferences with the Governor he has submitted to me the report of the State agent as the exposition of the law, the Executive policy in connection with the subject, and the probable mode of meeting the Confederate requisition.

The accompanying letter of Major Melton (commandant conscripts) will exhibit his view as to the probabilities of obtaining slaves in South Carolina under the instructions of December 12, 1864. I commend Major Melton's note to your careful attention. I have not assented to his conclusions, but have ordered the levy to be proceeded with.

Under the instructions by which the law is to be administered I do not feel authorized to look to the effect of this levy upon the occasional and somewhat eccentric, and at times, perhaps, worse than useless, calls of the officers in charge in this department.

In referring you to the engineer's requisition (see Colonel Echols' letter), I beg to call your attention to the fact that this requisition has been one of the most serious impediments I have encountered in my effort to adjust the levy intrusted to my bureau. Apart from well-founded complaints as to the management of the slaves under these occasional calls, the fact of such diverse and disconnected calls for slaves, seemingly not regulated by any uniform system of responsibilities, is recognized and avowed as one main incentive to the unfortunate sentiment and consequent legislation in this State. Members have been sent to the Legislature avowedly to protect the people in their slaves from the Confederate authorities.

My duty would properly be fully performed in reporting to you the extreme difficulty, if not impossibility, of raising slaves under the instructions of December 12, 1864. I feel warranted, however, in suggesting as a probable remedy an act of Congress expressly authorizing you to negotiate with the States for the impressment of slaves on such terms as may be agreed. Major Melton's note states truly the practical difficulty. It exists in every State. A regiment of cavalry with bloodhounds in every county in the Confederacy would not obtain the slaves unless by the intervention and use of State laws and State authorities.

My hopelessness of good result will not cause me to relax one moment the rigor of my efforts.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

[First indorsement.]

JANUARY 26, 1865.

Chief of Engineers for consideration.

By order:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

[Second indorsement.]

ENGINEER BUREAU,
February 1, 1865.

Respectfully returned to the Honorable Secretary of War.

The report of the State agent of South Carolina, Col. R. B. Johnson, makes it clear that the best method of procuring slave labor in that State is through the agency of the State law, and I would recommend that His Excellency the Governor of South Carolina be requested to procure an amendment by the Legislature of the State law so as to make the labor, when obtained, available for the military purposes of the Confederacy, according to act of February 17, 1864, i. e., that the term of impressment may be for twelve months, the slaves to be used without the limits of the State when the good of the service demands; that they may be subject to the supervision and control of Confederate authorities and agents, and be placed in all respects on the same footing as slaves impressed under said act in other States. I concur also in the recommendation of Brigadier-General Preston as to the propriety of obtaining an act of the Confederate Congress, expressly authorizing the Honorable Secretary of War to negotiate with the States for the impressment of slaves on such terms as may be agreed upon.

J. F. GILMER,
Major-General and Chief of Engineer Bureau.

[Third indorsement.]

FEBRUARY 2, 1865.

ENGINEER BUREAU:

Your indorsement approved. Have such letters as you would wish prepared and submitted.

J. A. S.

[Fourth indorsement.]

ENGINEER BUREAU,
February 6, 1865.

Respectfully returned to the Honorable Secretary of War. Two letters herewith submitted in accordance with above direction.*

J. F. GILMER,
Major-General and Chief of Engineer Bureau.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
January 11, 1865.

General JOHN S. PRESTON,
Columbia, S. C.:

GENERAL: I beg to send you the report of Colonel Johnson and the requisition of Major Echols. These papers will enable you to communicate with the Secretary of War in relation to the matter of our conversation.

Respectfully, &c.,

A. G. MAGRATH.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

COLUMBIA, January 10, 1865.

His Excellency Governor A. G. MAGRATH:

In reply to the inquiries submitted to me yesterday by Your Excellency and General John S. Preston, superintendent of conscription, in reference to furnishing the supply of slave labor required by the Confederate Government, I beg to submit the following views:

First. I do not find in the legislation of the State any provision which in terms or by necessary implication precludes the enforcement in this State of any impressment of slaves which the Confederate Government may order. On the contrary, section 11 of the act seems to have in view the contingency of the impressment of slaves beyond and outside of the scope of the act. It is conceived, therefore, that so far as State laws are concerned there exists no hindrance to the impressment of slaves in this State in obedience to orders of the War Department.

Whilst, however, there is found no hindrance in the provisions of the act of the Legislature, the fact that there is such legislation operates practically under the instructions of the War Department to preclude such impressment.

The instructions of December 12 direct that the impressment authorized by General Orders, No. 86, shall be "according to the rules and regulations provided for the impressment of slaves in the States." Of like tenor are the instructions of September 23: "If any of the States have passed any law by which slaves can be collected for the military service of the Confederate States, as contemplated by said act of Congress, it will be the duty of the Bureau of Conscription to preserve the plan prescribed by State enactment."

* Only one letter found as an inclosure, for which see Gilmer to Seddon, February 6, p. 1058.

There being in this State a law enacted avowedly for the collection of slaves for the military purposes of the Confederate States, and prescribing rules and regulations for that purpose, conformity to the provision is required by the War Department, and practically the operation of any other system or mode of impressment is precluded.

Second. The points of conflict between the regulations of the State and those of the War Department are chiefly these: The act of the Legislature contemplates the using of the slaves only within the State. The act of Congress looks to their being used anywhere "within the military department."

The act of the Legislature restricts the labor to be exacted of the slaves to "work on the coast of this State and the fortifications within the limits of the State," and provides especially "that the slaves shall not be detailed for any other service than such work as is intimately connected with the defense of this State." The act of Congress, on the other hand, provides for other duties, to wit:

Duties with the Army or in connection with the military defenses of the country in the way of work on fortifications or in Government works for the production or preparation of materials of war or in military hospitals.

The act of the Legislature directs a mode of appraisement by the sheriff and a "loyal citizen" to be chosen by the owner. The orders of the War Department direct an appraisement "under the law regulating impressments." The instructions of December 12 direct still another mode, to wit, "by the impressing officer and the advisory board." (This matter of the appraisement of the slaves, by the way, is found to be one of the most embarrassing of the many difficult problems involved, and from it already has sprung very much dissatisfaction. The adoption of some uniform mode, equally binding on the individual and the Confederate Government, is most essential to any successful impressment.) To some extent these points of conflict may be avoided by such conformity to the State regulations as is required by the instructions of December 12. The order to impress the slaves according to State rules and regulations would seem to imply conformity to the mode of appraisement prescribed by the State law, such being one of the State "regulations."

This idea fully carried out would perhaps control all the points of difference by virtually superseding all Confederate regulations and substituting therefor the "rules and regulations" of the State law. The order to "pursue the plan prescribed by State enactment" would seem to carry with it a conformity to all the incidents and conditions of the "plan."

Third. It is clear that the State authorities cannot furnish any number of slaves to the Confederate Government on the terms of the instructions of the War Department. They can only be furnished according to the terms prescribed by the State law. These terms are as follows: First, the period of service will be for twelve months; second, a portion of the number will be levied for only two months from owners who are liable for ———; third, each owner will have the right to remove his slaves at the end of each quarter and substitute others; fourth, the slaves will be appraised according to the regulations prescribed by the act; fifth, the use of the slaves will be restricted to "work on the coast of this State and the fortifications within the limit of the State;" sixth, the discipline of the slaves, their clothing, diet, and general treatment will be under the supervision of the State agent.

Fourth. The question as to how far the State can meet the requisitions of the Confederate Government through the operation of the State law it is very difficult to determine. If the call of Major Echols of 3,000 slaves be regarded as a distinct call from that made through the Bureau of Conscription, the aggregate of the two is beyond the present energy of the State law.

Your Excellency is forbidden to levy at any one time more than the one-tenth of the male slaves between the ages of eighteen and fifty years. The returns from the several districts show an aggregate of about 36,000 male slaves in the State liable to impressment. Assuming that these returns fall short of the accurate number (and such, I have no doubt, is the fact), and that a close enumeration would show even 50,000, the levy of one-tenth of this number—distributed as the slaves are among many owners, a large, and perhaps a larger, part of them owning less than ten, and still another portion having fractions above ten—would scarcely yield the 2,500 called for through the Bureau. The other requisition could only be met by another and subsequent levy. But it is worthy of consideration whether the requisitions are distinct. The orders of the War Department direct the Bureau of Conscription to procure "according to State rules and regulations" 2,500 slaves, "to be turned over to the engineer officer instructed to receive them, for labor in the engineer and other departments of the service." The engineer himself applied for these slaves, varying the number to 3,000. It must be assumed that he is acting under the instructions of the War Department; that he is, in the language of the general order, "the engineer officer instructed to receive them."

The instructions of the War Department for the levy of the 2,500 do not indicate any other purpose to which they are to be applied than that indicated in the general order.

It is therefore reasonable to assume that the 2,500 are wanted for the same purpose as the 3,000 called for by Major Echols, and that the receipt of the 2,500 by Major Echols, "an engineer officer authorized to receive them," would be on the part of the State a compliance with the requisition ordered through the Bureau under General Orders, No. 86.

Fifth. If it be assumed that the levy called for through the Bureau of Conscription is distinct from that called for by Major Echols and for other purposes than those contemplated by the act of the Legislature, I have no hesitation in saying that it cannot be made. The purposes for which the slaves are wanted would preclude the operation of the State law for the purpose of raising them, whilst the conscript authorities, being required to act in conformity with the State law, would have no authority to resort to any mode of impressment other than that prescribed by the State law.

Should the War Department disembarass the question by ordering the impressment to be made in pursuance of the Confederate law of impressments and irrespective of State Legislature, I am fully assured, from my knowledge of the difficulties and embarrassments which attend the levying of slave labor, that the conscript authorities cannot successfully proceed with such impressment. So continuous have been the calls for slave labor for the past three years, so widespread has become the dissatisfaction among slave-owners with the treatment of their slaves, so imperfect have been the laws to enforce equality in the distribution of the burden, that the well affected are very reluctant to respond to any call, whilst the factious and unpatriotic, the lukewarm and the disaffected, now so numerous, are ready to interpose every possible hindrance to the execution of such impressment. The slaves themselves are very averse to this labor, and their owners sympathize with them, feel for them, and are disposed to screen them. All attempts, therefore, to impress by main caption would be futile. The owner has but to wink at evasions by the slaves and the best concerted efforts for arrest are foiled.

The aid and the authority of the master is indispensable, and as the Confederate authorities possess no control over him, can impose upon him no pain or penalties, they must in the present condition of affairs be powerless to act effectually. I am satisfied that slaves can be impressed only through the agency of the State authorities and in conformity with State law. It may also be added that any attempt to enforce an impressment under Confederate orders coterminously with an impressment under State laws would result prejudicially, each operating to embarrass and defeat the other.

The practical conclusions drawn from a consideration of the whole subject are these:

First. The conscript authorities cannot, under their instructions, proceed to impress slaves in this State otherwise than by the State agencies and in conformity with State rules and regulations.

Second. The State law is adequate to the raising of 2,500 or 3,000 slaves at any one time, and the requisition made through the Bureau may be met, except as to the terms and conditions of the service.

Third. The levying of the 2,500 under the requisition through the Bureau and the turning of them over to the "engineer officer instructed to receive them" could not be regarded otherwise than as a satisfaction of the requisition. The receipt of them by the engineer officer would operate as a satisfaction pro tanto of the requisition made by or through him.

Fourth. If it be assumed that the requisition made through the Bureau is for other purposes than those contemplated by the State act, it cannot be met, neither by the State authorities, for want of authority under the act, nor yet by the conscript authorities, for want of authority under their instructions, or, having such authority, because of practical and insurmountable difficulties.

I respectfully suggest that I be authorized to proceed at once to levy the one-tenth of the male slaves of the State between the ages indicated in the act, and to turn over the slaves so levied to the engineer officer who may be instructed to receive them. I would also respectfully ask that in the exercise of my power to appoint sub-agencies the authority of the superintendent of conscription be given me to appoint and use the conscription agencies of the State. He can aid me much, not alone in procuring a correct enumeration of slaves and in making the proper assessments upon owners, but in collecting and forwarding the slaves.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. B. JOHNSON,
Agent of State of South Carolina.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

HEADQUARTERS CONSCRIPT DEPARTMENT,
Columbia, January 14, 1865.General JOHN S. PRESTON,
Superintendent of Conscription:

GENERAL: I am in receipt of your communication of yesterday making the following inquiries:

First. Whether in my judgment there can be procured in this State, under existing laws and regulations, the slaves required by instructions of the War Department of date the 12th of December, ultimo?

Second. Whether by any means the instructions of the 12th of December can be executed and the 2,500 slaves procured on the terms of the law?

In reply to these inquiries I beg leave respectfully to say:

First. That the "laws and regulations" of the State are inadequate to the furnishing of the slaves required, and such slaves cannot be procured by any proceeding on the part of the conscript authorities according to or in conformity with those regulations. The State enactment appears not to have been framed with a view to the meeting of requisitions for slaves under the act of Congress, and its provisions are not such as to facilitate the enforcement of such an impressment.

Second. The instructions of the 12th of December cannot, in my judgment, be executed otherwise than irrespectively of all State regulations.

Having been present at the several conferences between yourself and His Excellency Governor Magrath and Colonel Johnson, the State agent, and having myself carefully examined the laws of Congress and of the State, as also the orders and instructions of the War Department, I have attained these conclusions:

First. That there exists no impediment springing either from the laws of the State or from the views of His Excellency the Governor to the impressment of slaves by the Confederate Government for the purposes contemplated by the instructions of the War Department.

Second. That such impressment, if authorized irrespectively of State regulations, may be made by the conscript authorities in accordance with the Confederate law of impressments.

The chief question involved in this inquiry appears to me this: Whether, in view of the fact that the slaves required cannot be procured according to the regulations of the State, it be advisable to attempt to procure them by an impressment made irrespectively of State regulations. Without assuming to indicate any opinion on this point my judgment is that the attempt at this time is unadvisable. The reasons which induce this opinion are many. I may mention these. You are aware that the orders of the State agent have already been issued for the impressment during the month of one-tenth of the male slaves of the State between the ages of eighteen and fifty years. Whilst these orders are operating and owners and slaves are subject to the disturbing effects of their enforcement, it would, I think, be injudicious to complicate the matter by throwing out other orders and executing still another impressment. The levying of slaves is a matter of the utmost delicacy, and I would hesitate to provoke a disregard of the orders of the Government and of the great necessity from which these orders spring by such a complication of things as would leave slave-owners doubtful and embarrassed as to what to do, or dissatisfied with what may be done.

There is much force in the suggestion made by Colonel Johnson that the authority of the master is indispensable to the impressment and collection of the slaves. This authority of the master cannot be evoked under other than the most favorable circumstances, and any effort to execute a forcible impressment without such authority, whilst it might result in the gathering in of the number at present required, would leave in its train such a condition of things as would render abortive any future efforts of like character.

Further, the impressment, if successful in its results, must be so I fear by the defeat of the State impressment. It would be an error to assume that the State will succeed in levying the one-tenth, and that in addition thereto the conscript authorities will procure the 2,500. If both orders be operative at the same time, it will not fail to present itself to the minds of slave-owners that they can avoid the State impressment by yielding to the Confederate impressment, and claiming a credit on their liability, under the State impressment (as they are privileged to do by section 11 of the State act), for such number of slaves as they may furnish. Should this idea prevail among slave-owners it would operate to throw into the Confederate impressment a number of slaves perhaps equal to the extent of our present requisition, but only by absorbing to that extent the State levy. It is known to you that the slaves called for by the State are to be turned over to the Confederate military authorities, although not with any view to meet the requisition made through your bureau. Will anything be gained practically, if we shall succeed in raising 2,500 by defeating the State call for 3,000? Is there not even a greater danger to be apprehended in that both requisitions may be defeated, and such condition of things be the result as may much impede and embarrass further efforts?

I have the honor to be, very truly, your most obedient,

C. D. MELTON,

Major, Commanding Conscripts.

[Inclosure No. 4.]

C. S. ENGINEER DEPARTMENT, SOUTH CAROLINA,
Charleston, S. C., January 3, 1865.

His Excellency Governor A. G. MAGRATH,

State of South Carolina:

GOVERNOR: I have the honor to lay before you the following statement of labor required for military works at present in anticipation and progress:

Combahee line .....	500
Combahee to Ashepoo .....	300
Ashepoo to Edisto .....	300
Edisto to Rantowles .....	500
Edisto lines .....	300
James and John's Islands .....	300
City .....	150
Fort Sumter .....	200

Total amount required, including the proceeds of regular call..... 2,550

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. H. ECHOLS,

Major, &c.

[Inclosure No. 6.]

C. S. ENGINEER DEPARTMENT, SOUTH CAROLINA,
Charleston, S. C., December 24, 1864.

His Excellency Governor A. G. MAGRATH,
State of South Carolina:

GOVERNOR: I have the honor to address you in relation to the means of supplying labor for the defenses. I have noticed the recent act of the Legislature on the subject, which will give much satisfaction generally; but at this moment, before it can be put into successful operation, I thought it would be well to anticipate our wants, and if you could not through the agent of State promulgate some call to provide labor which you know is now and will be needed. The regular call is made in January, but its production will not be adequate to the extended and new lines we may be called upon to adopt. He had better have a surplus than too few. We can supply 3,000 and more. With a view to the interest of the country I have presumed to address you on this subject.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. H. ECHOLS,
Major and Engineer.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
January 16, 1865.

Hon. F. S. LYON,
Chairman:

SIR: I have given the most anxious consideration to the suggestions in favor of reducing the rates of taxation proposed, and have with much regret to express my entire conviction that it will be impossible to make any abatement. The result of imposing 10 per cent. ad valorem tax upon agricultural property, and crediting the tax in kind at the neighborhood value, I feel persuaded would be the simple receipt of the tax in kind and nothing more. The value of the produce received last year is estimated at schedule prices at $145,000,000, yet the whole credit given, both for the tax in kind against ad valorem tax, and (on other property) for the ad valorem tax against the income tax, was only $128,787,245, showing that the tax in kind exceeded in value the sum necessary, even at schedule rates, to offset and discharge the ad valorem tax. The total value of taxable property is $4,351,000, as stated in your calculations; but from this assessed value large deductions were made for the partial occupation of the territory of the different States by the enemy. I refer to Mr. Commissioner Allan's report annexed to the report from this Department of November 7. The sum total of the reductions thus made was about 25 per cent.

The value of agricultural property was estimated at .....	$2,900,000,000
Deduct 25 per cent. ....	725,000,000
	2,175,000,000
10 per cent. tax would be .....	217,500,000
Value of the tax in kind at schedule prices .....	145,000,000
Add 50 per cent. for new mode of valuation .....	72,500,000

This calculation shows that an advance of only 50 per cent. in the valuation of the tax in kind would suffice to extinguish by the proposed credit the whole sum of the 10 per cent. ad valorem.

I should discharge the responsible duties devolved upon me unfaithfully if I omitted to place this result before the committee in a clear and unambiguous light. The calculations you have done me the honor to submit to my examination lead to results quite too large in view of past experience.

Assuming that 5 per cent. additional upon property (at specie value) is the equivalent of 10 per cent. additional upon income, to which I agree, you estimate the product of the taxes proposed at $952,670,723. The experience of last year showed that the whole product of the taxation which it is now proposed to duplicate was $360,000,000, after restoring the credit given for the tax in kind, &c.

Upon this basis we have no right to anticipate a greater yield than $720,000,000, which is $232,000,000 less than your estimate. By reference to page 11 of my report of November 7 it will be seen that—

The most moderate estimate of the expenditures that could be made for the year at this time was.....	$774, 000, 000
In view of our present circumstances, the sum of $60,000,000 for the cancellation of notes may be deducted.....	60, 000, 000
	<hr/> 714, 000, 000
Add the new demands.....	396, 000, 000
	<hr/> 1, 110, 000, 000
	<hr/>
To be raised by taxation as proposed.....	720, 000, 000
For sale of bonds, temporary loans, cotton, &c.....	400, 000, 000
	<hr/> 1, 120, 000, 000

You will perceive how far short of the actual demands upon the Treasury the whole yield of the taxes proposed must prove without an abatement for the tax in kind. But if from the estimated amount of $714,000,000 there is deducted $217,000,000 for the credit of the tax in kind, as I feel confident would be the result in such a case, the revenue would be reduced to $500,000,000—the demands are $1,120,000,000.

I have the honor to remain, your most obedient servant,
G. A. TRENHOLM,
Secretary of the Treasury.

SUBSISTENCE BUREAU,
Richmond, January 17, 1865.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: In reply to your indorsement on the letter of the Honorable Secretary of the Treasury of the 10th instant, I have to say that I have no doubt that the Secretary of the Treasury feels very anxious to furnish this Bureau the funds needed, and I am not aware of any reason to lead to the inference that I entertained the contrary opinion. I have only to deal with the facts. In the early part of last year, when the object of the Bureau, as has ever been the case, was to convert as much as possible of its appropriation of depreciating currency into appreciating commodities, it had not the money wherewith to make purchases and had, in consequence of the tax upon the currency, to turn in through its officers more than it received in the first three months, $22,000,000 being turned in, against $21,000,000 received, this being the season, too, for collecting meats and the whole country scrambling for supplies of meat for the year's consumption. In the next quarter this Bureau received $28,000,000, making less than $5,000,000 per month for the first half year. The appropriation for the next six months ending December 31, 1864, was not $100,000,000, but $193,000,000. The language of the appropriation act is unmistakable: "For the purchase of subsistence stores and commissary property, in addition to the unexpended balance of the last appropriation," $100,000,000. The balance undrawn on July 1 was $93,000,000.

The estimate for this Bureau was $177,000,000, and its actual expenses cast of the Mississippi about $125,000,000, of which $90,000,000 was furnished, $67,000,000 in currency and $23,000,000 in certificates and bonds which the people are unwilling to receive, and a portion of which has not been disposed of, as the Treasury price of bonds is now 20 per cent. above market price, and there is no law to force the people to take these bonds, so that the Treasury has furnished the currency for less than two-thirds of the expenses of the Bureau. This Bureau has received about one-fourth of its amount in bonds, which is as much if not more than its fair proportion.

The appropriation asked for, for the present six months, is $120,000,000, or a per diem of $774,000 for the 155 working days, of which a per diem of $370,000 is paid—less than half. The Secretary of the Treasury has fallen into a singular error of making a per diem of $383,000 instead of the above $774,000 (caused probably by his mistaking the estimate for six months for one for twelve months).

It having been demonstrated that even with the aid of some impressments (partially submitted to by the patriotic), funds adequate to make purchases and impressments could not be obtained, and that arrearages and indebtedness increased to such an extent that credit no longer availed, this Bureau was forced to the conviction that without this aid of impressment and with the unlimited exaltation of prices (the alternative of enforcing impressment) there could not be funds adequately furnished to procure essentials—bread and meat; therefore some curtailment was necessary and inevitable. The Secretary of the Treasury was called on by me last summer and I invited his attention to the alternative of exaltation of prices without limit as the inevitable result of being forced to yield the aid of impressments, which had no power in law, and was being overthrown by the resistance of the people generally.

Shortly after the 5th of September I called and read him my circular of that date, a copy of which is herewith sent,* in which I discussed these matters and stated that the interest of his Department, of the currency, and the fate of the country, depended, I thought, on the principles of that circular being sustained, and that it should be made at once a subject of Government consideration. It certainly was a subject vital to his Department and my Bureau.

It affords this Bureau the highest satisfaction to be assured through the Honorable Secretary of the Treasury that on this point he has reason to hope that prompt measures of relief will be adopted.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. B. NORTHROP,

Commissary-General of Subsistence.

[First indorsement.]

JANUARY 19, 1865.

Respectfully referred to the Honorable Secretary of the Treasury inviting his attention to this letter of the Commissary-General, which relates more to the operations of his Department than to those of this.

*See p. 622.

J. A. SEDDON.

[Second indorsement.]

JANUARY 28, 1865.

Respectfully returned to Honorable Secretary of War.

The most earnest appeals have been made to Congress for the supply of the Treasury, and the exertions of the honorable chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means invoked to procure early action on the subject.

G. A. TRENHOLM,
Secretary of the Treasury.

HEADQUARTERS YORK'S COMMAND,
Salisbury, N. C., January 17, 1865.

General R. E. LEE:

SIR: We have now in our camp between 600 and 700 recruits. The great obstacle has been the difficulty of procuring clothing and supplies from the quartermaster's department. We have also been interfered with by the recruiting officers of Lieutenant-Colonel Tucker. If we could have the exclusive privilege of recruiting in all the prisons for some weeks we have no doubt but that we could shortly muster a brigade composed of such material as would reflect no discredit upon our army. We hope that you will be so kind as to foster this enterprise and see that the necessary clothing, &c., be issued by the quartermaster's department, as we can do nothing without the uniforms.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Z. YORK,
Brigadier-General.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
January 24, 1865.

Respectfully referred for the consideration of the War Department. I am ignorant of the reason that induced authority to be given to Lieutenant-Colonel Tucker and others. General York is recruiting for the Louisiana brigade.

R. E. LEE,
General.

[Second indorsement.]

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
February 7, 1865.

Respectfully submitted to the Honorable Secretary of War. The authority to Lieutenant-Colonel Tucker was granted before Brigadier-General York was authorized to recruit for his command. It is understood that Lieutenant-Colonel Tucker has completed his enlistments, unless he be authorized to recruit another company to form a regiment.

By order:

JNO. BLAIR HOGE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Third indorsement.]

FEBRUARY 11, 1865.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

A privilege was granted to Lieutenant-Colonel Tucker to complete his regiment some day or two ago. If that enterprise be deemed of less importance than the one herein mentioned, it might be proper to recall that order. Your opinion upon this is desired. No other authority has been given.

By order:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary.

---

[JANUARY 17, 1865.—For resolutions of the General Assembly of Virginia, in reference to placing General Lee in command of all the armies of the Confederate States, and reply of Jefferson Davis to letter transmitting the same, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, pp. 1084, 1091.]

---

[JANUARY 18, 1865.—For Davis to Clark, urging extraordinary exertion to re-enforce General Taylor, see Series I, Vol. XLV, Part II, p. 794.]

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., January 19, 1865.

Maj. Gen. HOWELL COBB,
Augusta, Ga.:

GENERAL: Your several letters advising strongly resort to a system of volunteering and the formation of new organizations, instead of reliance on the operations of the conscript law, for the increase of our forces, have had my anxious consideration, and have been submitted for the judgment of the President.

On the scores of policy and equity, having reference as well to the sentiments and interests of those already in the armies as of those still out of service, it has been concluded that such new organizations should not be invited or allowed. Besides, without additional legislation there would be no authority in all those portions of the Confederacy accessible to enrolling officers to allow such voluntary organizations, and it is very doubtful whether, in view of the opposition entertained to them by most of our leading generals, such legislation could be procured.

Dismissing, therefore, that mode of increasing our forces, it is of urgent necessity that you should adopt all practical means and employ your best energies in carrying out thoroughly the conscript law in your State. Although you have, in pressing your views, not shrunk from the implication of confessing failure, I am satisfied no such failure will result, on your directing your own special attention and efforts to insure success.

It is represented that there are very large numbers of men in your State who have escaped conscription through the remissness, inefficiency, or connivance of the enrolling officers. As a class, these officers in your State are said to have been peculiarly incompetent, and that it is very difficult to obtain others adequate.

In this State advantage has been found by General Kemper, who has been actively enforcing conscription, in having all retired officers capable of service and supernumeraries report to him, and using them. By selections from them and among the reserves, where many intelligent men of influence are now ranged, he has much improved the corps of enrolling officers in this State. Thinking it probable you might derive benefit from a like command of invalid and supernumerary officers, I have caused an order to be issued requiring all such in your State to report to you for assignment, and I would advise you to substitute the more active and intelligent among them for the enrolling officers you have had, sending all the latter capable of active service to the field.

Our late reverses and the despondency they have caused will be best remedied by strengthening our armies, and no duty at this time is more important and imperative than the energetic enforcement of our conscript laws. The Department has full confidence in your appreciation and execution of it.

Very truly, yours,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

---

OFFICE CHIEF COMMISSARY OF SUBSISTENCE,
SECOND DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA,
Charlottesville, January 20, 1865.

Maj. B. P. NOLAND,

Chief Commissary of Subsistence, Virginia:

MAJOR: I have just received a letter from Capt. Thomas R. Foster, assistant commissary of subsistence, third division of my district, in which he says:

I have great difficulty in my own mind to know what I ought to do under existing circumstances. I know the Government needs every hoof in my division, yet I do not feel that I would be doing the farmers justice to take their stock unless I knew where or when the pay would come. I now owe the people $40,000 or $50,000 in gold and greenbacks. Have written you several letters setting forth my difficulties. Have received no answer, and consequently have nothing to base a promise upon, and now think it best to retire from the market until I know something definite in regard to my future supply of funds.

In the several replies I made to Captain Foster's letters (none of which he seems to have received at the writing of the above) I have informed him that I have regularly sent him all the specie and U. S. currency that have come into my hands; that I had no means of knowing to what extent the Subsistence Bureau could command these funds, but that all I could do would be done to keep him supplied with the funds necessary to work his division. When I first took charge of the district, funds other than C. S. notes were needed only immediately along the enemy's border. Indeed, at a few miles distant therefrom the people not only received Confederate money readily, but felt themselves open to the suspicion of disloyalty if they took greenbacks. This is no longer the case. The people for a belt of several counties along the Potomac now refuse to take anything but U. S. currency, cotton, or gold. These are the only counties in my district from which any considerable amount of meats are gotten, and it seems to me of the utmost importance that my officers should be supplied not only with funds to meet their present indebtedness, but to make future purchases. I am not informed of the difficulties that attend the efforts of the Bureau in furnishing its officers funds. I can only say that no requisition that I have made since the 1st of April last has been fully met. Without funds, with a credit impaired by a failure to comply with past obligations, and restricted to a low schedule of prices, it is impossible for the officers of my district to compete with the agents of other bureaus and speculators.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. W. N. NOLAND,
Major and Chief Commissary of Subsistence, 2d Dist. of Virginia.

[First indorsement.]

OFFICE CHIEF COMMISSARY OF SUBSISTENCE FOR VIRGINIA,
Richmond, January 23, 1865.

Respectfully referred to the Commissary-General of Subsistence.

The subject referred to in this letter is a most important one. The supply of meat in the accessible counties of Virginia has been for many months exhausted, and most of that used by the Army of Northern Virginia is brought from beyond our military lines. It can only be obtained with gold or U. S. paper currency. The supply of gold under the control of the Subsistence Department is exhausted, and no considerable supply of U. S. paper currency can be had. It is not in the country, and our purchasing officers are now in debt for supplies already sent forward, and report that the amount to be obtained of cattle, hogs, &c., is only limited by the amount of funds to be obtained. At present purchases are suspended for the want of means, and unless some steps are speedily taken to get a supply of such money as can be used for this trade these large supplies of meat will be lost to the Army. We are receiving now at least 1,500 cattle and as many hogs per month, besides bacon, lard, &c., from this source, and I therefore respectfully and urgently recommend that the necessary arrangements be made for the supply of the funds needed.

B. P. NOLAND,
Major and Chief Commissary of Subsistence for Virginia.

[Second indorsement.]

OFFICE COMMISSARY-GENERAL OF SUBSISTENCE,
Richmond, January 24, 1865.

Respectfully referred to the Secretary of War with the inclosed letter from Captain Taylor as matters of vital and immediate importance.*

L. B. NORTHROP,
Commissary-General of Subsistence.

[Third indorsement.]

JANUARY 24, 1865.

Respectfully referred to the Honorable Secretary of the Treasury.

If specie or Federal currency could be commanded the difficulty in obtaining subsistence stores would, as the within shows, be greatly diminished.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

---

* See Taylor to Noland, January 6, p. 1005.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
January 21, 1865.

Hon. F. S. LYON,
Chairman, &c.:

SIR: Permit me to press upon your attention the necessity of prompt action upon the measures for the relief of the Treasury. The maximum amount of notes to be issued under the act of 17th of February, 1864, is $500,000,000; the amount issued and to be issued under drafts already drawn upon the Bureau at Columbia is $468,000,000; amount still available, $32,000,000.

The fall of Fort Fisher having closed the harbor of Wilmington, the demand for the new taxable bonds (the coupons of which were used in payment of duties) has greatly diminished, and the sales from the Treasury ceased altogether. The only source from which relief can be expected under existing circumstances is from taxation, aided by the proposed action of the States in anticipating the collection thereof. I earnestly recommend this important subject to your immediate attention.

Your most obedient servant,

G. A. TRENHOLM,
Secretary of the Treasury.

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, January 23, 1865.

The attention of officers and soldiers is called to the following act of Congress and regulations based thereon:

AN ACT to provide commissioned officers of the Army and Navy and Marine Corps with clothing.

The Congress of the Confederate States of America do enact, That all officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, on duty in the field, afloat or in batteries, and all officers on other duty who are disabled for the service in the field, by reason of wounds or disease contracted in the service, and officers of the Invalid Corps, on duty, below the rank of brigadier-general in the Army, and below the rank of captain in the Navy, shall be furnished once in every year with one complete suit of uniform clothing: Provided, That the quantity and quality of clothing to be delivered to non-commissioned officers and privates, seamen and marines under existing or future laws, shall in nowise be interfered with by reason of anything contained in this act; and in the distribution of clothing, officers on duty in the field shall, in all cases, have a preference over those on post, or detailed, or office duty, so that when there is not a sufficiency of clothing for all, the non-commissioned officers and privates shall be first served, and next to them the officers actually on duty in the field.

Approved January 16, 1865.

A true copy.

JAS. M. MATTHEWS,
Law Clerk.

OFFICERS.

1. The above act, after securing a supply to soldiers, prefers officers below the rank of brigadier-general, as follows: First, officers on duty in the field; next, officers on duty, disabled for service in the field by reason of wounds or disease contracted in the service, and officers of the Invalid Corps on duty, all of whom draw free of cost; and, lastly, permits other officers to purchase, as heretofore, under the provisions of the old act of February 17, 1864.

2. Care will be taken to observe these preferences. To that end orders will not be given hereafter at this office, under any circumstances, for the purchase of cloth or any article of clothing or for the issue of same.

3. Officers in the field will be supplied through the chief quartermaster of the command to which they may be attached. When the supply will permit, cloth will be apportioned between the armies in the field according to their strength, and will be placed at the control of the chief quartermaster thereof, who will be looked to to distribute the same to the officers entitled and most in need. Other articles of clothing, not exceeding in all one suit a year, may be issued to officers in the field from stores forwarded to the command to which they belong when the wants of the privates will admit.

4. Other officers will draw or purchase, as the case may be, from the nearest depot, but from such supplies only as may be set aside, from time to time, by direction of this office. Mr. Rankin, bonded agent of this department, corner of Fourteenth and Cary streets, will be charged with the duty of issuing and selling, at this point, cloth and articles of clothing to officers. When he has nothing for sale or issue it will be useless to make application elsewhere in this city, all other officers being prohibited from either selling or issuing.

5. The yearly suit of clothing for an officer will consist of a coat and pair of pants or material (four yards, double width), and trimmings therefor, one pair of shoes, one hat or cap, three pair of drawers, three cotton shirts, two flannel shirts, and four pair of socks. Issues on sales to officers will be noted on suitable rolls prepared for that purpose, and in every case the officer shall certify that the articles drawn or purchased are necessary for his own personal comfort and use and that the same will not be in excess of his prescribed allowance. Returns of such issues or sales will be made quarterly to this office. The price of cloth, when sold, will be $20 a yard, double width, and of other articles of clothing as fixed in general orders.

PRIVATES.

6. Men attached to commands in the field will be supplied there, and men who have been retired at the post at which they may be located in orders. Issues to men on furlough and on horse details have been suspended. Men in hospital will be supplied by the issuing quartermaster attached to. All detailed men in Richmond and the immediate vicinity are supplied through Mr. Rankin. Paroled and exchanged men draw at Camp Lee.

7. The interest of the service and the dispatch of public business require that these regulations shall be strictly observed.

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

---

[JANUARY 23, 1865.—For Brown to Davis, reporting that the reserve militia of Georgia, over fifty years of age, has been ordered out, see Series I, Vol. XLVII, Part II, p. 1038.]

---

[JANUARY 23, 1865.—For Clark to Brandon, in relation to transfer of the militia of Mississippi, between seventeen and fifty years of age, to the Confederate service, see Series I, Vol. LII, Part II, p. 810.]

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,

Richmond, Va., January 24, 1865.

GENTLEMEN OF THE "JOINT COMMITTEE ON THE STATE OF THE COUNTRY:"

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of resolutions adopted by the General Assembly of Virginia in relation to certain restrictions said to have been placed on the transportation of supplies of food to the cities of Richmond and Petersburg.

Upon investigation I find that no orders have emanated from the War Department or the provost-marshal of Richmond of the character supposed in the resolution. I, however, learn that there may be an order of the character spoken of emanating from the lieutenant-general commanding the Confederate forces on the north side of the James River, which, if so, will be ascertained at once, he having been furnished with a copy of the resolution and called upon for information touching the same.

I am, gentlemen, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,
JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

RICHMOND, January 24, 1865.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON:

SIR: Impressed with the importance of placing in the Army every man capable of bearing arms, and of recruiting our forces from any source where recruits can be had, and believing it to be the duty of those who advocated secession and war to prove their faith by their works, I would most respectfully ask that I may be allowed to enter the Army of the Confederate States with such rank as the President may think proper to confer.

I would prefer as the field for my operations Arizona and New Mexico, where I feel assured troops in considerable numbers may be raised. In my opinion the surest and speediest means for recruiting in those Territories would be to organize a force in the spring and make a sudden move upon Arizona and occupy it, then send into the mines and recruit from among the miners, the greater part of whom are Southern men, and at the same time organize the Mexican population, who would join us in considerable force, making, between the two, such a force as to hold the Territories unless a very strong force was sent against us, and in that event we could at any time fall back into Texas.

That the troops for this purpose could be spared from Texas I have no doubt, there being at the present time a large cavalry force in that department not occupied and who might be spared, as the move would make a diversion of the enemy's troops in favor of Missouri, should we move against that State in the spring. The enemy's forces now occupying those Territories are scattered over an extent of country 1,500 miles in length and they could not concentrate their forces in time to prevent us from occupying the country, and by using the numerous Indian tribes living on the Overland route to Santa Fé that line of communication could be so interrupted as to make any re-enforcements over that route very hazardous and uncertain, while a small force could prevent re-enforcements from crossing the desert from Fort Yuma across to Tucson. The Territories, once in our possession, could be held against any force the enemy would be likely to send against us; and communication once opened with Southern California we might reasonably expect re-enforcements from that country, it being settled almost entirely by Southern people.

As to the means for carrying out this expedition they can be furnished from the cotton which is in Texas in abundance; and to insure the speedy transportation and sale of such amount of cotton as may be necessary it should be turned over to the officer to command the expedition as he would find means of transportation more readily than to rely upon the uncertain means furnished by the Cotton Bureau, which has so far not been characterized by great celerity in the transportation of Government cotton. Should General Smith decide that the cotton in sufficient quantity could not be spared, I would suggest that Texas has another means of raising specie which could be made available, and that is by the sale of beef-cattle; thousands can be collected in Western Texas and easily driven into Mexico and sold for specie. There are a number of refugees from New Mexico and Arizona who would not hesitate to contribute means for the recovery of their homes; among them are men of wealth who have offered assistance.

Once in the Territories, which are now abundantly supplied with goods, enough property could be confiscated for the use of the Government to defray the expenses of the troops, and as the United States Government is now working numerous silver mines I see no reason why we might not control the same mines and make them yield a revenue for our purposes.

It is essential that the officer in command should be clothed by the President with authority to organize such troops as may be raised, and especially to select proper persons to command them, and at the same time to organize some kind of civil government. Should this plan for recruiting and reoccupying those Territories meet your approbation I would respectfully suggest that no time is to be lost, as the movement should be made as early as possible.

Should the Government determine that it is impracticable at this time to spare the men and means necessary for such a purpose as I have indicated, then I would suggest that proper persons sent into Western Arizona could raise enough troops to justify the expedition.

It will be remembered that there has been no attempt to recruit for our Government in this section of the country, and so strong is the Southern feeling in Southern California that the United States Government has never succeeded in enforcing the conscript law or draft there. The people, never having felt the ravages of war, are enthusiastic and would not hesitate to join us in this struggle for independence. Should you think proper to honor me with a commission for the enterprise I have suggested I can only say that I will, as I have ever done, serve my country with all the zeal and ability I possess.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

JNO. R. BAYLOR.

Proclamation by the President, appointing a day of fasting, humiliation, and prayer, with thanksgiving.

The Congress of the Confederate States have, by a joint resolution, invited me to appoint a day of public fasting, humiliation, and prayer, with thanksgiving to Almighty God.

It is our solemn duty at all times, and more especially in a season of public trial and adversity, to acknowledge our dependence on His mercy, and to bow in humble submission before His footstool, confessing our manifold sins, supplicating His gracious pardon, imploring His divine help, and devoutly rendering thanks for the many and great blessings which He has vouchsafed to us.

Let the hearts of our people turn contritely and trustingly unto God; let us recognize in His chastening hand the correction of a Father, and submissively pray that the trials and sufferings which have so long borne heavily upon us may be turned away by His merciful love; that His sustaining grace be given to our people, and His divine wisdom imparted to our rulers; that the Lord of Hosts will be with our armies and fight for us against our enemies, and that He will graciously take our cause into His own hand and mercifully establish for us a lasting, just, and honorable peace and independence.

And let us not forget to render unto His holy name the thanks and praise which are so justly due for His great goodness and for the many mercies which He has extended to us amid the trials and suffering of protracted and bloody war.

Now, therefore, I, Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederate States of America, do issue this my proclamation, appointing Friday, the 10th day of March next, as a day of public fasting, humiliation, and prayer (with thanksgiving) for "invoking the favor and guidance of Almighty God," and I do earnestly invite all soldiers and citizens to observe the same in a spirit of reverence, penitence, and prayer.

Given under my hand and the seal of the Confederate States, at Richmond, this 25th day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

By the President:

J. P. BENJAMIN,
Secretary of State.

RICHMOND, VA., January 25, 1865.

THE SENATE OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA:

I return to your honorable body without my approval an act which originated in the Senate, entitled "An act to authorize newspapers to be mailed to the soldiers free of postage."

The act provides "that all newspapers directed to any officer, musician, or private engaged in the actual service of the Confederate States may be transmitted through the mails free of postage."

The Constitution, article I, section 8, clause 7, gives power to Congress "to establish post-offices and post routes; but the expenses of the Post-Office Department after the 1st day of March, in the year of our Lord 1863, shall be paid out of its own revenues."

This provision that the Post-Office Department shall be self-sustaining was not contained in the Constitution of our former Government. It is important that its spirit and object should be correctly determined now, because many members of the present Congress were also members of the Provisional Congress, which adopted this new clause, and legislation by them will be deemed hereafter to possess peculiar value as a precedent, and as a contemporaneous interpretation of the Constitution by those best acquainted with its meaning.

It was generally understood that the clause under consideration was intended by its framers to correct what were deemed to be two great vices that had been developed in the postal system of the United States. The first was the injustice of taxing the whole people for the expense of the mail facilities afforded to individuals; and the remedy devised was to limit the Government to the furnishing the machinery for carrying the mails and compelling those who might use the facilities thus furnished to pay the expense thereof.

The second evil against which this clause was intended as a safeguard was the wasteful extravagance which grew out of the franking privilege, with its attendant abuses of large contracts for stationery, printing, binding, &c., and increased Government patronage with its train of corrupting influences.

With this knowledge of the purpose of the framers of the Constitution, and of the evils against which they intended to provide by the clause under consideration, I cannot escape the conclusion that to authorize the transmission of any mail matter free of postage is to violate the true intent and meaning of the Constitution.

If the act now before me should become a law, the Postmaster-General would be bound to pay railroads and other carriers for conveying newspapers to the armies without reimbursement from any source whatever. He could not be repaid out of the general Treasury without a violation of the letter of the Constitution, nor out of the other revenues of his Department without in effect imposing on those who pay for carrying their own correspondence an additional charge to defray the cost of conveying newspapers for others.

If it be competent for Congress under the clause to order newspapers to be carried free of postage, the power exists to order free transmission of any other mail matter. But we must ever remember that Congress can exercise no implied powers—certainly none not necessary to carry into effect the powers expressly granted; and where shall we find in the Constitution any power in the Confederate Government, express or implied, for dividing either the people or the public servants into classes unequally burdened with postal charges?

In that part of the Constitution which specially treats of the burden of taxation, every precaution has been taken to secure uniformity and to guard against bounties or preferences of any kind; and although not directly applicable to the subject of postage, the spirit of the whole provision is so opposed to inequality in legislation that the passage may well serve for illustration. The first clause of article I, section 8, gives to Congress power "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises for revenue necessary to pay the debts, provide for the common defense, and carry on the Government of the Confederate States; but no bounties shall be granted from the Treasury; nor shall any duties or tax on importations from foreign nations be laid to promote or foster any branch of industry; and all duties, imposts; and excises shall be uniform throughout the Confederate States." It is true that the payment of postage is not properly a tax, but compensation for service rendered; yet it would scarcely be ingenuous to deny that so to regulate the rates of postage as to produce an excess of receipts over the expense of carrying mail matter for one class and to use this excess in order to carry free of cost the mail matter of another class would strongly conflict with the just equality of privileges and burdens which the above-cited clauses were designed to secure.

I regret to be compelled to object to a measure devised by Congress for the benefit or relief of the Army, but with my convictions on the subject it is not possible to approve the act now before me.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

RICHMOND, VA., January 25, 1865.

Governor CHARLES CLARK,
Macon, Miss.:

Your telegram of 20th received.* There is no necessity for an actual enrollment of male slaves as described; all that is required being that the quota for teamsters, laborers, &c., with the Army should be furnished, which may be done by the masters without the direct intervention of the enrolling officers. If the nature of employment is understood, certain negroes will no doubt go willingly; or, if the master prefers, they may obtain the required number elsewhere and turn them over for the service proposed.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

[JANUARY 26, 1865.—For agreement between Governor Smith and the Secretary of War, in relation to certain militia regiments of Virginia, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 1140.]

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, January 27, 1865.

Hon. Mr. MILLER,
Chairman Special Committee:

SIR: I submit herewith, in response to your recent call, a report which shows the issues within the past six months to the armies in the field. A little delay has occurred awaiting receipt of reports of issues due from distant points in the Confederacy. The report shows the issues to General Lee's command from July 1 to January 21, and to other commands from July 1 to January 1, except that the report of issues for the Department of Alabama, Mississippi, and East Louisiana are still due for the month of December. I was gratified that information now given was asked, for the impression is so common that our armies are poorly provided for that I gladly avail of an opportunity to show what has been done.

I inclose also a copy of General Orders, No. 100, 1862, which regulates the allowance of clothing yearly.† This table of supply adopted from the old service was made with reference to abundant resources and doubtless shows what will answer the necessities of a soldier with fair economy and management. This department has never aimed to limit its issues to this standard, especially in regard to jackets and pants, but has endeavored to provide a suit of clothing every six months for each man. When it is considered that the issues now reported are field issues proper, and exclusive of issues to men in hospitals, of issues to men on furlough, of issues to detailed men at posts, of issues to paroled and exchanged men, of issues to retired men, and of all post issues whatever, it will be found, I think, that with the exception of overcoats, which have not been made up, owing to the great consumption of woolen material for jackets and pants, and the item of flannel undershirts but partially supplied, the armies have been fully supplied. I don't hesitate to say that in some instances, there has been extravagance, and moreover that much of the individual want that strikes the eye is due to the improvidence of the soldier, who too often disposes by sale and barter of what he has received. It is proper to add that this report includes but a portion of the issues made by the State of North Carolina to her troops, and no other State issues whatever, although it is known that other States have contributed liberally. Georgia, for instance, has issued within the past year as follows: Twenty-six thousand seven hundred and forty-five jackets, 28,808 pair of pants, 37,657 pair of shoes, 7,504 blankets, 24,952 shirts, 24,168 pair of drawers, and 23,024 pair of socks; but as the apportionment thereof between the various armies does not appear, these issues are not noted. Add to all the issues made by numerous relief associations and through individual contributions and it will show that in the past we have at least needed an economical expenditure and proper distribution of supplies more than anything else to secure the comfort and efficiency of our armies. The issues of shirts, drawers, socks, and caps may in some instances appear light. This is due to the fact that in previous quarters, through the abundance of these articles, the troops have been fully supplied. It has always been understood that all calls for these articles could be responded to, and of some there is still a large supply on hand; for instance, in the department at this point over 100,000 pair of socks and 25,000 pair of drawers, besides excesses elsewhere.

---

*Not found.

† See Vol. II, this series, p. 229.

In connection with the table of supply referred to, I will remark that the first year is reckoned to commence from October, 1862, when commutation was abolished, so that now we are in the third year.

I will also add, as supplemental to the report recently made in regard to the sale of cloth, that the depot officer at Montgomery, Ala., has disposed of 7,000 yards single width, and that 1,000 suits are now being made up here for the officers of General Lee's command. This, with what has already been reported, shows that provision has been made for 6,000 officers within the past six months.

Very respectfully, &c.,

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

• Issues of clothing to armies in the field.

	Jackets.	Pants.	Shoes.	Blankets.	Hats and caps.	Flannel shirts.	Cotton shirts.	Drawers.	Socks.	Overcoats.
Aggregate amount third and fourth quarters, 1864, and to January 21, 1865: General Lee's command in Virginia.	104, 199	140, 578	167, 862	74, 851	27, 011	21, 063	157, 727	170, 139	146, 136	4, 861
Aggregate amount third and fourth quarters, 1864: Army of Southwest Virginia.	3, 340	2, 500	6, 856	4, 924	3, 230	1, 440	13, 694	15, 475	12, 353	1, 000
Department South Carolina, Florida, and Georgia, General Hardee.	19, 751	21, 022	26, 376	12, 429	500	.....	19, 264	20, 571	26, 719	594
Army of Tennessee.	45, 412	102, 864	102, 558	27, 900	45, 853	.....	61, 860	108, 937	55, 560	.....
Department Alabama, Mississippi, and East Louisiana.	21, 789	37, 661	34, 342	4, 677	27, 292	.....	10, 095	3, 831	15, 458	.....
Department of North Carolina.	21, 301	37, 774	9, 263	6, 696	12, 751	.....	23, 354	22, 519	15, 059	200

a Also 7, 000 captured by General Forrest.

[JANUARY 28, 29, FEBRUARY 14, and MARCH 5, 1865.—For correspondence between Governor Clark and General Taylor, in regard to calling out the militia of Mississippi and the transfer of State troops to Confederate service, see Series I, Vol. XLIX, Part I, pp. 939, 941, 979, 1029.]

RALEIGH, N. C., January 29, 1865.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS:

SIR: It is not to be presumed that the press of public duty leaves you much time to read private letters, nevertheless I suppose that should you find a moment's leisure you will not object to hearing the views of your countrymen, however humble, who are struggling with you for independence. How this war can be successfully managed, brought to a speedy and honorable end, bringing us independence, are questions that are upon every tongue. I propose to give you my plan briefly: Declare by law that every soldier who has or will enlist in our Army, and who at the time of such enlistment was not a slave-owner or land-holder, shall receive a bounty or pension at the end of the war, upon being honorably discharged, of one negro slave and fifty acres of land. I will state it thus: We have 3,500,000 slaves. We have probably enrolled 1,000,000 of men. Half these men are slave-owners, leaving 500,000 who do not own them. I would give one slave to each such soldier and fifty acres of land, and if he died in the service, to his representatives. Thus you spread the institution. You make every family in the Government interested in it. You do away with the doctrine that this is the rich man's war and the poor man's fight. And if the war is to continue you can make the slaves the very means of our defense—declare by law that all negroes captured from the enemy shall belong to the captors by general orders—declare to the enemy that all who will desert and enlist in our Army, take the oath of allegiance and fight in our cause, shall have a negro and fifty acres of land upon being honorably discharged, and shall further have all the negroes which they can capture from the enemy, to be their own property at the end of the war. Lincoln has tempted thousands of men into his Army by offering reward. I now propose to outbid him, and as we have the most alluring means we shall get the most men. If we make it to the interest of the world to fight on our side, men from all quarters of the globe will take up arms in our defense. We can reduce Grant's and Sherman's armies one-half in numbers by desertions if we offer them the bait. We can enlist men from all quarters of the United States if we make it to their interest to come. In a word, we can buy out the armed forces of Lincoln, secure their service on our side. We can command thousands of men from Ireland, Germany, Poland, Austria, England, and France by offering them a home in the sunny South and a servant. We will thus avoid the trouble of arming slaves. We will remove the prejudices against the institution and bring all the world up to its support from interested motives. The slave-owners can well afford to give up to the soldiers who have and will fight to maintain the institution 1,000,000 of slaves to secure forever the other 2,500,000. The mode of getting the land and negroes to pay these bounties with would be by taxation in kind, by general laws to purchase, by donations to the Government, by capture, by enslaving the free negroes in the South, by taxation and contribution by State Legislatures if needed. With this system of laws wisely and properly regulated our people can be satisfied. Many of our farmers and mechanics can be released and sent home to attend to the industrial pursuits, and an army of 500,000 men can be put at General Lee's disposal to march where he pleases, and feed them on the front instead of looking to his rear for supplies.

Hoping, sir, that the wish of your heart, the independence of the South, may be speedily consummated,

I am, with great respect, your obedient servant,

J. W. ELLIS.

---

MONTGOMERY, ALA., January 30, 1865.

Maj. Gen. J. M. WITHERS:

SIR: I learn that Capt. John C. Brown has made application to you for authority to recruit and organize into companies such absentees and deserters in several of the counties of East Alabama as he may induce to do so. This is to say to you that I am solicitor for the judicial circuit in which those counties are situated, and am well acquainted with the facts which cause Captain Brown to make the request, and heartily approve of the project. Most of these deserters are between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, and, so far as capacity to endure the hardships of the service, would make good soldiers. They are generally men who are conscribed and denied the privilege of selecting the regiment and company of their choice. This they considered an act of injustice, and it caused many of them to desert, and for the same reason they are now unwilling to return to their commands. But I learn that many of them have expressed a desire to join the Army if allowed to go into a new organization, and I have no doubt they would do so if the right kind of opportunity is afforded them. Besides the advantage that would accrue to the country in adding men to the Army, it would be doing a very great service to the people of that section of the State if such an object could be accomplished. These men have in various instances banded together and committed serious depredations upon good citizens. They pillage, plunder, and steal horses and everything else that is of any use to them. In fact, they are a terror to the people. Last spring they burned the court-house at Elba, in Coffee [County], and murdered four of the best citizens of that county. They have also murdered several of the best citizens of Dale County. In some parts of that country it is exceedingly dangerous for a loyal man to travel.

As to Captain Brown, I have been well acquainted with him for years, and take pleasure in saying that I know of no one better fitted than him for such an undertaking. He is an experienced officer, bold, firm, intelligent, and of unswerving integrity.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES N. ARRINGTON,
Solicitor of the Eighth Circuit.

P. S.—I should have added that Judge Cochran, the judge of the circuit, stated to me that he would not hold court in Coffee and Dale Counties unless he is protected by the military. He has not held court in those counties for the last two years.

J. N. A.

---

MONTGOMERY, ALA., January 30, 1865.

Maj. Gen. JONES M. WITHERS:

SIR: Inclosed I send you a letter written by Judge Yelverton, of Elba, Coffee County, upon the subject of authorizing Capt. J. C. Brown to organize a battalion or regiment of men who are and have been for some time out of the reach of the Government as deserters and skulkers. I write this to say to you that I was the solicitor of the circuit embracing Coffee County, by virtue of my office as attorney-general, for near twenty years before the commencement of the war, and am now and have been since the war posted on the condition of things in that section, and am perfectly satisfied you could not do a better thing for that portion of the country and the advancement of our cause there than to confer the authority sought for by Captain Brown and his friends. No set of men were stronger for secession and more loyal at the commencement of the war than many of those men who are now deserters. What private griefs they have to take their present status I know not, except they are generally poor men, and there was much difficulty in the way of having their families provided for in their absence. This, added to the fact that they were assigned to companies in the service not of their choice, and the fact that they resided near the coast of Florida, from whence were occasional raids by the enemy, partly prompted them to take the position as deserters. Considering that they had perhaps forfeited their lives, and their characters ruined, many of them, I understand, have been giving the enemy not only aid and comfort, but actually fighting against us. Many of them desire to return if they can be allowed to join in an organization by Captain Brown, whom they all know. He lives among them, and they know him well, and know that he is a high-minded, brave, and generous man. That section has suffered much in the loss of some of our best citizens by the hands of the Yankees, aided by these deserters. These men will never go back to their old organizations if they can help it; and if they are not brought in in this way we will not only lose that number from our ranks, but will have them fighting against us. You may judge of the exposed condition of the country in that section when I tell you that I understand from the solicitor of that circuit now, J. N. Arrington, esq., that the presiding judge of that circuit refuses to hold the courts down there unless he has a military escort to protect him against the deserters and skulkers. That judge is the Hon. John Cochran, whom you know—a man not likely to ask for anything of that sort unless there was real danger. If this authority is given Captain Brown I have no doubt he can induce several hundred to return to our ranks, enough to defend that section and some sent elsewhere. These deserters are frequently between eighteen and forty-five, stout and healthy, brave, and understand the use of fire-arms. I hope you may grant the authority requested. I have not the least doubt that those higher in authority than yourself would approve the project if they understood the facts of the case thoroughly.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. A. BALDWIN,
Attorney-General of Alabama.

[Inclosure.]

COFFEE, January 15, 1865.

Col. M. A. BALDWIN:

DEAR SIR: Our mutual friend, Capt. J. C. Brown, visits General Withers on business very important. He has on foot a project for bringing in and organizing a battalion or regiment of men who are and have long been out of reach of the Government—deserters, skulkers, &c. Captain B[rown] received from Major-General Withers authority to accept them, organize them, &c., and by the time he got to work was ordered off to Pollard, Mobile, &c., but has now 100 in readiness, with full assurance of all that is out down this way and to the coast—2,000 or more—if he can be so fortified as to assure them that he can hold and command them, not have them sent off in every direction. They are tired of the woods and swamps, and could be made good soldiers if they can be humored, and without it they are lost. Brown could gradually work them into any service required. He is the man for it. They fear and respect him. Go with him to General Withers and do all you can. It will aid the Government and rid the country of a continual terror, and, I think, stop desertion and hiding out down this way. Many of them, [who] have been highly respectable, ran off and hid out after supporting the Government, serving in the field, and putting in substitutes, and feel that they were badly treated. Many, too, who have been for months with the Yankees, can be reclaimed. If General W[ithers] has not authority, get him to make application to the War Department. It will not do for Brown to go any further without Government authority. His life and property would be open to them. They have been told that it is a trap set for them, and many have threatened him if it fails. I hope it may be arranged safely. Captain B[rown] is well worthy of the promotion, and can easily succeed if permitted. He is yet suffering from his wound and on furlough.

Respectfully,

G. T. YELVERTON.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
January 30, 1865.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I have the honor to inclose and submit to your consideration a letter* addressed to the Commissary-General by Major Noland, urging the necessity of supplying gold or U. S. Treasury notes for the purchase of supplies. Having informed the Commissary-General that the resources of the Treasury did not admit of the payment of specie in satisfaction of requisitions, he requested that the whole matter might be referred to you as one of "vital and immediate importance." In the meantime several cargoes of commissary stores have been received at Charleston, and contracts have been made for the introduction of supplies at other points through the enemy's lines, to be paid for in cotton.

I have the honor to remain, your obedient servant,
G. A. TRENHOLM,
Secretary of the Treasury.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., January 31, 1865.

HONORABLE SECRETARY OF WAR:

SIR: I have the honor, by direction of the President, to forward for your attention and the proper action a copy of a resolution of the House of Representatives of the 30th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the President be respectfully requested to communicate to this House: First, the number of soldiers from each State added to the military service by enrollment, volunteering, or otherwise since the enactment of the act of April 16, 1862, commonly known as the "conscription act;" second, the number of those within the conscript age, exempt, or detailed, discriminating as to the classes of each, in each State; third, the number of those within the ages of eighteen and forty-five years not disabled or unfit for active service in the field who are employed in the respective States in executing the law of conscription, or in connection with post commissaries and post quartermasters, or otherwise in derogation of existing laws.

Very respectfully,

BURTON N. HARRISON,
Private Secretary.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., January 31, 1865.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

SIR: I have received the following resolution of the Senate, referred by Your Excellency to this Department:

Resolved, That the President of the Confederate States be requested to communicate to the Senate the information asked for in the resolution of the Senate adopted on the 17th day of November last as to the number of persons in each State exempted from military service by reason of being claimed as State officers, and also the further information in response to the resolutions of the Senate of the 9th day of November last as to the number of exemptions and details for express, telegraphic, and railroad companies, &c., which the chief of the Bureau of Conscription stated in his letter communicated to the Senate in partial response to said resolutions was then being procured.

---

*See R. W. N. Noland to B. P. Noland (with indorsements), January 20, p. 1031.

In response I have the honor to transmit herewith a report from the acting superintendent of conscription giving the information called for by the Senate, and stating the reasons which have caused the delay in replying to the resolution.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

RICHMOND, VA., February 1, 1865.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON:

MY DEAR SIR: You are too well acquainted with the reasons which have delayed my answer to your letter of the 18th ultimo* to need any explanation on the subject, and must be too well assured of my warm personal regard and official confidence to render necessary any expression of the regret I feel at being deprived of your aid and counsel at this critical juncture in our affairs.

I have hoped that further reflection would induce a change in your views, but as this has not been the case I am not at liberty to question the reasons for your decision. It is a matter exclusively for your private judgment whether you should be controlled by an expression of opinion on the part of the Virginia delegation in Congress that it would be advisable to "reorganize my Cabinet by relieving all the present heads of departments." I have no choice but to acquiesce in your conclusion that you cannot longer fill your present position without impaired usefulness, nor without doing violence to your own feelings.

I cannot, however, recognize the propriety of your decision, because I cannot admit the existence of a power or right in the legislative department of the Government or in any part or branch of it to control the continuance in office of those "principal officers in each of the executive departments," whose choice the Constitution has vested in the Chief Magistrate; whose advice in writing he is empowered to require, and whose tenure of office is exceptional, being made to depend expressly on "the pleasure of the President." The relations between the President and the heads of the executive departments are, from these, of the closest and most intimate character; they imply mutual confidence and esteem and a general concurrence of opinion on administrative policy, and it is not a constitutional function of the legislative department to interfere with these relations; nor can it be assumed that a change of the heads of departments would alter the administrative policy of the Government without also assuming as true the injurious supposition that the President has permitted them to pursue a policy at variance with his own, and has thus failed to do his own duty as chief of the executive department.

The notion that under our form of government an expression by the legislative of want of confidence in the executive department is an appropriate exercise of constitutional power and should cause a change in the Cabinet is quite unfounded, and it is not difficult to see that it arises from a false analogy, that most fertile source of error. In Great Britain a vote of the House of Commons expressing a want of confidence in the ministry has a controlling influence because the Parliament governs. With us it is the reverse. The two cases are so distinct as to be opposite rather than parallel to each other. In Great

---

*Not found.

Britain the ministry are the executive government. The Sovereign rules but does not govern. In the Confederacy the heads of departments neither rule nor govern. In Great Britain the Sovereign is irresponsible and "can do no wrong," and the ministry alone are responsible. In the Confederacy the President may do wrong and is responsible for so doing. The remedy for his wrong-doing is impeachment by the House of Representatives. The Senate is without power even to impeach and can only act as judges when the House impeaches.

In Great Britain, the crown being hereditary as well as irresponsible, the control of the people over the policy of the Government consists in refusing, by their Commons, the grant to the Sovereign of supplies necessary for carrying on the Government. In the Confederacy the people choose the President as well as the Congress, and by giving him a term of six years and making the tenure of office of the Cabinet "his pleasure" have debarred themselves from the power of enforcing any change of administrative policy during that time. It is known that this lengthened term of six years without re-eligibility was conferred by our Constitution on the Executive for the express purpose of imparting stability to the Government and of withdrawing all motive for courting popular favor at the expense of duty.

In Great Britain the ministry are members of the legislative department, originate laws, guide administration, exercise the appointing power to all offices (the sovereign power being in practice purely nominal), are apprised in advance of the grounds of a proposed vote of want of confidence, and have the power and means of defending themselves. In the Confederacy the exact reverse of all this is the case, and the heads of departments are not even admitted to the right of debate on subjects appertaining to their departments as contemplated by the Constitution.

In Great Britain, even after a vote of censure, the ministry may dissolve Parliament and appeal to the country, which has not unfrequently reversed the vote. The Commons are thus restrained from factions or unfounded charges by the responsibility of making them at the peril of being discountenanced by the people, and thus losing their own seats. In the Confederacy the exact reverse of all this is again the case, and a vote of want of confidence would be free from all salutary restraint or responsibility.

It is needless to continue this exposition. It is too clear for doubt that the legislative and executive departments deriving equally their existence from the votes of the people, it would be quite as proper for the executive department to express want of confidence in the legislative department as for the latter to express distrust in the former.

In stating these views nothing is further from my intention than to deny to enlightened public opinion, where deliberately formed after knowledge of facts, its just and legitimate influence.

Such public opinion is almost invariably correct, and can rarely be disregarded without injury to the public weal. My purpose is simply to deny that the declaration of a State delegation, or even a vote of one or both Houses, is entitled to be considered as the authentic expression of such opinion or as requiring concession from a co-ordinate department of the Government.

I have been led into this digression by the peculiar circumstances which have given rise to your resignation. They are without precedent. I cannot, however, refuse to relieve you from duties which the action of your State delegation has rendered distasteful to you. That you have devoted yourself with entire singleness of purpose to the public welfare; that your labors have been incessant, your services important, and your counsels very valuable to myself and to your colleagues, would be as readily attested by them as by myself. The regret that our official relations now end is relieved by the reflection that you will be near me, and by the assurance that I can ever call on you with confidence for any aid that you can render in private life.

Our personal relations, so pleasant during our official intercourse, will not, I trust, be interrupted, and you carry with you in your retirement my warmest wishes for your health and prosperity.

With cordial esteem, your friend,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

HDQRS. GEORGIA RESERVES AND MIL. DIST. OF GEORGIA,
Macon, Ga., February 1, 1865.

HON. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: I beg leave to call your attention to the inclosed communication from the commandant of conscripts for this State. The importance of correcting some of the evils complained of cannot be too strongly impressed upon your mind. It is useless to repeat my views on the subject of the conscript law, as I have already presented them to you in full and earnest letters,

I am, very respectfully, yours, &c.,

HOWELL COBB,
Major-General.

[Indorsement.]

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, February 22, 1865.

Respectfully returned to the Secretary of War.

This Bureau has frequently urged upon the attention of the Government the matter of this letter. Precisely similar statements come from every State in the Confederacy. The Bureau has no authority and no means to correct the evil. It receives and puts on duty the officers assigned. The commandants devote themselves earnestly and intelligently to have the service performed by these officers, but with results such as are stated by General Browne. The service never will be performed satisfactorily until intelligent and suitable officers are selected and permanently assigned to the duty.

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

[Inclosure.]

HEADQUARTERS CONSCRIPT SERVICE, GEORGIA,
Augusta, January 28, 1865.

Maj. Gen. HOWELL COBB,
Comdg. Georgia Reserves and Military District of Georgia:

GENERAL: In reply to your communication directing me to urge the enrolling officers to greater energy and assiduity in the discharge of their duties, I have the honor to state that I am painfully aware of the shortcomings of my subordinates and of the perfect justice of your complaints. Some months ago I made a strong representation to the superintendent of the Bureau of Conscription in reference to the incompetency of the great majority of the enrolling officers and of their failure to discharge their duty. I have the honor to send you herewith a copy of that communication.

You are aware, general, of the accuracy, in part at least, of this representation, and you are also aware of the other grave difficulties which exist in this State to prevent the efficient execution of the conscript laws. The Executive of the State and his officials and partisans, aided by a few prominent and influential public men in the State, have persistently labored to oppose the execution of these laws and to create public opinion not only hostile to their execution but commendatory of their evasion. The class of men now liable to conscription, and who have hitherto kept out of the service, cannot be reached under the present system. Instead of finding their security condemned as dishonorable, they find it approved, if not connived at, by some whose positions ought to be a warrant of a different course of conduct. It is therefore obvious that men assigned to the duty of dragging these skulkers from their hiding places should be chosen for their activity, zeal, and intelligence—in a word, the exact opposite of those who are acting under my orders. I think, general, you will do me the justice to acknowledge that so far as my personal exertions could secure the faithful execution of the law they have not been spared. I have seen the difficulty. I have exposed the evils while I was powerless of myself to remedy them.

There is another matter which I desire to bring to your attention, and that is the impossibility which has hitherto existed of trying and punishing delinquent officers. For the past five months I have had officers in arrest on most serious charges and been unable to bring them to trial from the absence of any military court in the State. I have had the honor on several occasions to bring this matter to your earnest attention. If a permanent court were established for the speedy punishment of offenses and neglect of duty, and properly qualified men, irrespective of age or physical condition, ordered to report for enrolling duty, the service can be performed.

I have the honor to be, general, your obedient servant,

WM. M. BROWNE,

Commandant of Conscripts for Georgia.

[Sub-inclosure.]

HEADQUARTERS CONSCRIPT SERVICE, GEORGIA,

Augusta, November 24, 1864.

Brig. Gen. JOHN S. PRESTON,

Superintendent Bureau of Conscription, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: Your telegram of to-day in reference to the discrepancy between the official report for September and the registration returns as to mail contractors, impels me in self-defense to inform you specially of the utter incompetency of the majority of those assigned to duty as enrolling officers. Seven months' experience has proved to me conclusively that out of the whole number employed in the conscript service in the State there are not twenty who possess one qualification for the office. To remove men now on duty because of incompetency and replace them by others of the class at my disposition, would be simply to put incompetent men who know nothing whatever in the place of incompetent men who have learned something, small though it be. For the most part, the enrolling and sub-enrolling officers belong to the lower and poorer order of society.

They are ignorant and stupid, and even where they are not lazy, are inattentive to their duties. They must be selected from men physically unfit for the service, and of this class all who are good for anything get recommended for duty in some pleasanter and more popular branch of the service performed by men found for light duty. No one who can get employment with a quartermaster, commissary, tax collector, or even in a hospital, will ask assignment where, if he does his duty at all, he is sure of having hard work and much unpopularity. The consequence is, I have none but the refuse of the light-duty men, who can even by courtesy be said to read and write. The men who have been disabled in the Army and are assigned to enrolling service are, whether they are commissioned or not, generally ignorant, always incapable of activity and energy, and mostly destitute of the desire to do their duty. They regard their assignment as a retirement with allowances in addition to pay given them as a reward for field service, and that the fulfillment of the duties intrusted to them is not expected. Of the two classes, the light-duty men assigned by me and the army officers and soldiers ordered to report to me because found unfit for anything else, I am positive that the latter are the more worthless.

There can be no more forcible illustration of this neglect and incompetency than the general failure to obey the order given in my circular on May 16 to make a full list of the State exemptions and others, and of the manifest inaccuracy of the monthly returns. I will give you another instance. When the registration returns were just handed to me of the county of Richmond, including the populous city of Augusta, they exhibited the names of thirteen boys who would reach the age of seventeen during the ensuing year. A repetition of the work showed a widely different state of facts. So long, general, as the present system of appointing disabled, stupid, and illiterate men to perform duty requiring activity, intelligence, and education, the result will be failure; but if the plan proposed in circular of the Bureau of Conscription, No. 55, series of last year, is adopted, and competent men chosen (for their competency), appointed as enrolling officers, the duty will be done and the conscript service be made as important as it deserves to be.

I have alluded only to the incompetency of enrolling officers. I have not mentioned the frauds and corruption which mark their track everywhere, carefully covered, but yet observable and keenly felt. I desire earnestly to see the duty (second in importance to none) well and efficiently performed. I am deeply mortified at any failure in this State. I see and feel the deficiency, and beg respectfully to bring it strongly to your attention in the hope that through you it may be corrected. It is vain to pass laws unless the proper agents be allowed to execute them.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. M. BROWNE,

Colonel and Commandant.

---

SCHEDULE NO. 10.

OFFICE BOARD COMMISSIONERS FOR IMPRESSMENT FOR TENN.,
Headquarters, Aberdeen, Miss., February 1, 1865.

In accordance with the act of Congress to regulate impressment, the following schedule of prices for produce and army supplies, furnished at the usual places of delivery, is agreed upon and published by the Board of Commissioners for the State of Tennessee, to continue in force until altered or revised:

Articles.	Description.	Quantity.	Price.
Apples	Dried	Per bushel of 28 pounds	$3.50
Axes	With handles	Each	7.00
Do	Hand	do	6.00
Bacon	Sides, corn fed	Per pound	1.30
Do	Hams, corn fed	do	1.30
Do	Shoulders, corn fed	do	1.20
Beans		Per bushel of 60 pounds	3.00
Beef-cattle	Gross	Per pound	.25
Brandy	Peach or apple	Per gallon	3.50
Barrels	Flour	Each	3.00
Do	Molasses	do	5.00
Brick		Per 1,000	25.00
Chains	Trace	Per pair	7.00
Corn	Shelled	Per bushel of 56 pounds	2.25
Do	Unshelled	Per bushel of 70 pounds	2.10
Corn-meal		Per bushel of 48 pounds	2.25
Coffee	Rio	Per pound	6.00
Candles	Tallow	do	1.80
Flour	Superfine	Per barrel of 196 pounds	80.00
Do	Fine	do	22.05
Fodder	Baled	Per hundredweight	2.20
Do	Unbaled	do	2.00
Hogs, fat		Net, per hundredweight	75.00
Do		Gross, per hundredweight	60.00
Hogs, unfatted		do	50.00
Hay	Native grass, baled	Per hundredweight	2.25
Do	Native grass, unbaled	do	2.00
Do	Timothy or clover, baled	do	3.00
Do	Timothy or clover, unbaled	do	2.75
Hides	Dry	Per pound	1.80
Do	Green	do	.90
Horses	First class, artillery	Each	750.00
Do	Second class, artillery	do	600.00
Do	Third class, artillery	do	450.00
Do	First class, cavalry	do	750.00
Do	Second class, cavalry	do	600.00
Do	Third class, cavalry	do	450.00
Iron	Pig, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, average	Per gross ton	110.00
Do	Square or round	Per net ton	450.00
Do	Flat or band	do	400.00
Do	Hoop	do	550.00
Do	Boiler plate	do	625.00
Do	Serviceable railroad T	Per gross ton	210.00
Do	Unserviceable railroad T	do	100.00
Do	Strap rail	do	150.00
Kettles	Camp, iron	Per pound	1.50
Lard		do	1.30
Leather	Harness	do	3.75
Do	Sole	Per pound	3.75
Do	Upper	do	4.50
Lumber	Square edged	Per hundred	4.00
Do	Rough edged	do	2.00
Molasses	Cuba cane	Per gallon	6.00
Do	Chinese cane	do	3.00
Mules	First class	Each	600.00
Do	Second class	do	525.00
Do	Third class	do	375.00
Oats	Baled	Per hundredweight	1.80
Do	Unbaled	do	1.60
Do	Shelled	Per bushel of 34 pounds	1.80
Onions		Per bushel of 57 pounds	5.00
Pasturage		Per head per month	1.50
Potatoes	Irish	Per bushel of 60 pounds	4.00
Do	Sweet	do	1.75
Peaches	Dried, peeled	Per bushel of 38 pounds	5.00
Peas		Per bushel of 60 pounds	3.00
Pans	Mess, sheet iron	Per pound	1.50
Rye		Per bushel of 56 pounds	3.75
Rice		Per pound	.20
Sugar	Brown, common	do	1.75
Do	Brown, fair	do	1.90
Do	Fully fair	do	2.00
Do	Prime	do	2.35
Do	Strictly prime	do	2.50
Do	Choice	do	2.80
Do	Extra choice	do	3.00
Do	Clarified	do	3.50

Articles.	Description.	Quantity.	Price.
Sugar .....	White clarified .....	Per pound .....	$4. 00
Salt .....	.....	Per bushel of 50 pounds .....	7. 50
Socks .....	Woolen .....	Per pair .....	2. 00
Do .....	Cotton .....	do .....	1. 50
Soap .....	Hard .....	Per pound .....	. 75
Do .....	Soft .....	do .....	. 35
Shoes .....	Army .....	Per pair .....	15. 00
Shovels .....	Long handled .....	Per dozen .....	80. 00
Spades .....	.....	do .....	80. 00
Sheep .....	Sheared .....	Per head .....	15. 00
Do .....	Unsheared .....	do .....	20. 00
Shucks .....	Baled .....	Per hundredweight .....	1. 50
Do .....	Unbaled .....	do .....	1. 25
Tallow .....	.....	Per pound .....	1. 30
Tea .....	Black .....	do .....	10. 00
Do .....	Green .....	do .....	15. 00
Vinegar .....	Cider .....	Per gallon .....	1. 50
Do .....	Manufactured .....	do .....	. 60
Wheat .....	.....	Per bushel of 60 pounds .....	5. 50
Wheat straw .....	Baled .....	Per hundredweight .....	1. 00
Do .....	Unbaled .....	do .....	. 75
Whisky .....	.....	Per gallon .....	3. 50
Wool .....	Washed .....	Per pound .....	4. 00
Do .....	Unwashed .....	do .....	3. 00
Wagons .....	Wooden axles, 4-horse .....	Each .....	350. 00
Do .....	Iron axles, 4-horse .....	do .....	450. 00
Do .....	Wooden axles, 2-horse .....	do .....	250. 00
Do .....	Iron axles, 2-horse .....	do .....	350. 00

LABOR.

	Quantity.	Price.
Hauling .....	per cwt. per mile .....	$0. 05
Hire of 2-horse team, wagon, and driver:
Rations furnished by owner .....	per day .....	10. 00
Rations furnished by Government .....	do .....	7. 00
Hire of 4-horse team, wagon, and driver:
Rations furnished by owner .....	do .....	12. 50
Rations furnished by Government .....	do .....	9. 00
Hire of 6-horse team, wagon, and driver:
Rations furnished by owner .....	do .....	15. 00
Rations furnished by Government .....	do .....	11. 00
Hire of laborer:
Rations furnished by owner .....	do .....	2. 00
Rations furnished by Government .....	do .....	1. 50
Do .....	per month .....	25. 00
Rations and clothing furnished by Government .....	do .....	15. 00
Hire of mechanics for mechanical purposes; rations and clothing furnished by Government, per month .....		30. 00

The following enumerated articles to be paid for under the act of Congress regulating manufactures, to wit: Woolen cloths, drills, flannels, hats, jeans, Osnaburgs, domestic shirting and stripes, sacking and tent cloths, 75 per cent. on the net cost of production.

The undersigned deem it proper to state that the above schedule of prices is adopted in accordance with the maximum schedule of prices agreed upon by the commissioners in convention assembled at Montgomery, Ala., on the 20th day of September (convened by order of the Secretary of War), representing the States of South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and Tennessee, and are the prices at which alone Government agents can, without violation of the law, impress private property; and for the information of all concerned that section of the impressment act which prescribes the pains and penalties incurred by a violation of its provisions is hereto appended:

SEC. XI. That any commissioned or non-commissioned officer, or private, who shall violate the provisions of this act shall be tried before a military court of the corps to which he is attached, on complaint made by the owner or other persons; and on conviction, if an officer, he shall be cashiered and put into the ranks as a private; and if a non-commissioned officer or private, he shall suffer such punishment not inconsistent with military law as the court may direct.

Extract from General Orders, No. 30, Adjutant and Inspector General, dated March 7, 1864:

V. In all cases in which the offer of an impressing officer is refused he will proceed to adjust the price according to the first section of the act above recited; that is, by the judgment of the two loyal and disinterested persons of the city, county, or parish in which the impressment may be made, one to be selected by the owner, his bailee, or agent, and one by the impressing officer. In the event of their disagreement, these two will select an umpire of like qualification. The persons thus selected will proceed to assess just compensation for the property so impressed, whether the absolute ownership or the temporary use thereof be required. If the impressing officer believes that the appraisement is fair and just, he will indorse his approval and pay for the property, and the right in the object impressed will become the property of the Confederate States; but if he does not approve of the appraisement he will decline to approve it, and indorse the reasons for his refusal on the certificate and forthwith report the case to the commissioners appointed under the fifth section of the act to which the act above recited is an amendment; and in the meantime the property will be taken and a receipt describing the property and proceedings for adjustment of the price and the appeal given to the owner. The impressing officer will immediately report the case to the appraisers, with the statement of the quality and condition of the property, and his opinion on the subject.

W. E. TRAVIS,
WM. H. SNEED,
Commissioners.

---

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, February 2, 1865.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: At the request of Colonel Screven, president Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, I have the honor to state that the railroad connection between Albany and Thomasville is of vast importance to the Government. It would not only keep connection between our armies and a section of country extremely fertile, but make available for transportation purposes a large amount of rolling-stock and railway iron otherwise hopelessly cut off from the routes of travel and transportation on which all active military operations depend. As this connection with Southern Georgia and Florida, and with all their products and railway improvements, was once made through Savannah, hereafter it would be quite as effectually made through Albany.

I am satisfied the value of the supplies to be transported from those fertile sections has not been overstated by Colonel Screven. The obstacle which is usually interposed in the way of attempting the construction of any new line does not present itself here, for there is both iron and rolling-stock in abundance not only close at hand for their purpose, but not available for any other.

So far as the connection between Quincy and the Chattahoochee may be considered a competing project for the favor of Government, I remark that while it would serve in a measure the purpose of securing the supplies of that immediate country (though much of it by a circuitous route), it would be almost useless in securing the rolling-stock for service elsewhere. With such boats and such navigation as the Chattahoochee River can furnish, it would occupy months to remove their rolling-stock, if, indeed, it were possible to accomplish it at all. Moreover, the supplies drawn from the country contiguous to the Chattahoochee are of themselves sufficient to occupy all the transportation on that river, leaving it altogether insufficient to accommodate the additional amount proposed to be thrown upon it. But there should be no competition between these improvements, as the one does not necessarily exclude the other. The resources from which they will respectively draw will not be the same, and therefore not conflict. The rolling-stock, iron rails, labor, and food would be controlled by each improvement from its own vicinity.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, ORDNANCE BUREAU,
Richmond, February 2, 1865.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: In answer to the following extract of a resolution of the Senate of the 24th of January—

* * * First. With information as to the number of white men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five and of the number of negroes who, in addition to their own officers, may be required for the necessary employments and the proper discharge of the functions of the departments of * * * Ordnance Bureau, * * *

I have the honor to submit that there were borne on the rolls of this department on the 1st of October, 1864, 3,433 white men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, including contractors and their employés. General Orders, No. 82, reduced this number to 2,691, turning over to the enrolling officers 742. Of the number thus turned over full one-half were mechanics of the classes now needed to push on work. These must be returned—say 400. This will leave our working force at the arsenals less by about 342 men than on the 1st of October, but will suffice. In addition, in order to raise the product of our armories in time to 55,000 arms per annum, 800 good mechanics must be added. Say that three-fourths of these will be white men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, the total required thus will be:

Number in workshops December 31.....	2,691
Number of those taken by general orders to be returned.....	400
Number to be added for additional product of arms.....	600
Total.....	3,691

This would give us a total of 258 more workmen than we had October 1, 1864, but would raise the product of arms from 20,000 to 55,000 (in time). The number of negroes on the rolls of the department during the past year is 830; add to these, say, 1,000, in the employ of contractors, of which there are no returns in this office, making 1,830 negroes employed. An addition of 50 per cent. should be made to that part of this force employed at the arsenals, &c., in order that as much as possible may be done with labor of this description, making 1,245 as the number needed at these establishments. This estimate is reduced to the smallest figures with which the operations of the Bureau can be successfully carried on.

Recapitulation.—White men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five (except officers), 3,691; slaves, 2,245.

Very respectfully,

J. GORGAS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Ordnance.

RICHMOND, VA., February 3, 1865.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

In response to your resolution of the 25th ultimo I herewith transmit a communication from the Secretary of the Navy covering copies of his correspondence with the Governor of North Carolina relative to "coals of the steamer Advance."

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

[Inclosure.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, January 31, 1865.

The PRESIDENT:

SIR: In response to the following resolution of the House of Representatives, viz—

Resolved, That the President be respectfully requested to transmit to this House copies of the correspondence between the Secretary of the Navy and the Governor of North Carolina touching the seizure of the coals of the steamer Advance by officers of the Navy Department—

Referred by you to this Department for attention, I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of my letters of the 28th of December last and 28th instant to Governor Vance and his reply of the 3d instant to the first-named letter, with accompanying papers.*

My last communication to Governor Vance was delayed by the causes therein stated.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. R. MALLORY,
Secretary of the Navy.

[Sub-inclosure No. 1.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, December 28, 1864.

His Excellency Z. B. VANCE,
Governor of North Carolina, Raleigh, N. C.:

SIR: Confident that you will be pleased to correct any error of statement into which you may have been inadvertently led, I beg leave to invite your attention to the following extracts from your recent message, and to the subjoined copies of official papers upon the subjects to which the extracts refer:

After losses by detention, the surrender of cargo space, &c., of not less than $200,000 in gold, I regret also to have to announce the loss of the steamer Advance during the month of September. This noble vessel, the pride of the State and benefactor of our soldiers and people, was captured by the enemy after she had successfully made her way through the blockade squadron, in consequence of the seizure of her coal for the use of the cruiser Tallahassee, compelling her to put to sea with North Carolina coal. This, being unsuited to her furnaces and machinery, rendered her incapable of making more than half her usual speed and left behind her a dense volume of black smoke, by which she was followed and captured. So obviously is her loss attributable to the unwarranted seizure of her coal, that I trust you will memorialize for compensation. The unwise policy of making our only remaining sea-port a resort for our cruisers cannot be too strongly condemned. It has doubled the stringency of the blockade, has already caused the loss of many valuable steamers, and will ultimately provoke the utmost efforts of the enemy to capture Wilmington. It is no exaggeration to say that the Advance alone, in solid benefits, has been worth more to our Government than all the cruisers we have ever had afloat. Why it should be the policy of our Government to compel the State to quit the importation of supplies for the common benefit, and then pursue a course with our armed vessels so well calculated to crush all importations whatever, is to me inexplicably strange.

* For Vance to Mallory, January 3, 1865, with inclosed certificates of O'Reilly and Harris, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, pp. 1006, 1157. For Savage to Murray, also inclosed, see p. 905, ante. For Mallory to Vance, January 28, 1865, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 1156.

Captain Pinkney, C. S. Navy, in command of naval forces at Wilmington, and under whose direction coals were obtained for the Tallahassee and Chickamauga, forwards the following report on the subject:

Flag Officer R. F. PINKNEY,
Commanding, &c.:

SIR: In reply to your verbal inquiry in reference to the impressment of coal on this station for the use of C. S. cruisers that have recently sailed from this port I have the honor to state that not one particle of coal was taken from the steamer Advance, nor one pound impressed to which the State or any of the joint owners of that steamer had the slightest claim. When the steamers Let-Her-B and Florie were being fitted out, a portion of the coal necessary for the supply of those steamers was taken from the wharf of Messrs. Power, Low & Co., the agents and part owners of the Advance; but I was distinctly informed by a member of that firm that this coal belonged to three different steamers not then in port. To one of these steamers I had lent about twenty tons of North Carolina coal to be returned in English coal, and the quantity taken from her just satisfied my claim. The other two steamers, as I have said, were not then in port, and the coal that belonged to them was lying there waiting their return. It is now alleged by the agents of the Advance that as they had control of this coal it might have been available for the Advance if the Government had not impressed it. This, however, is a mere probability, as other steamers belonging to this firm might in the meantime have come in short of fuel, to which this coal would have undoubtedly have been given. At any rate it did not belong to the Advance, nor was it retained for her exclusive use, and its being appropriated to her use depended upon a mere contingency—namely, her not being preceded into port by other vessels with an insufficiency of coal for their outward voyage. It will, then, be seen that the extraordinary statement ventured upon by Governor Vance in his late annual message, that the loss of the Advance is attributable solely to the impressment of coal by the Confederate States Government has very little foundation in fact.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. A. WILLARD,
Naval Coal Agent.

Forwarded by R. F. Pinkney, captain, &c.

You will perceive from this report that your statement as to coals taken from or belonging to the Advance was an error.

I deem it proper to advert particularly to the following paragraph of your message:

These cruisers sally forth with coal seized from steamers engaged in bringing supplies of vital importance, thus insuring their capture, destroy a few insignificant smacks, which only serve to irritate the enemy, and then steam back to Wilmington to seize more coal, bringing down upon the inlets a new swarm of the enemy's gun-boats.

It is not my purpose to discuss questions of policy, but simply to correct errors of fact, and I deem it unnecessary here to express an opinion upon the views which your letter presents relative to the use made of the port of Wilmington by Confederate cruisers. Nor, in reference to your remark as to the "course of the Government with our armed vessels so well calculated to crush all importations whatsoever," is it necessary to say more than that the number of vessels engaged in the blockade trade of Wilmington was never greater than at present.

It is proper to apprise you that no information of the loss of any steamer resulting from the impressment of her coals, other than that presented in your message, has ever reached this Department, nor have I any reason to believe that any vessel was ever lost from the cause stated in the foregoing statement. Under the orders of this Department but one day's fuel could be taken from any steamer, and the North Carolina coal substituted for the quantity thus taken could be burned at night without disadvantage or danger from its smoke.

To enable you to correct so much of your statements as limits the captures made by the Tallahassee and Chickamauga, from which you will perceive that those captures were not only more important than is consistent with your statement, but that nineteen out of the forty-six were square-rigged vessels.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
S. R. MALLORY,
Secretary of the Navy.

List of vessels captured by the C. S. S. Tallahassee, under command of Commander John Taylor Wood, C. S. Navy.

Date of capture.	Name of vessel.	Tonnage.	Disposition.
1864.
Aug. 11	Schooner Sarah A. Bayce .....	281 80-95	Scuttled.
11	Pilot boat Jas. Funk .....	120 91-95	Burnt.
11	Brig Carrie Estell .....	248 75-95	Do.
11	Bark Bay State .....	199 47-95	Do.
11	Brig A. Richards .....	274 30-95	Do.
11	Schooner Carrall .....		Bonded.
11	Pilot boat Wm. Bell .....		Burnt.
12	Schooner Atlantic .....	156 27-95	Do.
12	Ship Adriatic .....	989 22-95	Do.
12	Bark Suliate .....		Bonded.
12	Schooner Spokane .....	126 3-95	Burnt.
12	Brig Billow .....	173 31-95	Scuttled.
12	Schooner Robt. E. Packer .....	222	Bonded.
13	Bark Glenaron .....	789 3-95	Scuttled.
13	Schooner Lamot Dupont .....	194 14-95	Burnt.
14	Ship Jas. Littlefield .....	547	Scuttled.
15	Schooner Mary A. Hawes .....	61	Do.
15	Schooner Howard .....	147 69-95	Do.
15	Schooner Floral Wreath .....	54 11-95	Do.
15	Schooner Sarah B. Harris .....		Bonded.
15	Schooner Restless .....	49 45-95	Scuttled.
15	Schooner Etta Caroline .....	39 23-95	Do.
16	Bark P. C. Alexander .....	283	Burnt.
16	Schooner Leopard .....	73 92-95	Do.
16	Schooner Pearl .....	41 66-95	Do.
16	Schooner Sarah Louisa .....	81 3-95	Do.
16	Schooner Magnolia .....	35 23-95	Do.
17	Schooner North America .....	82 47-95	Scuttled.
17	Brig Neva .....	286	Bonded.
17	Schooner Achon .....	123	Burnt.
17	Schooner Diadem .....		Released
17	Schooner D. Ellis .....		Do.
20	Brig Roan .....	127 47-95	Burnt.

RECAPITULATION.

Burnt .....	16
Scuttled .....	10
Bonded .....	5
Released .....	2
Total .....	33

List of vessels captured by C. S. S. Ohustee (Tallahassee). Lieutenant Commanding W. H. Ward.

Name of vessel.	Tonnage.	Disposition.
Bark Empress Theresa.....	312	Burnt.
Schooner A. J. Bird.....	182	Scuttled.
Schooner E. F. Lewis.....	119	Do.
Schooner Napor.....	312	Do.
Brig L. D. Wagner.....	390	Do.
Ship Arcole.....	663	Do.

List of vessels captured by the C. S. S. Chickamauga, under command of Lieut. John Wilkinson, C. S. Navy.

Date of capture.	Name of vessel.	Tonnage.	Disposition.
1864.
Oct. 30	Bark Mark L. Potter.....	389	Burnt.
31	Bark Emma L. Hall.....	492	Do.
31	Ship Shooting Star.....	947	Do.
31	Bark Albion Lincoln.....	237	Bonded.
Nov. 1	Schooner Godspeed.....	233	Scuttled.
1	Schooner Otter Rock.....	91	Do.
2	Bark Speedwell.....	335	Bonded.

[FEBRUARY 5, 1865.—For Beauregard to Brown and Magrath, calling for all the available forces in the States of Georgia and South Carolina, see Series I, Vol. XLVII, Part II, p. 1104.]

[FEBRUARY 6, 1865.—For General Orders, No. 3, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, publishing "An act to provide for the appointment of a General-in-Chief of the armies of the Confederate States;" also appointing General Robert E. Lee to that position, and revoking General Orders, No. 23, of 1864, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 1205.]

[FEBRUARY 6, 1865.—For Davis to the Senate and House of Representatives of the Confederate States, submitting report of A. H. Stephens, R. M. T. Hunter, and John A. Campbell, of conference held with President Lincoln and Mr. Seward, in Hampton Roads, Va., see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 446.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, ENGINEER BUREAU,
Richmond, Va., February 6, 1865.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: In view of the difficulty in obtaining slave labor in the State of South Carolina under the act of 17th of February, 1864, on account of obstacles interposed by the State laws of that State, which render the labor unavailable for the purposes of the act, I have the honor, in compliance with your indorsement of 2d instant, to recommend that His Excellency the Governor of South Carolina be requested to obtain from the Legislature thereof a modification of the State laws upon the matter of impressment of slaves of such tenor and effect as may render the labor, when obtained by impressment agents in that State, available for all the military purposes of the Confederacy, as specified in the act of Congress above referred to; that is, that the time of impressment may be for twelve months; that the slaves may be used without the limits of the State when necessity may demand it, and for all the purposes enumerated in the act; that they may be subject to the control and supervision of Confederate authorities and agents, and be placed in all respects on the same footing as slaves impressed under that act in other States.

This recommendation was originally prepared under the impression that the Legislature of South Carolina was at this time in session. I have since learned, however, that it is not, and it is feared that these suggestions cannot be carried into effect at once.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. F. GILMER,
Major-General and Chief of Engineer Bureau.

OFFICE COMMANDANT OF CONSCRIPTS, ALABAMA,
Montgomery, February 6, 1865.

Capt. R. H. BROWNE,

Actg. Asst. Adj. Gen., Hdqrs. Reserve Forces, Alabama:

CAPTAIN: I herewith return letter of H. G. Humphries, enrolling officer, Mobile County, dated 27th of January, 1865, which was returned to this office from headquarters Reserve Forces, Alabama, asking "upon what ground does the decision rest that youths under seventeen may join commands with the assent of their parents, and not be liable subsequently to enrollment and assignment." I inclose a copy of the letter referred to by the enrolling officer, and also a copy of circular from this office, dated December 6, 1864, touching the same subject. The acts of Congress and orders predicated thereon have uniformly permitted parties liable to conscription to volunteer previous to enrollment under certain restrictions. The law and orders nowhere prohibit the enlistment of persons not liable to conscription. Therefore, if a youth is enlisted before he becomes liable under the law, he cannot be considered liable to conscription unless he has been discharged from the command in which he was enlisted. Of course a man is not considered (in law) an enlisted man or soldier until his name is borne upon the rolls of a legally organized company. Paragraph X, General Orders, No. 24, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, 1864, revoked all authorities that had been given to "raise troops or to recruit for any particular command." That paragraph is understood as having reference alone to special authority that had been given to certain officers. Such authority, for instance, as General Clanton held at one time, and such as Col. John C. Reid proposes to hold now. Under that paragraph a man would not be protected from enrollment if enlisted by any officer raising troops for the purpose of organizing a new company. It is not, however, understood as forbidding the enlistment of exempts into old and depleted organizations. I have long entertained the opinion that the policy of receiving youths under seventeen years of age into companies in the general service is pernicious, as they are often received when they have not sufficient physical development to enable them to undergo the hardships of the general service. Besides this it often operates as a conversion of the material that should be properly distributed where it is most needed. Young men use the privilege of volunteering to avoid a supposed odium of being enrolled by conscript officers, and generally under the cavalry or artillery service. Believing that such recruits were not desirable, it has been my policy not to encourage their enlistment, and hence the publication of circular of 6th of December, 1864. I am of the opinion that the publication of a general order by proper authority positively prohibiting the enlistment of youths under seventeen years of age into commands in the general service would promote the best interests of the service. In fact, I do not believe that the interest of the service is promoted by allowing conscripts to volunteer before enrollment. They should all be sent to camps of instruction and assigned, when practicable, to commands of their choice.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. C. LOCKHART,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Commandant, Alabama.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVES OF ALABAMA,
Montgomery, February 9, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded.

The true points involved in the case are not clearly presented, either in the communication of inquiry from the enrolling officer at Mobile, or in the response of Lieutenant-Colonel Lockhart. There is no law or order in force authorizing the enlistment of persons not liable to conscription otherwise than as prescribed in paragraph IV, General Orders, No. 22, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, Richmond, February 23, 1864. That order requires the enrollment of such parties wishing to volunteer, and authorizing transportation to be furnished them to their commands. The usual interpretation given of this paragraph is, that the enrollment only entitles to transportation, and was not intended to restrict the right or prescribe the mode of volunteering. Such may have been the correct interpretation of the intention of the order when first published, which was only six days after the passage of the act of the 17th of February, but such interpretation is certainly not in harmony with the policy adopted and the system inaugurated by the Government since that date.

The purpose of the Government, as I understand it, has been to correct irregularities and abuses by systematizing the dispositions of present and prospective material for filling up our armies. Why were the enrolling officers required to take the census of the youths between sixteen and seventeen years of age in their respective counties for the information of the Government, if it was not to ascertain the annual prospective material on which the Government could rely for replenishing our armies? Why are enrolling officers and camps of distribution established? Why are monthly reports showing disposition of every man required from these camps? And why is it that applications to be placed in general service from individuals and from organized companies of youths between the age of seventeen and eighteen are all rejected? These are certainly more capable of bearing the hardship and exposure incident to the general service than are those of more tender years. It cannot be, therefore, that it is the intention or policy of the Government to permit to this latter class a privilege which it has time and again denied to the former. Again, paragraph X, General Orders, No. 42, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, Richmond, April 14, 1864, may have been intended simply to revoke all special authorities theretofore given to raise troops and recruits for particular commands, and as an isolated order its intent might thus be properly limited. Not so, however, when taken as one of a series of orders all tending to show the gradual development of a policy and system to be perfected and adopted. If I am mistaken in the policy of the Government and intent of existing orders, then a youth the day before he arrives at the age of seventeen years, and after he shall have been notified by the enrolling officer to appear at his office on the date of his being seventeen years of age, may be taken by his father to any of the many privileged companies occupying, temporarily at least, bombproof positions, without reference to the demands of the service or interests of the country, and thus avoid enrollment and defeat in part, at least, its object. The facts of the case which have rendered necessary the settlement of this question substantially agree, I think, with the one supposed. My order to the enrolling officer was not to permit such parties to continue in the companies thus enlisting them, but to request of the general commanding at Mobile an order for such parties to be turned over to him for enrollment and such disposition as was required by his instructions. I request the decision of the Department and its instructions.

J. M. WITHERS,
Major-General.

[Second indorsement.]

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

There is no prohibition of law upon the enlistment of youths under seventeen when the consent of the parents is given. But the Department has never approved the practice of their enlistment, and has only allowed it upon special applications. The Department has not given to any officer the power to make such enlistments specially for general service, and would not do so except in a special case. Enlistments in particular (under such authorities) companies for general service would not be legal, and when they attain the age of seventeen the youths should be withdrawn and placed in the reserves. The Department would not regard enlistments under such authorities as legal, unless the authority contained the express provision that such youths might be enlisted. It is contrary to the general policy.

By order:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

ENROLLING OFFICE, MOBILE COUNTY,
Mobile, January 27, 1865.

Lieut. GEORGE WRAGG,
Adjutant, Montgomery:

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 25th instant in regard to the enlistment of youths under seventeen years of age. According to article 1402, Army Regulations, it would appear that this class of persons had the right to join a command with the consent of their parents, but how do you get around paragraph X, General Orders, No. 42, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, April 14, 1864? If the authority to recruit be revoked, the question arises how can any person join without passing through the enrolling office? And if they pass through the enrolling office why would they not be subject to the same regulations in being sent to camp for assignment that is required of persons over seventeen? Major-General Withers thinks, indeed asserts, that all youths who have joined commands before they were seventeen are liable to be enrolled and sent to camp for assignment when they arrive at the age of seventeen. Captain Tobin has, so I learn, 142 men in his company, whilst he is only allowed 84 men, being an artillery company. About the time of my assignment to this office I am certain that a number of young men, both under and over eighteen, joined different companies for the purpose of avoiding the enrolling officer, and I think for the purpose of selecting companies with a view of doing as little service as possible. The young men who joined Tobin's battery, and which gave rise to my first letter upon this subject, received a furlough of twenty days as soon as they joined. Captain Tobin, I am pleased to state, seems to be a very popular officer, as there appears to be a great disposition to join his command. I am somewhat at a loss to know what course to pursue in the case now at issue until the decisions of Major-General Withers and Lieutenant-Colonel Lockhart are reconciled. I do not want to take any step that I cannot sustain, and I therefore submit the case again to the commandant with a view to my final action in the premises.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. G. HUMPHRIES,
Enrolling Officer.

[First indorsement.]

OFFICE COMMANDANT OF CONSCRIPTS, ALABAMA,
Montgomery, Ala., January 31, 1865.

Respectfully referred to Major-General Withers for his decision.

H. C. LOCKHART,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Commandant, Alabama.

[Second indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVES,
Montgomery, February 4, 1865.

Respectfully returned to commandant of conscripts.

Upon what ground does the decision rest that youths under seventeen may join commands with the consent of their parents and not be liable subsequently to enrollment and assignment?

By command of Major-General Withers:

R. H. BROWNE,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Third indorsement.]

OFFICE COMMANDANT OF CONSCRIPTS,
Montgomery, Ala., February 6, 1865.

Respectfully returned to Major-General Withers, with remarks inclosed.

H. C. LOCKHART,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Commandant.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

OFFICE COMMANDANT OF CONSCRIPTS OF ALABAMA,
Montgomery, January 25, 1865.

Private H. G. HUMPHRIES,
Enrolling Officer, Mobile, Ala.:

I am directed by the commandant (Alabama) to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 20, and to state that this office has no control of a youth under seventeen. They cannot be mustered into service except in the manner provided for by article 1402, Army Regulations.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. WRAGG,
First Lieutenant and Assistant Adjutant.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

CIRCULAR.]

OFFICE COMMANDANT OF CONSCRIPTS,
Montgomery, Ala., December 6, 1864.

It having been brought to the notice of this office that in some instances [orders] have been given to parties under seventeen years of age to report to the Army, enrolling officers are instructed that they have no authority over any party under seventeen or over fifty years of age, and that any action on their part in regard to such parties, except in cases specially directed, is unauthorized and forbidden.

By order of H. C. Lockhart, lieutenant-colonel and commandant for Alabama:

G. A. CARY,
First Lieutenant and Adjutant.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, February 6, 1865.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War:

DEAR SIR: I have received information from numerous citizens of Burke County that certain persons profess to have authority from the Confederate Government to distill grain into whisky in that county, and that they have and now are buying up grain at high prices for that purpose. The citizens from whom I receive this information represent that grain is very scarce in that section of the State, and that the families of soldiers and the poor and needy will require all the surplus which can be spared from the Army. It is also stated that the whisky when so distilled is to be converted into vinegar, and is not to be used for hospital purposes. I am informed that it has been urged upon the Confederate authorities, as a reason for granting such privilege, that large quantities of pork can be raised from the swill of these distilleries, but surely such a reason could not influence their action. If the object is to raise pork, it can be much better effected by feeding the grain directly to the swine. Knowing as I do the wants of the community whose interest is thus to be affected, I most earnestly insist that if such permission has been granted it be immediately revoked.

With sentiments of much respect, your obedient servant,
 Z. B. VANCE.

[Indorsement.]

BUREAU OF SUBSISTENCE,
Richmond, February 15, 1865.

Respectfully returned to the Honorable Secretary of War.

Some whisky is needed for issue to the troops when much exposed, and more for the manufacture of vinegar. The distillation was ordered in Burke County, N. C., because of the difficulty of transporting the corn from that section of country. As no distillation is permitted in Virginia or North Carolina along the lines of railroad, I see no reason to change my decision.

L. B. NORTHROP,
Commissary-General of Subsistence.

CIRCULAR.]

WAR OFFICE,
February 7, 1865.

The Secretary of War desires that you will prepare at once, for his information, a succinct but clear statement of the means and resources you have on hand for carrying on the business of your Bureau and your ability for carrying it on, and what impediments exist and what is necessary for that purpose.

Respectfully,

R. G. H. KEAN,
Chief of Bureau of War.

(To Chiefs of Bureaus.)

MONTGOMERY, ALA., February 7, 1865.

General J. C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: Lieutenant Gordon, of the Army of Virginia, and a brother of Major-General Gordon, will hand you this letter. He will show you the authority he received from the late Secretary of War to raise a cavalry company in Georgia and explain his wishes in reference to the change which he proposes. Whilst I cannot recommend the application as made, and am firm in the conviction that all such irregular authorities only gender confusion, yet I think the services of Lieutenant Gordon might prove valuable in North Alabama, and that if ordered to report to me there would be no great difficulty in raising at least a company for him with which to operate in that now infected section of the State.

Although this communication is not intended as official, I hope you will excuse me for requesting your attention to the condition of the reserve forces and of the conscript service in this State as reported to the late Secretary of War in communications of the 15th and 17th of December last. To render the reserve forces efficient the change in officering them is indispensable. To correct abuses, if not actual corruption, in the conscript service, and to infuse energy and efficiency into the system, there must be a change in what I consider its present organization. If the general of the reserves in each State is held responsible for the conscript service in his State, he should certainly have full authority to change and remove officers from positions for which he found they were incapacitated, or in which he believed they were acting improperly, if not corruptly. The tone of public feeling in this State is most lamentably despondent. The old Unionists and reconstructionists (mostly of the Douglas faction) have seized on late reverses and been most active in charging them all on the President as their author, in having removed General Johnston. The straggling, scattered, undisciplined, disorganized condition and consequent lawless conduct of the Army of Tennessee in passing through the State has unfortunately added much to the success of disloyal efforts to increase despondency, spread discontent, and organize opposition to the Government and to the continuance of the war. Deserters and stragglers by the hundreds are now scattered broadcast throughout this State, and such is the state of public sentiment that in half the counties in the State they can remain with impunity. It is my opinion that life and efficiency infused into the reserve forces by giving to them capable officers, and energy, impartiality, and strict integrity imparted to and exacted of every one engaged in the conscript service, will go far toward correcting the evils now existing. I do not know what authority, if any, I have in the removal and changing of officers engaged in conscripting. I have sought information on the subject, but none has been given. Had I the power I should deem it my duty to exercise it promptly in several cases. Under existing circumstances I should deem it advisable to change even the commandant of conscripts for the State, Lieutenant-Colonel Lockhart, and replace him with some Alabama officer of known experience and established integrity, who would have a home influence to sustain him. Col. Charles Forsyth, of the Third Alabama Regiment, now of the Army of Virginia, has the qualifications for the position, and would, besides, be sustained by a political influence once of controlling power over those who are now busy in disseminating disloyal sentiments. There is something wrong in the working of the conscript system in this State. The feeling of our best and most intelligent citizens in this county and in the majority of the counties of the State is that there is neither the proper energy nor fair dealing. I have endeavored to sift the matter time and again, and although entirely unsuccessful in developing corruption, yet the surroundings would render full confidence impossible. This suggested to me the propriety of regular and frequent changes. New brooms are said to sweep clean, and I know new enrolling officers manifest most energy.

Please excuse my writing so much, and when your leisure permits, write me as to the authority I am expected to exercise in the matters referred to, and whether, without detriment to the service, Col. C. Forsyth can be ordered to report to me for assignment to duty as suggested.

I am, general, very truly, yours,

J. M. WITHERS.

[First indorsement.]

FEBRUARY 22, 1865.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF WAR:

Please note remarks of General W[ithers] in regard to changing officers, &c., and inform me of the rule under existing laws and orders.

J. C. B.,
Secretary of War.

[Second indorsement.]

Under the existing laws the commander of reserves has no power to make any changes in officers—none whatever. (The act of Congress of 17th of February, 1864.) The companies and regiments composed of reserves are to be organized under regulations to be made by the President, and have the right to elect their own officers. Officers in the conscription service are appointed by the President. The officers provided for by the law are commandants of conscripts and drill-masters. All other officers are assigned for duty to the regiments, and are generally disabled as supernumerary officers. When such officers are assigned generally to commander of reserves he can assign them to duty. The commanders of conscripts are appointed by the Department upon the recommendation of the Bureau.

[J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.]

[Third indorsement.]

FEBRUARY 28, 1865.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF WAR:

Under present regulations and orders I am not informed whether the commandant of reserves has the power to make changes in the officers of the conscription service in his State. Please consider this point also.

J. C. B.,
Secretary of War.

[Fourth indorsement.]

SECRETARY OF WAR:

Colonel Lockhart has the character, and no doubt properly, of being an efficient and capable officer. Colonel Forsyth has a command in the Army, and it would not be consistent with the usage to transfer him to conscription service. My own opinion is, and it is corroborated by that of others, that he has not ability to discharge the duties of commander of conscripts. He is quite a young man, of no large experience in the management of business, and has not that knowledge of law and of the orders and regulations of the conscription business that is required.

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

GENERAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 4. } Richmond, February 8, 1865.

I. Commanders of armies, departments, or districts will enforce the following act of Congress in all sections in which the enemy may be advancing. They will hold subordinate officers charged with the duty of carrying out its provisions responsible for its proper execution:

AN ACT to regulate the destruction of property under military necessity, and to provide for the indemnity thereof.

SECTION 1. The Congress of the Confederate States of America do enact, That the military authorities of the Confederate Army are hereby authorized and directed to destroy cotton, tobacco, military and naval stores, or other property of any kind whatever, which may aid the enemy in the prosecution of the war, when necessary to prevent the same, or any part thereof, from falling into the hands of the enemy.

* * * * *

Approved March 17, 1862.

II. Officers will be calm and considerate in the performance of the duty enjoined by these orders. They will not be justified in the destruction of property unless the necessity therefor be reasonably established.

III. As far as practicable notice of the approach of danger should be given owners of property, and every precaution for its removal that circumstances will permit should be taken.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

GLEN ALLEN, HENRICO, February 8, 1865.

[President DAVIS:]

MY DEAR SIR: Impelled by the perils of our country and the thousand conflicting theories as to the cause and cure to continually have these things before me, I have been amazed to see that no one thus far has conceived, or if conceived had the boldness to present, in my judgment, the only solution of all these perils and difficulties. I address you because you have already taken a long stride in the right direction, and because I believe your mind has already reached the true solution, but owing to peculiar circumstances has hesitated to enunciate it. The history of this war demonstrates the wonderful fact that the Confederate States mainly subsists both of the immense armies engaged in the conflict, and actually, after furnishing all the soldiers to one army, contributes about one-half of those making the army of its enemies, and should the war continue for another year the South will probably furnish two-thirds of the army of her foes. These facts, which cannot be controverted, show certainly anything but weakness or inferiority on the part of the South; but it does show that a change of policy in relation to the conduct of the war, and that a radical one, must be adopted or we shall be destroyed. Let us look at a few facts: The Yankees have now in their service 200,000 of our ex-slaves, and under their next draft will probably have half as many more. We have not one soldier from that source in our ranks. It is held by us that slaves will not make soldiers, therefore we refuse to put them in the service, and I think are correct in so doing; but while we thus think and thus act our enemies are creating, in addition to their white force (which we have found to our cost in the last year to be quite as large as we could manage), an auxiliary army of our own escaped slaves of 300,000 or 400,000 men. Now, however we may decry the negro as a soldier, every one knows that if the white troops of the Yankees are numerous enough to hold all ours in check, then this negro army can at will ravage and destroy our whole country, and we will be absolutely conquered by our own slaves. We allege that slaves will not fight in our armies. Escaped slaves fight and fight bravely for our enemies; therefore a freed slave will fight. If at the beginning of this war all our negroes had been free does any one believe the Yankees would have been able to recruit an army amongst them? Does any one know of a solitary free negro escaping to them and joining their Army? If our slaves were now to be freed would the Yankees be able to raise another recruit amongst them? If freedom and amnesty were declared in favor of those already in the Yankee lines would they not almost to a man desert to their old homes? Would not our freed negroes make us as good soldiers as they make for our enemies? Again, suppose we free a portion of our slaves and put them in the Army, we leave all the rest as a recruiting field for the enemy, from which we cannot get a single soldier, and thus we see one-half of our entire population of no avail to us, but on the contrary ready at every opportunity to join the ranks of our enemies.

Now, sir, Southern soldiers are the best that ever drew a blade in the cause of liberty, but there are some things which they cannot do; they cannot fight our battles against overwhelming numbers, and raise the necessary supplies for the Army and the women and children at home; and yet, sir, this is what they will be called upon to do if this war is protracted for two years longer. I ask, sir, then, in view of these facts, if the prompt abolition of slavery will not prove a remedy sufficient to arrest this tide of disaster? The Yankee Army will be diminished by it, our own Army can be increased by it, and our labor retained by it. Without it, if the war continues, we shall in the end be subjugated, our negroes emancipated; our lands parceled out amongst them, and if any of it be left to us, only an equal portion with our own negroes, and ourselves given only equal (if any) social and political rights and privileges. If we emancipate, our independence is secured, the white man only will have any and all political rights, retain all his real and personal property, exclusive of his property in his slave; make the laws to control the freed negro, who, having no land, must labor for the landowner, and being an adequate supply of labor must work for the landowner on terms about as economical as though owned by him. We cannot consent to reconstruction even if they repeal all their laws and withdraw all their proclamations in regard to us, our lands, and our negroes, because they now have, or at any session of their Congress can make, the necessary number of States to alter the Constitution in a constitutional manner, and thus abolish slavery and interfere in any other way they think proper. But even if the present Administration should pledge anything we may ask, it binds no one but themselves during their own term of service, which you of course understand better than I do; and suppose they should even promise, and stand by their promise, to pay us for our negroes, lost or to be emancipated, how will they pay us? They cannot by direct taxation, but only in levying an export duty on our products—cotton, tobacco, and naval stores; and this war has shown them and the world, if not us, how much they will bear, cotton commanding $1 per pound, tobacco $3, tar $200 per barrel, &c. To pay their war debt and free our negroes would make a debt of $6,000,000,000 or probably $8,000,000,000, the interest of which at 5 per cent. would take $400,000,000 of revenue to pay, and to raise something additional to extinguish the principal would require an additional $100,000,000. Thus you see an export duty to this extent would be levied and could easily be raised upon our own products; 20 cents upon cotton, which would make the price about 32 or 33 cents the world would pay, because they must have it and have bought it for much more, would bring an annual income of about $400,000,000 without counting the duty on tobacco and naval stores; but even with this most favorable view of the case, we should lose the whole of our own war debt, which is or will be, say, $2,000,000,000. Of course this would be repudiated, and justly, by our enemies if we consent to reconstruction; whereas if we emancipate we save the $2,000,000,000, and we can pay for the negroes $4,000,000,000 more, and the export duty on cotton alone (which we should have levied if we go back into the Union) will pay the interest upon this at 5 per cent., and leave $100,000,000 as a sinking fund to extinguish the principal in some thirty or forty years, and the slave-owner have all his labor on his farm that he had before (for, having no home and no property to buy one with, he must live with and work for his old owner for such wages as said owner may choose to give, to be regulated by law hereafter as may suit the change of relation).

And this $6,000,000,000 is not a debt we tax ourselves to pay, but the world pays it. The speculator who buys the cotton and pays the duty makes the manufacturer pay him his 10 or 15 per cent. net profit on his gross outlay; the manufacturer makes the merchant pay him his 10 or 15 per cent. on his gross outlay; the merchant charges the retail dealer his 10 or 15 per cent. on his gross outlay, and so on till the shirt is made, and he who wears it out pays the duty and all the different percentages upon it. Thus we will pay to the extent of our consumption of the exported article when manufactured and returned to us—a mere nothing when compared to the immense gratuity, $6,000,000,000, which the world makes to us, and which they so justly should be made to hand over to us for the cold-blooded, heartless indifference with which they have contemplated the bloody, inhuman, barbarous, and apparently hopeless contest in which we have been engaged, and which they at any moment could have arrested by a word. By emancipation I think we would not only render our triumph secure, as I have attempted to prove, in and of itself, but in all future time the negro, in place of being useless in time of war as a soldier, and really dangerous, as we have seen to our cost, continues to be an element of strength; and I think we may reasonably hope that the nations of the earth would no longer be unwilling to recognize us, for surely no people ever before struggled so long and under so many difficulties and endured so many privations so uncomplainingly as we have without finding some friendly hand outstretched to encourage or to help; and there can be no other reason than that we are exclusively and peculiarly a nation of slave-holders. I think that even amongst our enemies numbers would be added to those who are already willing to let us go in peace, for we should thus give the lie at once and forever to the charge that we are waging a war only for negro slavery, and the heart of every honest lover of human liberty throughout the world would sympathize with the men who for their cherished rights of freemen would wage such an unequal contest as we have waged, and besides sacrificing all their earnest convictions as to the humanity and righteousness of slavery, were willing to sacrifice their property interest of $4,000,000,000 to secure their independence, which might all be saved, so far as the promises of our enemies are concerned, by reconstruction. In my judgment the only question for us to decide is whether we shall gain our independence by freeing the negro, we retaining all the power to regulate them by law when so freed, or permit our enemies through our own slaves to compel us to submit to emancipation with equal or superior political rights for our negroes, and partial or complete confiscation of our property for the use and benefit of the negro. And, sir, if the war continues as it is now waged, and we are forced, by the overwhelming odds of the Yankees and our own slaves in arms against us, into submission, it would be but an act of simple justice for the Yankee Government to see to it that their negro allies are at least as well provided for in the way of homes as those who have been arrayed in arms against them. I have always believed, and still believe, that slavery is an institution sanctioned, if not established, by the Almighty, and the most humane and beneficial relation that can exist between labor and capital; still I think that this contest has proven that in a military sense it is an element of weakness, and the teachings of Providence as exhibited in this war dictate conclusively and imperatively that to secure and perpetuate our independence we must emancipate the negro.

P. S.—We should then get rid of the only impediment in the way of an exchange of prisoners, thus getting 30,000 or 40,000 more men in the field.

I have given you what I conceive to be the only solution to our difficulties. How to effect this is a serious difficulty. Men are reluctant—in fact it might be imprudent to discuss this thing publicly, but we know that in great crises men think and act rapidly, or at least should do so. If Congress could be convinced of the correctness of this course they could, in convention with the Governors of the States, devise some method by which conventions of the States could be held and the necessary measures adopted; first by law of Congress, if necessary, provide for paying the owners for them. I have not found a single slave-holder with whom I have conversed but is willing to submit to the measure if deemed necessary by the proper authorities. Indeed, I have no doubt of the power of Congress as a military necessity to impress all of the able-bodied male negroes and pay for them, giving them their freedom, and providing for paying for the rest upon the condition of manumission, but the other course would be least objectionable. We burn an individual's cotton, corn, or meat to keep it from the enemy, so we can take his negro man and set him free to keep him from recruiting the enemy's Army.

I have written you this much hoping it may aid you in some way. I have shown what I have written to no one, nor communicated my intentions to any one. If you think what I have written worth anything, make what use of it you choose. If not, just stick it between the bars of your grate. What I have written is with an honest endeavor to aid you in guiding our ship through the perils and darkness which surround her, and from no feeling of dissatisfaction or distrust as to yourself, for you have all my sympathies and all of my trust and confidence.

With diffidence and the warmest admiration and respect, I remain your friend,

J. H. STRINGFELLOW.

P. S.—Written very hurriedly and with no effort at arrangement, but only as "food for thought."

J. H. S.

I opened the envelope to say that my communication was written before I heard of the return of our commissioners, and that I am more than sustained by their report and the action of the Yankee Congress on the slavery question, and now we have only to decide on or between emancipation for our independence or subjugation and emancipation, coupled with negro equality or superiority, as our enemies may elect.

J. H. S.

[Indorsement.]

Respectfully referred, by direction of the President, to the Honorable Secretary of War.

BURTON N. HARRISON,
Private Secretary.

BUREAU OF ORDNANCE,
Richmond, February 9, 1865.

Hon. J. C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War:

SIR: In reply to your circular of 7th of February, received yesterday, I have the honor to inclose copies of "annual report" marked No. 1,* "special report" of December 31, 1864, No. 2,† and "report of operations—whites and slaves needed," No. 3.‡ No. 2 contains all the information as to the "ability" and "means and resources" of the Bureau. As to "impediments," I know of none which I cannot overcome, except the persistent and continuous interference with our workmen on account of military operations. If this source of disorganization and weakness be not finally disposed of there is no possibility of sustaining the operations of the Bureau.

The "special report" of December 31, No. 2, shows that 800 men must be added to our force of mechanics at the armories, and report No. 3 shows that about 3,691 men liable to military duty, and about 2,245 slaves, are required for the whole operations of the Bureau. These are minimum figures. If these men and slaves can be permanently attached to this Bureau, and an adequate force be attached in the same manner to the Niter and Mining Bureau, I will answer for the supply of ordnance and ordnance stores to the Army. It will, however, be necessary that the Commissary and Quartermaster's Departments co-operate in so far as the feeding and clothing of this force is concerned. This is rendered necessary because these departments enjoy almost a monopoly of the resources for food and clothing in the country.

There is wanted, therefore, for home productions, first, a force of workmen adequate to the production of a minimum supply of ordnance and ordnance stores for the Army. This force is shown in paper No. 3. Second. That this force should be permanently attached to the Bureau and in no way liable to be interfered with by any one. Third. That a minimum supply of food and clothing should be furnished by the Subsistence and Quartermaster's Departments.

The "impediments" to the importation of such supplies as must still come from abroad must be overcome as they arise by individual energy and resource.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. GORGAS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Ordnance.

P. S.—The "impediment" arising from want of money is so overshadowing that I have presumed that to be removed to begin with.

J. G.

BUREAU OF FOREIGN SUPPLIES,
Richmond, Va., February 9, 1865.

General JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War:

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your circular of the 7th instant asking for a "succinct and clear statement of the means and resources on hand for carrying on the business of my Bureau, and what impediments exist and what is necessary for success."

*See October 13, 1864, p. 733. †See p. 986. ‡See February 2, 1865, p. 1054.

Under the orders of the War Department I have been charged with the purchase, repairing, compressing, and shipment of cotton for the Government, the proceeds of said shipment passing into the Treasury and subject to requisitions of the several bureaus and departments of the Government; with the purchase and receipt of foreign supplies, to be paid for in cotton; and, incidentally, with most of the foreign correspondence of the War Department. The cotton on hand, and that which may be purchased with $15,000,000 estimated and asked for through the Secretary of War, together with the usual transfers from the Treasury Department, and, if required, that to be procured by requisition through the several bureaus of the War Department, will be sufficient to make all purchases of supplies for the War Department and shipments for the Treasury Department through blockaded ports.

The fall of Fort Fisher and the loss of Wilmington as a port will diminish the receipt of supplies and shipment of cotton through the blockaded ports. The quantity of these supplies and shipments cannot be approximated, because it will depend upon the number of ports held by us and the effectiveness of the blockade. The Secretary of War has, upon my application, directed the removal of the Engineer Bureau to Georgetown, S. C., to see if it can be so protected with guns and works as to secure the safety of vessels entering and departing. The Secretary of the Navy has directed his officers to render aid in protecting vessels coming into Saint Mark's, Fla. The matter is of such importance now, I think, as to justify the Department in assigning a good engineer officer to the special duty of examining what other ports or inlets may be made available, with power immediately to provide whatever is necessary for the protection of vessels entering them.

The introduction of supplies and providing vessels with cotton at such ports and inlets remote from railroads will require the hearty co-operation of the Quartermaster's Department in furnishing transportation. With protection to the vessels, and transportation to provide cotton and remove supplies, these ports and inlets will be availed of to the utmost extent, and will, I trust, insure considerable success.

Within the last few months the question has been much discussed whether cotton should be used across the enemy's lines to procure through those lines coin for the Treasury and supplies for the Army. The question being settled affirmatively, John S. Wallis, esq., was placed on the general duty within the department of Lieutenant-General Taylor, purchasing all necessary supplies, to be paid for in cotton, and delivering the same to the officers of the various bureaus for distribution. Intimations have been recently given of the early delivery of large supplies of meat, shoes, blankets, &c., along the Atlantic coast and in Alabama from Pensacola. I think the trade should be limited to supplies indispensable to the Army. In close connection with the sale of cotton for supplies the Honorable Secretary of the Treasury is selling for coin, and there is entire accord and co-operation between the War and Treasury Departments in these transactions. The cotton required for purchase of supplies can be provided from the sources already named.

In conclusion I beg leave to say that unless the trade across the enemy's lines is prohibited I think all general supplies, such as meat, shoes, blankets, &c., can be obtained. Articles specifically contraband under Federal Treasury Regulations will have either to be smuggled in through this trade or introduced by extraordinary inducements along the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts. Arrangements are already in progress to secure lead, saltpeter, sheet copper, leather, &c., along the Florida coast.

In view of these facts I would respectfully recommend that proper guns and works be placed at Georgetown, S. C., at the mouth of the Santee River, and at Saint Mark's and Apalachicola, Fla.; that an engineer officer be designated to examine upper inlets or places on the coast where vessels may enter, and to provide protection for them; that the Quartermaster-General be instructed to direct his officers to furnish transportation for cotton and supplies when called upon by the agents of this Bureau.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
THOS. L. BAYNE,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
SURGEON-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., February 9, 1865.

Hon. JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: In reply to the circular of the 7th instant from your office I have the honor to submit the following report:

By recent instructions the superintendent of conscription has (on authority of the War Department) directed that all disabled men detailed from the Army of Northern Virginia should be returned for such duty as they may be able to perform in the field.

Objections cannot reasonably be made to this, provided the men not found equal to any duty in the field be returned to the same hospital from which they have been taken. But by Circular No. 35, of December 2, 1864, from the Bureau of Conscription, generals of reserves are directed (on the authority of the War Department) to organize for certain local service "all men found for light duty and not otherwise assigned and actually employed," which deprives the Medical Department of the opportunity to replace with conscripts found for light duty the detailed men relieved from duty in the manner above stated, or to fill the requirements arising from time to time for hospital attendants. The hospitals cannot be properly conducted without a liberal allowance of white attendants, and it is recommended that Circular No. 35, of 1864, from the Bureau of Conscription be modified so as to permit either conscripts found for light duty, or reserves over forty-five years of age, to be assigned as hospital attendants.

Under the authority of law embodied in General Orders, No. 69, of 1863, and No. 25, of 1864, soldiers sick or wounded, and likely to remain unfit for military duty for sixty days, are furloughed.

It is undoubtedly humane to furlough these men, but the practice is wholly inconsistent with preserving and maintaining an army. Many of the men are lost sight of and never return. It is recommended that the law be repealed. Furloughs should only be authorized by orders to be granted as circumstances may demand.

Foreseeing the many and great difficulties to be encountered in procuring medical supplies from foreign countries through the blockade, attention was given at an early day to the establishment of medical laboratories, and the manufacture of medicines at Lincolnton, N. C., Charlotte, N. C., Columbia, S. C., Macon and Atlanta, Ga., and Mobile and Montgomery, Ala. While these laboratories have been engaged more especially in the manufacture of medicines heretofore universally procured from abroad, great attention has been given to the manufacture of indigenous remedies which are now administered by medical officers in lieu of medicines of foreign origin with favorable results.

In the beginning of the war the department was compelled to depend entirely upon purchasing agents and contracts awarded to individuals for a supply of hospital furniture, bedding, &c., and which contracts in a majority of cases were never filled. It was then determined to assume direct control of the manufacture of these articles, and artisans were detailed from the ranks of the Army and when practicable disabled soldiers were employed.

These employes of the laboratories, purveying depots, and distilleries are in a great measure expert chemists, druggists, and distillers, and men of professional skill, whose services are absolutely indispensable for the manufacture of medicines, hospital furniture, and alcoholic stimulants. It is therefore hoped that the Honorable Secretary will see the necessity of these men being permanently attached to the Medical Department, as the practice of constantly changing these employes is productive of delay and embarrassment to the department. It is also important that they should be exempt from all military duty, for if called out in an emergency, when the purveyor is called upon to fill requisitions for the wounded, it is evident that suffering must ensue in consequence of their absence. Medical supplies can only be put up by skilled druggists. For the supply of alcoholic stimulants the department has been until recently dependent upon contracts with individuals. It was ascertained that this mode of supply was susceptible of gross fraud, for although expressly forbidden by the terms of the contract, the contractors not only manufactured an excess over the quantity called for by the contract, but frequently manufactured so indifferent and spurious an article that the department was obliged to reject it, thus leaving large quantities of whisky in their hands, which they readily disposed of at prices largely in advance of Government rates. At the suggestion of this Bureau, Congress at its last session granted authority to the Surgeon-General to establish distilleries for the manufacture of alcoholic stimulants. Accordingly they have been established at Salisbury, N. C., Columbia, S. C., Macon, Ga., and in Wilcox County, Ala. The distilleries at Salisbury and Columbia are manufacturing from 200 to 500 gallons each of whisky and alcohol per day. Those at Macon and in Wilcox County, Ala., will be ready to commence operations in two or three months, when all contracts for stimulants throughout the country will be canceled.

A large portion of the grain consumed by these distilleries is rendered useless for other purposes, being damaged in transportation or from insecure storage, and turned over by the quartermasters to this department. Thousands of bushels of grain are thus saved to the Government and made available for army purposes. Arrangements have been perfected with the Quartermaster's Department to supply the distillery at Salisbury with grain, thus avoiding competition between the agents of the two departments in the market. It is contemplated to make similar arrangements with the Quartermaster-General to supply the distilleries in Georgia and Alabama so soon as they are ready to commence operations, and it is recommended that instructions be given that officer to furnish the necessary grain when notified by the Surgeon-General that he is ready to receive it.

The late Secretary of War gave orders to the Quartermaster's Department to furnish all the bureaus of the War Department with cotton goods sufficient to supply their wants. Estimates were accordingly forwarded to the Quartermaster-General by this Bureau, but as yet not a yard has been furnished, and there seems to be no probability of obtaining a supply from this source. Arrangements are now being perfected with a company in South Carolina to sell to the Medical Department, on liberal terms, the entire product of their factory.

There is another subject of great importance to which the attention of the Secretary of War is earnestly invited. The sick and wounded in the large hospitals in and about the city, and at certain other places, are now subject to intense suffering in consequence of the failure of the Quartermaster's Department to furnish fuel.

At one of these hospitals (Chimborazo) the surgeon in charge for two years furnished his own wood, during which time there was an ample supply. The quartermaster declined to permit this arrangement to continue, and each winter since this hospital has been inadequately supplied.

The surgeon in charge of Jackson Hospital has the offer of a contract for wood to be supplied the hospital; the quartermaster refused to make the contract, stating that he had made ample provision. At Winder hospital the surgeon in charge during the past summer or fall offered, if he was provided with a small number of teams, to supply his own fuel. The quartermaster refused, asserting that he could supply the hospital with the wood required. These cases are mentioned to show that the fuel could have been provided.

A serious difficulty in conducting the hospitals arises from the failure of the Commissary Department to furnish the hospital funds. Very general complaint has been made on this subject—one of importance, as without the hospital fund it is impossible to supply the sick and wounded with necessary supplies. The hospitals have also been embarrassed by the non-payment of the hospital attendants by the Quartermaster's Department.

Attention has been given recently to the importation of supplies through our lines on the Mississippi River and the Gulf border of Mississippi and Alabama. Cotton is exchanged for medical supplies, and in consequence of the recent disaster at Wilmington it is believed that this trade, will constitute the chief source of supply. This department has obtained medicines in this manner through the energy of Surg. Richard Potts, who has had exclusive control of the importation of such articles as are most needed, until recent orders from the War Department, taking entire control of transactions of this nature, has impaired his usefulness and put a stop in a measure to the supply. The Honorable Secretary's attention is earnestly invited to the necessity of allowing Surgeon Potts (located at Montgomery, Ala.) ample means of obtaining medical supplies in the manner indicated.

The department has on hand of some articles a twelve-months' supply, of others a limited supply, but if allowed to retain its skilled employes at the various laboratories, purveying depots, and distilleries, and to import medicines freely through our lines in Mississippi and Alabama, no fear need be entertained that the sick and wounded of the Army will suffer for the want of any of the essential articles of the supply table.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. P. MOORE,
Surgeon-General C. S. Army.

---

[FEBRUARY 9, 1865.—For Northrop to Breekinridge, in response to circular of February 7 (p. 1064), with accompanying documents relating to the Subsistence Department, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, pp. 1211-1226.]

---

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Raleigh, February 9, 1865.

Hon. S. R. MALLORY,
Secretary of the Navy:

SIR: Your communication of the 28th ultimo* has been received, in regard to what you are pleased to term "a question of fact" between yourself and me. I have not the slightest objection to your proposed adherence to the statements made in your former communication. I only desire to be admitted [permitted?] a similar privilege of adhering to my own allegations in regard to the loss of the Advance. Nor do I care to argue the "question of fact" so gravely made upon me, involving only a quibble as to whether coal in the possession of my agent was in my possession. The distinction between that kind of possession which is required to support an indictment for larceny and that required to sustain an action of trespass, vi et armis, might be learnedly descanted upon here, but as you very properly observe in reference to my allusion to the supposed coal on board the Advance, it would be "unnecessary to the determination of the single question of fact." But though such is my susceptibility to reason, I may be induced to forego an argument on the question of the possession of my agent being my possession. I confess I am not quite ready to admit that the possession of A B, abstractly considered, is not the possession of A B, or that other remarkable proposition that the legal and undisputed possession of an article affords not "the slightest claim" of property. And yet such doctrine I understand you to advance when acknowledging that Power, Low & Co. were part owners of the steamer Advance, that your agents took 169 tons of coal from them, you yet assert "that not one particle of coal was taken from the steamer Advance," nor one pound impressed, to which the State or any of the joint owners of that steamer had the slightest claim. Now, in the name of Blackstone, Coke, and all the lawyers at once, from Moses to Captain Pinkney, who did have any claim to that coal? Who was its owner?

But really, my dear sir, I think this correspondence had better close, and leave the public and the proper committee in Congress to determine the question between us. If the taking from my agent of coals collected by him for the use of my vessel and his did not justify me in my statements to the Legislature, then I am content they should say so. I desire, of course, no difficulty with the Navy Department or any other branch of the Government, struggling and straining as they are in the public defense. I was induced more particularly to make this public complaint because it was not the first time that the coals for my steamer had been seized by the Confederate authorities in Wilmington, and for the further reason that from the first I met with nothing but opposition from all sides in my efforts to clothe the troops of North Carolina. I mentioned those other matters, to which you allude as irrelevant to the present question, simply because I considered the general policy of my message on this head as assailed by you, and as I have assailed the policy of the Government. Now that the fall of the defenses of the Cape Fear and the closure of our last port have given a melancholy confirmation to my strictures, I have no more to say.

---

* See Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 1156.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Z. B. VANCE.

RICHMOND, February 10, 1865.

Brig. Gen. A. R. LAWTON,

Quartermaster-General:

GENERAL: By authority of the Governor of Alabama I have contracted with sundry parties to import army stores, payment of the same to be made in cotton. The prices fixed in said contracts vary but little from prices established by the Quartermaster's Department under the contract system. The object of the State is simply to aid and assist the Confederate States in obtaining army supplies, and as far as possible clothe the troops from Alabama. The only obstacles to the successful operation of the plan is the prohibition on the shipment of cotton. I have the honor to request that you will request the Honorable Secretary of War to give such orders as will permit me to ship such cotton across our lines as may be necessary to pay for army stores received under contracts with the State. My object is to aid your department, and I will regulate the issue of clothing according to the regulations of the Army, giving the troops from Alabama preference in all cases. I propose, after the stores are delivered to me within our lines, to transfer them to your department at cost price, to be paid either in cotton or gold, or Confederate Treasury notes, or I will make the issue direct to the troops, upon requisitions properly approved, and I will hold the receipts of the brigade quartermasters as a claim upon the Confederate States.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

DUFF C. GREEN,

Quartermaster-General of Alabama.

P. S.—The following prices annexed to each article are to be the rates at which said articles, whether furnished by the State of Alabama to the Quartermaster's Department of Confederate States for the troops from Alabama or issued directly to said troops under arrangements alluded to in foregoing letter. The prices are to be as follows: Gray and blue cloth, per yard, $7.50; flannel, per yard, $1.50; blankets, each, $10; shoes, per pair, $10. The above specified prices to be paid in cotton, 50 cents per pound; that is, the goods to be sold and the cotton received on a gold basis, and all other stores at proportionate rates on like conditions. All other contracts will be carried out by delivering goods at cost price, with 50 per cent. added to cover all risks and charges to time of delivery, the cotton in payment for same to be furnished to contractor at 30 cents per pound in the same currency as the original invoices.

D. C. G.

[First indorsement.]

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, February 15, 1865.

Respectfully submitted to the Secretary of War, with the recommendation that the facilities asked in behalf of the State of Alabama be granted, at least as to existing contracts held by the State. The supplies will be needed, and this department has always aimed to avail of State credit and resources abroad. The specific prices stated within are but little in excess of those that ruled in contracts made prior to the adoption of the port regulations in which cotton was expended at 10 pence per pound.

A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General.

[Second indorsement.]

FEBRUARY 18, 1865.

Referred to Lieutenant-General Taylor.

Authority is given to Lieutenant-General Taylor to grant proper authority to the officers of the State of Alabama to carry into effect the objects of this letter, taking the precaution necessary to prevent any abuse of the license he may grant.

By order:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

[Third indorsement.]

MONTGOMERY, March 19, 1865.

Respectfully referred to Colonel Surget, assistant adjutant-general, who [will] issue necessary instructions to protect supplies introduced for use of State of Alabama, under the within authority, special application to be made for exportation of cotton in each case.

By command of Lieutenant-General Taylor:

W. F. BULLOCK, JR.,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

[FEBRUARY 10, 1865.—For Smith to Davis, in reference to an organization of frontier State troops in Texas, wholly under control of the State authorities (with inclosures), see Series I, Vol. XLVIII, Part I, p. 1373.]

---

RICHMOND, February 11, 1865.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS,
President of the Confederate States of America:

SIR: When Senator Johnson, of Missouri, and myself waited on you a few days since in relation to the prospect of annoying and harassing the enemy by means of burning their shipping, towns, &c., there were several remarks made by you upon the subject that I was not fully prepared to answer, but which, upon subsequent conference with parties proposing the enterprise, I find cannot apply as objections to the scheme.

First. The combustible material consists of several preparations and not one alone, and can be used without exposing the party using them to the least danger of detection whatever. The preparations are not in the hands of McDaniel, but are in the hands of Professor McCulloh, and are known but to him and one other party, as I understand.

Second. There is no necessity for sending persons in the military service into the enemy's country; but the work may be done by agents, and in most cases by persons ignorant of the facts, and therefore innocent agents.

I have seen enough of the effects that can be produced to satisfy me that in most cases without any danger to the parties engaged, and in others but very slight, we can (1) burn every vessel that leaves a foreign port for the United States; (2) we can burn every transport that leaves the harbor of New York or other Northern port with supplies for the armies of the enemy in the South; (3) burn every transport and gun-boat on the Mississippi River, as well as devastate the country of the enemy, and fill his people with terror and consternation.

I am not alone of this opinion, but many other gentlemen are as fully and thoroughly impressed with the conviction as I am. I believe we have the means at our command, if promptly appropriated and energetically applied, to demoralize the Northern people in a very short time. For the purpose of satisfying your mind upon the subject, I respectfully, but earnestly, request that you will have an interview with General Harris, formerly a member of Congress from Missouri, who, I think, is able, from conclusive proofs, to convince you that what I have suggested is perfectly feasible and practicable. The deep interest I feel for the success of our cause in this struggle and the conviction of the importance of availing ourselves of every element of defense must be my excuse for writing you and requesting you to invite General Harris to see you. If you should see proper to do so, please signify the time when it will be convenient for you to see him.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. S. OLDHAM.

[Indorsement.]

FEBRUARY 20, 1865.

Secretary of State, at his convenience, please see General Harris and learn what plan he has for overcoming the difficulty heretofore experienced.

J. D.

---

[FEBRUARY 11, 1865.—For Benjamin to Lee, in relation to a proposal to send to the trenches slaves who might volunteer to fight for their freedom, &c., see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 1229.]

RICHMOND, VA., February 11, 1865.

General S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General:

GENERAL: Thoroughly impressed with the necessity of improving the discipline of our Army, it has been a question of much thought with me as to the manner of effecting it. The great difficulty with us is due to the fact that our company organizations have been sadly defective. The captains and lieutenants, being responsible to the communities in which they reside and of which their commands are composed, have never had the moral courage to perform their duties in a fearless and manly way, in consequence of the dread of becoming unpopular at home, and it is impossible for a regimental or brigade commander to enforce discipline unless company officers are good and reliable; and it is useless to prefer charges against men or officers, especially if they are well connected, because the courts (the permanent ones)—being composed of politicians and men who have seen no service, or, if any, so little that they have no conception of the relation between superior and inferior officers, and regard every act of firmness as one of tyranny—always acquit the accused. The men who compose these courts were once (as a general thing) officers of the Army who were thrown out of office on account of incompetency, and have a very imperfect idea of the duties of a soldier, and we can never have discipline in our Army as long as these courts are in existence, and I most earnestly recommend that they be either abolished or that some provision be made by which we can be enabled to bring delinquents before a court composed of officers who know something of the wants of the service and appreciate the duties and obligations of the officers and men who compose our armies. This change made in our military tribunals and we will soon get rid of our bad and indifferent officers.

And the next most important thing that we want (more essential in the cavalry than in the infantry) is the assignment of at least one good officer of the Regular Army, young and energetic and well informed, to each brigade as drill-master whilst in camp, and when on the march or field of battle to act as provost-marshal to prevent straggling; to remain just in rear of the column of attack, to keep the files closed (having a small guard detailed for that purpose) and to take charge of the prisoners, and in that way prevent a superfluous guard going to the rear with every batch of prisoners, and also in this way prevent a rapid decrease in the strength of the command upon the battle-field. As a young officer eminently qualified for the position I take pleasure in recommending Lieut. F. H. Wigfall. He is gallant, energetic, and a strict disciplinarian; served with me in the beginning of the war, and I have had ample opportunities for becoming acquainted with his merits and I regard him as one of the best young officers in the service. Lieutenant Wigfall holds a commission in the regular service and is at this time serving on the staff of General Hood, from which I suppose he can readily be spared. I am, general, greatly in want of the services of such an officer as Wigfall and I hope he will be assigned to duty with me at once. And as additional rank would give him more authority, it would be well to give him temporary rank of captain or major, in accordance with act approved May 21, 1861.

Most respectfully, yours, &amp;c.,

T. L. ROSSER,
Major-General.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
February —, 1865.

Respectfully submitted for the consideration of the Honorable Secretary of War.

R. E. LEE,
General.

[Second indorsement.]

BUREAU OF ADJT. AND INSP. GEN., APPOINTMENT OFFICE,
February 25, 1865.

Respectfully submitted to the Secretary of War.

So much of this communication as refers to Wigfall is impracticable. Being only a cadet in the C. S. Army, he does not come under the provisions of the act cited within, authorizing the President to confer temporary rank, &c.

By order:

ED. A. PALFREY,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Third indorsement.]

MARCH 3, 1865.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

Return to General Rosser asking attention to your indorsement.
 By command of the Secretary of War:

SAML. W. MELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Fourth indorsement.]

BUREAU OF ADJT. AND INSP. GEN., APPOINTMENT OFFICE,
March 11, 1865.

Respectfully returned to Maj. Gen. T. L. Rosser, inviting his attention to indorsement from this office of 25th of February, 1865, which is approved by the Secretary of War.

By command of the Secretary of War:

ED. A. PALFREY,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, February 11, 1865.

Hon. S. R. MALLORY,
Secretary of the Navy:

SIR: On examining a printed copy of your letter to me of the 28th of December, ultimo, sent me by a member of Congress, I find that I had committed the mistake of attributing to Captain Pinkney certain offensive expressions which were only used by one J. A. Willard, naval coal agent. I was led into this by the following language in your letter: "Captain Pinkney, C. S. Navy, &c., forwards the following report," and by not noticing the signatures closely at the end of the quotation. I have the honor, therefore, to beg that you will consider the correspondence on my part amended by striking out the words "Captain Pinkney" wherever they occur and the insertion of

"Willard," and also by striking out any words of respect or praise in my first letter, qualifying the words "Captain Pinkney," as not applicable to the word "Willard," for I should as greatly regret the waste of civility on the latter as I do the unintentional or mistaken application of any censure to the former.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Z. B. VANCE.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., February 14, 1865.

PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

SIR: I have received the following resolution of the House of Representatives referred by Your Excellency to this Department:

Resolved, That the President be respectfully requested to inform this House—

First. As to the number of iron furnaces and forges worked in the year 1864 by officers and agents of the Government, and on Government account.

Second. As to the cost per ton of pig, bloom, and box iron, respectively, at such furnaces and forges.

Third. As to the number of iron furnaces and forges worked in the same time by the proprietors under contract with the Government, and the different kinds of contract so made.

Fourth. As to the cost per ton of pig, bloom, and box iron delivered to the Government under such contracts.

In response I have the honor to transmit herewith a report from the chief of the Niter and Mining Bureau containing the information called for by the House.*

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,

Secretary of War.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
 No. 6. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, February 14, 1865.

I. The inspector-general of field transportation is authorized to receive from citizens animals suitable for the public service, and to issue to the persons from whom they are received certificates pledging the Government of the Confederate States to return to them, or their assigns, animals of like quality after the termination of the war with the United States.

II. Brig. Gen. Gideon J. Pillow is constituted Commissary-General of Prisoners, and will enter at once upon his duties, as designated in paragraphs I, II, and III, General Orders, No. 84, 1864.

III. In the impressment of labor for twelve months, under the act of Congress approved February 17, 1864, all slaves hired in Government shops and yards, and for other local purposes, to Government officers and agents, or to railroad companies, or contractors with the Government, will be assessed only in the same proportion as the other slaves on whom the assessment for the balance of the quota of the county or district shall be made. Persons who have hired their slaves to Government officers or agents, or contractors, or to railroad companies, will be assessed only on the number of their slaves not so hired.

IV. Mechanics, artisans, &c., of the Ordnance Department, employed at the various armories, arsenals, and depots, as shown by the monthly rolls of hired men on the 31st of December, 1864, will not be interfered with by enrolling officers, whether their details have or have not been renewed, provided such details have been applied for. The certificate of the commanding officer of the arsenal or depot will be accepted as evidence of the fact of application for renewal of detail.

* Not found.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF S. C., GA., AND FLA.,
No. 38. } Charleston, S. C., February 14, 1865.
* * * * *

VII. By order of Adjutant and Inspector General, Lieut Col. J. G. Tucker, commanding First Foreign Battalion, will recruit his command from the prisoners of war. He will increase each company of his regiment to 125 men.

In making his selection he will take only men of Irish and French nationality. These men will be used for engineering service.

By command of Lieutenant-General Hardee:

H. W. FEILDEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 7. } Richmond, February 16, 1865.

I. The following act of Congress is published for the information of the Army:

AN ACT to amend the act to provide an Invalid Corps, approved February 17, 1864.

SECTION 1. The Congress of the Confederate States of America do enact, That the provisions of the said act be, and they are hereby, extended to all non-commissioned officers, musicians, and privates of the Army, and seamen, ordinary seamen, landsmen, and boys of the Navy, and the non-commissioned officers, musicians, and privates of the Marine Corps, who have heretofore resigned or been discharged honorably, or who may hereafter resign or be discharged honorably from the service, in ignorance of the above-recited act.

SEC. 2. That the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, may, and he is hereby, authorized to reappoint to their former rank meritorious disabled commissioned officers of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, who may have resigned their commissions in ignorance of, or prior to the passage of the act of the 17th of February, 1864, to which this is an amendment; and in that event, the persons so reappointed shall be put in the Invalid Corps on the same terms, and with like privileges, as those constituting said corps, in pursuance of said act to which this is an amendment: Provided, however, That the President shall make no reappointment under this act, unless the person applying therefor shall have a certificate of one of the medical examining boards of his continued disability; and any such officer assigned to active duty shall rank from the date of such assignment to active duty: Provided, That from and after the passage of this act, the compensation of retired officers shall be half pay, without any other emoluments or allowances, unless while assigned to duty, when they shall receive the full pay and allowances appropriate to their rank.

Approved January 27, 1865.

II. Disabled officers of the Army, who resigned their commissions in ignorance of, or prior to, the passage of the act "to provide an Invalid Corps," and soldiers honorably discharged from the service prior to that time, may appear for examination before any one of the medical examining boards established by law, upon presenting their affidavit, before the judge of any court of record or notary public, that their disability, from wounds or other causes, was incurred in the line of duty in the service. The time when such disability occurred, and the circumstances attending it, will be stated in the affidavit, and also the command to which the officer or soldier belonged. The affidavit of the officer will further state any fact showing meritorious service.

III. The Board, which will be composed of three medical officers, will examine the officer or soldier and certify to the character and degree of his alleged disability. The affidavit and certificate will be forwarded by the Board, through the Surgeon-General, to this office.

IV. Meritorious disabled officers will be reappointed to their former rank, and, when confirmed, will be placed upon the retired list. Their pay will then commence. Soldiers embraced in the provisions of this act will be retired by orders from this office only, from the date of which they will be entitled to pay.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, ENGINEER BUREAU,
Richmond, Va., February 16, 1865.

Hon. J. C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have somewhat delayed answering the circular from your office of the 7th instant, in order to present a more complete and satisfactory reply. I now have the honor to submit the following statement of the means and resources for carrying on the service confided to this Bureau, impediments thereto, and what is desired to promote greater and necessary efficiency.

To this end I propose to lay before you—

First. A statement in regard to officers of engineers and engineer troops, their number, assignments, and the necessary increase demanded by the interests of the service.

Second. Engineer workshops.

Third. Railroad repairs, including the collection of railroad iron by a special commission.

Fourth. Labor required for all the service confided to the Engineer Corps, whether military or civil, including its organization.

First, then, in regard to officers, there are—

In regular Corps of Engineers .....	13
In provisional Corps of Engineers .....	115
In engineer troops .....	105
Assigned to engineer duty .....	13
Total .....	246
Officers of regular corps on other duty .....	7
Total available for engineer service .....	239

The officers of the regular and provisional corps are distributed to the different armies and departments in such manner as to meet the most urgent calls of the engineer service, and the companies of engineer troops are serving, as a general rule, with the armies and in the departments in which the divisions are from which they are taken, as follows:

	Companies.
Army of Northern Virginia.....	12
Army of Tennessee.....	10
Department of North Carolina.....	1
Department of South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida.....	2
District of the Gulf.....	1
Trans-Mississippi Department.....	9
Total.....	35

Of these companies, three with the Army of Tennessee and three in the Trans-Mississippi Department have not as yet, however, been fully organized. It is proposed to create one more in the Trans-Mississippi, thus making a full regiment, and one more in the Department of South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida, to be employed chiefly as artisans.

As there is still an urgent demand for engineer officers, an application has been made, on my recommendation, to Congress for twenty-two additional officers in the provisional corps. This bill has passed the Senate and will, it is hoped, at an early day be favorably considered by the House and become a law. If so, nominations for suitable appointments will be promptly made by the Bureau.

The assignments of the few military engineers who joined the Southern Army at the commencement of the war to duty with troops have been a serious drawback to the engineer service, which has heretofore been performed in a great measure by civil engineers, who have been appointed from time to time in the corps.

Second. Engineer workshops for the manufacture of tools, implements, and preparation of material for pontoon bridges have been established at Richmond, Charleston, Augusta, Mobile, Demopolis, and in the Trans-Mississippi Department, from which the calls from the different armies and departments have been, as far as practicable, supplied. The great difficulty in this direction has been the want of materials, particularly iron for tools and bridge construction—a want owing principally to the disturbed condition of the country and defective transportation...

Intrenching tools have been obtained by importation to a considerable extent, and funds have been sent abroad to purchase others, but the closing of most of our regular ports of entry, it is feared, will prevent their being received.

Third. For the prompt repair of railroad bridges and trestle-work and for duplicating these last, an organized body of mechanics should be available. This has been partly provided for, but it is proposed to increase the force, if practicable, to at least 100 for the roads leading directly to the Army of Northern Virginia. Similar organizations should be made for service farther south and west.

A commission for the collection of railroad iron from unimportant lines and distribution, when necessary, to those of vital consequence, as well as the construction of iron-plated gun-boats, has been organized by the joint action of the War and Navy Departments. Every possible impediment has been thrown in the way of this commission, and serious delays have been caused under the impressment act by parties suing out injunctions and resorting to other similar legal steps. In many cases the iron rails must be had promptly as a military necessity or disaster must follow. When this is established the authority for removing them from less important roads should be given and enforced by the commanders of armies and departments, who are evidently the best prepared to judge and act. Orders from the War Department must be executed under the provisions of the law regulating impressments. Orders from commanders under military necessity can be at once carried into effect.

Fourth. Labor. The greater part of the labor connected with the engineer operations has been performed by fatigue parties, by engineer troops, by a limited number of details for mechanical service, and by negroes hired and impressed; but from all these sources the supply has been inadequate. A better and more permanent organization of negro labor is demanded for military and civil engineer service to the extent of about 29,000 men (7,000 being for the Trans-Mississippi Department), not including those needed as teamsters and cooks for the workshops and other local service."

It has been made the duty of the Bureau by General Orders, No. 86, 1864, to organize all the slave labor called under act approved 17th of February, 1864, for service with our armies, and officers have been appointed to attend to the same.

But up to this time the number of slaves impressed by conscript officers and delivered for organization is small, and I fear that unless the impressments are made more rapidly than heretofore that this labor, so essential, will not be available in time. The organization will be made as rapidly as the negroes are received. There will be required a number of men, chiefly from the reserve forces, as directors, superintendents, managers, and overseers, a part of whom will be considered as engaged in the engineer service.

In addition to the foregoing the details of about 1,700 able-bodied men (400 being from the Trans-Mississippi Department) is required. A large proportion of these necessary details has already been made by local commanders, and the men are constantly and fully employed.

It is hoped that the foregoing statement furnishes, approximately at least, the information desired.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

J. F. GILMER,

Major-General and Chief of Bureau.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, February 16, 1865.

Hon. J. C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War:

SIR: In response to your circular of the 7th instant calling for a statement of the "means and resources on hand for carrying on the business of this Bureau," &c.; also "what impediments exist," &c., I have the honor to call your attention to the following papers:

First. A statement prepared by Major Cole in reference to the requirements of the service as to field transportation and the means necessary for meeting the demand. This paper shows the great scarcity of horses in the country and the difficulty of procuring them, together with the measures being adopted for the purpose. The great obstacle at present is the want of funds.

Second. A statement from Major Cross relative to the supply of clothing, present and prospective. The difficulties encountered in this branch of the department arise from scarcity of wool, the frequent stopping of the work by ordering away the operatives, and the want of funds.

Third. A communication from Lieutenant-Colonel Sims as to the condition of railroad transportation, the wants of the railroads, &c. The chief difficulties encountered there arise from defective machinery and the impossibility of supplying new, the want of legislation giving the Government proper control over railroads and their employés and the want of funds to pay the roads so as to keep them in as good condition as the blockade and the limited resources of the country will permit.

Several special communications on this subject have been addressed by this Bureau to Honorable Secretary of War. At present this department has no control over railroads except so much as has been yielded by contract or courtesy.

The supply of grain and long forage in the country is believed to be quite enough to supply the public animals, but no distinct opinion can be hazarded as to the ability of this Bureau to supply it to the armies during the coming campaign, as so much will depend on the relative positions of the different armies and the preservation or destruction of our lines of transportation.

To sum up, I venture to state that this Bureau can conduct its operations with success enough to sustain our armies if labor is allowed to the various workshops on which it depends, without interruption; if the privilege of detailing contractors under certain circumstances be continued, and the necessary funds are promptly furnished. Without these this department is powerless and the want of them is fast paralyzing its efforts.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. R. LAWTON,

Quartermaster-General.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

OFFICE INSPECTOR-GENERAL FIELD TRANSPORTATION,
Richmond, February 1, 1865.

General LAWTON,

Quartermaster-General:

SIR: The urgent request of General Lee, made to me in person, and that of his chief quartermaster, to be prepared to equip his artillery and transportation with animals, added to the calls made upon me for the same supplies for armies south, induces me to address you this communication, in which I desire to recapitulate what I have before at different times, in writing and verbally, had the honor to submit to you on the subject of the number of animals needed to equip our armies for the spring campaign, and the source from which such supplies are to be obtained. As the officer charged with the providing of horses and mules for the armies of the Confederate States, I feel it to be due to myself for the record to show that I have taken all necessary steps to a proper discharge of my duty to ascertain the resources of the country and to suggest plans by which deficiencies may be supplied, and that should the demand made on me not be met, and any damage result from such failure, I may be exculpated from blame by reference to my official communications. The inability of the Confederate States east of the Mississippi to sustain the draft which would be made for horses and mules for the coming campaign, was discussed and announced by me in May last when I was procuring such supplies for General Johnston's army. The number estimated by me at that time to be necessary must be largely increased by reason of the losses sustained in General Hood's campaign in Tennessee.

In May last I dispatched an officer to General E. K. Smith, commanding Department Trans-Mississippi, with letters to him announcing our necessities, and urging him to send us a portion of the animals which he was reported to have captured from the Federal Army, and asking that funds might be furnished and permission granted to my officer charged with the business to go into Mexico and procure animals to be sent over this side. In both I was disappointed, and in August following I suggested the plan, since adopted and sought to be executed, of procuring a large number of animals from Mexico. Owing to the delays in procuring the funds, and from the fact that no one has yet been selected to proceed to Texas in charge of the operation to be undertaken, we cannot expect to receive a first installment from Mexico under three or four months; and even should General Smith consent to furnish us any out of his supply (which I have again asked him for), we cannot receive them before about the middle of March, and to obtain any at all now within the periods named a proper officer must be in Texas to conduct business.

I have also proposed that I shall be provided with necessary means and authority to procure supplies and animals from the enemy's lines, which I have every reason to feel assured can be done to a large extent. I am informed by my officers (certainly reliable) that horses and mules can be obtained, deliverable in Mississippi, payable in cotton, on the following terms, viz: First-class artillery horses for 600 pounds of cotton, second class for 500 pounds, and third class for 400 pounds; but to do this my officers must have the cotton in hand, so as to receive the animals and deliver the cotton at such times and places as opportunity offers. In Virginia the prices asked, payable in gold, is, for first class, $60, and it is thought that 2,000 can be obtained in that way. The number that can be had in Mississippi in a space of two or three months is put down at 2,000. I have before informed you that, according to my information, there will be needed for the armies of the Confederate States at least 6,000 horses and 4,500 mules. The number to be procured in the Confederate States east of the Mississippi by impressment depends on the decision which may be made as to the quantity of animals the farmers will be allowed to keep as essential to their operations. I estimate the supply to be obtained from all sources (provided I am furnished means) not to exceed 5,000 animals on this side of the Mississippi. This leaves a deficit of 5,500 to fill my estimate. If the horses are not supplied the military operations are checked and may be frustrated. If the farmers are stripped of a portion of the animals essential to the conduct of their agricultural operations there must be a corresponding reduction of supplies of food for man and horse.

Convinced as I am that the best and only means of procuring the needed supply of animals are those that I have indicated; feeling deeply the pressure of the demands made and to be made on me to furnish such supplies; dreading the consequences of a failure to meet such calls, and fearful that I may be exposed to censure for such failure, I respectfully urge that I may be immediately put in possession of the necessary means to carry into effect the plans for providing the animals needed, than which I confess myself unable to suggest any other; or that, in case it shall be decided that my plans are impracticable and the means I ask for cannot be furnished, that I may be relieved from the duty I am now performing, and some one be appointed in my stead who can dispense with what I consider and have stated to be indispensable to enable me to successfully perform the duty.

I think it proper to again repeat what I have before asked to have done in order to secure the needed supplies.

First. With respect to the operations in Mexico and Texas, I estimated that the sum of £350,000 in sterling or gold turned over to me, say, at the rate of £100,000 per quarter, would enable me to obtain about 15,000 animals, at the rate of about $60 per head. I was informed by you that this amount would be furnished by the Treasury. I received letters of credit for £50,000 and sent it to Texas by Maj. W. S. Harris, and further amounts are now required. An officer to control and manage the business is wanted, one possessing the qualifications which I had the honor to state I deemed requisite. No one has been yet assigned to the duty; nothing can be done until such officer arrives in Texas.

Second. The purchase of horses and mules to be delivered in Mississippi from the enemy's lines to be successful must be conducted on the simplest plan. The officer who receives the horses must have in his hands the cotton to make instant payment. It must be at suitable points for being carried off easily. He must not be trammelled by officers of other branches of the service, and so situated as to be able to fulfill his engagements promptly and surely. If he is to get his cotton paid through Treasury agents (and not allowed to purchase it himself) and be governed by them as to the price he is to pay for horses, I fear he will fail to carry out the object.

Third. To obtain horses in Virginia, gold or Federal money is essential. They can be purchased for gold at rates below those prevailing before the war. This is not the case with other articles of military supplies in the Confederate States obtained from abroad by the Government. I am induced to believe that 2,000 horses can be had in a short space of time along the lines of Virginia and North Carolina from the enemy's lines if money can be supplied, and at prices perhaps not greater than we expect to pay in Mexico.

I beg leave respectfully to request that I may be officially informed as soon as possible the decision in reference to the before-mentioned subjects, in order that I may be enabled to give General Lee an exact statement showing to what extent he can rely upon this office for the animals deemed necessary to place his army on a footing for active service in the spring. I have not been able so far to reply fully to General Lee's inquiries, for the reasons herein stated as remaining open for determination.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. H. COLE,

Major and Insp. Gen. Field Transportation, C. S. Army.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

Memorandum of resources of Department of Clothing, Camp Equipage, and Miscellaneous Stores.

1. The inclosed report will show what has been furnished the armies of the Confederate States in the way of clothing within the past six months. The issues show a fair provision in all articles save overcoats and flannel jackets, and in some instances an extravagant consumption of supplies. The condition of the troops in connection with the issues made suggests either an imperfect distribution of supplies, or waste on the part of the individual soldiers, or it may be both. The latter is known to prevail to an extent that makes it a great abuse.

2. As to the future the greatest difficulty will be to provide the raw material—wool and leather—the former, especially. The manufacturing facilities are ample. Efforts are being made to supply the deficiency of wool from the trans-Mississippi region, where it is abundant. Some deliveries have recently been made on this side. The wool is worked up as rapidly as had. By using cotton clothing during the summer and spring and reserving the woollen goods for fall and winter, it is hoped and believed that enough may be had to prevent suffering next winter. We will get through this season without much trouble. There is a fair supply of leather, or hides in the vats, and a moderate supply of shoes on hand.

The blankets now in the hands of the soldiers must be turned in in the spring for reissue, as there is not in the entire Confederacy a single establishment that makes them. Machinery had been ordered from abroad. The supply of cotton clothing has heretofore been abundant and is now ample. There will be no difficulty hereafter on this head, at least so long as the railroad connections can be relied on to make the raw material of one section available in another. It is now very hard to keep the factories in Virginia even partially supplied with cotton.

To accomplish anything, however, it is really indispensable that some relief be extended, and that promptly, as follows:

First. Money, or some equivalent, must be had to keep the machinery of the department going. Arrearages especially should be provided for. For instance, over $5,000,000 is now due to the factory interest alone for goods long since delivered and expended, and that, too, after a liberal use of call certificates, non-taxable bonds, and even the raw material—cotton. All the factories are under contract to deliver at fair rates two-thirds of their production. They all work under a uniform system; one built up with care and labor, and with a result perfectly satisfactory. The whole unfortunately is about to crumble in for the want of funds, the factories being without the means to meet current expenditures, even at times to pay taxes. Their only relief is to put their production upon the market, and the department is in no position to complain of the loss of material.

Second. If money can be supplied, then the system of barter now almost universal should be checked or at least placed under restrictions. The necessities of the Subsistence Bureau have compelled with it a free resort to barter. The Niter and Mining Bureau has also gone largely into it. In Virginia especially this has been done. Material needed for the manufacture of clothing for the Army has been diverted from its legitimate use. Thus cotton is expended here when the factories have stopped work for the want of same; cotton yarns are made way with, needed for army socks; and also shirtings and osnaburgs, needed for clothing and forage sacks. The Subsistence Bureau has now some 150 bales of osnaburgs stored here to be used in barter, and this department is without a single yard of material to make into shirts or drawers. General Lee represents his army to be in want of underclothing, and a call has recently been made for 12,000 shirts, which for the first time could not be sent forward promptly. That illustrates strongly the drawbacks resulting from an attempt to relieve the necessities of one branch of the service by diverting irregularly material due to another. If barter must continue, can't it be restricted, and as far as possible articles like tobacco used in lieu of what goes to make up essential military supplies? The department has struggled on successfully in the past notwithstanding this serious difficulty, but some relief is needed for the future.

In the same way hides of beeves slaughtered by commissaries are made way with, though due to this department under general orders, and absolutely essential to the continued supply of shoes to the Army. The practice of purchasing beeves with the obligation to return the hides to the seller should be discontinued.

Third. Some protection similar to that given to the factory operatives by Special Orders, No. 310, paragraph XXXII, should be extended to the detailed men of mechanical skill employed in the established workshops of the department, so as to guard against unnecessary interruptions and consequent loss of supplies.

With some relief in these particulars to develop home resources, and such aid as may be looked for from abroad through contracts encouraging individual enterprise, a reasonable confidence is felt that a sufficiency of army clothing can be provided, at least for the present year.

These remarks apply equally to camp equipage and miscellaneous stores.

Respectfully submitted.

WM. B. B. CROSS,
Major.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

CONFEDERATE STATES QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE SUPERINTENDENT RAILROAD TRANSPORTATION,
Richmond, February 10, 1865.

Brigadier-General LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General:

GENERAL: In making the report you ordered upon the condition and wants in regard to transportation by railroad, it may not be improper to call your attention to the cause of the difficulties which have always attended it with increasing force as this city is approached.

In North Carolina and Virginia, where transportation bears the most heavily because of its increasing volume as you approach Richmond, the roads are the least able to bear it. They were constructed and equipped to transport that great stream of travel between the North and South, and with no expectation of a heavy freighting business, prepared themselves with such machinery as was adapted to carrying a light train very rapidly. So long as the Army could draw supplies from any quarter, and the lines running south as far as Wilmington and Charlotte were called on only to transport men, the work was performed promptly and well; but when supplies failed in Virginia and North Carolina, and Georgia and South Carolina had to furnish them, an immense business was at once created upon those lines, which they were unprepared to meet; their engines were light and few in number, and their cars the same. Had the gauge of the tracks south suited, machinery might have been drawn from there; but this not being so, we have had to struggle against a heavy business with inadequate means of performing it. Under these circumstances any machinery will depreciate; it is overworked and not well attended to, and must inevitably grow less reliable. New cars are being built, though the difficulties encountered retard the progress very much; but new engines cannot be manufactured in the Confederacy.

It becomes all-important, then, that those we have should be preserved in good repair, and here we meet the really great difficulties arising from the scarcity of mechanics and materials. The hardships of the war and the fear of conscription have induced many of this class to leave the Confederacy. Most of them were natives of the United States, feeling but little or no interest in our country or cause. They are generally of a roving and reckless character, forming attachments to places but rarely, and impatient of restraint. Many of them enlisted and have been killed, so that the number in the country has been constantly decreasing. This deficiency cannot be supplied as in ordinary times by the instruction of apprentices because the conscript law takes them for the Army just at the period when they are learning to be useful, nor can they be induced to come from abroad at the present pay, and with the fear of the Army before them.

To the want of mechanics is to be added the want of materials. Not a single bar of railroad iron has been rolled in the Confederacy since the war, nor can we hope to do any better during the continuance. The main lines will be kept up by despoiling the side lines, but if our lines should expand and the rails and machinery be taken away by the enemy we could not replace them. But without discussing the supply of rails, which is in the hands of a special commission, there are many articles of iron which cannot be had because of its scarcity. Aside from iron there are copper, pig-tin, steam gauges, cast steel, files, &c., without which it is impossible to maintain engines. They are as necessary as iron. Heretofore a small supply has been had through Wilmington, but with that port closed we are cut off entirely, except by trading with the enemy and paying in cotton. With plenty of mechanics and material the machinery now in use could be improved and there would be a corresponding improvement in transportation; but it should be borne in mind that as machinery grows older it takes more work to keep it in efficient condition, and therefore the same men and material now do not accomplish so much as at the commencement of the war.

Your earnest attention is called to the entire absence of responsibility of railroad officers to any military authority. It is true there is a kind of moral influence exercised over them rather from some undefined idea that the hand of Government can reach them than from any other cause. The public and indeed most of the officers are under the impression that your Bureau has supreme power over all the railroads and trains in the Confederacy, and had but to order them at your will to any point you desired. As to the men, they are exempt and enjoy almost entire immunity from the ordinary means of punishment. The only attempt yet made to render the railroads amenable to some authority has resulted in a law so full of loopholes that it is inoperative. These are the main reasons why our railroad transportation is already deficient and daily depreciating. Efforts are being made to purchase materials, but success is quite uncertain. At present this want is not so serious as the want of mechanics, though it may become so if the materials are not obtained.

It may not be out of place to mention that, notwithstanding the scarcity and value of this kind of transportation, it receives but little protection or security from our armies, which seems strange, when not only their comfort but their safety depends on its efficiency. As cases in point, and of recent date, is the loss of cars and engines at Atlanta, Griswoldville, Gordon, and Savannah, footing up probably 25 engines and 400 cars, or an equipment greater than we now have to work the Richmond and Danville Railroad.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. W. SIMS,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Quartermaster.

---

[FEBRUARY 16, 1865.—For Longstreet to Kershaw, Pickett, and Benning, asking an expression of opinion on the subject of putting negroes into the field as soldiers, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 1236.]

---

HEADQUARTERS VIRGINIA MILITARY INSTITUTE,

February 17, 1865.

Hon. J. C. BRECKINRIDGE,

Secretary of War:

DEAR SIR: The present state of the country justifies any one in presenting for the consideration of the Government well-meant suggestions, even if they should appear crude to those who are better informed.

The tone of public sentiment and the tenor of present legislation indicate that the call of General Lee for negro troops will be responded to.

I suggest that the maximum number allowed to be raised should be half a million.

I do not suppose that so many are required or could be obtained. But to place the maximum at this figure would, I believe, inspire dread in the minds of our enemy, who exaggerates, through ignorance, our power in this particular; and further, to call for half a million would, by the effect upon the minds of owners and slaves, facilitate and insure the raising of 200,000.

The second suggestion I would make is, that in the event of the troops being raised you might command the services of our corps of cadets with their officers to perform the work of organization and drilling in the shortest time, and with the greatest efficiency.

In 1861, between the 20th of April and the 20th of June, the cadets drilled 15,000 men of the Army of Northern Virginia, and if a large camp of instruction were established at Camp Lee the same work could be done for all of the negro troops that would be sent there.

Allow me to say that these suggestions are the result of conversation among some of the officers of our school, and the last one is contained in a letter to me from General Smith, our superintendent, who is now absent at Lexington.

Very respectfully, general, your obedient servant,

J. T. L. PRESTON,

Acting Superintendent Virginia Military Institute.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., February 18, 1865.

JEFFERSON DAVIS,
President of the Confederate States:

SIR: I invite your attention to the condition of this Department in respect to its claim upon the Treasury, and the necessity for prompt attention to that claim.

The requisitions of this Department on the Treasury since the commencement of the war have been as follows:

1861 .....	$59,516,129.75
1862 .....	398,259,436.51
1863 .....	512,278,188.54
1864 .....	670,663,896.89
1865 .....	97,028,970.14
Total .....	1,737,746,121.83

Of the requisitions for 1864 and 1865 there remain unpaid the sum of $161,322,573.45, and besides this the sum of $69,601,422.58, which were drawn prior to the 1st of April last in old issue returned to the Treasury. The amount actually drawn from the Treasury in 1864 was but $422,344,319.10. Of this sum $320,721,116 was paid since the 1st of July last, showing that only $101,623,203.10 was paid during the first six months of the last year.

This statement will account for the large arrears in this Department. The whole of the facts will show that the arrearages must be much greater than is apparent from the preceding statement, by a comparison of the expenditures of this Department with those of the War Department of the United States.

The expenditures of that Department for the year ending 30th of June, 1862, are as follows:

June 30, 1862 .....	$394,368,407.36
1863 .....	599,298,600.83
Estimate for year 1864 .....	738,829,146.80
Six months of 1864, till December 31 .....	369,414,573.40
Total .....	2,101,910,728.39

When it is considered that the currency of the Confederate States has been inferior to that of the United States during the whole term of the war, and that all of the material of supply has been obtained with difficulty and at excessive prices in the Confederacy, the comparison is not out of place.

The estimated arrearages beyond the amount of the requisitions is $200,000,000, and this estimate is under rather than over the deficiency.

The Army pay is in arrear for several months. This is an excuse for desertion, the sale of clothing, equipments, and munition by the soldiers. The operatives in the workshops are suffering, and many have deserted. The railroad service is reduced to the lowest point of depression from the same cause. The soldiers in hospitals and who have been furloughed or returned are deprived of many necessities. Throughout the whole country discontent and discredit has arisen from the failure to pay for supplies of food and animals that have been impressed.

It is plainly impracticable for this Department to carry on any of its operations under such a condition of things.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., February 18, 1865.

The PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the following resolution of the Senate adopted on the 24th ultimo:

Resolved, That the President of the Confederate States of America be respectfully requested to furnish the Senate—

First. With information as to the number of white men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, and of the number of negroes who, in addition to their own officers, may be required for the necessary employments and the proper discharge of the functions of the Department of Medicine, of the Commissary-General, of the Quartermaster-General, of the Engineers, of the Ordnance, and of the Niter and Mining Bureau.

Second. A like estimate as to the Post-Office and Navy Departments.

Third. A like estimate in regard to the railroad transportation of the country, including not only the working, but the equipment, repairs, and construction, in his consideration, of the number required for such transportation.

Fourth. To specify the railroads, if there be any such, whose repairs and construction, in his opinion, will be necessary for military purposes and ought to be effected in whole or in part by appropriations from the Confederate Treasury.

In response to the foregoing resolution I submit the inclosed communications from the respective bureaus of this Department to whose operations the inquiries relate.

From these it will appear that the six supply departments mentioned in the first clause of the resolution require for their operations—

	Whites.	Negroes.
Niter and Mining Bureau.....	5,347	7,881
Engineer Bureau.....	1,297	21,125
Ordnance Department.....	3,691	2,245
Medical Department (able-bodied, 257; disabled, 1,995).....	2,252	2,000
Commissary (incomplete).....	736	1,047
Quartermaster, exclusive of railroads.....	2,299	3,451
Total.....	15,622	37,749

The estimate of the Commissary-General does not embrace the States of Georgia and Florida, for the reasons stated by him.

In response to the third clause of the resolution the Quartermaster-General finds himself unable, for the reasons assigned by him, and by Lieutenant-Colonel Sims, in charge of railroad transportation, to state the number of men required. These numbers vary so greatly with the varying conditions of the country, the positions of the armies, and the consequent changing demands upon different railroads, that even an approximation in numbers is difficult.

In response to the fourth clause, the Chief of Engineers and the Quartermaster-General concur in indicating the following as the most important railroads, the repairs or construction of which are necessary for military purposes, viz:

First, the connection of Columbia, S. C., with Augusta, Ga.; second, the connection of Albany, Ga., with Thomasville, Ga.; third, the connection of Union Springs, Ala., with Montgomery, Ala.; fourth, the connection of Montgomery, Ala., with Selma, Ala.; to which the Chief of Engineers adds: Fifth, the completion of the railroad bridge over the Tombigbee River at Demopolis, Ala.

I concur in the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, that instead of making separate appropriations for the construction of particular works, and for repairs, that a general appropriation be made for construction and repairs of railroads necessary for military purposes, to be applied to such works as the future exigencies of the war shall indicate to be most essential.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War.

[FEBRUARY 18, 1865.—For Gordon to Lee, in relation to enlistment of negroes as soldiers, see Series I, Vol. LI, Part II, p. 1063.]

RICHMOND, VA., February 20, 1865.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA:

I submit herewith to your honorable body a report from the Secretary of War, dated the 18th instant,* exhibiting the condition to which the public service is now reduced by the want of means in the Treasury to furnish the supplies needful for the Army and for the public defense. The urgency for the passage of some revenue bill has now become so pressing as to threaten the gravest consequences. I am fully aware of the embarrassments which have retarded the action of the House in the performance of its exclusive constitutional function of originating a bill for raising revenue, and that the great diversity of opinion which must exist on so complex and difficult a subject has prevented the adoption of measures recommended by the Committee of Ways and Means of the House, as well as of those recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury. I would, however, respectfully suggest that our affairs are now in a position so critical that objections which under other circumstances would be regarded as insurmountable may well be waived in favor of any scheme of finance or taxation that will enable the Treasury promptly to meet our most pressing wants, and that immediate legislation, even if somewhat imperfect, is preferable to wiser measures if attended with delay.

In connection with this subject I would invoke your attention to the need of prompt action for adding to our strength in the field. Very few weeks now remain for preparation, and we are threatened by a concentration of forces around us which cannot be successfully resisted without the aid of large re-enforcements to our armies.

It is with trust in your wisdom and patriotism that I obey the behest of the Constitution in placing before you this information of the state of the country, confident that you will need no further stimulus than the knowledge of these facts to induce such action as will avert the perils which now menace our country.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

LYNCHBURG, February 20, 1865.

His Excellency President JEFFERSON DAVIS,

Richmond, Va.:

SIR: The subject of an adequate supply of food and clothing for the Army and people is one of the most important now forced upon the consideration of the country. We are cut off from foreign supplies, and although blessed with a fertile soil and an abundance of raw material, we find ourselves unable to utilize these blessings from the want of skilled labor and machinery for converting them to useful purposes, so that in the midst of plenty we are in want. The enemy have systematically destroyed all the agricultural implements and manufacturing machinery wherever they have gone, believing that we have not the skill or energy to reproduce them. This state of affairs arises from the lamentable indifference which we showed to such matters before the war, relying on others to furnish us with much of our food, all the means for producing it, and nearly all of our clothing. As nearly the whole world have shown themselves our enemies in this great contest, it is to be hoped that we will learn to provide for ourselves in future. The question now arises, Can this deficiency be supplied in a reasonable length of time? Having had much experience in such matters in Europe and America, I reply, with proper energy and liberal action on the part of the Government it can. I have already arranged for the manufacture of spinning machinery and looms of a simple and cheap pattern; also agricultural implements, such as are most needed, and now ask for the sympathy and approval of Government in enabling me to extend the sphere of usefulness.

* See p. 1094.

Another view may be taken of this subject. The depreciation of the currency has gone on to such an extent that in many places it has lost its purchasing power, thereby compelling resort to impressment, and as a direct consequence thereof lessening production. As the value of Treasury notes decreases, the expenses of the Government proportionately increase, and if this continues the time must come when they will be totally valueless unless some assistance can be obtained in reducing the necessity for their use in obtaining supplies without the system of impressment, so objectionable to our people. If some medium of exchange or barter between the people and the Government approximating nearer the value of specie than Treasury notes do can be found, of which the latter have control, and the former used, much relief may be given the Treasury Department, and a healthy state of trade re-established, resulting in increased production, and doing away with the necessity for impressment—the curse of the country. There is one particularly suited, sufficiently compressed in bulk, and of high value, and will admit of comparatively easy and cheap transportation from point to point. Cotton yarns are needed by the people for manufacturing clothing, for which they will readily exchange the products of their farms, on a specie basis. The Government holds a large amount of cotton, which is now dead capital. It also controls or can control the products of the factories. Let it then exchange on a liberal basis with the factories cotton for yarns and cloth, and if needs be seize all of the cotton for such purposes. Then exchange those yarns with the people for agricultural products. But the supply of yarns or cloth from the factories now in operation would not be sufficient to supply the demand for both Army and people. More machinery must be put in operation, under some well-regulated system, so that the whole country may become one great manufactory. The Government must, therefore, encourage the establishment of more factories by stimulating the manufacture of machinery, and induce the people to weave more cloth than they need for their own use, and exchange the same for some article which the Government may have and that they need—Treasury notes or even specie. In this way the necessity for the use of Treasury notes may be reduced to the smallest possible limits, and by judicious taxation the circulation be rapidly reduced, and along with it the expenses of the Government.

In order to carry out this system, I propose, first, the removal of all factories, or their most valuable machinery, to safe points near the base of the mountain ranges, where water-power is abundant and approaches by the enemy difficult. Next, the establishment of small factories at various points of like character. Around these, as centers, the women of our country, who have been deprived of all and driven from their homes by the enemy, could be collected the wives and daughters of soldiers and others in indigent circumstances. There they would not be likely to be disturbed by the enemy. Being thus distributed, could be much more easily fed, and escape the demoralizing influence of large cities, and the country be greatly benefited by their labor, which would be light and highly remunerative to them, thereby lessening suffering at home, and consequently decreasing discontent in the Army. So situated, no one raid of the enemy could inflict irreparable injury to the country. Cotton would be near at hand, labor abundant, and the necessity for the transportation of food and material to and from great centers of trade and manufacture greatly reduced. I propose, also, to furnish to the women of the country generally yarns, and a simple and cheap pattern of looms, taking pay for the same in cloth made by them. This system, once inaugurated under a properly organized bureau of industry, would save every department a vast deal of trouble and expense, and in a short time almost every house in the country would be contributing its weekly quota of cloth for the Army and people. I am aware that this system of barter has been adopted to a limited extent by some of the departments, but the supply has not been proportionate to the demand for the article most needed. What I now propose is, that it should be made a part of the governmental system, from which the most happy results would ensue:

First. A supply of food and clothing for the Army and people at or near a specie valuation.

Second. A new medium of exchange would be established between the Government and people at or nearer specie value than Treasury notes now are; thus the expenses of the Government, and consequently taxation, would be lessened, and the necessity for impressment, so objectionable to the people, almost entirely avoided.

Third. The utilization of the cotton now in the hands of the Government, rapidly deteriorating and being destroyed or captured by the enemy, and by reason of the closing of our ports, almost useless.

Fourth. The employment of the female labor of the country profitably and advantageously, thereby lessening distress at home and consequently discontent in the ranks in the field.

Fifth. The establishment of a great industrial system, which would be of immense advantage during the war and give us practical independence for all future time. I claim no great foresight for these suggestions, for they are called forth by the exigencies, although the principles of action contained therein have long been entertained; but I earnestly hope that they will receive due consideration by the Government, as the only means left to us of supplying our most pressing wants.

Under a firm conviction of the efficiency and practicability of the scheme, I have commenced the work, and earnestly ask for the sympathy and approval of the Government as necessary to its success. After an experience of twelve years, and a close study and observation of the industrial systems of Europe and America, aided by an intimate acquaintance with the resources of the South, I am prepared to say that the means necessary for the accomplishment of the ends in view can be obtained, and I am ready to do all that I can in carrying the scheme to a practical success.

I remain, sir, your obedient servant,

THOS. E. MCNEILL,
Civil and Mechanical Engineer.

RICHMOND, VA., February 21, 1865.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

In response to your resolution of the 30th ultimo I herewith transmit for your information a communication from the Secretary of War, relative to the accessions to the Army from each State since April 16, 1862; to the number of persons liable to conscription who have been exempted or detailed, and to the number of those between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, and not unfitted for active service in the field, who are employed in the several States in the manner indicated in your inquiry.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

[Inclosure.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., February 20, 1865.

The PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

SIR: I have received the following resolution of the House of Representatives, adopted on the 30th ultimo, and referred by Your Excellency to this Department for attention:

Resolved, That the President be respectfully requested to communicate to this House—

First. The number of soldiers from each State added to the military service by enrollment, volunteering or otherwise, since the enactment of the act of April 16, 1862, commonly known as the "conscrip act."

Second. The number of those within the conscript age exempt or detailed, discriminating as to the classes of each in each State.

Third. The number of those within the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, not disabled or unfit for active service in the field, who are employed in the respective States in executing the law of conscription, or in connection with post commissaries and post quartermasters, or otherwise, in derogation of existing laws.

In response I have the honor to transmit herewith a report from the superintendent of conscription, containing the information called for by the House.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War.

[Sub-inclosure.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., February —, 1865.

Hon. J. C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I have the honor to invite your attention to the papers herewith inclosed, respectively marked A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, K, and L, in response to a call for information of the 30th ultimo by the House of Representatives of the Confederate States, by the following resolution, which was referred by you to this Bureau, with instructions to furnish the information required.*

* Resolution (here omitted) embodied in next, ante.

The paper marked A shows the number of persons enrolled and assigned to the Army since the passage of the act of Congress approved April 16, 1862.

B gives an approximate estimate of the number who have volunteered since the passage of said act. These persons, for the most part, regarded it as disgraceful to be conscribed, and went directly to the Army, avoiding enrollment and assignment from the camp of instruction. There is, therefore, no record of them at the camps and no means of making an estimate. Though called "volunteers," their joining the service was compulsory, and should be accredited to the energy exhibited in the enforcement of conscription. This estimate is regarded as much too small.

C exhibits the number of persons ascertained by the Medical Board to be incapable of performing service in the field, who have been assigned under the eighth section of the act of Congress approved February 17, 1864, to the various branches of service for which they were recommended by said Board.

D exhibits the number of persons exempted of the several classes of exemptions enumerated in the said act of Congress.

E exhibits the number of agricultural details.

F exhibits the number of details allowed for reasons of public necessity.

G exhibits the number of details allowed the several bureaus and departments of service upon the certificates of the chiefs or heads thereof that the persons applied for were indispensable to the public service, exclusive of the details of contractors, artisans, mechanics, &c., for Government service.

H exhibits the details of contractors with the Government to furnish supplies; also allowed upon certificates of heads of departments that the persons applied for were indispensable.

I exhibits the number of details of artisans, mechanics, &c. These are also allowed upon certificates of the chiefs or heads of departments that the persons applied for are experts, skilled and indispensable to the public service, in conformity with General Orders, No. 77, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, of 1864.

K exhibits the number of deserters returned to the Army by the agencies of conscription. This statement is not called for by the resolution, but it is deemed important for the information of Congress.

L is a recapitulation of the several statements furnished.

The records of the Bureau do not show that any persons between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, capable of service in the field, are employed in the business of conscription, except officers whose commands have been consolidated, and have, therefore, no appropriate service in the field, and the drill-masters assigned to the business of conscription. Conscripts employed as enrolling officers are taken from the list of those unfit for field service.

This Bureau has no means of showing the number of persons between eighteen and forty-five years of age, capable of field service, who are in the employment of post quartermasters or post commissaries. It is not informed, and it is not usually stated, where the commissaries or quartermasters applying for details are stationed. The details, under existing orders, can only be granted upon the certificate of the Quartermaster and Commissary Generals that the persons applied for are experts and indispensable to the public service, and the place or post of employment is not regarded as an element of the necessity which demands the detail. Hence the Bureau institutes no inquiry upon the point.

In order to render the report as accurate as the imperfect agencies allowed to the enrolling service will admit, it has been delayed till the present time to obtain the latest information from the commandants of the various States, furnished by their monthly consolidated returns.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

A.—Number of conscripts enrolled and assigned to the Army from camps of instruction since the act of Congress, April 16, 1862.

State.	Number.	Remarks.
Virginia.....	13,933	Exclusive of the operations of General Pillow. Do. Suspended and under General Cobb till January, 1863. From September report, commenced in August, 1864.
North Carolina.....	21,348
South Carolina.....	9,120
Georgia.....	8,993
Alabama.....	14,875
Mississippi.....	8,061
Florida.....	362
East Louisiana.....	81
East Tennessee.....	5,220
Total.....	81,993

B.—Approximate estimate of men who have joined the Army since April, 1862, without passing through camps of instruction.

State.	Number.	Remarks.
Virginia.....	15,000	This is merely an approximate estimate, and the exact number can only be obtained from the Adjutant and Inspector General's Office. This number is regarded as being too small.
North Carolina.....	8,000
South Carolina.....	6,800
Georgia.....	26,400
Alabama.....	10,060
Mississippi.....	3,032
Florida.....	2,000
East Louisiana.....	500
East Tennessee.....	500
Total.....	*76,206

C.—Assignments under section 8 of the act of Congress of February 17, 1864.

	Virginia.	North Carolina.	South Carolina.	Georgia.	Alabama.	Mississippi.	Florida.	East Tennessee.	East Louisiana.	Total.
Conscription service.....	696	66	308	137	144	164	42	11	40	1,608
Quartermaster's Department.....	725	334	168	159	271	208	16	20		1,901
Commissary Department.....	154	38	94	65	100	254	10	18		733
Ordinance Department.....	56	16	18	75	46	12	1			224
Engineer Department.....	9	7	9	7	9					41
Navy Department.....	6	1	10	3	6					26
Post-Office Department.....	25		4			1		19		49
Medical Department.....	578	52	64	290	67	31		1		1,083
Treasury Department.....	74	2	14			1	6			97
Niter and Mining Department.....	8	43	3		6	1		1		62
Provost guard.....	100	46	103	163	86	126				633
Post guard.....	44	20	222	8		17	7			318
Camp guard.....	2	7	73	53	189		11	19		354
Hospital guard.....	33	73			40	50	2			198
Bridge guard.....				2						2
Similar guard.....	271	11	38	2	82					404
Total.....	2,780	716	1,128	964	1,046	865	95	89	40	7,733

* So in copy ; but factors only produce the sum of 72,292.

D.—Exemptions.

State.	Age.	Physical disability.	Confederate officers.	State officers.	Ministers of religion.	Superintendents and physicians of deaf, dumb, and blind.	Editors.	Newspaper employes.	Superintendent, State public printer, and employes.	Apothecaries.	Physicians.	Presidents and teachers of schools and colleges.
Virginia .....	18 and 45....	6,242	30	1,894	373	.....	31	183	.....	106	643	242
	17 and 18....	117	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	386	.....	.....	103	.....	.....	2	.....	7	113	22
Total .....		6,745	30	1,894	476	.....	31	186	.....	113	756	264
North Carolina .....	18 and 45....	(a)	43	.....	334	4	17	87	.....	27	320	164
	17 and 18....	.....	.....	.....	66	1	4	3	.....	2	54	9
	45 and 50....	.....	26	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total .....		7,885	69	5,589	400	5	21	99	.....	31	374	173
South Carolina .....	18 and 45....	1,726	21	140	266	.....	11	59	.....	48	350	168
	17 and 18....	107	.....	.....	66	.....	3	7	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	700	4	167	.....	.....	4	4	.....	5	92	28
Total .....		2,533	25	307	332	.....	14	70	.....	53	442	196
Georgia .....	18 and 45....	2,463	50	(b)	378	15	12	124	.....	43	487	195
	17 and 18....	106	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	5	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	331	15	.....	71	3	.....	7	.....	3	105	17
Total .....		2,900	65	8,229	449	18	12	136	.....	46	592	212
Alabama .....	18 and 45....	2,665	10	762	537	.....	27	119	3	68	593	307
	17 and 18....	195	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	8	.....	1	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	1,073	11	571	189	.....	6	28	.....	12	203	45
Total .....		3,933	21	1,333	726	.....	33	155	3	81	796	352
Mississippi .....	18 and 45....	1,402	2	91	210	1	6	11	.....	36	343	119
	17 and 18....	65	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	552	3	138	42	1	.....	2	.....	3	60	15
Total .....		2,019	5	229	252	2	6	14	.....	39	403	134
Florida .....	18 and 45....	183	5	99	13	.....	3	6	.....	5	23	3
	17 and 18....	6	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2	.....	1	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	48	1	21	7	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	4	2
Total .....		237	6	120	20	.....	3	8	.....	7	27	5
East Tennessee .....	18 and 45....	270	6	38	44	.....	2	4	.....	2	38	13
	17 and 18....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	21	.....	2	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total .....		291	6	40	44	.....	2	4	.....	2	38	13
East Louisiana .....	18 and 45....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	17 and 18....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total .....		55	24	46	15	15	1	.....	.....	.....	20	4

<sup>a</sup> The special report of the commandant failed to discriminate the ages of State officers and those found physically disabled.

<sup>b</sup> The report of commandant failed to discriminate the ages of the number of exemptions as State officers.

D.—Exemptions—Continued.

State.	Age.	Superintendents, physicians, and nurses in public hospitals.	Overseers and agriculturists.	Railroad officers and employes.	Mail contractors.	Drivers of post coaches and hacks.	Non-combatants.	Foreigners.	By order of War Department.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
Virginia .....	18 and 45.....		448	1,108	136	68	99	24	3	926	12,556
	17 and 18.....		3								121
	45 and 50.....		102		2	4	8	1		15	762
Total .....			553	1,108	138	72	107	25	3	941	13,439
North Carolina .....	18 and 45.....		219	889	97	43	289	141	46
	17 and 18.....			28		2	31
	45 and 50.....		27	50	3	2	22	26	3
Total .....			246	967	100	47	342	167	49		16,564
South Carolina .....	18 and 45.....	731	812	41	9	1					4,383
	17 and 18.....	5	17	1							138
	45 and 50.....	127	117	5	1						1,318
Total .....		863	946	47	10	1					5,839
Georgia .....	18 and 45.....		1,214	853	106	20		12
	17 and 18.....		10	18
	45 and 50.....		346	131		2
Total .....			1,570	1,002	106	22		12			15,346
Alabama .....	18 and 45.....		874	770	41	14		126	8		6,922
	17 and 18.....		6	73		1		1	2		289
	45 and 50.....		567	247	7	5		40	3		3,007
Total .....			1,447	1,090	48	20		167	13		10,218
Mississippi .....	18 and 45.....		465	258	15			1	1	1	2,962
	17 and 18.....		4	22							92
	45 and 50.....		192	36	10						1,054
Total .....			661	316	25			1	1	1	4,108
Florida.....	18 and 45.....		124	135	8	1		1			609
	17 and 18.....			1							10
	45 and 50.....		29	16							129
Total .....			153	152	8	1		1			748
East Tennessee .....	18 and 45.....			62	2		66				547
	17 and 18.....
	45 and 50.....			3							26
Total .....				65	2		66				573
East Louisiana .....	18 and 45.....
	17 and 18.....
	45 and 50.....
Total .....			41					3	10		219

Grand total, 66,586.*

*So in copy; but factors produce the sum of 67,054.

E.—Agricultural details.

State.	Age.	Over 15 hands.	Between 10 and 15.	Between 5 and 10.	Less than 5.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
Virginia .....	18 and 45.....	3	10	53	81	.....	147
	17 and 18.....		1		9	.....	10
	45 and 50.....	3	29	215	201	.....	448
Total.....		6	40	268	291	.....	605
North Carolina.....	18 and 45.....		7	40	102	.....	149
	17 and 18.....				3	.....	3
	45 and 50.....		1	8	68	.....	77
Total.....			8	48	173	.....	229
South Carolina.....	18 and 45.....	12	14	16	8	5	55
	17 and 18.....		1	1	5		7
	45 and 50.....	17	22	99	68	28	214
Total.....		29	37	116	81	33	296
Georgia .....	18 and 45.....	312	157	218	93	56	836
	17 and 18.....	7	3	1	10	10	31
	45 and 50.....	99	105	224	155	59	642
Total.....		418	265	443	258	125	1,509
Alabama .....	18 and 45.....	3	6	14	14	.....	37
	17 and 18.....
	45 and 50.....	1					1
Total.....		4	6	14	14	.....	38
Mississippi.....	18 and 45.....		3	3	9	.....	15
	17 and 18.....
	45 and 50.....				5	.....	5
Total.....			3	3	14	.....	20
Florida.....	18 and 45.....			2		.....	2
	17 and 18.....
	45 and 50.....	5	2	7	2	.....	16
Total.....		5	2	9	2	.....	18
East Tennessee .....	18 and 45.....		1	1		.....	2

Grand total, 2,717.

NOTE.—Since General Orders, No. 77, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, only men found for "light duty" have been detailed as agriculturists.

F.—Details on account of public necessity.

State.	Age.	Railroad companies.	Telegraph companies.	Navigation companies.	Cotton and wool factories.	Paper mills.	Iron manufactories.	Foundries.	Printing establishments.	Fire department.	Police department.	Gas works.	Salt manufactories.
Virginia .....	18 and 45.....	68	93	45			4	2	5		22	3	30
	17 and 18.....				2		8	2					3
	45 and 50.....	11		12	30		5	37	4	16	5		8
Total.....		79	93	57	32		17	41	9	16	27	3	41
North Carolina.....	18 and 45.....	88	14	1	3
	17 and 18.....	11
	45 and 50.....	26											5
Total.....		125	14	1	3								5

F.—Details on account of public necessity—Continued.

State.	Age.	Railroad companies.	Telegraph companies.	Navigation companies.	Cotton and wool factories.	Paper mills.	Iron manufactories.	Foundries.	Printing establishments.	Fire department.	Police department.	Gas works.	Salt manufactories.
South Carolina.....	18 and 45.....	120	1	3	144	1	11	.....	1	.....	15	.....	1
	17 and 18.....	21	.....	.....	34	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	5	.....	.....
	45 and 50.....	31	12	.....	26	.....	1	.....	1	.....	17	.....	11
Total.....		172	13	3	204	1	12	.....	2	.....	37	.....	12
Georgia.....	18 and 45.....	319	3	14	277	15	18	22	10	.....	42	.....	27
	17 and 18.....	28	.....	.....	18	.....	.....	2	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50.....	56	1	.....	28	3	1	5	3	.....	15	.....	2
Total.....		463	4	14	323	18	19	29	13	.....	57	.....	29
Alabama.....	18 and 45.....	3	.....	12	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	1	.....	1	4
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50.....	.....	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total.....		3	.....	13	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	1	.....	1	4
Mississippi.....	18 and 45.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total.....		.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Florida.....	18 and 45.....	6	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	14
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1
Total.....		7	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	15
East Tennessee.....	18 and 45.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	7
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total.....		.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	7
East Louisiana.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....

State.	Age.	Shoemakers.	Tanners.	Blacksmiths.	Millers and mill engineers.	Millwrights.	Ferry-men.	Wheelwrights.	Wagon makers.	Indigent circumstances.	Express Company.	Equity, justice, and necessity.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
Virginia.....	18 and 45.....	1	5	3	4	1	.....	.....	.....	3	27	2	47	365
	17 and 18.....	2	7	1	19	1	.....	.....	.....	90	.....	2	4	141
	45 and 50.....	126	59	97	123	24	3	61	21	634	.....	51	138	1,465
Total.....		129	71	101	146	26	3	61	21	727	27	55	189	1,971
North Carolina.....	18 and 45.....	32	10	18	22	2	.....	.....	5	17	1	.....	22	235
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	.....	66	.....	78
	45 and 50.....	11	4	18	23	1	.....	.....	3	6	.....	8	19	124
Total.....		43	14	36	45	3	.....	.....	8	24	1	74	41	437
South Carolina.....	18 and 45.....	27	7	19	24	2	.....	3	6	19	11	17	19	451
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	6	.....	22	2	90
	45 and 50.....	22	8	30	50	5	.....	7	6	78	2	177	31	515
Total.....		49	15	49	74	7	.....	10	12	103	13	216	52	1,056
Georgia.....	18 and 45.....	74	47	94	108	12	2	20	11	89	46	45	67	1,426
	17 and 18.....	2	.....	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	2	.....	5	1	62
	45 and 50.....	44	17	50	38	8	4	17	12	164	7	149	39	660
Total.....		120	64	144	147	20	6	37	23	255	53	203	107	2,148

F.—Details on account of public necessity—Continued.

State.	Age.	Shoemakers.	Tanners.	Blacksmiths.	Millers and mill engineers.	Millwrights.	Ferry-men.	Wheelwrights.	Wagon makers.	Indigent circumstances.	Express Company.	Equity, justice, and necessity.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
Alabama .....	18 and 45.....	5	5	6	14	4	.....	2	2	4	.....	.....	14	78
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	1	2	.....	.....	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	3	8
	45 and 50.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total .....		5	5	7	16	4	.....	2	3	4	.....	.....	17	86
Mississippi .....	18 and 45.....	10	6	8	7	.....	.....	3	.....	.....	.....	2	2	38
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	1	3	.....	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	2	9
	45 and 50.....	2	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total .....		12	6	9	10	.....	.....	4	.....	.....	.....	2	4	47
Florida .....	18 and 45.....	2	.....	4	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	28
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50.....	2	.....	7	4	.....	.....	.....	8	.....	.....	.....	.....	23
Total .....		4	.....	11	5	.....	.....	.....	9	.....	.....	.....	.....	51
East Tennessee .....	18 and 45.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	7
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total .....		.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	7
East Louisianaa .....		.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....

Grand total, 5,803.

NOTE.—Nearly all of these men between 18 and 45 have been found unfit for duty in the field.

a No report received from Louisiana since September, 1864.

G.—Details for Government service, bureaus, and departments (not including contractors or artisans, mechanics, &amp;c.).

State.	Class.	Conscription Department.	Quartermaster's Department.	Commissary Department.	Ordnance Department.	Engineer Department.	Navy Department.	Post-Office Department.	Medical Department.	Treasury Department.	Niter and Mining Bureau.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
Virginia .....	18 and 45.....	3	125	55	141	43	6	35	18	86	1,128	.....	1,640
	17 and 18.....	14	5	1	12	.....	.....	1	.....	.....	8	.....	41
	45 and 50.....	197	255	88	53	.....	6	4	14	80	58	.....	760
Total .....		214	385	144	206	43	12	40	32	166	1,194	.....	2,421
South Carolina .....	18 and 45.....	148	44	36	7	15	33	3	5	36	.....	.....	327
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	4	.....	.....	5
	45 and 50.....	160	24	22	1	.....	7	2	.....	9	.....	1	226
Total .....		308	68	59	8	15	40	5	5	49	.....	1	558
Georgia .....	18 and 45.....	193	194	161	61	21	44	13	43	27	19	11	795
	17 and 18.....	.....	2	2	6	1	1	.....	2	.....	.....	.....	16
	45 and 50.....	49	68	39	15	9	6	4	7	5	2	1	205
Total .....		242	264	202	82	31	51	17	52	32	23	12	1,016

G.—Details for Government service, bureaus, and departments (not including contractors or artisans, mechanics, &c.)—Continued.

State.	Class.	Conscription Department	Quartermaster's Department.	Commissary Department.	Ordnance Department.	Engineer Department.	Navy Department.	Post-Office Department.	Medical Department.	Treasury Department.	Niter and Mining Bureau.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
Alabama.....	18 and 45.....	.....	4	.....	2	.....	.....	.....	15	10	175	.....	206
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	3	.....	3
	45 and 50.....	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2	.....	6	.....	9
Total.....		.....	5	.....	2	.....	.....	.....	17	10	184	.....	218
Mississippi.....	18 and 45.....	.....	1	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	1
Total.....		.....	1	1	.....	.....	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	3
Florida.....	18 and 45.....	5	7	209	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	220
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50.....	48	3	4	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	55
Total.....		53	10	212	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	275
East Tennessee.....	18 and 45.....	.....	15	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	86	.....	102
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1
	45 and 50.....	18	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	19
Total.....		18	16	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	.....	86	.....	121

Grand total, 4,612.

NOTE.—Those in the conscription service have been found fit only for light duty. Details granted on certificates of heads of departments that the persons are indispensable, in conformity to General Orders, Nos. 77 and 82, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, 1864.

H.—Details of contractors to furnish supplies.

State.	Class.	Quartermaster's Department.	Commissary Department.	Ordnance Department.	Engineer Department.	Navy Department.	Post-Office Department.	Medical Department.	Treasury Department.	Niter and Mining Bureau.	State quartermaster's department.	Total.
Virginia.....	18 and 45.....	41	8	81	.....	19	.....	4	1	67	.....	221
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50.....	9	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2	.....	20	.....	31
Total.....		50	8	81	.....	19	.....	6	1	87	.....	252
North Carolina.....	18 and 45.....	9	2	4	.....	.....	4	.....	.....	33	27	79
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	12	.....	14
	45 and 50.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total.....		9	2	4	.....	.....	6	.....	.....	45	27	93
South Carolina.....	18 and 45.....	20	4	10	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	28	.....	63
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50.....	2	.....	2	.....	.....	.....	1	.....	5	.....	10
Total.....		22	4	12	.....	.....	.....	1	1	33	.....	73
Georgia.....	18 and 45.....	59	22	90	26	3	6	7	.....	2	.....	215
	17 and 18.....	.....	.....	3	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	4
	45 and 50.....	6	4	7	3	.....	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	21
Total.....		65	26	100	29	4	6	8	.....	2	.....	240

H.—Details of contractors to furnish supplies—Continued.

State.	Class.	Quartermaster's Department.	Commissary Department.	Ordnance Department.	Engineer Department.	Navy Department.	Post-Office Department.	Medical Department.	Treasury Department.	Miner and Mining Bureau.	State quartermaster's department.	Total.
Alabama .....	18 and 45....	16	1	5	.....	.....	.....	2	.....	17	.....	41
	17 and 18....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	.....	1	.....	3
Total .....		17	1	5	.....	.....	.....	3	.....	18	.....	44
East Tennessee .....	18 and 45....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	14	.....	14
	17 and 18....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1	.....	1
Total .....		.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	15	.....	15

Grand total, 717.

NOTE.—Detailed on certificates of heads of departments that these persons are skilled and indispensable, in conformity with General Orders, Nos. 77 and 82, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, 1864.

I.—Government details of artisans, mechanics, &amp;c.

State.	Class.	Quartermaster's Department.	Contractors with Quartermaster's Department.	Commissary Department.	Contractors with Commissary Department.	Ordnance Department.	Contractors with Ordnance Department.	Engineer Department.	Navy Department.	Contractors with Navy Department.	Post-Office Department.
Virginia .....	18 and 45....	461	39	5	35	874	726	82	398	9	.....
	17 and 18....	9	.....	.....	.....	5	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	35	1	10	2	29	1	12	46	.....	.....
Total .....		505	40	15	37	908	727	94	444	9	.....
North Carolina .....	18 and 45....	154	.....	26	.....	454	134	14	100	3	13
	17 and 18....	3	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	39	.....	2	.....	3	.....	.....	8	.....	.....
Total .....		196	.....	28	.....	457	134	14	108	3	13
South Carolina .....	18 and 45....	4	59	1	1	15	74	2	1	.....	.....
	17 and 18....	.....	4	.....	.....	1	3	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	8	12	.....	.....	11	3	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total .....		12	75	1	1	27	80	2	1	.....	.....
Georgia .....	18 and 45....	101	85	17	7	49	27	.....	2	29	6
	17 and 18....	5	3	.....	.....	2	.....	.....	.....	1	.....
	45 and 50....	23	8	2	.....	2	.....	.....	.....	1	.....
Total .....		129	96	19	7	53	27	.....	2	31	6
Alabama .....	18 and 45....	3	45	.....	.....	61	1	21	6	.....	.....
	17 and 18....	.....	3	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	.....	15	.....	.....	.....	1	2	.....	.....	.....
Total .....		3	63	.....	.....	61	2	23	6	.....	.....
East Tennessee .....	18 and 45....	1	5	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	17 and 18....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
	45 and 50....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total .....		1	5	.....	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....

I.—Government details of artisans, mechanics, &amp;c.—Continued.

State.	Class.	Contractors with Post-Office Department.	Medical Department.	Contractors with Medical Department.	Treasury Department.	Contractors with Treasury Department.	Niter and Mining Bureau.	Contractors with Niter and Mining Bureau.	State quartermaster's department.	Total.
Virginia .....	18 and 45.....		1				26	625		3,281
	17 and 18.....							14		28
	45 and 50.....		1				9	29		175
Total .....			2				35	668		3,484
North Carolina .....	18 and 45.....		20		2		399	271	191	1,781
	17 and 18.....						4	6	1	14
	45 and 50.....						12	26		90
Total .....			20		2		415	303	192	1,885
South Carolina .....	18 and 45.....			16		37	7			217
	17 and 18.....					1	1			10
	45 and 50.....			2		4	4			44
Total .....				18		42	12			271
Georgia .....	18 and 45.....	1	3	8				184		519
	17 and 18.....							2		13
	45 and 50.....			1				12		49
Total .....		1	3	9				198		581
Alabama .....	18 and 45.....						333	48		518
	17 and 18.....						9	4		16
	45 and 50.....						14	4		36
Total .....							356	56		570
East Tennessee .....	18 and 45.....							155		162
	17 and 18.....							1		1
	45 and 50.....							6		6
Total .....								162		169

Grand total, 6,960.

NOTE.—Detailed on certificates of heads of departments that "these persons are skilled, experts, and indispensable" in conformity with General Orders, Nos. 77 and 82, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, 1864.

K.—Deserters returned to the Army.

State.	Number.	Remarks.
Virginia .....	8,596
North Carolina .....	8,832
South Carolina .....	2,514	Since September, 1862.
Georgia .....	5,173
Alabama .....	5,055	Since February, 1864.
Mississippi .....	2,031	Do.
Florida .....	220
East Louisiana .....	75	Since August, 1864.
East Tennessee .....	560	Since November, 1863.
Total .....	* 21,056

L.—Recapitulation.

Number of conscripts assigned to the Army from camps of instruction .....	81,993
Deserters returned to the Army .....	* 21,056
Assignments under section 8 of the act of 17th of February, 1864.....	7,733

* So in copy; but the factors (if correctly stated) make the sum of 33,056.

Approximate estimate of men who have joined the Army without passing through camps of instruction .....	*76, 206
Total number of exempts .....	*66, 586
Agricultural details .....	2, 717
Details on account of public necessity .....	5, 803
Government details, bureaus and departments (not including artisans and mechanics) .....	4, 612
Detail of contractors to furnish supplies .....	717
Detail of artisans and mechanics .....	6, 960

RICHMOND, VA.; February 21, 1865.

Hon. JOHN FORSYTH,
Mobile, Ala.:

MY DEAR SIR: You will readily understand why during the session of Congress my private correspondence should be in arrears. I have now, though it may seem late, to thank you for your letter of 31st of December. The article inclosed from the Register and Advertiser is a substantial expression of my own views on the subject of employing for the defense of our country all able-bodied men we have, without distinction of color. It is now becoming daily more evident to all reflecting persons that we are reduced to choosing whether the negroes shall fight for or against us, and that all arguments as to the positive advantages or disadvantages of employing them are beside the question, which is simply one of relative advantage between having their fighting element in our ranks or in those of our enemy.

On the other topic suggested by you, making use of this subject as an aid for negotiations, you will appreciate the obligation of reticence imposed on me in these matters, and I can only say that I perceive no discordance in the views you express from what wise policy would dictate. So far, therefore, from obstructing any effort that the Government may be, or may have been, making in the hope of securing our independence, the influence of your journal in the line which you propose to take would be a valuable assistance.

With many thanks for your offer for cordial support in my labors for the success of our common country, I am,

Very truly and respectfully, yours,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

RICHMOND, VA., February 21, 1865.

His Excellency JOHN MILTON,
Governor of the State of Florida, Tallahassee, Fla.:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your favor bearing date December 9, 1864, inclosing to me "Joint resolutions of confidence and thanks to President Jefferson Davis." For this marked manifestation of unabated confidence on the part of the Legislature of Florida I feel deeply sensible. It is truly gratifying in these times of peril and great public excitement for the Executive to be sustained by such evidences of continued approval. For myself please receive assurances of my high regard and a just appreciation of your valuable services, and believe me,

Truly, your friend and fellow-citizen,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

* See foot-notes (*), pp. 1101, 1103.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, SURG. GEN.'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., February 21, 1865.

Hon. J. C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: In compliance with instructions from the War Office of the 17th instant, and in response to the resolution of the Senate of the 14th instant, I have the honor herewith to inclose estimate in quadruplicate for funds required by the Medical Department for the period of twelve months.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. P. MOORE,
Surgeon-General C. S. Army.

[Inclosure.]

Estimate of funds required for the Medical Department, C. S. Army, for the period of twelve months.

For the purchase of medical and hospital supplies:

Medicines .....	$16,000,000
Instruments .....	400,000
Books for hospital regimental records .....	200,000
Hospital stores .....	4,000,000
Bedding .....	4,000,000
Furniture, dressing, &c. ....	4,000,000
	28,600,000
For purchase of hospital clothing required by act of Congress approved September 27, 1862, entitled "An act to better provide for the sick and wounded of the Army in hospitals" .....	1,000,000
For purchase of 624,000 gallons of alcoholic stimulants required for Medical Department for medical and hospital purposes for an army of men .....	8,000,000
For establishment and support of military hospitals .....	200,000
For pay of private physicians employed by contract .....	500,000
For pay of nurses and cooks not enlisted or volunteer .....	700,000
For pay of hospital stewards .....	200,000
For pay of matrons, assistant matrons, and ward matrons .....	700,000
For pay of ward-masters .....	400,000
For pay of hospital laundresses .....	300,000
Total .....	40,600,000

S. P. MOORE,
Surgeon-General C. S. Army.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, SURGEON-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va.

RICHMOND, VA., February 22, 1865.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

In response to your resolution of the 25th ultimo I herewith transmit for your information a communication from the Secretary of War, relative to the number of able-bodied men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, "claimed to be exempt from conscription by the Governor, laws, and resolutions of the State of Georgia."

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

[Inclosure.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, Va., February 22, 1865.

The PRESIDENT OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

SIR: I have received the following resolution of the House of Representatives adopted on the 25th ultimo, and referred by Your Excellency to this Department for attention:

Resolved, That the President be respectfully requested to furnish this House with the number of able-bodied males between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, claimed to be exempt from conscription by the Governor, laws, and resolutions of the State of Georgia.

In response I have the honor to transmit herewith a report from the Superintendent of Conscription containing the information called for by the House.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War.

[Sub-inclosures.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., February 16, 1865.

Hon. JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War:

SIR: The following resolution of the House of Representatives of the 25th ultimo has been referred to this Bureau:

Resolved, That the President be respectfully requested to furnish this House with the number of able-bodied males between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, claimed to be exempt from conscription by the Governor, laws, and resolutions of the State of Georgia.

In pursuance of instructions thereon indorsed, I have the honor to submit the inclosed paper, marked A.

The return is made from the reports of the commandant of conscripts for Georgia, the only source whence this Bureau can obtain the information.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

A.—Number of State officers exempted in the State of Georgia.

Governor and Statehouse officers	20	Deputy ordinaries	132
Judges of supreme court	3	Sheriffs	132
Clerk of supreme court	2	Deputy sheriffs	132
Judges of inferior supreme court	16	Constables	132
Senators	44	Tax collectors	1,350
Representatives	169	Tax receivers	132
Justices of the peace	1,350	Jailers	132
Justices of inferior courts	660	County treasurers	132
Solicitors	16	Coroners	132
Clerks of superior court	132	County surveyors	132
Deputy clerks superior court	132	Militia officers	2,751
Deputy clerks inferior court	264
Ordinaries	132	Total	8,229

THOMAS PINCKNEY,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 8. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, February 23, 1865.

I. Generals of reserves will immediately place upon active duty every man belonging to that class who is not specially detailed, or has not been turned over to generals commanding armies, departments, or districts. They will organize them into convenient bodies, and will employ them vigorously in arresting and returning to the Army all deserters and absentees.

II. This service will, for the present, constitute the primary duty of officers of the reserve forces, and they will enter actively upon it.

III. Generals of reserves will visit and inspect the localities in which this force is most needed, and can be most beneficially employed, and will give their personal attention to the organization and operations of their troops in carrying out these orders. They will report twice a month to the Adjutant and Inspector General the number of men arrested and sent by them to the Army.

IV. Generals commanding armies will return to the generals of reserves for this duty all the reserve forces in active service that are not indispensably necessary in the field.

V. It is not intended that these orders shall affect the reserves employed in guarding railroad bridges.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

RICHMOND, VA., February 24, 1865.

Brig. Gen. I. M. ST. JOHN:

GENERAL: As a means of increasing the supply of breadstuffs for the use of the Government, I beg leave to offer for your consideration the following observations derived in the course of my official duties, and some suggestions that have presented themselves therewith:

First. That any call upon the people for voluntary contributions produces, in fact, nothing. The truly patriotic have already delivered, or are doing so as rapidly as possible, all their surplus. Those who are so only in appearance by a small loan or proffered sale, which is magnified to its greatest extent, aim to cover and protect a much larger quantity, while those who are not disposed to aid the Government are induced by this very call to exert themselves to their utmost to conceal and convey off secretly what might otherwise be obtained.

Second. That the patriotism of the people is not exhausted, and that they will cheerfully submit to anything that they can be assured is necessary and uniform. To this latter condition even more importance is attached than to the other. I feel assured that the testimony of every officer engaged in the collection of supplies will be found to sustain me in this opinion, and that it will meet the assent of every producer and farmer. The neglect of this rule has been a greater cause of dissatisfaction and complaint than all the other acts of the Government combined.

Third. That throughout Virginia the rations of meal for the negroes is now, by general allowance, one and a half pecks of meal per week—say, eighteen pounds—or two and four-seventh pounds per day, nearly three times what is given to the Army; that in addition to this they have their vegetables, milk, chickens, eggs, &c.

Now, as to the deduction from these facts, I would respectfully suggest that either by the voluntary act of the farmers, in county meeting assembled, or by law, as has been done to some extent in the article of meat, the negro ration of breadstuff be reduced to the same amount as that furnished by the Army, and that each farmer urge and encourage the production of roots and vegetables (the usual diet of the laboring class in other countries) to the greatest possible extent, for the supply and use, not only of his own hands, but for non-producers. By these means the surplus of breadstuffs would be vastly increased without any detriment to the profit or comfort of the farmer or his hands.

The late Congress authorized the "impressment of one-half the usual quantity of meat reserved by each producer for his own use." This law, as far as I have been able to learn, was executed with but little if any dissatisfaction or difficulty, because believed to be necessary and uniform.

The suggestions made above are but another step toward putting the whole country upon rations, or a regulated allowance. Could this end be accomplished, I feel assured that your main difficulties would be removed.

Very respectfully, yours,

P. A. WELLFORD,
Captain and Assistant Commissary of Subsistence.

---

[FEBRUARY 24 and MARCH 2, 1865.—For correspondence between Lee and Vance, in relation to the disaffection of North Carolina troops, and Vance's action and recommendations with a view to inspire confidence and public spirit, see Series I, Vol. XLVII, Part II, pp. 1270, 1312.]

---

WAR DEPARTMENT, ENGINEER BUREAU,
Richmond, Va., February 27, 1865.

Hon. J. C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War:

SIR: On recurring to the files of this Bureau I find that General Gilmer on the 11th instant estimated the amount needed for construction and repair of railroads for military purposes during the current year at $21,000,000, triplicate copies of which I have the honor to inclose.*

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. L. RIVES,
Colonel and Assistant to Chief Engineer.

---

AN ACT to provide for the employment of free negroes and slaves to work upon fortifications and perform other labor connected with the defenses of the country.

Whereas, the efficiency of the Army is at times greatly diminished by the withdrawal from the ranks of soldiers to perform labor and duties which can as well be done by free negroes and slaves:

The Congress of the Confederate States of America do enact, That all free male negroes between the ages of eighteen and fifty years shall be held liable to perform any labor or discharge any duties with the Army, or in connection with the military defenses of the country, such as working upon fortifications, producing and preparing materials of war, building and repairing roads and bridges, and doing other work usually done by engineer troops and pontoniers, acting as cooks, teamsters, stewards and waiters in military hospitals, or other like labor, or similar duties which may be required or prescribed by the Secretary of War, or the general commanding the Trans-Mississippi Department, from time to time, and said free negroes, whilst thus engaged, shall receive rations and clothing, under such regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe, and shall receive pay at the rate of eighteen dollars per month.

---

* Omitted.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of War and the general commanding the Trans-Mississippi Department are each authorized to employ, for duties like those named in the first section of this act, as many male negro slaves, between the ages of eighteen and forty years, as the wants of the service may require, and the said slaves, whilst so employed, shall be furnished rations and clothing, as provided in the preceding section, and the owners paid such hire for their services as may be agreed upon, and in the event of the loss of any slaves whilst so employed, by the act of the enemy, or by escape to the enemy, or by wounds or death inflicted by the enemy, or by disease contracted whilst in any service required of said slaves, and by reason of said service, then the owners thereof, respectively, shall be entitled to receive the full value of such slaves, to be ascertained and fixed by agreement at the time said slaves are so hired, under rules to be prescribed by the Secretary of War.

SEC. 3. That whenever the Secretary of War, or the general commanding the Trans-Mississippi Department, shall be unable to procure the services of slaves by hiring them, as above provided, in sufficient numbers, then it shall be lawful for the said Secretary or general to order the impressment and to impress as many male slaves, within the ages named in the second section of this act, and for the purposes and uses above stated, as the wants of the service may require: Provided, That said impressment shall be made according to the rules and regulations provided in the laws of the States wherein they are impressed, and in the absence of such law, in accordance with such rules and regulations not inconsistent with the provisions of this act as the Secretary of War shall from time to time prescribe: Provided further, That slaves so impressed shall, whilst in the Government employment, receive the same clothing and rations allowed to slaves hired from their owners, and in the event of their loss or death, in the manner or from the causes above stated, their value shall be estimated and fixed as provided by the first section of "An act regulating impressments," approved March twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and paid as in the case of slaves hired from their owners, and the value of the hire of said slaves shall be fixed in like manner.

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of War and the general commanding the Trans-Mississippi Department shall, in ordering the impressment of slaves, regulate the same, as far as practicable, so that slaves shall be taken from each State in proportion to the whole number hired and impressed under this act, whether owned by citizens of such State or not; but not more than one in every five male slaves within the said ages of eighteen and forty years shall be taken from any one owner, if said slaves are employed by said owner or his lessee uniformly in agriculture or in mechanical pursuits, nor where an owner has but one male slave within said ages shall said slave be impressed, and all impressments under this act shall, as far as practicable, be taken in equal ratio from all owners in the same locality, city, county, or district: Provided, That in each case care being taken to allow each owner a credit for all male slaves between the ages aforesaid heretofore impressed, or impressed under this act, or hired to the Government, who are still in service, or who may have died or been lost while in service: Provided further, That if the Governor of any State shall certify to the Secretary of War or the commanding general of the Trans-Mississippi Department that slaves cannot be impressed in any locality, county, district, parish, or city in such State without great detriment to such locality, county, district, parish, or city, then the quota of said locality, county, district, parish, or city, shall be impressed from other portions of such State: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to exempt any State from furnishing its fair quota of slaves for the purposes herein specified and according to the provisions of this act.

SEC. 5. If any slave is now held for services who is not liable thereto under the provisions of this act such slave shall be forthwith returned to the owner on demand and proof of the fact.

SEC. 6. That duplicate rolls shall be prepared of all the slaves hired or impressed under this act, which shall contain a description of the slaves, the names and residences of the owners, and a statement of the value and rate of hire of the slaves at the date they are hired or impressed, one of which rolls shall, in the States east of the Mississippi River, be forwarded to the Secretary of War, and in those west of the Mississippi River to the headquarters of the general commanding that department, and the other roll shall be sent to the general commanding the army where said slaves may be employed, and the officer having charge of said slaves, or of the work upon which they may be engaged, shall have a copy of said roll, and shall regularly enter thereon the nature of the labor or duties in which said slaves are engaged, and any changes which may be made therein, and of the absence, sickness, or death of any of said slaves, and make monthly returns thereof to the general commanding the army where said slaves are employed, who shall transmit the same to the Secretary of War, or to the commanding general in the Trans-Mississippi Department, as the case may be.

SEC. 7. That all laws, or parts of laws providing for the hiring or impressment of slaves be, and the same are hereby, repealed, except so far as they may provide for regulating and fixing, in case of impressment, the value of said slaves, or the value of their services.

SEC. 8. That no slave shall be hereafter impressed except in pursuance of the provisions of this act, and any officer who may violate the provisions thereof shall be court-martialed and on conviction cashiered.

TH. S. BOCOCK,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

R. M. T. HUNTER,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

Approved 28th February, 1865.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

S. 129.—Enrolled:

An act to provide for the employment of free negroes and slaves to work upon fortifications and perform other labor connected with the defenses of the country.

Passed the Senate February 18, 1865.

JAMES H. NASH,
Secretary.

Passed the House of Representatives February 18, 1865.

A. R. LAMAR,
Clerk.

I do hereby certify that this act did originate in the Senate.

JAMES H. NASH,
Secretary.

Presented to President February 28, 1865.

---

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, February 28, 1865.

Mr. JOHN WHITE,

Commissioner of North Carolina:
(Care of A. Collie & Co., 17 Leadenhall Street, London.)

DEAR SIR: You will before this reaches you have learned of the capture of Wilmington and the consequent stoppage of our blockade-running business. The course proper for you to pursue under the changed aspect of affairs has, I presume, suggested itself to you. Nothing remains but to close up our affairs as completely as possible and wait for a change. Our accounts in England, I suppose, can easily be reduced to shape, and what funds we have should be placed in safety to aid in the final adjustment of our indebtedness. Our goods on hand, whether in Europe or the islands, I leave you to dispose of in any way deemed best, consulting Mr. Flanner and Mr. Collie. You may also relieve Mr. Flanner of his agency from this date, and will please reduce your own expenditures on State account as far as practicable. Not being able to export any more cotton, of course it becomes us to exercise the most rigid economy. There is upward of a thousand pounds sterling due us from the Confederate Government for freight brought in the Advance by Mr. Flanner, which I presume he forgot to collect whilst in this country. Please see him and try to get it. Major Walker, the Confederate agent at Bermuda, gave receipts for it. Mr. William Collie, who kindly bears this, will give you the military news. It is bad enough, God knows. Your family are well. I have received nothing from you since Halifax.

Yours, truly,

Z. B. VANCE.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, ENGINEER BUREAU,
Richmond, Va., March 1, 1865.

Honorable SECRETARY OF WAR:

SIR: The communication of Commander M. F. Maury, C. S. Navy, in explanation and recommendation of the newly introduced electro-magnetic torpedo exploders, which was referred hither from your office with indorsement recommending "that measures be taken to import some of these exploders with a supply of insulated wire," &c., has been carefully considered.

The value of the new exploders in connection with the mining and torpedo service is acknowledged, but the difficulties of the blockade as well as of securing the necessary credit abroad will, it is feared, render impracticable the importation which was recommended.

The paper will be filed and the subject kept constantly before the attention of the Bureau, in the hope that circumstances may hereafter enable the Department to act successfully in the matter. It is proposed to use such material as is available for the purpose in the Confederacy, and as far as practicable in the manner suggested by Commander Maury.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

A. L. RIVES,

Colonel and Assistant to Chief Engineer.

(For and in the absence of Maj. Gen. J. F. Gilmer, Chief of Bureau.)

RICHMOND, VA., March 1, 1865.

General HOWELL COBB, or

Col. WILLIAM M. BROWNE,

Augusta, Ga.:

Decipher and forward to Reverend Doctor Myers and Bishop Pierce, with my special regards:

Bishop GEORGE F. PIERCE, D. D.:

(Care of Reverend Doctor Myers, Augusta, Ga.)

Ministers of all denominations in Virginia have offered their services to the Government to address the people, encourage hearty support of the Government, moral firmness, and that faith which Christians may illustrate in such a cause. They are now in the field, and good is resulting. Last evening the President, in conversation with Dr. William A. Smith and myself, expressed the earnest desire that you would address the people of Georgia in the same spirit. We promised to telegraph you at once. If possible, Bishop, go out and speak to the people, and assure them that if they will but do their duty all will be well. The faith of the country must not give way.

WM. A. SMITH,

JAS. A. DUNCAN.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

[MARCH 1, 1865.—For Breckinridge to Vance, in relation to desertions, and urging that every influence be invoked to revive a patriotic spirit, see Series I, Vol. XLVII, Part II, p. 1296.]

RICHMOND, VA., March 3, 1865.

Hon. WILLOUGHBY NEWTON,

Leeds, Westmoreland County, Va.:

MY DEAR SIR: Your kind letter written January 6 was, after some lapse of time, received by me, and I reply now to thank you for your generous confidence and friendly encouragement in an hour when so many believed brave have faltered and so many esteemed true have fallen away. In such words and feelings as you extend to me I find the most gratifying reward for my labors in the public service. In spite of the timidity and faithlessness of many who should give tone to the popular feeling and hope to the popular heart, I am satisfied that it is in the power of the good men and true patriots of the country to reanimate the wearied spirit of our people. The incredible sacrifices made by them in the cause will be surpassed by what they are still willing to endure in preference to abject submission, if they are not deserted by their leaders. Relying upon the sublime fortitude and devotion of my countrymen, I expect the hour of deliverance. I thank you that from a heart wrung by domestic affliction—although your bereavement was attended by all the circumstances that afford consolation to the patriot—you offer me that sympathy which I so esteem and so heartily return.

Very truly, and respectfully, yours,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, Va., March 3, 1865.

Hon. J. C. BRECKINRIDGE,

Secretary of War:

SIR: Herewith I return a letter from General Robert E. Lee, in reply to my recommendations concerning the arrest of deserters from the armies, which letter was referred by your order to this Bureau. With extreme diffidence I venture to say that in my judgment General Lee's objections are not well founded. In several States civil disabilities have been provided by law for the crime of desertion from the Confederate armies, and as we know without the slightest effect in diminishing the extent of the crime. I feel quite assured the disabilities proposed by General Lee cannot be obtained from the State. It might be a question whether the terms of the fourth paragraph, second section, first article, and the spirit of the second paragraph, third section, third article of the Constitution of the Confederate States may not be an impediment to such legislation.

The full scope of my recommendation is to bring the entire existing civil machinery of the States to bear on the matter, and in addition to that they should institute special courts for the cognizance of this particular crime, and by the constitution of those courts to provide for more speedy and rigorous proceedings than are known to the existing courts; and further, for like purposes, to allow them the discretion to transfer the cases to the army tribunals. Proper provisions for these purposes would give strictness and dispatch equal to that assumed for army courts, or at least would form most efficient adjuncts to those courts besides their effect as State institutions and as being of easy access. It is but reasonable to assume that provision would be made for placing on these courts persons as nearly qualified for the duties as could be obtained, either from the class of civilians or competent military officers unfit for field service by reason of wounds or disease. Special authority, of course, would be given to Governors to insure prompt and intelligent action.

I assume that the matter of returning deserters to the Army is one of the greatest and most pressing necessities now upon the country, the importance of which no terms can exaggerate. That there are over 100,000 deserters scattered over the Confederacy; that so common is the crime it has, in popular estimation, lost the stigma which justly pertains to it, and therefore the criminals are everywhere shielded by their families and by the sympathies of many communities. They form the numerical majorities in many localities. Under such circumstances nothing short of State institutions and stringent State laws, together with permanent and local means of enforcing these laws, can reach them. For this reason the courts should be local, and a force established which should be permanent and closely netted together throughout the Confederacy.

I suggest the creation of a force for this purpose and the use of the reserves as auxiliary. General Lee thinks a new force unnecessary, and that the reserves are sufficient, even without the aid of the civil arm, except by laws of disability. While I put youths of sixteen to seventeen in this force, I would of course transfer them at seventeen to their appropriate class—the reserves—the class General Lee proposes to use in this service. This does not keep them out of the Army; it is using them a year earlier in this duty. Not a man is kept from his due course to service in the active forces, but is, in fact, better prepared for it. The prime auxiliary I suggest to the use of the civil arm with its permanent force is precisely this reserve force, and General Orders, No. 8, current series, was prepared by me in view of that use of the reserve forces. If that force is properly organized and put permanently and exclusively on this duty, in connection with the civil agencies, it might be effectual without the creation of new forces; but unless it is made the permanent and sole duty, and that connection is rigidly maintained, I cannot think the reserves will be sufficient for the purposes. If the net-work is ever broken for a week by the reserves being called to other active service, whether local or general, although seemingly not inconsistent, the experience of the last six months convinces me that they will fail in this. Since September last the matter has been in the hands of the reserves, and fewer deserters, not only in proportion to the number, but absolutely, have been returned than while it was in charge of the meager and inappropriate conscription agencies.

I am confident General Lee is in error in supposing the reserve force will or can cure this evil. Desertion is as common in that organization as in the Army.

Adopt the State agencies in full, put the reserves in the condition General Lee suggests, and in addition let it be their sole duty, and there is great chance of good results. There is no organization which can be invented by which the reserves alone can effect the purpose.

My recommendation is intended to call to the service all available existing powers and create others applicable to it.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

P. S.—Beyond the means heretofore suggested there may be one other worthy of consideration. If Congress calls on the States to furnish quotas of troops let deserters returned by State agencies be counted in the respective quotas. Under well ascertained restrictions and limitations this might be conceded with good effect; say, two, three, four, five, or more deserters returned be credited as one soldier, &c.

[Indorsement.]

SECRETARY OF WAR:

I very much question whether the States would pass the laws recommended in this letter. Such legislation might add to the difficulties attending upon desertion and tend to the suppression of the evil. I think that it would, but I do not see how it could be obtained.

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Secretary of War.

[Inclosure.]

HEADQUARTERS CONFEDERATE STATES ARMIES,
February 24, 1865.

HONORABLE SECRETARY OF WAR,
Richmond:

SIR: I forward herewith a communication received from Brigadier-General Preston on the subject of arresting and returning absentees and deserters. I do not concur in all the suggestions of General Preston. I think a great deal could be done if the States would attach civil disabilities and penalties to the crime of desertion. They should incapacitate a deserter from making or receiving a title to land or other property by deed, will, or descent, and make desertion a good plea in abatement of any suit he might bring. But I do not think anything would be gained by trying deserters before the civil courts. Those tribunals would not be inclined to the rigor which military courts are compelled to exercise toward such offenders. Their forms of proceeding are slow, and the mitigating circumstances which deserters know so well how to invent, and which in fact often exist, would prove too much for the humane feelings of juries. The chances of escape would be multiplied, and men would hasten to avoid the speedy and strict trial by a court-martial by getting themselves brought before civil courts, in which the delay alone would defeat the objects of military punishment and effectually keep them out of service.

Nor do I think the system of State military courts recommended by General Preston, even if they were adopted, likely to benefit the service. I do not think any court competent to try military offenses with benefit to discipline except one composed of persons having a practical knowledge of the wants of armies and the necessities of service. Such tribunals as are suggested would of course be composed either of civilians or of officers unfit for active duty, and as a general thing ignorant of the necessity and importance of discipline. Besides, when deserters are arrested I think they should be at once turned over to the military authorities. The fear of being so dealt with is one of the restraints upon desertion.

Nor do I agree with General Preston as to the formation of the local force to arrest deserters. I can see no advantage that the companies he recommends would have over the reserves, and the latter are certainly more numerous. His plan would in effect take men permanently from the Army, for the youths between sixteen and seventeen whom he proposes to employ in the duty of arresting deserters would in one year be liable to military service. The actual loss would be the same as to take men already of military age. I think the duty of arresting and returning deserters should be performed by the reserves, aided by light-duty and disabled men. They should be thoroughly organized for the purpose, and officered by the most efficient invalid or retired officers. There should be a commandant of reserves in each State, charged with the control of the whole force, and reporting to the War Department through some officer connected herewith for the purpose. If a like stringency in requiring the reserve forces to perform this duty were adopted as is employed in other branches of the service, and a thorough organization effected, I think the work would be done. If the States can be induced to require their civil officers to aid, and all Government agents and employes also, it would serve a good purpose. I think that what is required is the adoption of a plan which will make the reserves understand and feel that they are engaged in military duty and liable to military punishment for its neglect.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. E. LEE,
General.

[Sub-inclosure.]

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION,
Richmond, February 20, 1865.

General ROBERT E. LEE,

Commander-in-Chief of the Confederate States:

GENERAL: I will attempt to express in the fewest possible words the views I ventured to suggest this morning concerning the cure and prevention of desertion and absenteeism from the Army. I may have failed to make myself understood, for I am uncontrollably diffident in counsel where neither by rank nor ability can I claim equality. Expedients of partial effect might be suggested, and experiments that would scarcely amount to palliatives of the evil might be tried under the auspices of those ignorant of the magnitude and difficulty of the work required to catch and return from an area of 300,000 square miles over 100,000 criminals shielded by a sympathizing population. They would fail.

With entire diffidence I assume that I have some comprehension of the matter, because for near three years I have devoted without remission all my tribute to the public service in this direction.

The only comprehensive and probably successful plan for the prevention of desertion and the arrest of deserters which occurs to me is the following:

The enactment by the States and the Confederate Congress of concurrent laws constituting the crime of desertion from the Confederate armies a crime by State statute to be pursued against citizens of the State as any other crime of like grade, and additionally by military courts or commissions to be established by the States for that purpose. These laws would of course imply that the civil authority should be used for arrests of absentees from the Confederate armies, just as in the prosecution of any other statute crime, and that the parties may be turned over to the special military courts, or, at discretion, by the civil authority or by those courts to the Confederate authorities, and Congress should provide that the cases may be tried by these courts.

The mutual concessions required for these laws are: First, the adoption by State statute of a crime against Confederate law; second, the authority to be given by Congress for State courts to try crimes against Confederate law. The provisions of the laws must, of course, cover the whole matter of the forms of proceedings, testimony, &c. One provision for the Confederate law is important, that the writ of habeas corpus be suspended in case of parties actually within the custody of the special courts.

The Confederate organization should be alike in principle and very similar in detail to that provided for in the bill reported by the minority of the Special Committee on Conscription of the House of Representatives.

If it is found impracticable to apply the reserve force to this service as its chief and permanent duty, then an effort should be made to raise a permanent force for this special duty.

I believe it may be done thus: For each Congressional district one company of not less than sixty men, armed and equipped as infantry or cavalry, as the locality may demand, to be officered from the Invalid Corps or officers found unfit for field duty (the latter preferable), and to be composed of such light-duty men between seventeen and fifty years as can be properly assigned, and such robust men between sixteen and seventeen and fifty and sixty years of age as can be obtained, and enlisted for the war for this service.

I believe 100 such companies may be obtained in sixty days. A vigorous use of all this material of law and military force would probably suffice to alleviate if not to remedy fully the existing evil and render the chance of continued absence so precarious as to prevent the extensive recurrence of desertion. The plan certainly directs to the purpose the entire power of the States and the Confederacy, except the troops actually in the field. Their use for this purpose is out of the question. It is easily tried if the States and the Congress are loyal to the extreme exigency of the country. Laws can be prepared and passed in thirty days provided they have the sanction of the President, the Secretary of War, and General Lee, and the organization may proceed pari passu.

It is expensive. If the public liberty depends on the armies and the armies depend for efficiency on the return of absentees, the expense is warranted.

There are accessories to this plan which may be used perhaps with good positive or auxiliary effect:

First. The instant assignment of the entire reserve forces to the duty, requiring the officers in command to take the field in person and perform it.

Second. The judicious use of amnesty, even to go further than hitherto proposed.

Third. Carefully distributed detachments from the Army.

Fourth. By general order requiring every commissioned officer not actually in the field to regard the arrest of deserters as a part of his duty, and also requiring all employes of the Government to report to the nearest authority cases known to them. This would embrace all the agents of the Quartermaster's and Commissary Departments and all others.

Fifth. Making by general order the fact of a deserter being found in a command to which he does not belong a grave offense on the part of the officer having him.

There may be others of a temporary, local, or occasional character which may be brought into operation by the intelligence and vigilance of officers.

I think it unnecessary to discuss the inefficiency of the expedients hitherto used or proposed.

The one proposed by General Pillow was fully tried under auspices of the highest authority and failed almost ridiculously. Those proposed by the bill recently passed by the Senate will fail in like manner, the object of that bill being simply not to provide for the duties proposed, but to abolish the regulations organized by the Secretary of War for the performance of those duties, and to get rid of officers offensive to the projectors of the law.

Whether or not my humble suggestions may be valuable for the public good, I am confident, general, you will give me credit for honest and unselfish zeal in making them.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. PRESTON,
Brigadier-General and Superintendent.

[MARCH 5, 1865.—For Campbell to Breckinridge, in relation to the resources of the Confederate Government available for the approaching campaign, &c., see Series I, Vol. LI, Part II, p. 1064.]

RICHMOND, VA., March 6, 1865.

THE SENATE OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

I have this day approved and signed an act which originated in the Senate, entitled "An act (S. 117) to authorize the commanders of reserves in each State to order general courts-martial and to revise the proceedings of courts-martial and military courts."

In the first section the general commanding reserves in each State is authorized to order general courts-martial for the trial of offenses committed against the military code by persons belonging to his command and to revise the proceedings.

In the second section military courts are authorized under certain circumstances to try offenses committed by members of the organization of reserves. But no provision is made by which the general commanding reserves is authorized to revise the proceedings of military courts in any case. From the title of the act it seems to have been the intention to confer this power, and I have thought it proper to invite your attention to what seems to be an oversight in not granting it. A copy of the act is inclosed.*

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

Indorsement on "An act to authorize the consolidation of companies, battalions, and regiments," approved February 23, 1865.

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
March 6, 1865.

Respectfully referred to General R. E. Lee, whose views as to the propriety of issuing the consolidation law in orders at the present time are requested. If he considers the immediate enforcement of the law advisable, the Secretary of War desires he will make such suggestions pertaining to it as he thinks the orders should embrace.†

By command of the Secretary of War:

H. L. CLAY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

* Not found.

† For Lee's reply, see March 15, p. 1143.

RICHMOND, VA., March 8, 1865.

Senator J. W. C. WATSON:

DEAR SIR: I inclose to you two letters,* that you may see how well founded was my apprehension that evil would result from presenting the issue made by the terms of the resolution in relation to a day of fast, &c. Many well-disposed persons do not understand the constitutional restriction upon my conduct, and as many, perhaps, do not know that the signature of the Secretary of State is a form properly observed in proclamations, as in commissions to officers, when issued by the President, and that he is as little responsible for the one as the other. It might have been well that our Constitution should not only have recognized a God, as it does, but the Saviour of mankind also; that it should have had not merely a religious but a Christian basis. But such is not its character, and my oath binds me to observe the Constitution as it is, not as I would have it, if in any respect I should wish it changed.

Very respectfully, yours, &c.,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

RICHMOND, VA., March 9, 1865.

THE SENATE OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

I feel constrained to return the bill "To provide for the promotion of officers in certain cases" to the Senate, in which it originated, with a statement of the objections which have led me to withhold from it my signature.

The Constitution provides, in paragraph 2, section 2, Article II, the President "shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate," to appoint officers of the Confederate States not otherwise provided for, "but the Congress may, by law, vest the appointment of such inferior officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments."

In the bill under consideration it is declared that "it shall be competent to the commanding general in the field, or the Secretary of War, to order the promotions to be made of the officers next in grade," &c.

This seems to me to confer a power of appointment on commanding generals not warranted by the Constitution.

It may be further remarked that the power conferred upon the Secretary of War will be ineffectual except in the case where the officer next in rank is qualified to fill the temporary vacancy, a case in which the power would be least necessary in order to provide for the time being a competent commander.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

RICHMOND, VA., March 11, 1865.

THE SENATE OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

I have received a copy of your resolution of the 6th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the President be respectfully requested to inform the Senate why he only gives to aides-de-camp to general officers above the grade of brigadier-general the rank of first lieutenant in his nominations made to the Senate.

* Not found..

In response I herewith transmit for your information a communication* from Secretary of War upon the same subject in response to the resolution of the House of Representatives of November 8, 1864, as follows:

Resolved, That the President be respectfully requested to inform this House whether any appointments have been made under the act entitled "An act to provide and organize a general staff for the armies in the field to serve during the war," approved June 14, 1864, and if not, why have not such appointments been made in pursuance of said act.

The anticipation of amendatory legislation, as set forth in the annexed report, together with the discretionary power vested in the Executive by the seventh section of the act referred to, has caused me for the time being not to make appointments under said act.

In the case of aides-de-camp it has been the practice, because of their personal and confidential relations to their chief, to appoint upon his nomination. To this practice there seems to be no paramount objection, while the rank of such officers is of the subaltern grade; but if they have high rank, for many and obvious considerations their selection cannot be controlled by the personal preferences of the general with whom they are to serve. But the suggested change in the mode of selection would impair the confidential relation which an aide should have to his chief, and be an unwelcome task to the appointing power.

The nominations of aides-de-camp have for the above reasons been continued as heretofore, though the legislative amendment expected had not been made.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

RICHMOND, VA., March 11, 1865.

THE SENATE OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA:

The act entitled "An act to abolish the office of certain quartermasters and assistant quartermasters, commissaries and assistant commissaries, and to provide for the appointment of bonded agents in said departments," which originated in your honorable body, is herewith returned without my approval, and with a statement of the objections which have prevented my signing it.

The act abolishes the office of all quartermasters, assistant quartermasters, commissaries and assistant commissaries at posts and depots, and of those engaged in purchasing and impressing supplies, except such as are above the age of forty-five years, or have been disabled in service or declared unfit for duty in the field. It requires those officers to be dropped from service (one-fourth in two months, one-fourth in four months, one-fourth in six months, and one-fourth within two years), and directs that their places be supplied by bonded agents, who are to be persons above the age of forty-five years or disabled in service, or unfit for duty in the field; and it revokes all details and repeals all authority to grant details of persons between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years for duty in the Quartermaster's and Commissary Departments, except skilled artisans and mechanics permanently employed, or persons disabled or unfit for duty in the field.

The object plainly intended by this act is one which meets my hearty concurrence and approval. Its obvious purpose is to strengthen the Army by placing in the ranks persons fit for active service, and whose places can be supplied by others unable to do duty in the field. On reference of the subject, however, to the Secretary of War, it has been found that this act could not be executed without seriously impairing our ability to supply the armies in the field during the approaching campaign, and that its operation would be to drop officers who have been carefully selected by reason of their superior capacity and qualifications, while retaining others of inferior merit and value.

---

* See p. 836.

The difficulty of furnishing supplies to the Army, owing to embarrassments in transportation, is greater now than it has been at any previous period of the war. This difficulty has prompted the selection for that duty of the best and most active and competent officers in the Quartermaster's and Commissary Departments, and such officers have within the last six months been in many instances withdrawn from the armies where their services were less important, and assigned to duty in purchasing, collecting, and forwarding supplies. This fact was, I feel confident, not known to Congress when the act was passed; and it could not have been intended to drop from service officers of special merit and retain others of inferior value. I am also satisfied, from the report made to me by the Secretary of War, that the number of officers who would be dropped under the provisions of this law is far less than is supposed; that their value as soldiers in the ranks would in no manner compensate for the loss of their services in their present position. The total number of post and purchasing commissaries in the States east of the Mississippi River is but 212, of whom many are either over forty-five years of age, or otherwise exempt from the operations of the proposed law. The total number of quartermasters collecting taxes in kind is 96, and on post duty 223, including officers in charge of manufactories of clothing, shoes, harness, wagons, ambulances, &c. A number of them are over forty-five years of age, others would not be embraced by the terms of the act, others still have special qualifications for the superintendence of the important manufactures confided to their care.

Taken altogether, it is doubted whether the officers who would be dropped under the provisions of the bill would exceed 200 in number, of whom 50 would go into the ranks in two months, 50 in four months, and 50 more in six months. This scarcely appreciable addition to the force in the field would be dearly bought at the sacrifice of efficiency in the two branches of service on which the very existence of the Army depends. The terms of the act exempt from its operation those now on duty in the field, so that if it becomes a law it would not even be possible to avert the loss of the best officers by returning them to duty in the field, and dropping others of inferior merit. The Secretary of War is left without discretion or choice in the matter.

The heads of the two branches of service affected by this act apprehend great embarrassment to their respective departments if it becomes a law. The machinery now organized would be impaired in its workings everywhere, and in some instances positively interrupted just at the opening of the most important campaign. Valuable and experienced officers would be withdrawn from service. Chief commissaries long accustomed to control operations in an entire State, quartermasters thoroughly informed as to the resources of their respective fields of duty, would at short intervals be dropped, and the heads of these bureaus would be embarrassed with the difficult duty in the midst of an active campaign of supplying the places with inexperienced and untried successors.

The representations made to me on the subjects embraced in this act by those under whose immediate superintendence its provisions would be executed, together with my own daily experience of the difficulties attendant on the efficient discharge of the duties of these two indispensable branches of the service, have created apprehensions of injurious effects from the passage of the act too serious to permit my approving it.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

[MARCH 11, 1865.—For Strother to St. John, reporting the financial wants of the Subsistence Department, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 1302.]

---

JOINT RESOLUTION providing for donations to the Treasury of the Confederate States.

Whereas, many patriotic citizens have expressed their desire to contribute, by donations of money, jewels, gold and silver plate, and public securities, to the relief of the Treasury: Therefore,

Resolved by the Congress of the Confederate States of America, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to receive all such donations, and to publish in the daily papers a list of the donations received and the names of the donors.

SEC. 2. That when the said contributions shall consist of certificates of indebtedness, lawfully issued by disbursing officers of the Government, and the parties holding the same are willing to give a part, but unable to give the whole, it shall be lawful for the Secretary of the Treasury to receive the proportion offered, if not less than one moiety, and to return the other moiety in certificates of indebtedness receivable in payment of taxes.

SEC. 3. To render the said public securities so donated available to the Treasury, the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to redeem the same before maturity, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Approved March 13, 1865.

---

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Richmond, March 13, 1865.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA:

I have now under consideration the act entitled "An act to diminish the number of exemptions and details," which has passed both Houses, and was presented to me on Saturday, the 11th instant.

The act contains two provisions which would in practice so impair the efficiency of the service as to counterbalance if not outweigh the advantages that would result from the other clauses contained in it.

The third section exempts all skilled artisans and mechanics in the employment of the Government from all military service. A very important and indeed indispensable portion of our local defense troops consists of these mechanics and artisans. They amount to many thousands in the Confederacy, and while they are and should remain exempt from general service, no good cause is perceived why they should not, like all other citizens capable of bearing arms, be organized for local defense and be ready to defend the localities in which they are respectively employed against sudden raids and incursions. If exempt from this local service, it will be necessary to detach in many cases troops from the armies in the field to guard the towns and workshops where they are employed. It is believed that if this provision become a law, the gain of strength resulting from the repeal of other exemptions enacted by the first section of the law would be more than counterbalanced by the loss of this local force.

The second provision to which I refer is that which revokes all details and exemptions heretofore granted by the President and Secretary of War, and prohibits the grant of such exemptions and details hereafter. There is little hazard in saying that such a provision could not be executed without so disorganizing the public service as to produce very injurious results. In every department of the Government, in every branch of the service throughout the country, there are duties to be performed which cannot be discharged except by men instructed and trained in their performance. Long experience makes them experts. Their services become in their peculiar sphere of duty worth to the country greatly more than any they could possibly render in the field. Some of these it would be impossible immediately to replace. The Treasury expert who detects a forged note at a glance; the accounting officer whose long experience makes him a living repository of the rules and precedents which guard the Treasury from frauds; the superintendent of the manufacturing establishments of the Government which supply shoes, harness, wagons, ambulances, &c., for the Army; the employes who have been specially trained in the distribution and subdivision of mail matter among the various routes by which it is to reach its destination, are among the instances that are afforded by the daily experience of executive officers. To withdraw from the public service at once and without any means of replacing them, the very limited number of experts, believed to be less than 100, who are affected by the bill, is to throw the whole machinery of Government into confusion and disorder, at a period when none who are not engaged in executive duties can have an adequate idea of the difficulties by which they are already embarrassed.

The desire of the Executive and the Secretary of War to obtain for the Army the services of every man available for the public defense can hardly be doubted, and Congress may be assured that nothing but imperative public necessity could induce the exercise of any discretion vested in them to retain men out of the Army. But no Government can be administered without vesting some discretion in Executive officers in the application of general rules to classes of the population. Individual exceptions exist to all such rules, in the very nature of things, and these exceptions cannot be provided for by legislation in advance.

I earnestly hope that Congress will pass an amendment to the act now under consideration, in accordance with the foregoing recommendations, so that I may be able by signing both the act and amendment to secure unimpaired benefit from the proposed legislation.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Richmond, March 13, 1865.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES:

I have returned with my approval an act entitled "An act to regulate the business of conscription." There is, however, one section of the act which seems to me to threaten injury to the service unless essentially modified.

The eighth section provides that there shall be in each Congressional district "a medical board composed of three surgeons who, after due notice of the time and place of their meeting, shall visit each county of their district at least once in three months, and shall examine for discharge or recommendation for light duty all conscripts who have been furloughed under the provisions of the preceding section. Every discharge granted by said Medical Board shall be final and shall relieve the party from all military service in the future when the disability is permanent and the cause of it is set forth in the certificate."

It is greatly to be feared that under the terms of this section considerable numbers of men will be finally discharged from military service while competent to aid in the defense of their country. The terms of the law do not require that the disability shall be total, as well as permanent, in order to entitle the soldier to be discharged. The loss of a limb, or stiffness of a joint, or even the loss of the dexter forefinger, lameness, near-sightedness, partial deafness are instances of disability, permanent but not total, and which may well exist without rendering the individual incompetent to perform valuable service in posts, garrisons, or even in active operations.

The number of surgeons required for the duty imposed by this section would be about 150 in addition to the local physicians. We have no medical officers to spare from attendance upon the troops and in hospitals, so that it would be necessary to appoint this number of new officers who would generally be drawn from men in active service in the field. After the first visit to the different counties these officers would have so little to do as to be practically supernumeraries supported by the Government at great cost, and with the loss of their services in the field. Of the three surgeons who are to compose the Board only two are to be public officers, so that any resident physician of a county in connection with a single army surgeon would have power by action, from which there is no appeal, to discharge permanently from service any inhabitant of the county in which he practices his profession. When we consider the strong opposition manifested in many districts of country to the system of conscription, and the many influences which are resorted to by those who seek to escape service, there is much cause to fear that the effect of these provisions will be to deplete our reduced forces to a serious extent, and I hope it will be the pleasure of Congress to repeal this section or materially to modify its provisions.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

RICHMOND, VA., March 13, 1865.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA:

When informed on Thursday last that it was the intention of Congress to adjourn sine die on the ensuing Saturday, I deemed it my duty to request a postponement of the adjournment in order that I might submit for your consideration certain matters of public interest which are now laid before you. When that request was made the most important measures that had occupied your attention during the session had not been so far advanced as to be submitted for Executive action, and the state of the country had been so materially affected by the events of the last four months as to evince the necessity of further and more energetic legislation than was contemplated in November last.

Our country is now environed with perils which it is our duty calmly to contemplate. Thus alone can the measures necessary to avert threatened calamities be wisely devised and efficiently enforced.

Recent military operations of the enemy have been successful in the capture of some of our sea-ports, in interrupting some of our lines of communication, and in devastating large districts of our country. These events have had the natural effect of encouraging our foes and dispiriting many of our people. The Capital of the Confederate States is now threatened, and is in greater danger than it has heretofore been during the war. The fact is stated without reserve or concealment, as due to the people whose servants we are, and in whose courage and constancy entire trust is reposed; as due to you in whose wisdom and resolute spirit the people have confided for the adoption of the measures required to guard them from threatened perils.

While stating to you that our country is in danger, I desire also to state my deliberate conviction that it is within our power to avert the calamities which menace us, and to secure the triumph of the sacred cause for which so much sacrifice has been made, so much suffering endured, so many precious lives been lost. This result is to be obtained by fortitude, by courage, by constancy in enduring the sacrifices still needed; in a word, by the prompt and resolute devotion of the whole resources of men and money in the Confederacy to the achievement of our liberties and independence. The measures now required, to be successful, should be prompt. Long deliberation and protracted debate over important measures are not only natural, but laudable in representative assemblies under ordinary circumstances; but in moments of danger, when action becomes urgent, the delay thus caused is itself a new source of peril. Thus it has unfortunately happened that some of the measures passed by you in pursuance of the recommendations contained in my message of November last have been so retarded as to lose much of their value, or have, for the same reason, been abandoned after being matured, because no longer applicable to our altered condition, and others have not been brought under examination. In making these remarks it is far from my intention to attribute the loss of time to any other cause than those inherent in deliberative assemblies, but only urgently to recommend prompt action upon the measures now submitted.

We need, for carrying on the war successfully, men and supplies for the Army. We have both within our country sufficient to obtain success. To obtain the supplies it is necessary to protect productive districts and guard our lines of communication by an increase in the number of our forces; and hence it results, that with a large augmentation in the number of men in the Army, the facility of supplying the troops would be greater than with our present reduced strength. For the purchase of the supplies now required, especially for the armies in Virginia and North Carolina, the Treasury must be provided with means, and a modification in the impressment law is required. It has been ascertained by examination that we have within our reach a sufficiency of what is most needed for the Army, without having recourse to the ample provision existing in those parts of the Confederacy with which our communication has been partially interrupted by hostile operations. But in some districts from which supplies are to be drawn, the inhabitants, being either within the enemy's lines or in very close proximity, are unable to make use of Confederate Treasury notes for the purchase of articles of prime necessity, and it is necessary that to some extent coin be paid in order to obtain supplies. It is therefore recommended that Congress devise the means for making available the coin within the Confederacy for the purpose of supplying the Army. The officers of the supply departments report that with $2,000,000 in coin the armies in Virginia and North Carolina can be amply supplied for the remainder of the year, and the knowledge of this fact should suffice to insure the adoption of the measures necessary to obtain this moderate sum.

The impressment law as it now exists prohibits the public officers from impressing supplies without making payment of the valuation at the time of impressment. The limit fixed for the issue of Treasury notes has been nearly reached, and the Treasury cannot always furnish the funds necessary for prompt payment; while the law for raising revenue, which would have afforded means for diminishing, if not removing this difficulty, was unfortunately delayed for several months, and has just been signed. In this condition of things it is impossible to supply the Army, although ample stores may exist in the country, whenever the owners refuse to give credit to the public officer. It is necessary that this restriction on the power of impressment be removed. The power is admitted to be objectionable, liable to abuse, and unequal in its operations on individuals; yet all these objections must yield to absolute necessity. It is also suggested that the system of valuation now established ought to be radically changed. The legislation requires in such cases of impressment that the market price be paid, but there is really no market price in many cases, and the valuation is made arbitrarily and in a depreciated currency. The result is that the most extravagant prices are fixed, such as no one expects ever to be paid in coin. None believe that the Government can ever redeem in coin the obligation to pay $50 a bushel for corn, or $700 a barrel for flour. It would seem to be more just and appropriate to estimate the supplies impressed at their value in coin, to give the obligation of the Government for the payment of the price in coin with reasonable interest; or, at the option of the creditor, to return in kind the wheat or corn impressed, with a reasonable interest also payable in kind, and to make the obligations thus issued receivable for all payments due in coin to the Government. Whatever be the value attached by Congress to these suggestions, it is hoped that there will be no hesitation in so changing the law as to render it possible to supply the Army in case of necessity for the impressment of provisions for that purpose.

The measure adopted to raise revenue, though liberal in its provisions, being clearly inadequate to meet the arrear of debt and the current expenditure, some degree of embarrassment in the management of the finances must continue to be felt. It is to be regretted, I think, that the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury of a tax on agricultural income equal to the augmented tax on other incomes, payable in Treasury notes, was rejected by Congress. This tax would have contributed materially to facilitate the purchase of provisions and diminish the necessity that is now felt for a supply of coin.

The measures passed by Congress during the session for recruiting the Army and supplying the additional force needed for the public defense have been, in my judgment, insufficient, and I am impelled by a profound conviction of duty and stimulated by a sense of the perils which surround our country, to urge upon you additional legislation on this subject.

The bill for employing negroes as soldiers has not yet reached me, though the printed journals of your proceedings inform me of its passage. Much benefit is anticipated from this measure, though far less than would have resulted from its adoption at an earlier date so as to afford time for their organization and instruction during the winter months.

The bill for diminishing the number of exemptions has just been made the subject of a special message, and its provisions are such as would add no strength to the Army. The recommendation to abolish all class exemptions has not met your favor, although still deemed by me a valuable and important measure; and the number of men exempted by a new clause in the act just passed is believed to be quite equal to that of those whose exemption is revoked. A law of a few lines repealing all class exemptions would not only strengthen the forces in the field, but be still more beneficial by abating the natural discontent and jealousy created in the Army by the existence of classes privileged by law to remain in places of safety while their fellow-citizens are exposed in the trenches and the field.

The measure most needed, however, at the present time for affording an effective increase to our military strength is a general militia law, such as the Constitution authorizes Congress to pass, by granting to it power "to provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the Confederate States," and the further power "to provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Confederate States, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions." The necessity for the exercise of this power can never exist if not in the circumstances which now surround us.

The security of the States against any encroachment by the Confederate Government is amply provided by the Constitution by "reserving to the States, respectively, the appointment of the officers, and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress."

A law is needed to prescribe not only how and of what persons the militia are to be organized, but to provide the mode of calling them out. If instances be required to show the necessity for such general law, it is sufficient to mention that in one case I have been informed by the Governor of a State that the law does not permit him to call the militia from one county for service in another, so that a single brigade of the enemy could traverse the State and devastate each county in turn without any power on the part of the Executive to use the militia for effective defense; while in another State the Executive refused to allow the militia "to be employed in the service of the Confederate States" in the absence of a law for that purpose.

I have heretofore, in a confidential message to the two Houses, stated the facts which induced me to consider it necessary that the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus should be suspended. The conviction of the necessity of this measure has become deeper as the events of the struggle have been developed. Congress has not concurred with me in opinion. It is my duty to say that the time has arrived when the suspension of the writ is not simply advisable and expedient, but almost indispensable to the successful conduct of the war. On Congress must rest the responsibility of declining to exercise a power conferred by the Constitution as a means of public safety, to be used in periods of national peril resulting from foreign invasion. If our present circumstances are not such as were contemplated when this power was conferred, I confess myself at a loss to imagine any contingency in which this clause of the Constitution will not remain a dead letter.

With the prompt adoption of the measures above recommended, and the united and hearty co-operation of Congress and the people in the execution of the laws and the defense of the country, we may enter upon the present campaign with cheerful confidence in the result. And who can doubt the continued existence of that spirit and fortitude in the people, and of that constancy under reverses which alone are needed to render our triumph secure? What other resource remains available but the undying, unconquerable resolve to be free? It has become certain beyond all doubt or question that we must continue this struggle to a successful issue or must make abject and unconditional submission to such terms as it shall please the conqueror to impose on us after our surrender. If a possible doubt could exist after the conference between our Commissioners and Mr. Lincoln, as recently reported to you, it would be dispelled by a recent occurrence of which it is proper that you should be informed.

Congress will remember that in the conference above referred to our Commissioners were informed that the Government of the United States would not enter into any agreement or treaty whatever with the Confederate States, nor with any single State; that the only possible mode of obtaining peace was by laying down our arms, disbanding our forces, and yielding unconditional obedience to the laws of the United States, including those passed for the confiscation of our property, and the constitutional amendment for the abolition of slavery. It will be further remembered that Mr. Lincoln declared that the only terms on which hostilities could cease were those stated in his message of December last, in which we were informed that in the event of our penitent submission he would temper justice with mercy, and that the question whether we would be governed as dependent territories or permitted to have a representation in their Congress was one on which he could promise nothing, but which would be decided by their Congress after our submission had been accepted.

It has not, however, been hitherto stated to you that in the course of the conference at Fortress Monroe a suggestion was made by one of our Commissioners that the objection entertained by Mr. Lincoln to treating with the Government of the Confederacy, or with any separate State, might be avoided by substituting for the usual mode of negotiating through commissioners or other diplomatic agents the method sometimes employed of a military convention to be entered into by the commanding generals of the armies of the two belligerents. This he admitted was a power possessed by him, though it was not thought commensurate with all the questions involved. As he did not accept the suggestion when made, he was afterward requested to reconsider his conclusion upon the subject of a suspension of hostilities, which he agreed to do, but said that he had maturely considered of the plan and had determined that it could not be done. Subsequently, however, an interview with General Longstreet was asked for by General Ord, commanding the enemy's Army of the James, during which General Longstreet was informed by him that there was a possibility of arriving at a satisfactory adjustment of the present unhappy difficulties by means of a military convention, and that if General Lee desired an interview on the subject it would not be declined, provided General Lee had authority to act. This communication was supposed to be the consequence of the suggestion above referred to, and General Lee, according to instructions, wrote to General Grant on the 2d of this month proposing to meet him for conference on the subject, and stating that he was vested with the requisite authority. General Grant's reply stated that he had no authority to accede to the proposed conference; that his power extended only to making a convention on subjects purely of a military character, and that General Ord could only have meant that an interview would not be refused on any subject on which he (General Grant) had the right to act.* It thus appears that neither with the Confederate authorities nor the authorities of any State, nor through the commanding generals, will the Government of the United States treat or make any terms or agreement whatever for the cessation of hostilities. There remains, then, for us no choice but to continue the contest to a final issue, for the people of the Confederacy can be but little known to him who supposes it possible they would ever consent to purchase at the cost of degradation and slavery permission to live in a country garrisoned by their own negroes and governed by officers sent by the conqueror to rule over them.

Having thus fully placed before you the information requisite to enable you to judge of the state of the country, the dangers to which we are exposed, and the measures of legislation needed for averting them, it remains for me but to invoke your attention to the consideration of those means by which, above all others, we may hope to escape the calamities that would result from our failure. Prominent above all others is the necessity for earnest and cordial co-operation between all departments of government, State and Confederate, and all eminent citizens throughout the Confederacy. To you especially, as Senators and Representatives, do the people look for encouragement and counsel. To your action, not only in legislative halls, but in your homes, will their eyes be turned for the example of what is befitting men who, by willing sacrifices on the altar of freedom, show that they are worthy to enjoy its blessings. I feel full confidence that you will concur with me in the conviction that your public duties will not be ended when you shall have closed the legislative labors of the session, but that your voice will be heard cheering and encouraging the people to that persistent fortitude which they have hitherto displayed, and animating them by the manifestation of that serene confidence which in moments of public danger is the distinctive characteristic of the patriot who derives courage from his devotion to his country's destiny and is thus enabled to inspire the like courage in others.

Thus united in a common and holy cause, rising above all selfish considerations, rendering all our means and faculties tributary to the country's welfare, let us bow submissively to the Divine will and reverently invoke the blessing of our Heavenly Father that, as He protected and guided our sires when struggling in a similar cause, so He will enable us to guard safely our altars and our firesides, and maintain inviolate the political rights which we inherited.

*For the correspondence between Grant and Lee, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, pp. 824, 825.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

RICHMOND, VA., March 13, 1865.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

Herewith I transmit a letter from the Secretary of War, covering several communications from officers of the Army in reference to the present condition of the country as connected with military defense, and especially with the matter of supplies for the Army. They will serve to elucidate the message this day transmitted to you. The last in the order of time of those communications was received after my message was transmitted, and refers to a contingency which, if it should occur, must seriously affect the opinions which I then expressed. I invite your special attention to the papers submitted.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

[Inclosure.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, March 13, 1865.

JEFFERSON DAVIS,

President of the Confederate States:

SIR: I have the honor to submit copies of the following papers:

First. A letter addressed by me to General R. E. Lee, dated the [8th] instant.*

Second. The answer of General Lee, dated the [9th] instant.*

Third. Communications from the Quartermaster-General, the Commissary-General, the chief of the Ordnance Bureau, and the chief of the Niter and Mining Bureau, in answer to a circular from me inviting their attention to those points in General Lee's letter which connect themselves with the respective departments of these officers.†

Fourth. A communication which I addressed to you on the [18th] ultimo‡ in regard to the wants of the War Department, and which was at that time transmitted by you to the Congress. The letter of General Lee gives his view (in which I concur) of the military situation, while the other papers sufficiently indicate the necessity of immediate action upon the subjects to which they relate.

The whole is submitted for such disposition as you may deem advisable.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,

Secretary of War.

*See Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, pp. 1292, 1295.

†These communications not found as inclosures, excepting an incomplete letter from the Subsistence Bureau, following. In this connection see also French, Williams, and Claiborne, to St. John, March 10, 1865, Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, pp. 1297, 1298, and St. John to Breckinridge, March 13, 1865, Series I, Vol. LI, Part II, p. 1067.

‡See Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 1239.

[Sub-inclosure.]

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, SUBSISTENCE BUREAU,
Richmond, March 10, 1865.

Hon. J. C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War:

SIR: In reply to your communication of this date, calling attention to points in the letter of the General-in-Chief, I have the honor to state:

First. As to the existence of commissary supplies in the country, I express the general opinion that a sufficient surplus remains within the Confederate lines in Virginia, North Carolina, upper South Carolina, and East Tennessee to subsist the Confederate forces operating therein until the next crop can be made available. This opinion is based upon a careful review of the Bureau information up to the 20th ultimo, and after personal conference with leading farmers, millers, and men of business. It assumes that four months' supply will be retained for local wants, and does not include the small and very uncertain supplies which may be wagoned over from Georgia.

Second. As to the collection of these supplies I express the further opinion that with adequate military protection in the more exposed localities, and with a prompt supply of suitable funds, the officers and agents of this service can keep the depot full in anticipation of all arrangements of the Quartermaster's Department to remove and forward. In the present condition of the country great effort will be required, but with funds it can be done. To aid the Government officers a very active popular movement has been initiated and pressed by the Bureau, but it must be regarded as simply auxiliary and not to be relied upon as a permanent source of supply.

Prompt payment in funds that will be received without compulsion are considered indispensable in arranging a certain supply for the future; without this all efforts will be paralyzed. The commissary debt now exceeds $70,000,000.

Third. As to transportation of these supplies, in the Southwest and in North Carolina the forces can be subsisted from local resources and with the ordinary army transportation, but the Army of Northern Virginia must be supplied by distant railroad transportation; and at least to Abingdon, Va., and to Goldsborough and Charlotte, N. C., 120 tons of commissary supplies daily

[Incomplete.]

---

[MARCH 13, 1865.—For Davis to Lee, relating to the signing of the bill for putting negroes into the Army, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part II, p. 1308.]

---

MACON, March 13, 1865.

Governor JOSEPH E. BROWN:

Detailed agriculturists are now ordered into Confederate service in the field. Will those whom you called and who went into the militia be compelled to report for duty in Confederate service, or will you claim them still in the militia? Answer immediately by telegraph.

T. R. STEWART,

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Milledgeville, Ga., March 13, 1865.

All persons belonging to Major-General Smith's division are in the actual military service of the State. No one of them, whether detailed agriculturists or not, will obey any order from a Confederate officer, unless so directed by General Smith, when he is under orders from me to report to a Confederate general. The State took the detailed agriculturists into her military service at a time when, according to the decision of the supreme court, they were not in the military service of the Confederacy, and the Confederate officers can take no control over them without the consent of the State till they are disbanded by the State. They are now only on furlough.

JOSEPH E. BROWN.

STATE OF VIRGINIA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Richmond, March 14, 1865.

The Honorable the COURTS OF THE COUNTIES, CITIES, &C., NAMED IN THE ANNEXED SCHEDULE:

GENTLEMEN: In compliance with the requisition from the President of the Confederate States, under the law recently enacted by the General Assembly (a copy of which is herewith accompanying), I, William Smith, Governor of Virginia, as required by said act, do hereby call upon the courts of the counties, cities, and towns in the annexed schedule for 10 per centum of the slaves therein, between the ages of eighteen and fifty-five years, capable of ordinary labor.

Instructions.—It is the duty of the court to ascertain the number of slaves within the prescribed ages within their respective jurisdictions. This duty comprehends all slaves, however employed, not embraced in former requisitions by the Governor. It includes all slaves hired by the Confederate Government or any of its agents.

Slaves impressed or allotted under this requisition may be detailed by Confederate authority, but when so detailed they cannot be replaced by a new impressment.

The courts must include among those from whom the allotment is to be made all the capable slaves between the before-mentioned ages within their jurisdictions, whether owned or hired, except the slaves of parties owning or hiring but one slave each.

No county exempt.—All counties, &c., whether ravaged by the enemy or stripped of their slave labor, to whatever extent, are bound to furnish the required per centum of what is left, except in such counties, &c., as may have lost two-thirds of their slaves; in which case no person in such counties, unless he have more than two such slaves, is liable to allotment.

Exemptions.—The Governor is intrusted with the power to exempt in cases in which the law cannot or ought not to be enforced; in cases in which the slave-owner, from sickness or other calamity, has but one slave liable to draft. He cannot exempt in any other cases.

Slaves not subject to draft.—Where a soldier in service, or a widow having a son, or whose husband has died therein, has but one slave, either owned or hired.

The allotment.—All persons required by the court to furnish negroes under this requisition failing to deliver them at the time and place designated will incur a fine of not less than $3 nor more than $10 for each negro and for every day for which he may be withheld. This penalty will be rigidly exacted.

All slaves not delivered by the sheriff, &c., may be seized by the enrolling officer of the county, or such other agency as the Confederate Government may provide.

Penalties.—The sheriff, for neglect of duty, is liable to a penalty of not less than $500 nor more than $2,000.

Clerks, justices of the peace, or sheriffs failing or refusing to perform the duties imposed by this act are guilty of malfeasance in office, and upon conviction thereof in the circuit court their offices are declared vacant.

Owners of slaves will observe that for their slaves they will be entitled to $60 per month each, soldiers' rations, medicines, and medical attendance; that they are entitled to an overseer of their own selection; that they can furnish their slaves rations, which can be commuted, and that their overseers will be allowed to issue them.

I regret to have to inform the counties that many of them have wholly neglected to respond to the former requisition, and that the new act has been passed to prevent in future such delinquency. I need not say that it will be rigidly enforced. Nothing but the sternest necessity has induced the present call. The officer conducting this branch of the service says:

In consideration of the urgent need for labor on the defenses in the vicinity of Richmond and Petersburg, as set forth in the letter of Brigadier-General Stevens, chief engineer of the Army of Northern Virginia, written by direction of General Lee, I respectfully call the attention of His Excellency the Governor of Virginia to the modified act of Assembly of March 5, 1865. Every day that is lost may involve most serious consequences to our country. The negroes should be delivered to Captain Snead, adjutant to General W. H. Stevens, chief engineer, corner of Franklin and Nineteenth streets, city of Richmond.

I earnestly hope prompt and immediate response to this call will be made, involving, as it does, the safety of the capital of our State, and, it may be, of the institution of slavery itself.

Respectfully, &c.,

WILLIAM SMITH.

The following are the counties, cities, &c., called on for their quotas of 10 per cent. of slaves:

Albemarle, Alleghany, Amelia, Amherst, Appomattox, Augusta, Bath, Bedford, Botetourt, Brunswick, Buchanan, Buckingham, Campbell, Caroline, Charlotte, Chesterfield, Craig, Cumberland, Danville, Dinwiddie, Floyd, Fluvanna, Franklin, Giles, Goochland, Grayson, Greenbrier, Greene, Halifax, Hanover, Henrico, Henry, Highland, King and Queen, King William, Lee, Louisa, Lunenburg, Madison, Mecklenburg, Mercer, Monroe, Montgomery, Nelson, Nottoway, Orange, Patrick, Petersburg, Pittsylvania, Powhatan, Prince Edward, Rappahannock, Richmond City, Roanoke, Rockbridge, Russell, Scott, Smyth, Spotsylvania, Surry, Sussex, Tazewell, Washington.

[Inclosure.]

AN ACT prescribing the mode of apportioning slaves to work on fortifications and other public works, and regulating the impressment of slaves therefor by the Confederate Government, passed March 4, 1865.

1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly, That it shall be the duty of the Governor, and he is hereby authorized and required, whenever thereto requested by the President of the Confederate States, to call into the service of the Confederate States, for labor on fortifications and other works for the public defense within this State, from time to time, for a period not exceeding sixty days, a number of male slaves, between the ages of eighteen and fifty-five years, not exceeding ten thousand at any one time, and not exceeding in any county or corporation one-fifth of the number of male slaves therein between the ages aforesaid, to be apportioned by the Governor. In making said apportionment it shall not be necessary to ascertain the number of slaves in each county or corporation liable to requisition; but the Governor, with the limitation hereinbefore specified, may require all the counties and corporations to furnish a like proportion of their slaves between the ages specified. Such requisition shall be apportioned ratably among all the owners or possessors of slaves in the several counties and corporations so as to charge each owner or possessor with the same proportion of his male slaves, between the ages specified, capable of performing ordinary labor, to be judged of by the court, which may be demanded from his county or corporation. The sum of sixty dollars per month for each slave shall be paid by the Confederate States to the person entitled to his services, and soldiers' rations, medicines and medical attendance furnished; and the value of all such slaves as may, without the default of the owner, die during their term of service, or thereafter, from injuries received or diseases contracted in such service, or not be returned to the owners, shall be paid by the Confederate States to the owners of such slaves. If such slaves shall be injured while in such service, full compensation therefor shall be made to the owners; and in all cases the burden of proof shall be on the authorities of the Confederate States to discharge the latter from liability to the former. Hired slaves shall be regarded as the slaves of their temporary owners in apportioning for the purposes of this act, but when such slaves shall be held by persons owning other slaves it shall not be lawful for the temporary owner to select one or more of the hired slaves to be sent to the public works; but in every such case the slave or slaves to be sent shall be ascertained by lot, in which each of said slaves, as well those owned as hired, shall be drawn for by the court: Provided, That the Governor shall exempt from the operation of this act any county or corporation, or any part thereof, in which he may be satisfied the law cannot be enforced, or in which, by reason of losses by the public enemy, or of contiguity to the enemy's lines, it ought not, in his judgment, to be enforced; of which he shall judge upon the affidavits of the commissioner of the revenue, the clerk and presiding justice of the county or corporation court, and such other evidence or information as may be laid before him; and, in cases where, by reason of sickness or by other calamity, a slaveholder shall have but one male slave liable to the provisions of this act, it shall be competent for the Governor to exempt said slaveholder from the impressment or draft: Provided further, That in no case where any person shall own or have hired but one slave liable to the provisions of this act, shall said slave be impressed, or drafted, or counted, in ascertaining the quota of a county or corporation: Provided further, That whenever it shall be certified to the Governor by the county court of any county that two-thirds of the male slaves described in this act in such county have been removed from said county by escape to the enemy, or other cause, the requisition provided for in this act shall not be enforced in such county, except in the case of persons therein who are employing in their service more than two slaves of said description.

2. Be it further enacted, That so soon as the Governor shall determine to make a requisition for slaves under this act he shall give notice thereof to the several counties and corporations on which the call may be made, by causing to be filed with the clerks of the several county and corporation courts copies of the requisition made on their respective counties and corporations; and thereupon it shall be the duty of said clerks forthwith to issue a summons to all the acting justices of their respective counties and corporations, requiring them to meet at the court-houses of their counties and corporations on a day to be named in the summons, not later than six days from the filing of the requisition, to carry the same into effect; which summons shall be directed to and executed by the sheriff of the county or sergeant of the corporation, as the case may be.

3. It shall be the duty of the several county and corporation courts, after being duly convened, as aforesaid, and not less than five justices being present, to ascertain, by the assistance of the commissioners of the revenue of their respective counties and corporations, or otherwise, the entire number of male slaves therein between the ages specified, subject to requisition under this act; and after ascertaining the same to apportion the requisition aforesaid, without delay, among all the holders of such slaves, so as to charge each slave-holder, as near as may be, with the same proportion of his male slaves between the ages of eighteen and fifty-five, capable of performing ordinary labor, as may be demanded from his county or corporation, throwing into classes, when necessary, the holders of but one or few slaves, and of fractions of slaves, and ascertaining by lot, or agreement between the parties, or otherwise, the slave or slaves to be sent to the public works from such classes, and giving, as far as practicable, relief to those upon whom the lot or draft may have fallen under any preceding requisition: Provided, That in no case of a soldier in the service, or a widow having a son therein, or whose husband has died in such service, owning or hiring but one male slave, shall such slave be subject to requisition under this act. But no slave-holder shall be exempted by reason of having slaves in the employment of the State or Confederate Government.

4. So soon as the apportionment aforesaid shall be made, it shall be the duty of the courts of the several counties and corporations to require each slave-holder to deliver, on a day and at a place appointed by the court, his quota of slaves to the sheriff or sergeant, as the case may be, to be delivered by such sheriff or sergeant to an agent or officer of the Confederate States in the city of Richmond, at the expense of the Confederate States. All slaves delivered by the holders on the day and at the place designated, as aforesaid, to be returned at the expiration of sixty days. Slaves not delivered in accordance with the order of the court shall be seized by the sheriff or sergeant, as the case may be, and delivered, at the expense of the owners, to the agent or officer of the Confederate States authorized to receive them, and may be held, on the terms and conditions aforesaid, for a period not exceeding ninety days, unless sufficient cause for the failure shall be shown to the court of the county or corporation in which such failure may occur, and then entered on record; in which event the expenses of said delivery shall be paid by the Confederate States, and a certified copy of such order shall be conclusive evidence of such sufficient cause; and, moreover, the holder of such slave shall be fined not less than $3 nor more than $10 for every day each slave shall be withheld; and it shall be the duty of the sheriff or sergeant to report to the court, at its next succeeding monthly term, all persons failing or refusing to deliver their slaves as aforesaid. And unless good cause be shown, after ten days' notice, for such failure or refusal, the court shall impose said fines, for which an execution shall be forthwith issued by the clerk of the court; which fines shall be repeated from time to time until the order of the court is complied with. Any sheriff or sergeant failing to discharge the duties imposed by this act shall be fined not less than $500 nor more than $2,000; and any slave or slaves not delivered as aforesaid may be forthwith seized by the enrolling officer of the Confederate States for the county in which the owner of such slave or slaves may reside, to be by him delivered to the proper officer of the Confederate States, to be held for the period of ninety days, as aforesaid.

5. It shall be lawful for the proper authorities of the Confederate States whenever, in their opinion, the public interest may require it, to detail for business, and at the place from which they have been taken, any slaves drafted under the provisions of this act; but in no case shall the deficiency in labor on the public works, caused by such detail, be supplied by a new draft on the other slave-holders of the county or corporation in which the detail may be made; and any slaves which shall be exempted from impressment or draft by any law of the Confederate States shall be regarded as detailed under the provisions of this act.

6. The clerk and sheriff or sergeant shall attend the sessions of the court, as in other cases, and the court may adjourn from time to time, until the business shall be completed.

7. Should any county or corporation court fail or refuse to discharge the duties imposed by this act, wholly or in part, for ten days from the filing of the requisition with the clerk of the court, as prescribed in the second section of this act, it shall be the duty of the clerk of said court immediately to notify the Secretary of War of the Confederate States; or, in case any clerk shall fail to give such notice to the said Secretary in due time after the failure or refusal of such court to act, it shall thereupon be lawful for said Secretary of War, by officers and agents of his own selection, with the aid of the commissioners of the revenue of such county or corporation (who are hereby required to render such aid when required), to impress from said county or corporation such proportion of the slaves demanded by the Governor therefrom as may not have been furnished under the provisions of this act. The slaves thus impressed, together with such as may have been furnished by such county or corporation under this act, shall not exceed one-fifth of the number of male slaves therein between the ages specified, capable of performing ordinary labor, shall be apportioned among the slave-holders as herein above set forth, and shall be held not longer than ninety days, for the uses and upon the terms and conditions set forth in the first section of this act. Separate receipts shall in all cases be executed to the owners by the sheriff or other person seizing or taking possession of slaves under this act, and receipts shall, in like manner, be taken by the sheriff or other person holding them, when slaves may be turned over to the agent or officer of the Confederate States. Slaves coming into the possession of the sheriffs, sergeants, or agents of the Secretary of War under this act shall be regarded as in the possession and service of the Confederate States, and at their expense until redelivered to their owners. For every seizure of a slave by a sheriff or sergeant, under this act, he shall be entitled to a fee of $5, to be paid by the person failing to deliver such slaves. The willful failure or refusal of either the clerk, or any justice, or sheriff, or sergeant, to perform the duties required of them under this act, shall be deemed a malfeasance in office, and on conviction thereof their offices shall become vacant; and for every such failure or refusal it shall be the duty of the Commonwealth's attorney for the circuit court of such county or corporation to cause the offender or offenders to be forthwith indicted for the same in said court.

8. Under any requisition made upon any county or corporation, it shall be lawful for any number of persons who may be required to furnish not less than thirty nor more than forty slaves, to place such slaves in charge of an agent or overseer, not liable to military duty, selected by such owners, who shall deliver them to the Confederate authorities at the place where the labor is to be performed, at the expense of the Confederate States; and such agent or overseer, if a fit and proper person, shall be employed by the Confederate Government as the agent or overseer in charge of the slaves during their service of sixty days; and such agent or overseer shall not be discharged by any officer of the Confederate Government, except for good cause, to be approved by the Secretary of War: Provided, That if the requisition on any county or corporation shall amount to only twenty slaves, and less than thirty, in such case an overseer or manager, not liable to military duty, may be selected, as aforesaid.

9. The owners of slaves may furnish them subsistence and provisions, and in such event shall be allowed commutation in money, in lieu of rations, equal to the commutation allowed soldiers in the service. Transportation therefor shall be furnished by the Governor, and he shall make such arrangements with the authorities of the Confederate States as may be necessary to secure the benefit thereof to said slaves.

10. All slaves sent voluntarily by their owners to the Confederate authorities, and accepted by them, shall stand on the same footing as if sent under the proceedings required by this act.

11. This act shall be communicated forthwith by the Governor to the President of the Confederate States, and shall be regarded as an act regulating the mode in which, and the terms upon which, slaves in this State shall be impressed by the Confederate authorities, under the act of Congress, entitled "An act to regulate impressments," approved March 26, 1863, to the extent provided for in this act. Any call for slaves hereafter made by the President on the Governor shall be regarded as an assent to, and acceptance of, all the provisions of this act by the Confederate States.

12. Be it further enacted, That the act, passed March 13, 1863, entitled "An act to amend and re-enact 'An act further to provide for the public defense,' passed October 3, 1862," and the acts amendatory thereof, and all other acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act, be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

13. This act shall be in force from its passage.

A copy from the rolls.

Test.

WM. F. GORDON, JR.,

Clerk House of Delegates and Keeper of Records.

---

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,

March 15, 1865.

Hon. J. C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: I have received a copy of the act to authorize the consolidation of companies, battalions, and regiments, approved 23d of February,

1865, referred to me for my opinion as to the propriety of issuing the necessary orders for carrying it into effect at the present time. The period is very unfavorable for executing the law. The principal army at the South, under General Johnston, is now in the field operating against the enemy, and it will be very difficult, if not impracticable, to reorganize it. This army is in close proximity to the enemy, and active operations may commence any day. It would be extremely hazardous at this time, in my opinion, to begin a general consolidation of the regiments. As the Department under the law is authorized to issue general regulations on the subject, I think the law might be ordered to be carried into effect, provided the time be left discretionary with the commanders of the several armies. Occasion might be taken to unite certain companies, and advantageously, and some benefit be thus derived during the campaign.*

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

R. E. LEE,
General.

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA, WAR DEPARTMENT,
ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., March 15, 1865.

Majs. J. W. PEGRAM and THOMAS P. TURNER:

(Through General Ewell.)

SIRS: You are hereby authorized to raise a company or companies of negro soldiers, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved March 13, 1865. When the requisite number shall have been recruited they will be mustered into the service for the war and muster-rolls forwarded to this office. The companies when organized will be subject to the rules and regulations governing the Provisional Army of the Confederate States.

By command of the Secretary of War:

JOHN W. RIELY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

Report of the Committee on Military Affairs.

The committee to whom was referred so much of the President's message of the 13th instant as relates to military affairs beg leave to report that, after careful examination, they find but two measures suggested in the message for recruiting the Army.

First. A law of a few lines repealing all class exemptions.

Second. A general militia law.

The subject of exemptions has been considered by Congress at each session since the organization of the Government under the permanent Constitution, and at every session the classes exempted have been reduced in number and the exemptions in each class limited by additional restrictions.

At the present session the "fifteen-negro" exemption has been repealed, and the number of exemptions and details further reduced and prohibited. While a few class exemptions (principally of preachers, teachers, physicians, and editors) are allowed, on certain conditions, by existing laws, it may be reasonably doubted if any increase of the Army would be effected by its repeal and the substitution of an absolute power of detail by the Executive.

---

* The act is published in General Orders, No. 15, March 25, 1865, p. 1166.

The committee, however, were of opinion that the exemptions now allowed might be still further reduced without serious public detriment, and at an early day of the session reported a bill for that purpose, which, after being partially considered, was postponed, with the view to the immediate passage of the "act to diminish the number of exemptions and details," regarded as more efficient for recruiting the Army.

The recommendations of the President to abolish all class exemptions, and to confer upon him alone the unlimited power of detail, presents the question whether the representatives of the people or the Executive shall decide what persons shall constitute the Army in the field and what persons shall remain at home in pursuits indispensable to the vital interests of the country.

Without discussing the policy of subjecting all classes, individuals, and avocations to the exclusive control of the Executive department of the Government, experience has demonstrated that the power of detail as heretofore exercised has afforded more unnecessary immunity from military service than the well-guarded legislation upon the subject of exemptions. The committee entertained the opinion that serious abuses had been developed under the system of detail; that this opinion was general and tended to create "discontent and jealousy in the Army" and in the country, which it was advisable to abate by further limitations of the power.

The second measure recommended by the President and deemed by him "the measure most needed at the present time for affording an effective increase to our military strength is a general militia law." This subject was considered by the committee at an early period of the session, and a bill prepared in pursuance of the recommendations of the President in his regular message. After mature deliberation it was decided that such legislation was unnecessary and inexpedient.

Congress has placed at the disposal of the President all persons fit for military service between the ages of seventeen and fifty, and the committee are unable to understand how it can be expected that the power of defending the country would be increased by the passage of a general militia law embracing persons within those ages.

A minority of this committee were willing to organize the militia of the States, whatever it might consist of, and to authorize the President to call such organizations into the military service of the Confederate States irrespective of State lines, and therefore favored the bill referred to, though they did not consider its passage of prime importance.

As a general proposition it may be confidently stated that the militia organized and employed under State authority embrace more persons than could be made subject to a law of Congress, and are as efficient for State defense as if organized and employed under Confederate authority. The State whose Governor has informed the President "that the law does not permit him to call the militia from one county for service in another" has not adopted any such restriction, except as to persons over the age of forty-five. Such is the restriction, the committee are reliably informed, in the State of Alabama, and it is not believed that this or any similar prohibition exists in any other State. It is unreasonable to suppose that any State would by legislation seriously impair the efficiency of the force relied on for its own defense. The only material change that could be effected by a general militia law would be to transfer the power to control and employ the persons subject to militia duty from the State to the Confederate authorities, and thereby place it in the power of the President to order the militia of a State to any portion of the Confederacy. The policy of using such persons as might constitute militia under the proposed legislation is more than questionable in view of the fact that the "reserves," under the pressure of the war, are continued indefinitely in the field, and, under a recent act, may be ordered beyond the limits of their respective States. If the militia, also, might be so ordered, the number remaining for local police and State defense, already insufficient for the purpose, would be so far reduced as virtually to deprive the State of all means of self-preservation. It seems manifest that the extension of conscription to persons over the age of forty-five, while it has greatly impaired the productive power of the country and in other respects prejudiced the public service, has been attended by no compensating advantage. And the committee are indisposed to extend an erroneous policy by recommending the adoption of any measure to place other persons over the age of forty-five in the general military service of the Confederate States.

Without enlarging upon the merits of the question, the committee express their conviction that in the failure of Congress to pass a general militia law there is to be found no dereliction of duty; and that notwithstanding the opinion of the President, from which they have dissented with reluctance—that the proposed measure is the one "most needed at the present time for affording an effective increase to our military strength"—they may without arrogance hope to escape the disapproval of the Army and the people. This being the most important omission of duty alleged by the President as to the military legislation of Congress, the committee is not unwilling to assume its share of the responsibility of the failure, and feel no apprehension of prejudice to the cause therefrom. The problem most difficult to solve was how to secure the return to the Army of officers and men absent without leave. The fact made public by the President of the inability of the Government to secure obedience to military obligation of more than one-half of the number enrolled for service in the Army created much disquietude in the public mind, and the expectation may be supposed to have been general that the President would recommend remedial legislation to correct the evil. Information derived from the proper Department, and upon which appropriations are made by Congress in obedience to official estimates, exhibits an Army of about a half million of men. The support of the Army now in the field creates an alarming pressure upon the energies of the Government; the supply of arms and munitions of war is not considered too abundant for present demand, and Congress may at least be allowed to excuse itself for non-action on the line indicated by the President until some satisfactory assurances are given of the ability to control and employ the means long since placed at the disposal of the Executive Department of the Government. Every measure proposed by the President or the General-in-Chief to secure the speedy return of absentees and deserters has been legalized by Congress, and this committee, not satisfied that the measures thus suggested would accomplish the desired result, prepared and reported a bill "most needed at the present time for affording an effective increase to our military strength." This bill, if objectionable in some of its details, yet promised the most valuable results in its general operation, but encountered opposition from the President so decided as to induce the committee, in deference to his wishes, to abandon the project. But since the President has urged in his late message additional legislation for re-enforcing the Army, and as Congress is alone intrusted with the power of making the laws best calculated to raise, strengthen, and preserve armies, the committee have determined to urge the passage of the bill, with such modifications as may remove objections without destroying the efficiency of the measure.

The committee is constrained to believe that the soldiers in the field who have been true to duty will recognize the inefficiency of existing remedies for the evils of absenteeism and desertion, and will approve as an unavoidable necessity almost any measure calculated to secure the return to service of those whose presence is demanded by the most urgent considerations of the public safety.

In answer to the complaint that Congress had delayed the passage of the "negro soldier" bill until the measure had lost much of its value, the committee suggest the following reasons for the delay:

First. The opinion of the President, expressed in his regular message at the beginning of the present session, that beyond the "limit" of employing slaves as "pioneer" and "engineer" laborers it did not seem to him "desirable, under existing circumstances, to go;" that "the subject is to be viewed by us solely in the light of policy and our social economy;" that "when so regarded" he (the President) "must dissent from those who advise a general levy and arming of the slaves for the duty of soldiers;" that "until our white population shall prove insufficient for the armies we require and can keep in the field," or "the alternative of subjugation" or "the employment of the slave as a soldier" be presented, the President assured the Congress that the policy of arming the slave "would scarcely be deemed wise or advantageous by any."

Second. The equally emphatic statement of the Secretary of War, in his last report, that "his own judgment did not either perceive the necessity or approve the policy of employing slaves in the higher duties of soldiers." Also, that "we had within the military age as large a proportion of our white population as would be required or could be advantageously employed in active military operations."

These solemn avowals of deliberate opinion by the President and his war minister, communicated to Congress and never revoked, changed, or modified in any subsequent message, left Congress in the position of being compelled to override the judgment of these high functionaries upon a subject about which they are presumed to be fully informed and not likely to fall into error, or to delay action until advised of the happening of the contingencies which would justify a resort to the doubtful policy of arming the slaves.

The appeal made by the President for "earnest and cordial co-operation between all departments of the Government" meets with the hearty approval of this committee, and doubtless of Congress. Inability to concur in all the views of the President, or failure to pass, after due consideration, all the measures recommended by him, should not be received as any evidence of an indisposition to co-operate harmoniously with other departments of the Government in earnest efforts to advance the success of our arms and the welfare of our country.

(House of Representatives, March 16, 1865. Read and ordered to be printed.)

(By Mr. Pugh from the Military Committee.)

Mr. Orr, from the select committee, to whom was referred that portion of the message of the President of the Confederate States of the 13th instant relating to the action of Congress during the present session, submitted the following report:*

The select committee, to whom was referred so much of the President's message of the 13th instant as relates to the action of Congress during the present session, having duly considered the same, respectfully submit the following report:

The attention of the Congress is called by the President to the fact that for carrying on the war successfully there is urgent need of men and supplies for the Army.

The measures passed by Congress during the present session for recruiting the Army are considered by the President inefficient; and it is said that the result of the law authorizing the employment of slaves as soldiers will be less than anticipated in consequence of the dilatory action of Congress in adopting the measure. That a law so radical in its character, so repugnant to the prejudices of our people, and so intimately affecting the organism of society should encounter opposition and receive a tardy sanction ought not to excite surprise; but if the policy and necessity of the measure had been seriously urged on Congress by an Executive message legislative action might have been quickened. The President in no official communication to Congress has recommended the passage of a law putting slaves into the Army as soldiers, and the message under consideration is the first official information that such a law meets his approval. Executive message transmitted to Congress on the 7th of November last suggests the propriety of enlarging the sphere of employment of the negro as a laborer, and for this purpose recommends that the absolute title to slaves be acquired by impressment, and as an incentive to the faithful discharge of duty that the slaves thus acquired be liberated with the permission of the States from which they were drawn. In this connection the following language is used: "If this policy should recommend itself to the judgment of Congress, it is suggested that, in addition to the duties heretofore performed by the slave, he might be advantageously employed as pioneer and engineer laborer, and in that event that the number should be augmented by 40,000. Beyond this limit and these employments it does not seem to me desirable, under existing circumstances, to go." In the same message the President further remarks, "The subject is to be viewed by us, therefore, solely in the light of policy and our social economy. When so regarded, I must dissent from those who advise a general levy and arming the slaves for the duty of soldiers." It is manifest that the President in November last did not consider that the contingency had then arisen which would justify a resort to the extraordinary policy of arming our slaves. Indeed, no other inference can be deduced from the language used by him, for he says: "These considerations, however, are rather applicable to the improbable contingency of our need of resorting to this element of resistance than to our present condition." The Secretary of War, in his report under date of November 3, seemed to concur in the opinion of the President, when he said: "While it is encouraging to know this resource for further and future efforts is at our command, my own judgment does not yet either perceive the necessity or approve the policy of employing slaves in the higher duties of soldiers."

At what period of the session the President or Secretary of War considered the improbable contingency had arisen which required a resort to slaves as an element of resistance does not appear by any official document within the knowledge of your committee. Congress might well have delayed action on this subject until the present moment, as the President, whose constitutional duty it is "to give to the Congress information of the state of Confederacy," has never asked, in any authentic manner, for a passage of a law authorizing the employment of slaves as soldiers. The Senate, however, did not await the tardy movements of the President. On the 29th of December, 1864, the following resolution was adopted by the Senate in secret session:

"Resolved, That the President be requested to inform the Senate, in secret session, as to the state of the finances in connection with the payment of the troops; the means of supplying the munitions of war, transportation, and subsistence; the condition of the Army, and the possibility of recruiting the same; the condition of our foreign relations, and whether any aid or encouragement from abroad is expected, or has been sought, or is proposed, so that the Senate may have a clear and exact view of the state of the country, and of its future prospects, and what measures of legislation are required."

*From Journal of the C. S. Senate of March 16, 1865.

In response to this resolution the President might well have communicated to the Senate his views as to the necessity and policy of arming the slaves of the Confederacy as a means of public defense. No answer whatever has been made to the resolution. In addition to this, a joint committee was raised by Congress, under a concurrent resolution adopted in secret session on the 30th of December, 1864. That committee, by the resolution creating it, was instructed, by conference with the President, and by such other means as they shall deem proper, to ascertain what are our reliable means of public defense, present and prospective.

A written report was made by the committee on January 25, 1865, and although it had a conference with the President no allusion is made in the report to any suggestion by him that the necessities of the country required the employment of slaves as soldiers. Under these circumstances Congress, influenced no doubt by the opinion of General Lee, determined for itself the propriety, policy, and necessity of adopting the measure in question.

The recommendations of the President to employ 40,000 slaves as cooks, teamsters, and as engineer and pioneer laborers was assented to, and a law has been enacted at the present session for the purpose, without limit as to number.

All the measures recommended by the President to promote the efficiency of the Army have been adopted, except the entire repeal of class exemptions, and some measures not suggested by him, such as the creation of the office of General-in-Chief, were originated and passed by Congress, with a view to the restoration of public confidence and the energetic administration of military affairs.

On the subject of exemptions the President in his message of November 7 uses the following language: "No pursuit or position should relieve any one who is able to do active duty from enrollment in the Army, unless his functions or services are more useful to the defense of his country in another sphere. But it is manifest that this cannot be the case with entire classes. All telegraph operators, workmen in mines, professors, teachers, engineers, editors and employes of newspapers, journeymen printers, shoemakers, tanners, blacksmiths, millers, physicians, and numerous other classes mentioned in the laws cannot in the nature of things be either equally necessary in their several professions, nor distributed throughout the country in such proportions that only the exact numbers required are found in each locality," &c.

The casual reader would infer that the laws, as they stood at the date of the message, exempted the classes enumerated by the President, as well as many other classes not mentioned by him. Such is not the fact. The only class exemptions allowed by the laws then in force were the following: Ministers of religion; superintendents and physicians of asylums for the deaf, dumb, and blind, and of the insane; one editor for each newspaper, and such employes as the editor may certify on oath as indispensably necessary; the public printers of the Confederate and State governments, and their journeymen printers; one skilled apothecary in each apothecary store, who was doing business as such on the 10th of October, 1862; physicians over thirty years of age, and for the last seven years in practice; presidents and teachers of colleges, seminaries, and schools, and the superintendents, physicians, and nurses in public hospitals; certain mail contractors and drivers of post coaches; certain officers and employes of railroad companies, and certain agriculturists or overseers.

Officers of the State governments are not properly included among the exempted classes, because it is conceded that Congress has no constitutional power to conscribe them as soldiers. Nor are Dunkards, Quakers, or other non-combatants regarded as belonging to class exemptions, because, under the act of June 7, 1864, the exemption of these persons is subject to the control of the Secretary of War. The exemption of agriculturists or overseers between the ages of eighteen and forty-five has been repealed at the present session. Tanners, shoemakers, millers, blacksmiths, telegraph operators, and workmen in mines, enumerated by the President as among the classes exempted, are not now and have not been since the passage of the act of February 17, 1864, exempted as a class. If railroad officers and employes and State officers, who are not constitutionally subject to conscription, be excluded, the classes now exempted east of the Mississippi River embrace about 9,000 men, one-third of whom are physicians, and nearly another third are ministers of the gospel; the remaining third is principally composed of teachers, professors, printers, and employes in newspaper offices and apothecaries.

In remarkable contrast to the number of persons relieved from military service by the exemptions above mentioned, the report of the Conscrip Bureau exhibits the fact that east of the Mississippi River 22,035 men have been detailed by Executive authority. In consequence of this abuse of the power of detail, Congress at its present session passed an act revoking all details and limiting the exercise of that power in the future. The third section of this act, exempting skilled artisans and mechanics from all military service, which is excepted to by the President and which has since been repealed, was originally adopted in consequence of suggestions contained in the report of the Secretary of War. In alluding to the embarrassments encountered by the administrative bureaus, the Secretary says: "In addition they have been constrained, by the stringent legislation of Congress, to relinquish their most active and experienced agents and employés and substitute them from more infirm and aged classes." Again: "Interferences of this kind are inevitably so prejudicial and disturbing that it is hoped a well-devised and permanent system of providing and retaining in continuous employment a sufficient number of artisans, experts, and laborers for all essential operations may be devised and established." The truth is that the bill originally introduced into the Senate exempting skilled artisans and mechanics was actually prepared in one of the bureaus of the War Department. Congress, therefore, had reason to suppose that it would meet the sanction of the Executive.

To conscribe the ministers of religion and require them to obtain details to preach the gospel would shock the religious sentiment of the country and inflict a greater injury on our cause than can be described. The conscription of editors and of the printers necessary to the publication of newspapers would destroy the independence of the press, and subject it to the control of the Executive Department of the Government. Railroad officers and employés are as necessary to the prosecution of the war as soldiers in the field. Physicians and apothecaries are essential to the health of the people, and no complaint has reached Congress of abuses of this class of exemptions. If the education of youth be regarded as conducive to maintenance of society and the preservation of liberty, it is not perceived that the exemption of professors of colleges and teachers of schools can be justly censured. The Senate passed a bill containing a section repealing the exemption allowed to mail contractors and drivers of post coaches; but at a subsequent stage of proceedings, and on the recommendation of a committee of conference, based on the urgent remonstrances of the Postmaster-General, the section alluded to was stricken out.

The subject of class exemptions was called to the attention of Congress by the Executive message of November last. It was carefully considered, and an act was passed expressive of the views of the legislative department of the Government. The message under consideration recurs to the same subject. It is to be regretted that the views of the legislative department of the Government have not met the favor of the Executive, and that he should deem it both necessary and proper to express dissatisfaction with the matured opinion of Congress.

It is true that Congress has failed to respond to the recommendation of the President to enact a general militia law. The subject was considered, and the failure to act was the result of deliberation. The conscription laws enacted by Congress have placed in the military service of the country all its able-bodied citizens between the ages of seventeen and fifty. The whole military material of the country, so far as legislation is concerned, is absorbed by the conscription acts. There is none left on which a militia law can operate, except the exempted classes and the boys under seventeen and the men over fifty years of age. It was deemed expedient to allow this material to remain subject to the control of the State authorities for the purposes of local police to aid in the arrest of deserters and to enforce the administration of State laws.

It is also true that the President has recommended the passage of a law suspending the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus. This recommendation was the subject of a special message in secret session. It occupied the attention of Congress for four or five weeks. After mature deliberation the measure was laid aside as unimportant and inexpedient. Spies can be arrested and tried summarily without suspending the writ of habeas corpus. Conspiracies, tending in any manner to the injury of our cause, were provided for by a special act passed at the present session "to define and punish conspiracy against the Confederate States." The States of North Carolina, Georgia, and Mississippi had expressed, through their Legislatures, great repugnance to the past legislation of Congress suspending the writ, and a large portion of the people throughout the country was arrayed against the policy of that legislation. It was deemed wise and prudent to conciliate opposition at a time when dissensions are ruinous; and as the benefits to be derived from the suspension of the writ were conjectural the deliberate judgment of Congress was expressed by its silence on the subject. It is to be regretted that the Executive does not concur in these views, and again calls on Congress to revise its action and to suspend the writ of habeas corpus as a measure "almost indispensable to the successful conduct of the war." If the facts stated in the confidential message alluded to by the President be the basis of the opinion that the suspension of the writ "is indispensable to the successful conduct of the war," the Congress does not concur in that opinion. The writ has not been suspended since August last. It is not perceived that the military reverses of the country since that period were occasioned by the absence of the legislation asked for.

In regard to impressments, Congress at the present session has passed a bill declaring that the terms "just compensation," as used in the Constitution, entitle the owner whose property is impressed to the market value thereof at the time and place of impressment. This legislation was considered necessary in consequence of judicial decisions in some of the States and because of the difficulty of procuring supplies on any other terms. Indeed, it was supposed that the Executive had reached the same conclusion, as the Commissary-General, on the 20th of December, 1864, had advertised that he would pay for supplies the price fixed by local appraisement, which is in fact the market price. The President in his annual message of November last did not call the attention of Congress to any difficulties attendant on the execution of the impressment laws. The present message, for the first time during this session, suggests modifications of those laws, and the recommendations of the President will doubtless receive the respectful consideration of Congress. It may well be doubted, however, whether the present specie value, payable in the future, will induce the owner of property to part with it, and whether the passage of such a measure would not result in a general concealment of provisions and consequent starvation of the Army.

It is apprehended by the President that some degree of embarrassment in the management of the finances will be felt in consequence of the inadequate provision made by Congress; and it is intimated that some of the measures recommended by him were so retarded as to lose much of their value, and others, after being matured, were for the same reason abandoned because no longer applicable to our altered condition. The only financial measure abandoned after being matured was the currency bill recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury and indorsed by the President in his annual message. It may be remarked that the failure to enact any fiscal measure which has not sufficient vitality to render it valuable and applicable for the short period of four months does not deserve much regret. The currency bill was recommended to Congress, and based on the condition the finances presented by the President in his message and by the Secretary of the Treasury in his report. It was abandoned without regret because, at the subsequent period of the session, it was ascertained that the arrears of public debt constituting cash demands on the Treasury exceeded by nearly $400,000,000 the amount originally reported to Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury. The currency bill contemplated the reduction of the currency to $150,000,000 by a conversion of the Treasury notes into title certificates, payable after the war, and by annual application of a portion of the taxes, in a nature of a sinking fund. The Treasury notes received for title certificates were to be canceled. The military reverses, which impaired the credit of the Government to such an extent as to destroy the salability of any of its bonds, left little hope that Treasury notes would be exchanged for title certificates. As soon as the enormous increase in the arrears of debt was discovered as above mentioned, all idea of reducing the currency was abandoned as impracticable. For these reasons the committee of conference having charge of the currency bill agreed to abandon it as a useless pledge of future resources without corresponding present advantage. Indeed, if the bill had been passed the first day of the session it would have expired from inaction on the 9th of January, 1865, the day on which the Secretary of the Treasury reported to Congress the deficit of $400,000,000, and recommended an increase of taxation to meet it.

The tax bill is regarded by the President as liberal, though inadequate. No nation on earth ever conducted a protracted war by resources derived from taxation alone. The message intimates a regret that the recommendation, by the Secretary of the Treasury, of a tax on agricultural incomes equal to the augmented tax on other incomes, payable in Treasury notes, was rejected by Congress. This is evidently a mistake, as it assumes there has been an increase of taxes on other than agricultural incomes. The present income taxes are those laid by the act of April, 1863, as amended and re-enacted on 17th of February, 1864. To require the agriculturist to pay a tax on the income derived from his farm, in addition to the one-tenth of his gross productions, and the property tax of 9 per cent. ad valorem, would be manifestly unjust and oppressive. After the delivery of his tithe, to tax the income of the agriculturist derived from the property producing the tithe would leave little for family subsistence, for the purchase of supplies necessary for carrying on his agricultural operations, and for the payment of the ad valorem tax on his property. Congress, therefore, did not concur in the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury, believing it to be highly inexpedient.

The recommendations of the Secretary of the Treasury have in the main received the approbation of Congress and every disposition has been manifested to co-operate with him. The tax bill adopted very nearly approximates the rate desired by him. He recommended 10 per cent. on property. Congress has imposed a tax of 9 per cent. A new foreign loan was authorized in secret session, at his request, without any limitation on his authority except as to the amount. A transfer of certain sterling funds abroad was by joint resolution directed to be made from the Navy to the Treasury. Efforts were made to raise specie. A bill was passed in the Senate, in secret session, to accomplish that object by the sale of certain licenses. It is understood the bill was defeated in the House of Representatives by the acquiescence, if not at the instigation, of the Secretary of the Treasury. It appears from the correspondence submitted to Congress that the Secretary of War, as early as the 18th of February, notified the President of the embarrassed condition of his Department, and it is to be regretted that the Executive deliberated on and postponed for so long a period as nearly twenty days the communication of that information to Congress.

If loss of time be a vice inherent in deliberative assemblies, promptitude is a great virtue in Executive action. There is every disposition on the part of Congress to comply with the recommendations of the President, and some means of raising the coin desired will no doubt be devised. It is unfortunate that the necessity for coin in the Commissary Department was not made known until the message under consideration was received. The use of coin in one department of the Government is calculated to superinduce the necessity for its use in all other departments; and hence the policy of the proposed measure, in a financial view, is very questionable. The necessity for supplies, however, overrides all other considerations. If practicable, it would be wiser to employ the specie in the purchase of Treasury notes, and then use the notes to obtain supplies.

Nothing is more desirable than concord and cordial co-operation between all departments of Government. Hence, your committee regret that the Executive deemed it necessary to transmit to Congress a message so well calculated to excite discord and dissension. But for the fact that the success of the great struggle in which the country is engaged depends as much on the confidence of the people in the Legislative as in the Executive department of the Government the message would have been received without comment. Your committee would have preferred silence. It has been inductive to an opposite course, because they believe Congress would be derelict in its duty to permit its legitimate and constitutional influence to be destroyed by Executive admonitions, such as those contained in the message under consideration, without some public exposition of its conduct.

The Senate proceeded to consider the said report, and resolved that they concur therein.

---

[MARCH 16, 1865.—For Governor of Virginia to President Davis, transmitting joint resolution of the Legislature of Virginia in relation to the employment of negroes as soldiers (passed March 6, 1865), see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part III, p. 1315, and for resolutions on the same subject, adopted March 4, 1865, see Series I, Vol. LI, Part II, p. 1068.]

---

GENERAL ORDERS, }	ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 10. }	Richmond, Va., March 17, 1865.

I. The attention of officers and soldiers is again called to the regulations (reiterated in General Orders, No. 3, of 1863, and paragraph I, General Orders, No. 78, of 1864, from this office) respecting military correspondence. Communications from the Army on official business, addressed to civilians at the seat of government, have become so frequent as seriously to interfere with the efficient conduct of the several bureaus of the War Department. Officers and soldiers who violate orders in this respect will be promptly placed in arrest and brought to trial.

II. A moderate price will be paid by the Ordnance and Quartermaster's Departments for such stores and animals as deserters, who clearly establish the fact of their desertion, may bring with them into our lines.

III. The following act of Congress, revoking paragraph VIII, General Orders, No. 42, of 1864, is published for the information of the Army:

AN ACT supplemental to an act entitled "An act to organize forces to serve during the war."

The Congress of the Confederate States of America do enact, That nothing in said recited act contained shall be construed to discharge from military service persons over the age of forty-five or under eighteen years, who are now in the Army of the Confederate States.

Approved February 17, 1864.

Injunction of secrecy was removed from this act by a resolution of the House of Representatives, passed January, 1865.

IV. All non-commissioned officers and privates detailed because of disability will be examined monthly, when those found fit for field duty will be immediately turned over to the commandant of the post at which they are employed, to be returned to their commands. This is not intended to apply to those "retired" under the act to provide an Invalid Corps.

V. Conscripts assigned to light duty will be examined every three months, when those found equal to field duty will be turned over to the enrolling authorities for assignment to commands in the field.

VI. In places where hospital medical boards are located they will make the examination; at other places they will be made by conscript boards.

VII. Monthly reports of all men found fit for field duty, and sent in accordance with these instructions to the field, will be transmitted by the boards, through the Surgeon-General, to the Adjutant and Inspector General.

VIII. Notices of all detailed soldiers returned to duty with their commands will be forwarded by the Medical Board to company commanders.

IX. The examination referred to in paragraphs IV, V, and VI, of this order, will be made by the medical boards at the posts where the men are employed. Their failure to make such examinations will be reported by the post commanders to the Adjutant and Inspector General.

X. Where soldiers in hospitals are transferred to other hospitals, surgeons in charge will put them in charge of the officer of the train guard of the railroad upon which they are sent, who will be responsible for their delivery to the officer of the train guard of the next connecting railroad en route, or to the surgeon in charge of the hospital to which they are transferred.

XI. Persons arriving at the age of eighteen years of age, and all others in the reserve forces not disabled for active duty, who are within the conscript ages, will be turned over to enrolling officers for assignment to companies in the general service. The fact of their holding commissions does not preclude the operation of this order. Generals of reserves and inspectors are required to enforce this order.

XII. Paragraph I, General Orders, No. 81, of 1864, is hereby revoked.

By order:

S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General.

RICHMOND, VA., March 17, 1865.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA:

I return without my approval an act which originated in your honorable body, entitled "An act to provide for the payment of arrears now due to the Army and Navy."

I have been led to believe that this act was passed in haste and without due consideration, and that some members who voted for it desire an opportunity for reconsidering their action.

The act provides for additional issue of Treasury notes to an amount not exceeding $80,000,000, to be used in payment of all arrears of pay and allowances due to persons in the military and naval service of the Confederate States; these notes "to be regarded in all respects as Treasury notes issued by virtue of the act to reduce the currency and authorize a new issue of notes and bonds, approved February 17, 1864."

The objections to this legislation are, in my judgment, manifold and grave.

First. The act of February 17, 1864, levied a tax on the Treasury notes then outstanding far exceeding that levied on any other species of property, and which could only be justified by the consideration that the additional contribution thus exacted from the holders of these public credits would be compensated in whole or in part by the increased value of the new currency which was issued for the old at the rate of $2 of the former for $3 of the latter. The act revoked all authority theretofore given to issue Treasury notes, and it was generally if not universally considered that the provisions of that law constituted an implied pledge of the faith of the Government that no further issues of notes should be made than those therein provided for. It would be scarcely consistent to take from the holder one-third of the nominal amount of the currency in hand for the purpose of reducing the currency as set forth in the title of the law; to unite with this exaction a previous authority to issue notes, and afterward to provide for an expansion of the currency in opposition to the principles of the act of February 17, 1864, to the evident detriment of the holders of the currency under that act.

Second. Independently of the objection just stated, the effect of a new issue of Treasury notes would be disastrous. The passage of the law would be accepted as a proof that there is no limit to the issue of Treasury notes except the pleasure of the Government, and the people will be persuaded that whenever an emergency arises it will be met by additional issues of paper money. Such a conviction, once rooted in the popular mind, could not be eradicated, and the depreciation of the notes in circulation would increase so rapidly as effectually to destroy the whole value of what is outstanding and leave the country without a circulation and the Government without credit.

Third. The bill, although intended by Congress for the benefit of the Army, to which we all acknowledge the most sacred obligations of justice and gratitude, would have an effect the reverse of that designed. It would despoil the soldier, instead of paying him. If money be raised by taxation for paying arrears due the Army, the demand thus created for the notes enhances the value and enables the public creditor who receives them to make them available for the purchase of what he needs. If, on the contrary, the soldier is to have his claim extinguished by the simple process of printing more paper money, and thus diminishing its value below even its present depreciation, his claims for his arrears of pay will have been practically repudiated instead of being paid. Justice to the soldier prompted Congress to pass this bill. The same motive induces me to withhold my approval of it; and if my objections shall appear to you well founded, when your attention is drawn to the supposed consequences that would result from this legislation, I am persuaded that you will concur in my opinion that it ought not to be adopted.

Fourth. There is a mechanical difficulty in the execution of the law of which Congress was not aware, and which under any circumstances would render the bill unavailing for its intended purpose of prompt payment of the arrears due the Army.

The removal of the Treasury Note Bureau from Columbia, the time required for re-establishing it with its machinery at another locality and for preparing Treasury notes for the $50,000,000 or $60,000,000 remaining for issue under existing laws, together with other causes which it is unwise to relate, would prevent the issue of the notes provided for in this bill for at least three months to come.

It is gratifying to assure you of my belief that the receipts from the tax bill just passed, together with other resources within reach of the Treasury, will enable the Government to pay the arrears due to the Army and Navy sooner than the additional notes contemplated by the bill could be issued, and that the proposed increase of currency can thus be avoided without causing delay in satisfying the just claims of the defenders of our country.

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

---

AN ACT to raise coin for the purpose of furnishing necessary supplies for the Army.

The Congress of the Confederate States of America do enact, That in order to procure the means of purchasing supplies for the Army, the Secretary of the Treasury, under the direction of the President, be, and he is hereby, authorized to borrow from any bank, banking company, corporation, association, or person, any sum or sums in coin, not to exceed three millions of dollars in the aggregate, and to secure the repayment of any sum or sums so borrowed at such time as may be agreed upon, not to exceed two years after the ratification of a treaty of peace between the Confederate States and the United States, to cause to be issued bonds of the Confederate States, in such convenient sums as may be agreed upon, payable in coin, and to bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually in specie; and to secure the repayment of any sum or sums so borrowed, with the interest thereon, the said Secretary be further authorized and empowered to pledge in such legal form as may be agreed upon, any cotton or tobacco owned by the Government, to the extent in value of any such loan so obtained, or the proceeds thereof, when sold, or to convey such cotton and tobacco, or any part thereof, in absolute payment of such loan, with the right on the part of the lender of such coin to export or transport such cotton and tobacco beyond the limits of the Confederate States, free from any molestation on the part of the authorities of the Confederate States, or the payment of any duty, except to the extent of one-eighth per cent. now imposed by law.

Sec. 2. In the event of the Secretary of the Treasury shall not be able at once to obtain coin to the amount of three millions of dollars under the provisions of the first section of this act, then, and in that event, a tax shall be levied and collected of twenty-five per cent. upon the amount of all gold and silver coin, gold dust and bullion, and foreign exchange in the Confederate States, payable in kind, which tax shall be due and collected on the first day of April next, or as soon thereafter as possible: Provided, That the above tax shall not be levied upon the gold or silver coin, gold dust and bullion, and foreign exchange owned or possessed by any person when the amount so owned or possessed shall not exceed two hundred dollars in value, nor shall the said tax be levied on gold or silver coin, gold dust, bullion, or foreign exchange which, within thirty days after the passage of this act, shall be lent to the Government under the provisions of the first section of this act; nor upon the gold or silver coin, gold dust, bullion, or foreign exchange of any person who has made a loan to the Government according to the said first section, of not less than twenty-five per cent. of the gold or silver coin, gold dust, bullion or foreign exchange owned and possessed by such person at the time of the passage of this act; and if any State of the Confederacy borrows from any bank coin or bullion and lends it to the Confederate Government, the bank that lends said coin or bullion shall be allowed a credit against this tax to the extent of such loan: And provided also, That the delay of thirty days mentioned in this section shall be extended to one hundred and twenty days for all portions of the Confederacy beyond the Mississippi River.

Sec. 3. That the limitation of three millions of dollars, as expressed in the first section of this act, shall not be construed to prohibit the Secretary of the Treasury from receiving a greater amount, offered as loans or accruing on taxes under this act: Provided, That the tax imposed by the provisions of this act upon gold and silver coin, gold and silver bullion, gold dust, and foreign exchange, when paid, or the amount thereof loaned in pursuance of the first and second sections of this act, shall be in lieu of all other taxes imposed on the same articles by any other act: Provided further, That the tax of twenty-five per cent. levied by the second section of this act shall be in lieu of all other taxes imposed on the same article by any other act, and the tax imposed by this act shall be assessed as at the date of the passage of this act.

Approved March 17, 1865.

A true copy.

JAMES M. MATTHEWS,
Law Clerk.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,

Raleigh, March 17, 1865.

Hon. JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,

Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

DEAR SIR: I have been informed that certain communications, of the utmost importance to the cause of the Confederacy, have been submitted to Congress in secret session by the President and the several heads of departments. I have also been informed that their nature was such as to render it entirely proper, and indeed rightful, that I, as Governor of North Carolina, should be informed of their contents. I have, therefore, the honor to most respectfully request a copy of said papers, if not deemed inconsistent with the public good, and have sent the bearer, Maj. James H. Foote, assistant adjutant-general of North Carolina, a discreet and loyal gentleman, to receive them, should you deem it advisable to comply with my request.

I am, sir, very respectfully and truly, your obedient servant,
ZEBULON B. VANCE.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 11. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., March 18, 1865.

I. Cadets in the Confederate service will hereafter be examined for promotion to the grade of commissioned officers by boards composed of artillery, cavalry, and infantry officers, on the following subjects, to wit:

First. The reading and writing of the English language. The examination on this subject will consist of reading aloud to the Board a page or two of some author, and then writing a few dictated paragraphs to test correctness in spelling.

Second. The use of figures, embracing the ground rules of arithmetic, including fractions, the extraction of the square root, and the use of logarithms.

Third. Algebra, so far as to embrace simple and quadratic equations.

Fourth. The principles of geometry, including (say) the first eight books of Legendre's treatise.

Fifth. Plane trigonometry.

Sixth. Mensuration of surfaces and solids.

Seventh. The elements of surveying, with a view to test the capacity of each to determine distances trigonometrically, to locate lines on the ground, and to lay down given figures for encampments, &c.

Eighth. For artillery cadets alone, the elements of mechanics.

(The examination on all the foregoing subjects should be more rigid for those desiring to enter the artillery than for the officers of cavalry or infantry.)

Ninth. Tactics: artillery, cavalry, and infantry.

The cadets designed for the artillery service will be examined rigidly on artillery tactics and upon the general principles of cavalry and infantry tactics. Cadets designed for the cavalry will be examined strictly on cavalry tactics and on the general principles of infantry; cadets for infantry service strictly on infantry tactics and the duties of company officers.

II. The boards of examiners will be detailed from the most competent officers of each arm, serving with armies in the field or in the departments, by the generals commanding, respectively; and the particulars of the examinations, with the findings and recommendations of the boards, will be forwarded, through the prescribed channels, to the office of the Adjutant and Inspector General. A similar board will be organized at the seat of government for the examination of such cadets as may present themselves.

III. Cadets will be notified in advance of the subjects on which they will be examined, and they will be allowed three months prior to the examination for preparation.

IV. The boards of examiners will adopt a coefficient for the requirements to be demanded of each cadet, varying with his general merit as established by the reports of officers with whom he has served and the arm of service to which he belongs. The more the merit, as thus established, and the less scientific the arm, the less should be the imperative requirements and the smaller the coefficient.

V. Cadets will be required, before examination, to have served in companies in the several arms of service (artillery, cavalry, or infantry) as required by law.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES OF VIRGINIA,
Richmond, March 20, 1865.

General S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General:

GENERAL: I respectfully suggest the necessity of some such general order as that proposed in the inclosed paper in order to preserve the organization of the reserve forces. The first paragraph is intended to bring into service many youths who are at home, protected from duty with the reserve forces by paragraph III, General Orders, No. 33, series of 1864, as members of home guard or local defense companies. These companies are governed by by-laws of their own making; many of them never assemble or perform any service, and none are called out except to repel raids in their own vicinity. It is not right that these able-bodied youths between seventeen and eighteen years of age should be thus virtually excepted from military duty while all others of like age and condition are held to the continuous performance of arduous field service, and the fact excites just dissatisfaction among the Junior Reserves. The second paragraph of the proposed order is suggested in order to secure to the reserve forces youths who legally belong to the organization and are indispensable to its maintenance, but are escaping service therein. The reserve forces are all organized as infantry, at least in this State, and as such are being held to regular service in the field. General Orders, No. 75, series of 1864, virtually makes them an integral part of the regular forces. The boys, being generally averse to infantry service, volunteer, in their eagerness to avoid it, in the cavalry and artillery of the regular forces. There is no order of the War Department to prevent them from thus volunteering upon attaining the age of seventeen years, and many of them, to avoid apprehended difficulty, enlist in the regular forces a few days before becoming seventeen years old. The act of February 17, 1864, obviously designed that all youths upon becoming seventeen should be enlisted in the reserve forces and retained therewith until eighteen years old. Moreover, the reserve organization cannot be maintained. It will in a short time become extinct unless such youths as a class are enlisted and firmly held in its ranks. All are now transferred to the regular forces upon becoming eighteen, while comparatively few youths are secured to the reserves upon becoming seventeen. The prospect is equally unpromising in respect to the Senior Reserves. The courts discharge them upon reaching the age of fifty, while not a man is transferred from the active to the reserve forces upon becoming forty-five. The loss of men from the reserve forces is therefore constant and considerable, while the acquisitions are precarious and scanty, and the enforcement of existing orders a short time longer must extinguish the organization.

In this connection I respectfully ask that the Honorable Secretary of War will reconsider his decision vacating the commissions of all officers of the Junior Reserve class upon attaining the age of eighteen. I only ask authority to retain such of these junior officers as prove especially efficient and valuable with the reserves. Probably not more than twenty of such officers would be thus retained in Virginia. Their experience and peculiar fitness give efficiency to whole battalions of reserves, and cannot be replaced. Their enlistment as privates in the Regular Army would be no appreciable addition to its strength.

I cannot close this communication without asking attention to the views I have often urged before in favor of changing the orders which hold the reserves to regular field service so as to appropriate them to the business of conscription and to local defense and special service. Composed as the reserves are of old men and boys (the one class with declining and enfeebled, the other with immature, physical powers), it is vain to expect they can endure the hardships of continuous field service, and experience shows that a short term of such service disorganizes them. The Senior Reserves are especially unfit for such service. They are generally important business men at home, having estates, families, and numerous dependents. They are the valuable producers of the country. Their withdrawal from home seriously lessens production, defeats every arrangement for the proper supply of soldiers' families, dissatisfies their sons in the army, as well as all soldiers having unprovided families, and is the potent cause of much of the demoralization and desertion among the regular forces. They generally have the incipient infirmities of age, cannot stand either drilling or marching, are always deeply discontented, and sometimes mutinous on account of the grievous sacrifices which a separation from their homes involves. They are, for all these causes, the least effective troops, and when tried at hard service in the field under our most experienced and judicious commanders, they melt away like frost-work under the sun. Of four battalions tried in the trenches before Richmond, four-fifths of the men disappeared in three months by reason of death, disease, and desertion. Moreover, the business of conscription cannot be properly done, the country can never be cleared of the banded deserters who now prowl over it, until the reserve forces are allowed to be used for the purpose.

Very respectfully, general, your obedient servant,

J. L. KEMPER,
Major-General.

[Indorsement.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
March 22, 1865.

To Adjutant-General for consideration and remarks.

By command of the Secretary of War:

SAML. W. MELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Inclosure.]

I. Men of the reserve class will not be allowed to enroll themselves in companies for local defense and special service unless found by the medical boards to be unfit for field service, and men of the reserve class, fit for field service and not specially detailed, who belong to such companies, will be forthwith transferred therefrom to the reserve forces. Paragraph III, General Orders, No. 33, series of 1864, is revoked.

II. Youths under eighteen years of age are forbidden to be received into companies in the regular service, unless assigned thereto by order of the generals of reserves.

GENERAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
 No. 12. } Richmond, Va., March 21, 1865.

I. To check the sale of military clothing by soldiers the attention of the Army and of citizens is called to the following extract from the act of Congress approved January 22, 1864:

Any person not subject to the Rules and Articles of War who shall * * * purchase from any soldier or person enrolled for service any portion of his clothing * * * or any property belonging to the Confederate States, shall, upon conviction before the district court of the Confederate States having jurisdiction of the offense, be fined not exceeding $1,000 and be imprisoned not exceeding two years.

II. It is made the especial duty of all officers to cause citizens or negroes violating this law to be arrested and brought before a magistrate for trial. Soldiers guilty of the offense will be returned under guard to their commands, with a report of the evidence to sustain the charge.

III. A reward of $100 will be paid by the nearest post quartermaster, on the conviction of any citizen or negro violating this law, to the person who furnished the information that led to his arrest and conviction.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

RICHMOND, VA., March 22, 1865.

J. D. SHAW, Esq.,
Greenwood, Carroll County, Miss.:

MY DEAR SIR: A pressure of business has prevented me from replying sooner to your letter of September last. Your proposition in regard to negotiating with European powers respecting the slavery question has been attentively considered. There would be difficulty, however, in carrying it into effect. In the first place, the Confederate Government can make no agreement or arrangement with any nation which would interfere with State institutions, and if foreign Governments would consent to interpose in our behalf upon the conditions stated, it would be necessary to submit the terms to the different States of the Confederacy for their separate action.

It cannot be doubted that the obstacle to the recognition of the Confederacy has been an unwillingness to be embroiled in a quarrel with the United States. If slavery or any other cause had been the impediment, our advances to European Governments would have led to the disclosure of their reasons for not acknowledging our independence. As soon as these Governments are willing to negotiate with us upon terms to which we can honorably accede, the declaration of their conditions will probably be made known to our commissioners so that the terms proposed may be submitted to the people, States, and Government of the Confederacy.

With much regard, I remain, very respectfully and truly, yours,
 JEFFERSON DAVIS.

GENERAL ORDERS, ) ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
 No. 14. ) Richmond, Va., March 23, 1865.

I. The following act of Congress and regulations are published for the information and direction of all concerned:

AN ACT to increase the military force of the Confederate States.

The Congress of the Confederate States of America do enact, That, in order to provide additional forces to repel invasion, maintain the rightful possession of the Confederate States, secure their independence, and preserve their institutions, the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to ask for and accept from the owners of slaves, the services of such number of able-bodied negro men as he may deem expedient, for and during the war, to perform military service in whatever capacity he may direct.

SEC. 2. That the General-in-Chief be authorized to organize the said slaves into companies, battalions, regiments, and brigades, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe, and to be commanded by such officers as the President may appoint.

SEC. 3. That while employed in the service the said troops shall receive the same rations, clothing, and compensation as are allowed to other troops in the same branch of the service.

SEC. 4. That if, under the previous sections of this act, the President shall not be able to raise a sufficient number of troops to prosecute the war successfully and maintain the sovereignty of the States and the independence of the Confederate States, then he is hereby authorized to call on each State, whenever he thinks it expedient, for her quota of 300,000 troops, in addition to those subject to military service under existing laws, or so many thereof as the President may deem necessary to be raised from such classes of the population, irrespective of color, in each State, as the proper authorities thereof may determine: Provided, That not more than twenty-five per cent. of the male slaves between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, in any State, shall be called for under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 5. That nothing in this act shall be construed to authorize a change in the relation which the said slaves shall bear toward their owners, except by consent of the owners and of the States in which they may reside, and in pursuance of the laws thereof.

Approved March 13, 1865.

II. The recruiting service under this act will be conducted under the supervision of the Adjutant and Inspector General, according to the regulations for the recruiting service of the Regular Army, in so far as they are applicable, and except when special directions may be given by the War Department.

III. There will be assigned or appointed for each State an officer who will be charged with the collection, enrollment, and disposition of all the recruits that may be obtained under the first section of this act. One or more general depots will be established in each State and announced in orders, and a suitable number of officers will be detailed for duty in the staff departments at the depots. There will be assigned at each general depot a quartermaster, commissary, and surgeon, and the headquarters of the superintendent will be at the principal depot in the State. The proper officers to aid the superintendent in enlisting, mustering, and organizing the recruits will be assigned by orders from this office or by the General-in-Chief.

IV. The enlistment of colored persons under this act will be made upon printed forms, to be furnished for the purpose, similar to those established for the regular service. They will be executed in duplicate, one copy to be returned to this office for file. No slave will be accepted as a recruit unless with his own consent and with the approbation of his master by a written instrument conferring, as far as he may, the rights of a freedman, and which will be filed with the superintendent. The enlistments will be made for the war, and the effect of the enlistment will be to place the slave in the military service conformably to this act. The recruits will be organized at the camps in squads and companies, and will be subject to the orders of the General-in-Chief under the second section of this act.

V. The superintendent in each State will cause a report to be made on the first Monday of every month showing the expenses of the previous month, the number of recruits at the various depots in the State, the number that has been sent away, and the destination of each. His report will show the names of all the slaves recruited, with their age, description, and the names of their masters. One copy will be sent to the General-in-Chief and one to the Adjutant and Inspector General.

VI. The appointment of officers to the companies to be formed of the recruits aforesaid will be made by the President.

VII. To facilitate the raising of volunteer companies, officers recruiting therefor are authorized to muster their men into service as soon as enrolled. As soon as enrolled and mustered, the men will be sent, with descriptive lists, to the depots of rendezvous, at which they will be instructed until assigned for service in the field. When the organization of any company remains incomplete at the expiration of the time specified for its organization, the companies or detachments already mustered into service will be assigned to other organizations at the discretion of the General-in-Chief.

VIII. It is not the intention of the President to grant any authority for raising regiments or brigades. The only organizations to be perfected at the depots or camps of instructions are those of companies and (in exceptional cases where the slaves are of one estate) of battalions consisting of four companies, and the only authority to be issued will be for the raising of companies or the aforesaid special battalions of four companies. All larger organizations will be left for future action as experience may determine.

IX. All officers who may be employed in the recruiting service, under the provisions of this act, or who may be appointed to the command of troops raised under it, or who may hold any staff appointment in connection with them, are enjoined to a provident, considerate, and humane attention to whatever concerns the health, comfort, instruction, and discipline of those troops, and to the uniform observance of kindness, forbearance, and indulgence in their treatment of them, and especially that they will protect them from injustice and oppression.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES, MISSISSIPPI,
Enterprise, March 24, 1865.

General S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General,

Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, Richmond, Va.:

GENERAL: Soon after the decision of Chief Justice Handy, of the high court of errors and appeal of the State of Mississippi, in the case brought before him under writ of habeas corpus of Simmons to test the right of Governor Clark to accept into the volunteer service of the State men of the ages between eighteen and forty-five years (an official copy of which I had the honor to forward for your information), Governor Clark offered to turn over the State troops to the Confederate Government with their organization, officers, and men. Having no authority to accept these troops in their organized state I so advised the Governor, and stated to him when they were discharged or mustered out of the State service they would be liable to conscription, and such as were of the military age would be conscripted and assigned to the Army of Northern Virginia. The Governor insisted, as these troops had been in C. S. service for several months, and were entitled to pay, they should be mustered for payment before being mustered out. I brought this matter to the notice of the generals commanding the department and district, and represented to them that, as the reserves were assigned to active service and not under my control, I had no means of enforcing the conscription. It was then agreed by General Forrest, commanding the district, that the State troops should be assembled at Macon to be mustered, &c. At an interview with Lieutenant-General Taylor, he suggested the expediency of organizing the men of these forces between the ages of eighteen and forty-five into a battalion or regiment temporarily and subject to your approval. I replied that the orders against new organizations were very stringent and peremptory, and I did not believe it would be approved; but, as these men could not at present be forwarded to the Army of Northern Virginia, they might be temporarily formed into companies and officers assigned to command them for the present emergency. I knew it was the practice when recruits or men returning to their commands could not do so, by reason of the interruption of the communication by the presence of the enemy, the general commanding at the point of interruption organized them into companies and temporarily assigned them to duty with his own troops; after the emergency was over they went forward to their respective commands. I thought the same course might be pursued with these troops, but that they should be enrolled at once. I instructed the enrolling officer to apply to Lieutenant-General Forrest for authority to make the enrollment. I am not advised what course has been taken.

Lieutenant-General Taylor has recently desired me to approve this organization, should it be made. This I most respectfully decline as I am satisfied it would not be for the good of the service, for the reason that the men who would compose this organization are from the volunteer State forces (who have been avoiding the service from the beginning of the war), and if they are placed in a separate command, or regiment, and permitted to do duty in this State, they will all the time [be] absent from their command without leave and never present and fit for duty when required. On the contrary, if they are assigned to an old organization, and removed from the State, they will do good service, for they do not skulk the service from any fear of the enemy but from a love of their ease and comfort and anxiety about their families and property. Therefore, when the enemy make an advance into the State they leave their colors for home—to take care of the one and secure the other. For these reasons I ask instructions to be given to the generals commanding the department and district to turn over these troops to me, to be conscripted and assigned to the Army of Northern Virginia. It is also urged, as a reason for organizing these men into regiments to serve in this State, that if an attempt be made to conscript they may desert. Some doubtless would desert, but this should not be regarded, for these temporizing measures have been very destructive to discipline and produced all the demoralization that exists to such a fearful extent in this State. Therefore I renew my recommendation that these men be conscripted and assigned to the Army of Tennessee; if not, to Northern Virginia.

I have the honor to be, general, your most obedient servant,

W. L. BRANDON,

Brigadier-General, Commanding.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, NITER AND MINING BUREAU.
Richmond, March 24, 1865.

Hon. JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,

Secretary of War:

SIR: In a confidential letter of the 10th instant the opinion was expressed that the supplies of lead, niter, &c., could be maintained for a given length of time with the force then assigned to the Bureau.

Since that time the detailed men both in North Carolina and Southwest Virginia have been ordered into camp, and the operations of the Bureau in these two States virtually suspended.

I respectfully but earnestly request that these men may be returned to their work, otherwise there is no assurance as to the future supply of ammunition. If it be deemed absolutely essential that these men remain in camp, it is requested that the officers of this Bureau be allowed to select from their workmen such as are available for military duty and organize them into companies under the district officers. This has been done in three cases with great success, and one of the battalions complimented for its gallantry in action. If the men are called out indiscriminately many of them will most certainly desert; they are willing to work, but not to fight. It has been the policy of the Niter and Mining Bureau to utilize this class of men.

The Bureau officers would select such men as were reliable for military duty and leave the others at work.

In any event it is represented that there are certain skilled men who should always be left at their work under any call, no matter how urgent. The loss of one such man is now serious, and may soon be vital. The inclosed letter from Mr. Hill is one of many on the same subject, and of like purport.

Very respectfully, yours,

RICHARD MORTON,
Colonel and Chief of Bureau.

[Indorsements.]

WAR DEPARTMENT, March 26, 1865.

Colonel MORTON,

Niter and Mining Bureau:

The necessity for men in Southwest Virginia seems to be very urgent at this time to meet a force that threatens to destroy the works that employ the men. I know that many of them cannot be relied on for military service. I cannot make an order, but let Colonel Morton send these papers to the proper officer, who may be able to spare the "skilled" men and those who won't fight but will work.

J. C. B.,
Secretary of War.

HEADQUARTERS U. S. ARMIES,
March 29, 1865.

Respectfully referred to Brigadier-General Echols, who will carry out the suggestions of Colonel Morton as far as practicable. The need of men and ammunition is equally great, and while all available men should be brought out those absolutely necessary to make ammunition must be left at work or the troops can't fight. It will be best to take only such as can be spared and can be relied on in battle, as suggested. The rest can be organized as local commands and act with the troops when their work is necessarily suspended.

By order of General Lee:

C. MARSHALL,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Inclosure.]

NITER AND MINING DISTRICT No. 7,
Abingdon, March 13, 1865.

Lieut. Col. RICHARD MORTON:

SIR: In writing to you officially a few days ago I mentioned that my niter employes had been twice called under arms within the last ten days. They are still held under the control of the military district commandant, and their works are of course entirely stopped.

From circulars received from the Bureau at the commencement of this month, I was induced to believe that there existed a great demand for the home production of niter; yet if there is so much greater demand for men that the producers are to be taken away from their works and held in camp for an indefinite time on every rumor of a raid, the Army will be greatly benefited, maybe, if the men are put regularly in, and the Niter and Mining Bureau under the present state of affairs will lose nothing.

I have 140 men, the larger portion of whom are thoroughly worthless to the Army. On every call I lose some men who go to Kentucky; about one-fourth respond, and the balance who do not run off remain at home frightened, discouraged, and discontented. I applied to General Echols for permission to organize my men into a separate and independent command. I intended thus to have the power of selecting such men as were available for military duty, and as I could spare. He very shortly refused it. I wish to state to you clearly now the position in which we are placed.

This country is liable to constant and continued raids and rumors of raids during the rest of the war. On each call the men are rendered more and more unfit for work, and each month can bring me a good excuse for non-fulfillment of contract.

As a body they won't fight, and yet they will work if let alone. They leave their works unprotected, their earth and ore to be wasted; they scatter their materials, teams, &c., and when they are allowed to return they are disheartened (in dread of a fresh call) from making efforts to renew operations.

These men are wasted to the Government. Either put them regularly in the Army, or so many as can be got there, or else let them remain with their works under the full assurance that there will be no interruption.

I respectfully request that you will give this matter prompt and vigorous attention. This part of Niter and Mining District No. 7 is in the meantime quietly and inactively awaiting your interference.

Very respectfully, &c.,

WM. M. HILL,
Assistant Superintendent.

[MARCH 24, 1865.—For Lee to Davis, requesting that a requisition be made on the Governor of Virginia for negroes to serve as soldiers, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part III, p. 1339.]

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 15. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., March 25, 1865.

I. The attention of the Army is directed to the following act of Congress, authorizing the consolidation of companies, battalions, and regiments. The casualties of war have reduced many commands below the minimum specified in the act, and rendered necessary the reorganization of the armies of the Confederacy. The number of company and regimental organizations will be diminished, and a long list of valuable and meritorious officers will inevitably lose their commissions; but this can never be a cause for censure or reproach. It is a measure demanded by the public interest, and involves no imputation upon the character or conduct of any officer:

AN ACT to authorize the consolidation of companies, battalions, and regiments.

The Congress of the Confederate States of America do enact, That whenever any companies which are now in the service shall be so reduced as to number less than thirty-two men, rank and file, present and fit for duty, and when it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War, or the general commanding the department or the army in which said companies may be serving, that they cannot be recruited to that number within a reasonable time, the general commanding said department or army may, under general regulations to be issued by the Secretary of War, consolidate such companies.

SEC. 2. That new companies may be organized from the non-commissioned officers and privates of the companies thus consolidated, if they are from the same State, having a number, rank and file, not less than sixty-four nor more than one hundred and twenty-five, and the commissioned officers of said companies thus organized shall be one captain and one first and one second lieutenants, and the non-commissioned officers, four sergeants and four corporals.

SEC. 3. Whenever the consolidation of companies, battalions, and regiments shall have been determined upon, in accordance with the provisions of the first section of this act, the general commanding the department or separate army in which such reduced organizations are serving shall recommend, from the officers and men of the several organizations which it is proposed to consolidate, the officers for the command of the new organization, who shall forthwith assume the respective commands to which they may be assigned by the general commanding the department or separate army, subject to the subsequent appointment of the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

SEC. 4. Officers of the organization consolidated, not selected as officers of the new organizations, shall forthwith be notified of the fact, and from that time shall be dropped from the rolls. Such officers may, within sixty days after the consolidation of their command, organize themselves in numbers sufficient to form companies, battalions, or regiments, and shall be officered from among themselves, by appointment of the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and the generals commanding the armies to which the consolidated organizations belong shall afford reasonable facilities for forming such organizations. The officers so dropped shall have the privilege of selecting the company and arm of the service in which they may desire to serve, whether such company belongs to the army with which they are now connected or some other army of the Confederate States, and shall be entitled to transportation to such company; and failing to make such selection, such officers, if liable to military duty, shall be conscribed and placed in the service where they may be found; but no officer in the hands of the enemy shall be dropped from the rolls by reason of anything contained in this section: Provided, That no officer shall be permitted to select a company on the opposite side of the Mississippi River from where he is now on duty, unless he resides beyond said river.

SEC. 5. That hereafter all vacancies in the office of second lieutenant shall be filled by selections in the manner pointed out by the third section of this act, and all officers who may have belonged to the disbanded organizations, and who may be appointed to the same grade in the new which they held in the old organization, shall take rank from the date of their first commission or appointment; and hereafter, should the new companies organized under the provisions of this act become reduced in number so as to have less than thirty-two men, rank and file, present and fit for duty, and a vacancy shall occur in the office of second lieutenant, the same shall not be filled; and should it be reduced below the number of sixteen, then a vacancy in the office of first lieutenant shall not be filled.

SEC. 6. That the office of ensign of battalions and regiments is hereby abolished, and hereafter the officer commanding a battalion or regiment shall assign, to act as color-bearer, a non-commissioned officer or private from his command, who may be distinguished for meritorious or soldierly conduct, or for valor or skill; and said non-commissioned officer or private, while so acting, shall receive the pay of a first lieutenant.

SEC. 7. The general commanding the department or army shall designate the names of the battalions or regiments organized under the provisions of this act; and the colors of the oldest battalion or regiment forming the new shall be the colors of the new organization, and the colors of other battalions and regiments shall be transmitted by the Secretary of War to the Governors of the respective States, with a statement of the battles in which the battalion or regiment to which they belong may have borne a part.

SEC. 8. That all staff, line, and other officers who may not have any command, or who may at any time be on duty for a period exceeding thirty days, unless they belong to the Invalid Corps, or are prisoners of war, or are sick or wounded, or absent by leave of the Secretary of War, or the general commanding the department or army to which they belong, shall be dropped from the rolls and held to service as now provided by law: Provided, That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to assign any officer thrown out of command by the operation of this act to vacancies in the staff, with the rank previously held by such officers in the service.

SEC. 9. Prisoners of war may, within sixty days after their exchange, avail themselves of the provisions of the fourth section of this act, or they may be assigned or appointed to vacancies in the new organizations; and hereafter, when commissioned officers of companies, battalions, and regiments may be captured by the enemy, the general commanding the department or army to which they belong may designate, or the President may appoint other officers to fill their places, as provided in this act, to serve with temporary rank and command, to be held only until the return of said officers so captured.

SEC. 10. When regiments, battalions, or companies shall have been consolidated under the provisions of this act, no subsequent consolidation of the same shall be made unless by virtue of laws hereafter to be passed.

Approved February 23, 1865.

The reorganization will be accomplished according to the following regulations:

II. The general commanding a department or separate army is charged with the execution of this act at such time as the exigencies of the public service and the condition of the troops will justify. He will ascertain the companies, battalions, and regiments from the several States in his army or department which do not contain the number prescribed in the first section of this act and which cannot be recruited to that number in a reasonable time. He will consolidate these under the first and second sections of said act, and according to the conditions of the same. He will announce such consolidation in general orders, designating the names of the new organizations, and immediately forward copies to this office. Care will be taken to have the names of all men for service transferred from the old rolls to the new.

III. The officers to command the new companies, battalions, and regiments will be selected by the commanding general from the officers and men belonging to the organizations that have been consolidated. They will be placed at once in command of the new organization, and remain in the positions to which they have been assigned, subject to the subsequent appointment of the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The commanding general should inform himself of their merits, and select such as are able for service and most competent to command. In communicating his recommendations to the Department, the former command, together with the date and grade of former commissions, will be stated.

IV. The commanding general of the department or army, who shall reorganize his army under this act, will cause a list to be prepared of all the officers of his army or department who are not designated for command, except those in the hands of the enemy, and publish the same in orders. Copies of said orders will be promptly forwarded to the Adjutant and Inspector General, who will cause the names of all such officers to be dropped from the rolls of the Army, to take effect from the date of the publication of the order at the headquarters of the department or army. The names will also be announced in general orders from this office.

V. Within sixty days from the publication of the names of said officers at the headquarters of the army or department, each officer will select and join a company in some branch of the service east of the Mississippi River, if he resides and is in service on this side of said river, or be subject to conscription wherever he may be found. Such officers may, however, form themselves into new organizations, which shall be officered from among themselves by appointment of the President. The organization will be conducted under the direction of the general commanding, who is required to afford reasonable facilities.

VI. The various chiefs of bureaus will furnish to the Secretary of War a list of all the officers in their respective departments who become supernumeraries under the eighth section of the act aforesaid, in order that their names be dropped from the rolls under the provisions of the same.

VII. The office of ensign of battalions and regiments has been abolished by this act. Their names will be dropped from the rolls from the date of this order. Each ensign will be permitted to select the company to which he desires to attach himself, under the conditions contained in paragraph V.

VIII. The commanding general is authorized under the ninth section of this act to designate officers to supply vacancies that may occur in any regiment, battalion, or company organization by the capture of the officer in command. In all such cases the commanding general will promptly communicate to the Department the name of the officer so designated.

IX. The colors of all battalions and regiments which are consolidated, except those selected for the new organizations, will be forwarded to the Adjutant and Inspector General, with a statement of the battles in which the battalion or regiment to which they belong may have participated.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

RICHMOND, VA., March 25, 1865.

Col. JOHN R. BAYLOR:

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that you have been appointed a colonel in the Provisional Army of the Confederate States, with authority to raise a regiment in that portion of the State of Texas in which the conscript law cannot be enforced, and elsewhere of persons not liable to military service under that law.

If the regiment is not complete within four months from the date of appointment the authority will expire. Deserters and absentees from other commands will be carefully excluded. When the regiment is raised it will be mustered into the service for the war, and the muster-rolls and the certificates of election of officers forwarded to this office for organization in the orders of the War Department

By command of the Secretary of War.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN W. RIELY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[MARCH 25 AND 30, 1865.—For Davis to Smith, in relation to raising and organizing negro soldiers in Virginia, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part III, pp. 1348, 1366.]

GENERAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 16. } Richmond, Va., March 27, 1865.

I. The attention of officers in the Army is directed to the first section of an act of Congress entitled "An act to raise coin for the purpose of furnishing necessary supplies for the Army," approved March 17, 1865, by which it is provided that purchasers, under that act, of cotton or tobacco, shall be authorized to transport the same "beyond the limits of the Confederate States free from any molestation on the part of the authorities of the Confederate States, or the payment of any duty except to the extent of one-eighth per cent. now imposed by law."

II. All officers in the Army will, therefore, allow all such cotton and tobacco to be transported as aforesaid without restrictions upon permits for that purpose, granted by the Secretary of the Treasury or such officers of his Department as he may authorize to grant the same.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 72. } Richmond, March 27, 1865.

* * * * *

I. The following schedules of prices for articles named therein, adopted by commissioners appointed pursuant to law, for the State of Virginia are published for the information of all concerned, and the special attention of officers and agents of the Government is directed thereto:

RICHMOND, VA., March 22, 1865.

Hon. JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE:

SIR: As Congress has repealed portions of former impressment laws relating to schedules of prices, and confined their operation to the productions of those "detailed or exempted" by the Government, we have thought it advisable to cite the late acts of Congress on the subject for the information of the public and as a guide to all impressment officers. Therefore we invite particular attention to the annexed extracts from recent acts of Congress.

As our schedules were designed for the State, the commissioners endeavored, in arranging prices, to base them upon what appeared to be a fair average, taking all the markets of Virginia into consideration. The varied and conflicting interests involved rendered the task imposed upon the commissioners not only difficult to accomplish, but made it impossible for them to please all parties. Acting under laws of Congress, whatever may be our opinions as to their policy, we have and will fairly endeavor to observe them:

"AN ACT to amend the law in relation to impressments."

"The Congress of the Confederate States of America do enact, That it shall not be lawful to impress any sheep, milch cows, brood mares, stallions, jacks, bulls, breeding hogs, or other stock kept or necessary for raising sheep, hogs, horses, mules, or cattle.

"SEC. 2. That the term 'just compensation' for property impressed or taken for public use, whenever the same occurs in any of the acts relating to impressments, is hereby declared to mean the usual market price of such property at the time and place of impressment.

"SEC. 3. That so much of the fifth section of the act to regulate impressments, approved March 26, 1863, as authorizes the board of commissioners appointed by the President and Governors of the respective States to fix in advance upon the prices to be paid for property impressed or taken for public use, and to agree upon and publish schedules of prices for property so impressed, is hereby repealed: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as prohibiting said commissioners from fixing upon and publishing schedules of prices to be paid by the Government or by the families of soldiers to persons holding exemptions or details upon conditions which bind such persons to sell to the Government or to families of soldiers at prices fixed by said commissioners.

"SEC. 4. That in all cases of appeals to the board of commissioners, appointed by the President and the Governors of the respective States, from the appraisements of impressed property made by local appraisers, it shall be the duty of said commissioners to hear the proofs adduced by the parties as to the usual market price of the property at the time and place of impressment, and to assess the same according to the testimony submitted in the particular case. On such appeals the commissioners shall receive and consider such legal oral testimony as may be offered, and also affidavits or depositions of competent witnesses taken before and certified by any justice of the peace, or judge, or clerk of any court of record. Witnesses examined before such board may be sworn by either of the commissioners. Where the appeal is taken by the impressing officer, and the same is not brought to a hearing, and a final award in the case made by the commissioners within ninety days after the date of the original appraisement, such appeal shall be considered as abandoned and shall not be afterward heard, and the original appraisement shall be treated as final and conclusive.

"Approved March 18, 1865.

"A true copy:

"JAMES M. MATTHEWS,
"Law Clerk."

"AN ACT to amend an act entitled 'An act to regulate impressments,' approved March 26, 1863, as amended by the act approved February 16, 1864.

"The Congress of the Confederate States of America do enact, That the act entitled 'An act to regulate impressments,' approved March 26, 1863, as amended by the act approved February 16, 1864, be so amended that in all cases where property shall be impressed for the use of the Army it shall not be necessary to pay the price at the time of impressment, when the parties from whom such property is impressed shall refuse to receive therefor certificates of indebtedness issued under authority of the act entitled 'An act to reduce the currency and to authorize a new issue of notes and bonds,' approved February 17, 1864, but the same shall be paid as soon as practicable thereafter.

"Approved March 18, 1865.

"A true copy:

"JAMES M. MATTHEWS,
"Law Clerk."

SCHEDULE A.

	Articles.	Quality.	Description.	Quantity.	Price.
1	Wheat	Prime	White or red	Per bushel of 60 lbs.	$25.00
2	Flour	Fine		Per bbl. of 196 lbs.	123.00
2	do	Superfine		do	125.00
2	do	Extra superfine.		do	126.00
2	do	Family		do	128.00
3	Corn	Prime	White or yellow	Per bushel of 56 lbs.	20.00
4	Corn-meal	Good		Per bushel of 50 lbs.	21.00
5	Rye	Prime		Per bushel of 56 lbs.	20.00
6	Cleaned oats	do		Per bushel of 32 lbs.	15.00
7	Wheat bran	Good		Per bushel of 17 lbs.	3.00
8	Shorts	do		Per bushel of 22 lbs.	4.00
9	Brown stuff	do		Per bushel of 28 lbs.	5.00
10	Ship stuff	do		Per bushel of 37 lbs.	8.00
11	Bacon	do	Hog round	Per pound	4.00
12	Pork, salt	do		do	3.25
13	Pork, fresh	Fat and good	Hog round	Per lb., net weight.	2.75
14	Lard	Good		do	4.00
15	Horses and mules	First class	Artillery, &c	Average price per head.	1,200.00
16	Wool	Fair or merino.	Washed	Per pound	10.00
17	do	do	Unwashed	do	8.00
18	Peas	Good		Per bushel	30.00
19	Beans	do		do	30.00
20	Potatoes	do	Irish	do	20.00
21	do	do	Sweet	do	20.00
22	Onions	do		do	50.00
23	Dried peaches	do	Peeled	do	20.00
24	do	do	Unpeeled	do	15.00
25	Dried apples	do	Peeled	do	15.00
26	Hay, baled	do	Timothy or clover	Per 100 pounds	7.00
27	do	do	Orchard or herd grass.	do	7.00
28	Hay, unbaled	do	do	do	6.00
29	Sheaf oats, baled	do		do	11.00
30	Sheaf oats, unbaled	do		do	10.00
31	Blade fodder, baled	do		do	7.00
32	Blade fodder, unbaled	do		do	6.00
33	Shucks, baled	do		do	5.00
34	Shucks, unbaled	do		do	4.00
35	Wheat straw, baled	do		do	3.00
36	Wheat straw, unbaled	do		do	2.00
37	Pasturage	do	Interior	Per head per month.	5.00
38	do	Superior	do	do	6.00
39	do	First rate	do	do	7.00
40	do	Good	Near cities	do	8.00
41	do	Superior	do	do	9.00
42	do	First rate	do	do	10.00
43	Salt	Good		Per bushel of 50 lbs.	10.00
44	Soap	do		Per pound	3.00
45	Candles	do	Tallow	do	7.00
46	Vinegar	do	Cider	Per gallon	5.00
47	Whisky	do	Trade	do	25.00
48	Sugar	do	Brown	Per pound	5.00
49	Molasses	do	New Orleans	Per gallon	15.00
50	Rice	do		Per pound	1.00
51	Coffee	do	Rio	do	10.00
52	Tea	do	Trade	do	15.00
53	Vinegar	do	Manufactured	Per gallon	2.00
54	Pig-iron	do	No. 1 quality	Per ton	400.00
55	do	do	No. 2 quality	do	364.00
56	do	do	No. 3 quality	do	328.00
57	Bloom iron	do		do	760.00
58	Smith's iron	do	Round plate and bar	do	1,100.00
59	Railroad iron	Serviceable		do	450.00
60	Leather	Good	Harness	Per pound	8.00
61	do	do	Sole	do	7.00
62	do	do	Upper	do	9.00
63	Beef cattle	do	Gross weight	Per 100 pounds	50.00
64	do	Superior	do	do	60.00
65	do	First rate	do	do	70.00
66	Salt beef	Good		Net per pound	2.00
67	Sheep	Fair		Per 100 pounds	70.00
68	Army woolen cloth, 3-4 yard.	Good	10 ounces per yard	Per yard	15.00
69	do	do			(a)
70	Army woolen cloth, 6-4	do	20 ounces per yard	Per yard	30.00

a Pro rata as to greater or less width or weight.

SCHEDULE A—(Continued.)

	Articles.	Quality.	Description.	Quantity.	Price.
71	Army woolen cloth, 6-4 yard.	Good		Per yard	(a)
72	Flannels, 3-4	do	6 oz. per yard	do	$14.00
73	Cotton shirtings, 3-4	do	44 yards to pound	do	2.50
74	Cotton shirtings, 7-8	do	34 yards to pound	do	3.00
75	Cotton sheetings, 4-4	do	3 yards to pound	do	3.50
76	Cotton, osnaburgs, 3-4	do	6 oz. per yard	do	3.50
77	Cotton osnaburgs, 7-8	do	8 oz. per yard	do	3.80
78	Cotton tent cloths	do	10 oz. per yard	do	4.00
79					(b)
80	Army shoes	Good		Per pair	25.00
81	Shoe thread	do		Per pound	6.00
82	Wool socks, men's	do		Per pair	5.00
83	Corn-top fodder, baled	do		Per 100 pounds	2.00
84	Corn-top fodder, unbaled	do		do	1.00
85	Wheat chaff, baled	do		do	7.00
86	Wheat chaff, unbaled	do		do	6.00
87	Sorghum molasses	First quality		Per gallon	15.00
88	Pasturage for sheep	Good	Interior	Per head	1.00
89	do	Superior	do	do	1.25
90	do	First rate	do	do	1.50
91	Apple brandy	Good		Per gallon	15.00
92	Peach brandy	do		do	15.00

a Pro rata as to greater or less width or weight.

b On the above enumerated cotton cloths, pro rata as to greater or less width or weight.

SCHEDULE B.—Hire of labor, teams, wagons, and drivers.

	Labor.	Quantity and time.	Price.
1	Baling long forage	Per 100 pounds	$1.00
2	Shelling and bagging corn; sacks furnished by Government	Per 56 pounds	.20
3	Hauling	Per cwt. per mile	.20
4	Hauling grain	Per bushel	.15
5	Hire of 2-horse team, wagon, and driver; rations furnished by owner.	Per day	30.00
6	Hire of same; rations furnished by Government	do	15.00
7	Hire of 4-horse team, wagon, and driver; rations furnished by owner.	do	50.00
8	Hire of same; rations furnished by the Government	do	25.00
9	Hire of 6-horse team, wagon, and driver; rations furnished by owner.	do	70.00
10	Hire of same; rations furnished by Government	do	35.00
11	Hire of laborer; rations furnished by owner	do	8.00
12	Hire of same; rations furnished by Government	do	4.00
13	Hire of same; rations and clothing furnished by owner	Per month	185.00
14	Hire of same; rations furnished by the Government	do	100.00
15	Hire of teamsters; rations furnished by the Government	do	100.00
16	Hire of laborer; clothing and rations furnished and taxes paid by Government.	Per year	500.00
17	Hire of ox-cart, team, and driver; rations furnished by owner	Per day	30.00
18	Hire of same; rations furnished by Government	do	15.00

Revision of the Schedules of February and March last.

Since the adoption of our schedules for the months of February and March last the financial bills passed by Congress taxing the currency had seriously impaired the value of the old issues of Confederate Treasury notes. At this juncture large numbers of horses and mules were impressed and paid for in a currency which was in a few days thereafter to be taxed 33½ per cent.

The Board of State Commissioners having adjourned and one of its members being out of the State, it could not be convened in time to review our schedules of prices. Under this state of facts we have re-examined and rearranged our tariff of prices, so far as we have been advised of recent impressments, proposing in this mode to remedy any diminution of valuation which may have occurred from the action of Congress upon the currency. Therefore we assess the average value of artillery or wagon horses or mules impressed since the passage of the currency bill of the 17th of February last at $600. This award will entitle each person to receive a higher compensation accordingly as each horse or mule recently impressed may be considered as being a first, second, or third class artillery or wagon horse or mule, whether the parties appeal to our Board or not, and the impressing agents and officers should forthwith call on all those persons of whom they have impressed horses or mules and propose a settlement upon the foregoing basis, but allowing to each person only such prices as first, second, or third class artillery or wagon horses or mules may have been estimated at by the local or county appraisers, assuming our average appraisement of $600 as a fair medium valuation. This, then, would allow a maximum price of $800 and a minimum price of $400, making $600 the average price, thus allowing more for first-class horses or mules and proportionately less for the inferior, as they may fall below the grade of first class. The county appraisements will be the guide in making these settlements, but within the limits of our maximum price of $800 and our minimum price of $400. This plan would perhaps be most satisfactory to the people. For whatever price the county appraisers agreed upon should be deemed fair within the range of our minimum price of $400 and our maximum price of $800, payment of whatever amount awarded to be made in the new issue of Treasury notes.

The impressing officers in those instances where there were no arbitrators or local appraisements for horses or mules impressed should in all such cases themselves re-estimate the value of horses or mules thus impressed and allow in each case such additional compensation as would, within the limits of our schedule rates, appear just and proper. But if after this revaluation and settlement any person should not be satisfied the party could then appeal to our Board and have the case reconsidered.

All appeals and communications for the Board of Commissioners should be addressed, postpaid, Mr. D. K. Whitaker, secretary of the Board, Box 995, Richmond post-office, Va.

The next meeting of the Board will be held the 2d day of May next in the city of Richmond.

E. W. HUBARD,
ROBT. GIBBONEY,
Commissioners of Virginia.

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., March 27, 1865.

Brig. Gen. A. R. LAWTON,
Quartermaster-General:

GENERAL: I have the honor to inclose to you copies of a memorandum from the President and of a letter from the Secretary of War, to the main points of which, in so far as they are applicable to your Bureau, I am directed to invite your attention.

You will please classify the officers of your department according to their respective grades, and in the order of relative rank, with a view to selections for the different commands and promotions founded upon capacity and services. You will accompany the list, which will be sent to this office, with such necessary information, in brief, and your opinion, as will facilitate the selection. You will include in the list (making the necessary distinction) such officers of the C. S. Army as may properly belong to your department.

A general order embodying these regulations and announcing the operation of the several acts will be published in a few days, but it is hoped that by promptness in the above particulars the Department may be able to anticipate the demands for promotion from the different sources interested.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
*Richmond, Va., March 24, 1865.*General COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General:

GENERAL: I have had a conference to-day with the President in reference to the general staff. It was desired to confer with you, but you happened to be absent. The inclosed memorandum in the handwriting of the President is, so far as it goes, the result of the conference. Please classify the officers of the Adjutant and Inspector General's Department according to their respective grades and in the order of rank, with a view to selections for the different commands, and promotions founded upon capacity and services.

The principles laid down in the memorandum do not exclude the idea of promotion upon the recommendations of general officers in proper cases. Hence, if you see no objection, it may be well for you to recommend the promotion of the officers named in the inclosed communication of General R. E. Lee, upon the ground of merit and services, although there may be available officers of adequate rank unassigned.

Please issue a circular to the chiefs of the several staff departments, embracing the points in this and the memorandum of the President, and applying them to their several corps.

Please confer with me personally so soon as this work is completed.

The papers in relation to General Buckner's staff are inclosed for reconsideration.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Secretary of War.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

MEMORANDUM.

The act of June 14, 1864, establishes the general staff as a corps and provides for promotions or selections, and renders the post or duty of a staff officer purely a matter of assignment. It allows a certain grade of staff officers to correspond with the grade of the general with whom they are serving, and a certain number of staff officers, but authorizes the increase or reduction of the number.

The act of March 11, 1865, repeals certain provisions as to both grade and number.

To carry out the first and main provision, promotions cannot be made to depend upon the officer with whom a staff officer is serving by assignment. The selections for promotion must be made in the usual mode of determining merit. The number of colonels, for instance, in the Adjutant-General's Department will be made equal to the number of appropriate places for the assignment of adjutants-general with the rank of colonel. From these, generals entitled to an adjutant-general of that grade may select for his staff. If any general prefers an adjutant-general who has a lower grade, he should, as a general rule, be indulged in that preference. No promotion, however, will be derivative from his selection. So of other departments of the general staff.

Officers of the general staff other than aides-de-camp will not follow their chief when he may receive a new assignment or promotion.

By careful selections it will be made the interest of a general to desire officers of the highest grade allowed, and such will probably be the usual practice; but when it may be otherwise a staff officer may be assigned to a general of less grade than that corresponding to his own.

---

[MARCH 27, 1865.—For Lee to Breckinridge, in relation to raising negro troops, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part III, p. 1356.]

---

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA,
WAR DEPARTMENT, NITER AND MINING BUREAU,
Richmond, March 28, 1865.

General R. E. LEE,
Commanding C. S. Armies:

GENERAL: I inclose the original and a copy of a letter addressed to the Secretary of War, with an indorsement from him which directs me to refer it to the commanding officers.* These duplicates are sent with the request that if meeting your approval one may be forwarded to General Johnston and the other to the officer commanding in Southwest Virginia.

If this call for detailed men is made general, two-thirds of them will be lost to the service entirely; they will desert rather than go into the Army. If the Bureau officers, however, are allowed to select the reliable men as many will be secured for the field as by making the call general, and the balance will remain at work, which is of the utmost importance now. There are many skilled men and founders, keepers, miners, &c., about the furnaces and mines, whose places cannot be supplied; heretofore they have been exempt under all calls.

In this connection I would respectfully call your attention to the fact that the Wythe Lead Mines are vital to the future conduct of the war. Owing to the damage done the works last December by the raiding party under Stoneman no lead has been received from Wythe for some months, and during this time all the surplus heretofore accumulated has been worked up. Operations were resumed, however, on the 22d of this month, and the lead for the opening campaign must come from these mines.

Very respectfully, yours,

RICHARD MORTON,
Colonel and Chief of Bureau.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS C. S. ARMIES,
March 29, 1865.

Respectfully referred to General J. E. Johnston.

The need of ammunition is as great as the need of men. It is necessary to have such men as are absolutely required to make ammunition. The best for service, and such as can be spared, will be selected by the officers of the Bureau. Skilled men for mining, smelting, &c., are absolutely necessary. Those who remain at work can be organized as local troops, and can be used when they cannot work.

---

*See March 24, p. 1164.

By order of General Lee:—

C. MARSHALL,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, {	ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 73. }	Richmond, March 28, 1865.
*        *        *	*        *        *

X. The organization known as the Foreign Battalion will be hereafter designated the Eighth Confederate Battalion Infantry.

*        *        *        *        *        *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, {	ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 17. }	Richmond, Va., March 29, 1865.

I. The following act of Congress, abolishing the Bureau of Conscription, is published, as amended by the subsequent act of March 17, 1865, for the information of general officers commanding reserves in the several States, and of all officers and others now upon conscript service under the orders of the late Bureau of Conscription:

AN ACT to regulate the business of conscription.

The Congress of the Confederate States of America do enact, That the general officers commanding the reserves in each State shall be charged with the duty of directing and controlling the enforcement of the laws relating to conscription, exemption, and details therein; that the said officers shall report to the Secretary of War, through the Adjutant and Inspector General, who shall assign an assistant adjutant-general in his office to the special duty of receiving and arranging all returns, and discharging such other duties as may be necessary in the enforcement of the conscription acts.

SEC. 2. That all applications for exemption and detail, except as hereinafter provided, shall be decided by the general officers having charge of the business of conscription in the several States. Appeals may be taken from their decisions to the Secretary of War, but during the pendency of such appeals the appellants shall be liable to military service.

SEC. 3. That there shall be assigned from the Invalid Corps, or from officers certified by the proper medical boards to be unfit for active service in the field, a sufficient number of enrolling officers, who shall report to and be under the immediate direction and control of the general officers conducting the business of conscription in the several States.

SEC. 4. That all conscripts shall be examined by the medical boards of the Army after joining the commands in the field to which they may be respectively assigned; and every discharge granted by an Army medical board shall be final, and shall relieve the party from all military service in the future, when the disability is permanent and the cause of it is set forth in the certificate of discharge.

SEC. 5. a That if any conscript shall furnish to the enrolling officer of his county a certificate, under oath, from a respectable physician or from any Army surgeon, that he is unable to travel to the command to which he may be assigned, without serious prejudice to his health, or that he is seriously maimed or manifestly unfit for field service, or shall present to such an enrolling officer a certificate of discharge on account of permanent disability heretofore granted, a furlough shall be granted to him until the next meeting of the medical board, hereinafter provided for.

SEC. 6. That there shall be assigned to each Congressional district a medical board, consisting of three surgeons, two of whom shall be Army surgeons, who, after due notice of the time and place of their meeting, shall visit each county of the district at least once in three months, and shall examine, for discharge or recommendation for light duty, all conscripts who have been furloughed under the provisions of the preceding section. Every discharge granted by the said medical board shall be final, and shall relieve the party from military service in the future, when the disability is permanent and the cause of it is set forth in the certificate.

SEC. 7. It shall be the duty of all officers and others employed in the military service of the Confederate States, and not actually in the field nor attached to any army in the field, including quartermasters and commissaries, commanders of posts, provost-marshals, officers of the Ordnance, Nitro and Mining, and Medical Bureaus, and others, to make certified returns under oath, every two months, to the nearest conscript officer, of the names, ages, and physical condition of all persons employed in their service, which returns shall be forwarded to the general officer controlling conscription in the State.

SEC. 8. That for the enforcement of the duties imposed by this act upon the general officers controlling conscription in the several States, they may employ such detachments of the reserve forces as they may deem necessary.

SEC. 9. That the Bureau of Conscription and the camps of instruction are hereby abolished, and all rules and regulations of the War Department inconsistent with this act are hereby abrogated.

Approved March 7, 1865.

II. The duties in connection with the enforcement of the conscription laws devolved by this act upon the Bureau of the Adjutant and Inspector General will be performed through an officer of that Bureau, to be styled the "Officer of Conscription." All reports and returns from generals of reserves, and all other official correspondence relating thereto, will be addressed to the Adjutant and Inspector General, and will, in all cases, be legibly indorsed upon the envelopes "Conscription Service."

III. Commandants of conscripts, district inspectors, and enrolling officers will at once report to the general commanding reserves in their respective States, and all officers on conscript duty in localities not embraced within the commands of generals of reserves will report by letter to this office, indorsed on the envelope as above, inclosing a copy of their orders and stating specifically the duty to which they have been assigned.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 18. } Richmond, Va., March 30, 1865.

I. Paragraph II, General Orders, No. 6, current series, is hereby revoked, and Brig. Gen. Daniel Ruggles, Provisional Army, C. S., is constituted Commissary-General of Prisoners, and will at once enter upon his duties as designated in paragraphs I, II, and III, General Orders, No. 84, of 1864.

II. Paragraph IX, General Orders, No. 10, current series, is amended so as to read:

Persons arriving at the age of eighteen years, and all others in the reserve forces, not disabled for active duty, who are within the conscript ages, will be turned over to enrolling officers for assignment to infantry companies in the general service. The fact of their holding commissions does not preclude the operations of this order.

Generals of reserves and inspectors are required to enforce this order.

III. Paragraph I, General Orders, No. 83, of 1864, is amended so to embrace commissioned officers within its provisions.

IV. It having been represented to the Department that officers and persons authorized to raise local organizations and companies within the enemy's lines are abusing their authority by receiving deserters into their companies and giving encouragement to desertion in order to fill up their commands, the attention of officers and soldiers is therefore especially directed to the following Articles of War, to wit:

ART. 22. No non-commissioned officer or soldier shall enlist himself in any other regiment, troop, or company without a regular discharge from the regiment, troop, or company in which he last served, on the penalty of being reputed a deserter and suffering accordingly. And in case any officer shall knowingly receive and entertain such non-commissioned officer or soldier, or shall not, after his being discovered to be a deserter, immediately confine him and give notice thereof to the corps in which he last served, the said officer shall by a court-martial be cashiered.

ART. 23. Any officer or soldier who shall be convicted of having advised or persuaded any officer or soldier to desert the service of the Confederate States, shall suffer death or such other punishment as shall be inflicted upon him by the sentence of a court-martial.

All persons violating these articles will be promptly arrested and brought to trial by court-martial, and, if the practice referred to is not at once discontinued, authorities to raise such commands will be summarily revoked.

By order:

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

CIRCULAR LETTER.]

CONSCRIPT OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., March 31, 1865.

Enrolling officers are hereby instructed not to interfere with parties detailed to the Navy Department whose details expire on or about the 1st of April, as it is impracticable on the part of said Department to apply immediately for renewals.

Application for renewal will, however, be made, and until further orders are issued the above-named parties will remain unmolested.

By order of Lieut. Col. J. C. Shields, commandant:

J. H. BINFORD,
Lieutenant and Adjutant.

[APRIL 1, 1865.—For Davis to Lee, in relation to measures for raising negro troops, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part III, p. 1370.]

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES, VIRGINIA,
April 1, 1865.

General S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General:

GENERAL: I respectfully ask instructions upon the following points:

First. Shall I continue to hold men to service after they attain the age of fifty years? The existing orders, verbally communicated to me by the Assistant Secretary of War, require me to do so. While the courts differ, most of them discharge men upon becoming fifty years of age upon writs of habeas corpus.

Second. Does the act of February 17, 1864, hold to service during the war all men who were on that day under fifty years of age; or does it mean simply to hold to service those who are under fifty at the dates at which they are respectively liable to enrollment? To illustrate: A member of the Legislature who will go out of commission on the 1st of July next will then be fifty years of age, but was under that age on the 17th of February, 1864. Shall he be held to service? Another member will then be forty-five years of age. Is he to be held to service as a reserve, or does the fact that he was under forty-five on the 17th of February, 1864, make it proper to assign him to the regular forces?

Third. Am I to allow any details to men between forty and forty-five years of age on grounds of public and private necessity? General Orders, No. 77, series of 1864, revokes all such details, and impliedly forbids any such to be granted. It is understood that a recent law, which has never been published in orders, authorizes the Executive to grant details to men between forty and forty-five years of age on the grounds mentioned.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. L. KEMPER,
Major-General.

---

[APRIL 4, 1865.—For address of Jefferson Davis to the people of the Confederate States of America, see Series I, Vol. XLVI, Part III, p. 1382.]

---

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE FORCES, MISSISSIPPI,
Enterprise, April 5, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. R. TAYLOR,

Comdg. Dept. of Mississippi and Alabama, Macon, Miss.:

GENERAL: I have this day forwarded to you the application for the return of 107 men belonging to the different companies of the reserve forces who have deserted their colors and joined other commands. This is a growing evil and is very detrimental to discipline and order, tending to demoralize the whole force and render it worthless as a separate organization. I have not the slightest objection to assign or transfer to the general service the youths now over eighteen years, and as they pass that age, but cannot do so without instructions from the Honorable Secretary of War, for which I have applied. The general orders against officers receiving deserters knowingly are very stringent, and I have unofficial notice of a captain of the reserves being cashiered under that charge, at which I was rejoiced. I feel that it is due to the good of the service that the same rule should govern or prevail in regard to the officers of the general service. I have the honor, general, most respectfully to ask your especial attention to this gross breach of discipline. If you deem it advisable, and have these papers returned, I will have charges preferred.

I have the honor to be, with great regard, your obedient servant,

W. L. BRANDON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

CONFIDENTIAL.]

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Milledgeville, April 7, 1865.

Maj. Gen. SAMUEL JONES:

GENERAL: I agree with you fully in opinion on the blockade question, and inform you in this confidential manner that the cotton is to be carried down by the State on her steamers and sold to persons who have authority from the United States Government to purchase, and sell us in exchange necessities which we cannot do without. It is also the policy in this way to accumulate some funds abroad to pay for soldiers' clothing, &c. I have the authority of the Legislature of my State for this. Members of Congress tell me that a late act of Congress gives the same authority, and the President has directed General Cobb to grant permits, if necessary, on my certificate. I am glad you take what I consider the true view of this question, and will be much obliged by any aid you may afford me.

The portion of your letters which relates to militia will be reforwarded to Adjutant-General Wayne for reply.

I am, general, very truly, &c.,

JOSEPH E. BROWN.

---

[APRIL 8, 1865.—For Smith to Pike and others, in relation to forming an alliance with the Comanche and other wild tribes of Indians, to enable the Confederate Government to use them as auxiliaries, see Series I, Vol. XLVIII, Part II, pp. 1266-1271.]

---

DANVILLE, VA., April 9, 1865.

President J. DAVIS:

MR. PRESIDENT: In obedience to your request I have the honor to submit the following statement:

On the 21st of March, 1865, Mr. McKnight, of the Alabama Reserves, presented a permit to General Hodge for his indorsement and orders for a guard to escort 1,666,666 $\frac{2}{3}$  pounds of cotton through the District of Southwest Mississippi and East Louisiana, for the purpose of purchasing and getting out medical supplies for Surgeon Potts, C. S. Army, at Montgomery. I have been informed that Mr. McKnight is associated in this contract with a detailed man, a clerk of Captain Gillaspie, assistant quartermaster, at Montgomery. Said clerk was arrested at Jackson, Miss. (I have forgotten his name), about the 19th of March, for stealing and running off with \$133,000 of Mr. D. H. Mark's money, and converted the same into gold. His wife has gone into the enemy's lines since. I informed Mr. McKnight that the Government had no cotton in that district. He replied that that made no difference, as he would purchase cotton. I have been very active as inspector watching all movements of the enemy, and especially of cotton and goods, since early in December last, and have never known but of one wagon load of medical supplies being received and shipped to Doctor Potts, and then Mr. Granville White (his agent near Bayou Sara) shipped without a permit thirty or thirty-six bales of cotton to pay for the same, and some whisky, of which he sold four or five barrels at Woodville for \$14 per gallon, in greenbacks, to a Mr. Frankenthal, for I saw the bill. Rumor also says he received as medical supplies coffee, flour, soap, &c., all of which were sold. Mr. G. White was arrested and sent to department headquarters, and soon after I saw him back, having been released. This is but one of the many cases of fraud practiced on the Government, and which I was breaking up.

Mr. Deynoodt, Belgian consul, is now shipping 10,000 bales of cotton, and hundreds of people are trying to and are shipping in his name, although I know it is without his knowledge. It will require the entire attention of one responsible officer and several attendants to prevent these shipments and see that the guards and pickets do not take bribes and pass more than the order calls for. This has been my especial duty since I was ordered by the Honorable Secretary of War to report to General Hodge. There are many families living near the river with many slaves on their plantations doing little or nothing but stealing, as they are not able to clothe and feed them. These parties have made repeated application to ship a few bales of cotton and buy supplies, but the general's orders were such that he could not permit it, and they are nightly running cotton through. Many negroes are running to keep from our conscript officers, and some are volunteering.

In closing my report, Mr. President, permit me to ask a favor. As the plans submitted to you last March by General Polk and myself were not approved, I renew the proposition in a different light. I am an old naval officer, and found when I captured the iron-clad Indi-anola that it would be an easy thing to capture more. I would respectfully ask that I may now be allowed to raise a battalion of volunteer officers of the Navy and Army who are off of duty, and with 1,000 bales of cotton at my command I will pledge myself to capture and destroy most if not all the vessels in the Mississippi River and get your army across the river. It can be done with a gallant little band of men, and by surprising them, as they are not so vigilant now as formerly; and boats going up and down the river, by giving a signal, run up alongside of their quarter, where they can be easily surprised and captured.

Praying, Mr. President, that you will excuse the liberty taken and give me a favorable answer to my plan, I beg to subscribe myself, your most obedient servant,

FRED. B. BRAND,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Miles (Louisiana) Legion.

[Indorsement.]

APRIL 10, 1865.

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL:

The within report in regard to frauds in the matter of exporting cotton requires attention. It would be well to communicate with the commanding generals, &c.

The proposition to employ officers "off of duty" can be better estimated by you than myself. It seems designed for temporary service. The law authorizing supernumerary officers to organize themselves implies permanence.

J. D.

---

[APRIL 15, 1865.—For Brown to Smith, ordering out all men in Georgia who can bear arms, whether in the State or Confederate service, see Series I, Vol. LII, Part II, p. 813.]

[APRIL 16, 1865.—For Smith to Breckinridge, in relation to the refusal of President Davis to give the Governor authority over the Confederate forces who may be in Virginia, see Series I, Vol. LI, Part II, p. 1069.]

Consolidated abstract from the latest returns of the Confederate Army, 1865.

[Compiled from such returns as are on file in the War Department.]

Command.	Present for duty.		Aggregate present.	Aggregate present and absent.	Date of return.
	Officers.	Men.
Army of Northern Virginia (Lee).....	4, 046	55, 575	73, 349	160, 411	Feb. 20, 1865
Department of Western Virginia and East Tennessee a (Echols).....	361	3, 123	4, 006	10, 064	Feb. 28, 1865
Department of Richmond (Ewell).....	262	4, 013	5, 175	9, 456	Mar. 20, 1865
Department of North Carolina b (Bragg).....
Department of South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida b (Hardee).....
Army of Tennessee (Johnston).....	1, 577	15, 295	20, 829	73, 260	Apr. 17, 1865
Department of Alabama, Mississippi, and East Louisiana d (Taylor).....	735	9, 205	12, 040	28, 194	Mar. 10, 1865
Western District of North Carolina (Martin) ..	130	1, 433	1, 745	2, 910	Mar. 10, 1865
Trans-Mississippi Department e (E. K. Smith) ..	2, 132	28, 107	43, 054	74, 397	Dec. 31, 1864
Total.....	9, 243	116, 751	160, 198	358, 692

a Exclusive of the Tenth Kentucky Cavalry, Seventh Confederate Battalion, and Thirteenth Virginia Battalion (Reserves), not reported.

b Embodied in the return of the Army of Tennessee for April 17, 1865, except that portion of Hardee's command in Florida under Jones, for which there are no returns in 1865.

c Exclusive of the cavalry, which had, April 7, 1865, an effective total of 5,090; total present, 6,726; aggregate present, 7,183. See also other explanatory notes attached to return printed in Series I, Vol. XLVII, Part III, p. 808.

d There are no returns of any troops in this department for 1865, except the District of the Gulf (Maury), which is here given.

e These figures are taken from latest return on file (December 31, 1864). For an explanation of its deficiencies, see abstract for December, 1864, p. 989.

Proclamation of Governor Brown.

A PROCLAMATION TO THE OFFICERS AND MEMBERS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

The magnitude of events that have occurred since your late adjournment and are now transpiring in our public affairs, affecting as they do so seriously the safety, security, and welfare of the people of the State, render it highly proper and expedient that the General Assembly should be in session again at an early day to consider of the existing state of things and to provide the best means which they in their wisdom may be able to devise for meeting the exigencies of the times.

The two most distinguished generals of the Confederacy, commanding the armies upon which we mainly relied for the defense and maintenance of our cause, having been compelled by overwhelming numbers to capitulate, it now devolves upon statesmen and patriots in the civil departments of Government to do all in their power to prevent anarchy, restore and preserve order, and save what they can of liberty and civilization.

You are therefore hereby required to convene in extraordinary session at the capitol in Milledgeville on Monday, the 22d day of this present month.

Given under my hand and the great seal at the capital of the State this 3d day of May, 1865.

JOSEPH E. BROWN.

Principal officials of the War Department and its bureaus from January 1, 1864, to close of the war.

[Compiled from official records.]

SECRETARY OF WAR.

James A. Seddon.
Maj. Gen. John C. Breckinridge, from
February 6, 1865.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF WAR.

John A. Campbell.

CHIEF OF THE BUREAU OF WAR.

Robert G. H. Kean.

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL.

General Samuel Cooper.

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL.

Brig. Gen. Alexander R. Lawton.

COMMISSARY-GENERAL OF SUBSISTENCE.

Col. Lucius B. Northrop.
Brig. Gen. Isaac M. St. John, from February 16, 1865.

SURGEON-GENERAL.

Surg. Samuel P. Moore.

CHIEF OF ENGINEER BUREAU.

Lieut. Col. Alfred L. Rives (acting), to
March 9, 1864.
Maj. Gen. Martin L. Smith, to April,
1864.
Col. Alfred L. Rives (acting), from
April, 1864.

CHIEF OF ENGINEER BUREAU—cont'd.

Maj. Gen. Jeremy F. Gilmer, from
June, 1864.

CHIEF OF BUREAU OF ORDNANCE.

Col. Josiah Gorgas. (Was promoted to brigadier-general November 10, 1864.)

SUPERINTENDENT OF NITER AND MINING
BUREAU.

Lieut. Col. Isaac M. St. John (promoted to colonel June 15, 1864), to February 16, 1865.
Col. Richard Morton, from February
22, 1865.

COMMISSIONER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS.

S. S. Scott.

SUPERINTENDENT OF CONSCRIPTION.

Brig. Gen. John S. Preston. (Was promoted from colonel to brigadier-general June 10, 1864. During intervals of temporary absence of the superintendent the Bureau was in charge of
Col. Thomas P. August, Lieut. Col.
George W. Lay, or Capt. C. B. Duffield.)

The Bureau of Conscription was discontinued by act of Congress of March 17, 1865.

CHIEF OF SIGNAL CORPS.

Maj. William Norris.

Executive officers of the Confederate States, 1861-1865.

[Compiled from official records.]

PRESIDENT.

Jefferson Davis, February 18, 1861,
and February 22, 1862.

VICE-PRESIDENT.

Alexander H. Stephens, February 18,
1861, and February 22, 1862.

SECRETARY OF STATE.

Robert Toombs, February 21, 1861.
Robert M. T. Hunter, July 25, 1861,
to February 17, 1862.
William M. Browne (ad interim).
Judah P. Benjamin, March 18, 1862.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

Judah P. Benjamin, February 25,
1861.
Thomas Bragg, November 21, 1861.
Thomas H. Watts, March 18, 1862. a
Wade Keyes (ad interim).
George Davis, January 2, 1864.

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

Christopher G. Memminger, February 21, 1861.

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY—cont'd.

George A. Trenholm, July 18, 1864.

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

Stephen R. Mallory, March 4, 1861.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

Henry T. Ellet, February 25, 1861
(declined appointment).
John H. Reagan, March 6, 1861.

SECRETARY OF WAR.

Leroy P. Walker, February 21, 1861, to September 16, 1861.
Judah P. Benjamin, November 21, 1861. (Was also acting from September 17, 1861, to November 21, 1861, and from March 18, 1862, to March 23, 1862.)
Brig. Gen. George W. Randolph,
March 18, 1862.
Maj. Gen. Gustavus W. Smith (assigned temporarily), November 17, 1862.
James A. Seddon, November 21, 1862.
Maj. Gen. John C. Breckinridge, February 6, 1865.

CONGRESSES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES.

[Compiled from official records.]

PROVISIONAL CONGRESS.

First session.

Assembled at Montgomery, Ala., February 4, 1861. Adjourned March 16, 1861, to meet second Monday in May.

Second session (called).

Met at Montgomery, Ala., April 29, 1861. Adjourned May 21, 1861.

Third session.

Met at Richmond, Va., July 20, 1861. Adjourned August 31, 1861.

Fourth session (called).

Met at Richmond, Va., September 3, 1861. Adjourned same day.

Fifth session.

Met at Richmond, Va., November 18, 1861. Adjourned February 17, 1862.

a The date when Watts ceased to perform duty as Attorney-General is not definitely fixed by the records. He was inaugurated as Governor of Alabama December 2, 1863.

FIRST CONGRESS.

First session.

Met at Richmond, Va., February 18, 1862. Adjourned April 21, 1862.

Second session.

Met at Richmond, Va., August 18, 1862. Adjourned October 13, 1862.

Third session.

Met at Richmond, Va., January 12, 1863. Adjourned May 1, 1863.

Fourth session.

Met at Richmond, Va., December 7, 1863. Adjourned February 17, 1864.

SECOND CONGRESS.

First session.

Met at Richmond, Va., May 2, 1864. Adjourned June 14, 1864.

Second session.

Met at Richmond, Va., November 7, 1864. Adjourned March 18, 1865.

Members of the Provisional Congress of the Confederate States from February 4, 1861, to February 17, 1862.

[Compiled from official records.]

ALABAMA.

Richard W. Walker.
Robert H. Smith.
Jabez L. M. Curry.
William P. Chilton.
Stephen F. Hale.
Colin J. McRae.
John Gill Shorter.
Thomas Fearn. a
David P. Lewis. a
Nicholas Davis. b
H. C. Jones. b
Cornelius Robinson. c

ARKANSAS.

Robert W. Johnson. d
Albert Rust. d
Hugh F. Thomason. d
W. W. Watkins. d
Augustus H. Garland. d

FLORIDA.

J. Patton Anderson. e
James B. Owens.
Jackson Morton. f
George T. Ward. g
John P. Sanderson. h

GEORGIA.

Robert Toombs.
Howell Cobb.
Francis S. Bartow. i
Martin J. Crawford.
Eugenius A. Nisbet.
Benjamin H. Hill.
Augustus R. Wright.
Thomas R. R. Cobb.
Augustus H. Kenan.
Alexander H. Stephens.
Thomas M. Foreman. j
Nathan Bass. k

a Admitted February 8, 1861; resigned April 29, 1861.

b Admitted April 29, 1861.

c Admitted November 30, 1861; resigned January 24, 1862.

d Admitted May 18, 1861.

e Resigned May 2, 1861.

f Admitted February 6, 1861.

g Admitted May 2, 1861; resigned February 5, 1862.

h Admitted February 5, 1862.

i Killed at Manassas, Va., July 21, 1861.

j Admitted August 7, 1861.

k Admitted January 14, 1862.

KENTUCKY.

Thomas B. Monroe. a
 Henry C. Burnett. a
 Thomas Johnson. b
 John J. Thomas. c
 Theodore L. Burnett. c
 Daniel P. White. d
 L. H. Ford. e
 George B. Hodge. f
 John M. Elliott. g
 George W. Ewing. h

LOUISIANA.

John Perkins, jr.
 Alexander De Clouet.
 Duncan F. Kenner.
 Edward Sparrow.
 Henry Marshall.
 Charles M. Conrad. i

MISSISSIPPI.

Wiley P. Harris.
 Walker Brooke.
 William S. Wilson. j
 William S. Barry.
 James T. Harrison.
 Alexander M. Clayton. k
 J. A. P. Campbell.
 Jehu A. Orr. l
 Alexander B. Bradford. m

MISSOURI.

George G. Vest. n
 Caspar W. Bell. n
 Aaron H. Conrow. n
 Thomas A. Harris. o
 John B. Clark. o
 Robert L. Y. Peyton. p

NORTH CAROLINA.

George Davis. q
 W. W. Avery. q
 W. N. H. Smith. q
 Thomas D. McDowell. r
 A. W. Venable. q
 John M. Morehead. q
 R. C. Puryear. q
 A. T. Davidson. q
 Burton Craige. s
 Thomas Rufin. t

SOUTH CAROLINA.

R. Barnwell Rhett, sr.
 Robert W. Barnwell.
 Lawrence M. Keitt.
 James Chesnut, jr.
 Christopher G. Memminger.
 W. Porcher Miles.
 Thomas J. Withers.
 William W. Boyce.
 James L. Orr. u

TENNESSEE.

Robert L. Caruthers. v
 Thomas M. Jones. v
 J. H. Thomas. v
 John F. House. v
 John D. C. Atkins. w
 David M. Currin. x
 W. H. De Witt. x

TEXAS.

John Gregg. y
 Thomas N. Waul. z
 William B. Ochiltree. z
 John H. Reagan. aa
 Williamson S. Oldham. aa
 John Hemphill. bb
 Louis T. Wigfall. l

a Admitted December 16, 1861.
b Admitted December 18, 1861.
c Admitted December 30, 1861.
d Admitted January 2, 1862.
e Admitted January 4, 1862.
f Admitted January 11, 1862.
g Admitted January 15, 1862.
h Admitted February 14, 1862.
i Admitted February 7, 1861.
j Resigned April 29, 1861.
k Admitted February 8, 1861; resigned
 May 11, 1861.
l Admitted April 29, 1861.
m Admitted December 5, 1861.
n Admitted December 2, 1861.

o Admitted December 6, 1861.
p Admitted January 22, 1862.
q Admitted July 20, 1861.
r Admitted July 22, 1861.
s Admitted July 23, 1861.
t Admitted July 25, 1861.
u Admitted February 17, 1862.
v Admitted August 12, 1861.
w Admitted August 13, 1861.
x Admitted August 16, 1861.
y Admitted February 15, 1861.
z Admitted February 19, 1861.
aa Admitted March 2, 1861.
bb Admitted March 2, 1861; died January 4, 1862.

VIRGINIA.

John W. Brockenbrough. a
 Waller R. Staples. a
 Robert M. T. Hunter. b
 William C. Rives. c
 James A. Seddon. d
 William B. Preston. d
 W. H. Macfarland. d
 Charles W. Russell. d

(Granville H. Oury was recognized as the delegate from Arizona Territory, from January 18, 1862.)

VIRGINIA—continued.

Robert Johnston. d
 Robert E. Scott. e
 Walter Preston. e
 Thomas S. Bocock. f
 James M. Mason. g
 Roger A. Pryor. g
 Alexander R. Boteler. h
 John Tyler. i

Senators of the First Congress of the Confederate States from February 18, 1862, to February 17, 1864.

[Compiled from official records.]

ALABAMA.

Clement C. Clay, jr. j
 William L. Yancey. k
 Robert Jemison, jr. l

ARKANSAS.

Robert W. Johnson.
 Charles B. Mitchel.

FLORIDA.

Augustus E. Maxwell.
 James M. Baker.

GEORGIA.

Benjamin H. Hill.
 John W. Lewis. m
 Herschel V. Johnson. n

KENTUCKY.

William E. Simms.
 Henry C. Burnett. o

LOUISIANA.

Edward Sparrow.
 Thomas J. Semmes. j

MISSISSIPPI.

Albert G. Brown.
 James Phelan. j

MISSOURI.

John B. Clark.
 Robert L. Y. Peyton. p
 Waldo P. Johnson. q

NORTH CAROLINA.

George Davis. r
 William T. Dortch.
 Edwin G. Reade. s

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Robert W. Barnwell.
 James L. Orr.

TENNESSEE.

Landon C. Haynes.
 Gustavus A. Henry.

TEXAS.

Williamson S. Oldham.
 Louis T. Wigfall.

VIRGINIA.

Robert M. T. Hunter.
 William B. Preston. t
 Allen T. Caperton. u

a Admitted May 7, 1861.
b Admitted May 10, 1861.
c Admitted May 13, 1861.
d Admitted July 20, 1861.
e Admitted July 22, 1861.
f Admitted July 23, 1861.
g Admitted July 24, 1861.
h Admitted November 27, 1861.
i Admitted August 1, 1861; died January 18, 1862.
j Admitted February 19, 1862.
k Admitted March 27, 1862; died July 28, 1863.

l Admitted December 28, 1863.
m Admitted April 7, 1862. Appointed by the Governor.
n Admitted January 19, 1863.
o Admitted February 26, 1863.
p Died December 19, 1863.
q Admitted December 24, 1863. Appointed by the Governor.
r Resigned January 22, 1864.
s Admitted January 22, 1864. Appointed by the Governor.
t Died January 15, 1863.
u Admitted January 26, 1863.

Members of the House of Representatives of the First Congress of the Confederate States from February 18, 1862, to February 17, 1864.

[Compiled from official records.]

ALABAMA.

E. S. Dargan.
William P. Chilton.
James L. Pugh.
Jabez L. M. Curry.
John P. Ralls.
David Clopton.
Francis S. Lyon.
Thomas J. Foster. a
William R. Smith. b

ARKANSAS.

Felix I. Batson.
Grandison D. Royston.
Augustus H. Garland.
Thomas B. Hanly.

FLORIDA.

James B. Dawkins. c
Robert B. Hilton.
John M. Martin. d

GEORGIA.

Augustus H. Kenan.
Hines Holt. e
Augustus R. Wright.
Lucius J. Gartrell.
William W. Clark.
Robert P. Trippe.
David W. Lewis.
Hardy Strickland.
Charles J. Munnerlyn. f
Julian Hartridge. g
Porter Ingram. h

KENTUCKY.

Willis B. Machen.
John W. Crockett.
Henry E. Read.
George W. Ewing.
Horatio W. Bruce.
James W. Moore.
Robert J. Breckinridge, jr.
John M. Elliott.
Theodore L. Burnett. a
James S. Chrisman. i
Ely M. Bruce. j
George B. Hodge. k

LOUISIANA.

Duncan F. Kenner.
Charles J. Villeré.
John Perkins, jr.
Charles M. Conrad.
Henry Marshall.
Lucius J. Dupré.

MISSISSIPPI.

Ethelbert Barksdale.
John J. McRae.
J. W. Clapp.
Israel Welsh.
Otho R. Singleton.
Reuben Davis.
Henry C. Chambers. a
William D. Holder. l

MISSOURI.

Caspar W. Bell.
George G. Vest.
Aaron H. Conrow.
William M. Cooke.
Thomas W. Freeman.
Thomas A. Harris.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Robert R. Bridgers.
Owen R. Kenan.
Thomas D. McDowell.
Thomas S. Ashe.
J. R. McLean.
William Lander.
Burgess S. Gaither.
A. T. Davidson.
W. N. H. Smith. a
Archibald H. Arrington. m

SOUTH CAROLINA.

William W. Boyce.
William Porcher Miles.
Milledge L. Bonham. n
John McQueen.
James Farrow.
Lewis M. Ayer. o
William D. Simpson. p

TENNESSEE.

David M. Currin.
Henry S. Foote.
Thomas Menees.

a Admitted February 19, 1862.

b Admitted February 21, 1862.

c Resigned December 8, 1862.

d Admitted March 25, 1863.

e Resigned previous to January 12, 1864.

f Admitted February 22, 1862.

g Admitted March 14, 1862.

h Admitted January 12, 1864. Succeeded Hines Holt.

i Admitted March 3, 1862.

j Admitted March 20, 1862.

k Admitted August 18, 1862.

l Admitted January 21, 1864, vice Reuben Davis, resigned.

m Admitted February 20, 1862.

n Resigned January 17, 1863.

o Admitted March 6, 1862.

p Admitted February 5, 1863.

TENNESSEE—continued.

George W. Jones.
William G. Swan.
William H. Tibbs.
E. L. Gardenhire.
John V. Wright.
Joseph B. Heiskell.
John D. C. Atkins. a
Meredith P. Gentry. b

TEXAS.

John A. Wilcox. c
Peter W. Gray.
Caleb C. Herbert.
William B. Wright.
M. D. Graham.
Frank B. Sexton.

VIRGINIA.

John R. Chambliss.
James Lyons.
Roger A. Pryor. d
Thomas S. Bocock.
John Goode, jr.
Daniel C. De Jarnette.
William Smith. e

VIRGINIA—continued.

Alexander R. Boteler.
Waller R. Staples.
Walter Preston.
Albert G. Jenkins. f
Robert Johnston.
Charles W. Russell.
James P. Holcombe. g
John B. Baldwin. h
Charles F. Collier. i
Samuel A. Miller. j
David Funsten. k
Muscoc R. H. Garnett. l

TERRITORIES.

ARIZONA.

Marcus H. Macwillie. m

CHOCTAW NATION.

Robert M. Jones. n

CHEROKEE NATION.

Elias C. Boudinot. o

Senators of the Second Congress of the Confederate States from May 2, 1864, to March 18, 1865, date of adjournment of the second session.

[Compiled from official records.]

ALABAMA.

Robert Jemison, jr.
Richard W. Walker.

ARKANSAS.

Charles B. Mitchel. p
Robert W. Johnson.
Augustus H. Garland. q

FLORIDA.

Augustus E. Maxwell.
James M. Baker.

GEORGIA.

Benjamin H. Hill.
Herschel V. Johnson. r

KENTUCKY.

Henry C. Burnett.
William E. Simms.

LOUISIANA.

Thomas J. Semmes.
Edward Sparrow.

MISSISSIPPI.

Albert G. Brown.
John W. C. Watson.

MISSOURI.

Waldo P. Johnson.
George G. Vest. s

a Admitted March 8, 1862.
b Admitted March 17, 1862.
c Died February 7, 1864.
d Resigned April 5, 1862.
e Resigned April 6, 1863.
f Resigned August 5, 1862.
g Admitted February 20, 1862.
h Admitted February 27, 1862.
i Admitted August 18, 1862.
j Admitted February 24, 1863.
k Admitted December 7, 1863.

l Admitted February 21, 1862.
m Admitted March 11, 1862.
n Admitted January 17, 1863.
o First appears on roll January 8, 1864.
p Died previous to November 8, 1864.
q Admitted November 8, 1864. Succeeded Senator Mitchel.
r Admitted May 24, 1864.
s Admitted January 12, 1865. Appointed by the Governor.

NORTH CAROLINA.

William T. Dortch.
William A. Graham.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

James L. Orr.
Robert W. Barnwell.

TENNESSEE.

Landon C. Haynes.
Gustavus A. Henry.

TEXAS.

Williamson S. Oldham.
Louis T. Wigfall.

VIRGINIA.

Robert M. T. Hunter.
Allen T. Caperton.

Members of the House of Representatives of the Second Congress of the Confederate States from May 2, 1864, to March 18, 1865, date of adjournment of the second session.

[Compiled from official records.]

ALABAMA.

M. H. Cruikshank.
William P. Chilton.
David Clopton.
James L. Pugh.
James S. Dickinson.
Francis S. Lyon. a
Thomas J. Foster. b
William R. Smith. c

ARKANSAS.

Augustus H. Garland. d
Thomas B. Hanly.
Rufus K. Garland. c
Felix I. Batson. e
David W. Carroll. f

FLORIDA.

Robert B. Hilton.
S. St. George Rogers. g

GEORGIA.

Julian Hartridge.
William E. Smith.
Mark H. Blandford.
Clifford Anderson.
John T. Shewmake.
Joseph H. Echols.
James M. Smith.
George N. Lester.
Hiram P. Bell.
Warren Akin.

KENTUCKY.

Willis B. Machen.
Henry E. Read.
James S. Chrisman.
Theodore L. Burnett.
Horatio W. Bruce.
Humphrey Marshall.
Ely M. Bruce.
James W. Moore.
Benjamin F. Bradley.
George W. Triplett.
George W. Ewing. h
John M. Elliott. h

LOUISIANA.

Charles J. Villeré.
Charles M. Conrad.
Lucius J. Dupré.
John Perkins, jr.
Benjamin L. Hodge. i
Duncan F. Kenner. i
Henry Gray. j

MISSISSIPPI.

Jehu A. Orr.
Israel Welsh.
Henry C. Chambers.
Ethelbert Barksdale.
John T. Lamkin.
William D. Holder. a
Otho R. Singleton. k

MISSOURI.

John B. Clark. l
Thomas L. Snead. m

a Admitted May 4, 1864.

b Admitted May 6, 1864.

c Admitted May 21, 1864.

d Elected to Senate November 8, 1864.

e Admitted November 8, 1864.

f Admitted January 11, 1865.

g Admitted May 3, 1864.

h Admitted May 24, 1864.

i Admitted May 25, 1864.

j Admitted December 28, 1864, vice Hodge, deceased.

k Admitted May 9, 1864.

l Admitted June 10, 1864.

m Admitted November 7, 1864.

MISSOURI—continued.

Aaron H. Conrow. a
George G. Vest. b
Robert A. Hatcher. a
Peter S. Wilkes. c
N. L. Norton. d

NORTH CAROLINA.

W. N. H. Smith.
James T. Leach.
Josiah Turner, jr.
John A. Gilmer.
James M. Leach.
Burgess S. Gaither.
George W. Logan.
James G. Ramsay.
Thomas C. Fuller.
Robert R. Bingers. e

SOUTH CAROLINA.

William Porcher Miles.
William D. Simpson.
James Farrow.
William W. Boyce.
Lewis M. Ayer.
James H. Witherspoon. f

TENNESSEE.

Joseph B. Heiskell.
William G. Swan.
Arthur S. Colyar.
John P. Murray.
Henry S. Foote.
Edwin A. Keeble.
Thomas Menees.
John D. C. Atkins.
John V. Wright. j
James McCallum. g
Michael W. Cluskey. a
David M. Currin. h

TEXAS.

A. M. Branch.
Frank B. Sexton.
Simpson H. Morgan. i
John R. Baylor. j
Stephen H. Darden. d
Caleb C. Herbert. d

VIRGINIA.

Robert L. Montague.
Robert H. Whitfield.
Thomas S. Gholson.
Thomas S. Bocock.
John Goode, jr.
William C. Rives. k
Daniel C. De Jarnette.
John B. Baldwin.
Waller R. Staples.
Fayette McMullen.
Robert Johnston.
Charles W. Russell.
David Funsten. g
Samuel A. Miller. g
Frederick W. M. Holliday. l
Williams C. Wickham. a

TERRITORIES.

ARIZONA.

Marcus H. Macwillie.

CHEROKEE NATION.

Elias C. Boudinot.

CHOCTAW NATION.

Robert M. Jones.

CREEK AND SEMINOLE NATIONS.

S. B. Callahan. m

a Admitted November 7, 1864.
b Admitted November 7, 1864. Appointed Senator January 12, 1865.
c Admitted November 8, 1864.
d Admitted November 21, 1864.
e Admitted May 24, 1864.
f Admitted May 5, 1864.
g Admitted May 3, 1864.

h Died May 21, 1864.
i Admitted May 21, 1864. Died January 16, 1865.
j Admitted May 25, 1864.
k Resigned March 1, 1865.
l Admitted May 4, 1864.
m Admitted May 30, 1864.

APPENDIX.

HEADQUARTERS JACKSON HOSPITAL, February 14, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. R. S. EWELL:

DEAR SIR: For my own gratification, as well as those who are taking great interest in the important question, with regard to the using of the slaves of the Confederacy as an assisting element to us in defending our homes, firesides, and country from those who would destroy us, I would respectfully say that this morning I caused the hired male slaves at this hospital to be convened, and after asking them the deliberate question, if they would be willing to take up arms to protect their masters' families, homes, and their own from an attacking foe, sixty out of seventy-two responded they would volunteer to go to the trenches and fight the enemy to the bitter end.

Very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

F. W. HANCOCK,
Surgeon in charge.

RICHMOND, VA., March 28, 1865.

Capt. GEORGE P. RING,

Sixth Louisiana Regiment, Montgomery, Ala.:

SIR: You are hereby authorized to raise a company of negro troops in the State of Alabama, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved March 13, 1865, as promulgated in General Orders, No. 14, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, current series. The authority will expire sixty days from this date, if the company be not raised within that time.

By command of the Secretary of War:

JOHN W. RIELY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

RICHMOND, VA., March 30, 1865.

Capt. EDWARD BOSTICK,

Company E, Twenty-sixth South Carolina Volunteers:

SIR: You are hereby authorized to raise a battalion of four companies of negro troops in the State of South Carolina, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved March 13, 1865, as promulgated in General Orders, No. 14, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, current series. You are allowed sixty days to raise the battalion and will be detached from your command for that purpose by your commanding general.

By command of the Secretary of War:

JOHN W. RIELY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 78. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, April 1, 1865.

* * * * *

XIV. Col. K. Otey, Eleventh Regiment Virginia Volunteers, is assigned to duty at Lynchburg, Va., with authority to recruit, muster, and organize negro troops for the Army, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved March 13, 1865, promulgated in General Orders, No. 14, current series.

* * * * *

XXIX. Lieut. John L. Cowardin, adjutant Nineteenth Battalion Virginia Artillery, is hereby relieved from his present command and will proceed without delay to Halifax County, Va., for the purpose of recruiting negro troops under the act of Congress approved March 13, 1865, and General Orders, No. 14, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, current series.

By command of the Secretary of War:

JOHN W. RIELY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

RICHMOND, VA., April 2, 1865.

Lieut. S. R. SHINN:

DEAR SHINN: I have delayed writing in order to be able to give you some definite information on the negro question. The Secretary of War day before yesterday directed that the authority asked for be given Colonel Otey, and I telegraphed you to that effect. I have no doubt the orders have reached him by this time. Go to work and work, work, work. If the people of Virginia only knew and appreciated General Lee's solicitude on this subject they would not longer hold back their slaves. Their wives and daughters and the negroes are the only elements left us to recruit from, and it does seem that our people would rather send the former even to face death and danger than give up the latter.

Major Carrington has been appointed superintendent for the State of Virginia and a good one he will make. I shall do something myself with a view to raising a command. I may be so situated as to need your services and to advance your interests. If so, you shall hear from me.*

Let me hear from you at once.

Yours, truly,

TH. P. TURNER.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DISTRICT OF FLORIDA,
Tallahassee, April 28, 1865.

SIR: The major-general commanding directs me to inform you that you are authorized to proceed at once to raise a company of "negroes" to be mustered into the service of the Confederate States for the war, subject to the provisions of the law and the orders of the Government. The appointment of the field officers will be left subject to the provisions of the law and orders of the Government.

Very respectfully, &c.,

JAMES L. FRASER,
Aide-de-Camp.

(To O. S. Jones, E. H. Bryan, M. Yong, J. J. Jilks, B. F. Davis, G. W. Kenedy, W. S. Dupont, S. Parkhill, J. Linton, and H. A. Ramsay, through Col. P. Turney, Lake City, Fla.)

---

* Some strictly personal matter here omitted.

ALTERNATE DESIGNATIONS

OF

ORGANIZATIONS MENTIONED IN THIS VOLUME.

Alternate designation in black-faced type, the official designation, reference, or State to which organization belongs follows in italics.

Augusta Arsenal Batt., Inf., Georgia.
 Baltimore Light Art., 2d Md. Batty.
 Barr's (J. W.) Art. See Levi's Art.
 Blythe's (G. L.) Cav., 2d Mississippi Partisan Rangers.
 Botetourt Art., Virginia.
 Burroughs' (W. H.) Art. See Rhett Art.
 Cattle Batt., Cav. See Commissary Batt.
 Cherokee Legion, Georgia (State).
 Chesapeake Art., 4th Md. Batty.
 Chew's (W. S.) Art. See Chesapeake Art.
 Cobb's Legion, Georgia.
 Commissary Batt., Cav., Florida.
 Dance's (W. J.) Art. See Powhatan Art.
 Douthat's (H. C.) Art. See Botetourt Art.
 Drewry's (J. W.) Art. See Southside Art.
 Floyd Legion, Georgia (State).
 Fluvanna Art., Virginia.
 Foreign Batt., Inf., 8th Batt. Confederat: Inf.
 Forrest's (N. B.) Cav., 3d Tenn.
 French's (D. A.) Art. See McComas Art.
 Girardey's (V. J. R.) Inf. See Augusta Arsenal Batt.
 Goochland Art., Virginia.
 Griffin's (W. H.) Art. See Baltimore Light Art.
 Holcombe Legion, South Carolina.
 Howard's (T. B., jr.) Inf., Georgia.
 Jackson's (T. E.) Art., Virginia.
 Jeff Davis Legion, Cav., Mississippi.
 Levi's Art., Virginia.

Lewis' (J. W.) Art., Virginia.
 Lockhart's (H. C.) Inf., Alabama.
 Love's (A. P.) Cav., 4th Ala. Batt.
 Lyle's (G. T.) Cav., 25th Va.
 McComas Art., Virginia.
 McDonald's (C.) Cav. See Forrest's Cav.
 McGuirk's (J.) Cav., 3d Miss. (State).
 Mallett's (P.) Inf., North Carolina.
 Martin's (S. T.) Art., Virginia.
 Military Institute Cadets, Virginia.
 Millen's (J. M.) Cav., 20th Ga. Batt.
 Newsom's (J. F.) Cav., 18th Tenn.
 Norfolk Light Art. Blues, Virginia.
 North Carolina, 59th Regt. See 4th Cav.
 Parker's (W. W.) Art., Virginia.
 Penick's (N.) Art. See Lewis' Art.
 Phillips Legion, Georgia.
 Pickett's (R. O.) Cav., 10th Ala.
 Powers' (F. P.) Cav., Louisiana.
 Powhatan Art., Virginia.
 Rhett Art., Tennessee.
 Richmond Howitzers, Art., Virginia.
 Rockbridge Art., Virginia.
 Russell's (A. A.) Cav., 4th Ala.
 Scott's (G. W.) Cav., 5th Fla. Batt.
 Southside Art., Virginia.
 Stark's Inf., Alabama.
 Talley's (J.) Art. See Goochland Art.
 Tobin's (T. F.) Art., Tennessee.
 Washington Art., Louisiana.

INDEX.

Brigades, Divisions, Corps, Armies, and improvised organizations are "Mentioned" under name of commanding officer; State and other organizations under their official designation.

A. E. Fry, Vessel, 956.
A. J. Bird, Schooner, 1058.
A. Richards, Brig, 1057.
Abandoned or Captured Property.
Disposition, 593.
Abram (Slave), 661.
Absentees.
Return to duty, 158, 159, 489.
Rolls of, monthly, 518, 675, 676.
Achon, Schooner, 1057.
Adam (Slave), 662.
Adams, Charles Francis.
Correspondence, State Department, U. S., 132.
Mentioned, 132.
Adams, Daniel W., 880.
Adams, John Quincy.
Correspondence. See State Department, U. S.
Mentioned, 133.
Adams, S.
Correspondence, Ordnance Dept., C. S. A., 676.
Adams, Wirt, 646, 647, 649-651.
Adjutant and Inspector General's Dept., C. S. A.
Appropriations, 138, 480.
Bureau of Inspection, 43-45.
Cooper, S., Adjutant and Inspector General, 1183.
Estimates of appropriations, 771, 772.
Inspectors, 466-471.
Organization, etc., 169-172, 943.
Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A.
Correspondence:
Alabama, Governor of, 754.
Andrews, G., 821.
Barker, W. N., 577.
Baylor, J. R., 1168.
Beauregard, G. T., 162, 460.
Bostick, E., 1193.
Bragg, B., 270, 300, 394, 448, 506, 621, 722.
Brandon, W. L., 517, 710, 740, 1162.
Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 445, 447, 542.
Chilton, R. H., 43.
Cobb, H., 310, 344, 460, 461, 473, 476, 715, 993.
Congress, C. S., 425.
Davidson, J. L., 752.
Davis, Jefferson, 447, 477, 710, 838, 855, 856, 859,
970, 979, 995, 996, 1181.
Dement, W. F., 547.
Elzey, A., 269.
Engineer Department, C. S. A., 971.
Ewell, R. S., 747.
Forrest, N. B., 1.
Holmes, T. H., 353.
Huger, D. E., 752.
Kane, G. P., 387, 510.
Kemper, J. L., 558, 654, 855, 997, 1158, 1178.
Lee, R. E., 261, 546, 720, 1124.

Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A.—Cont'd.
Correspondence:
Maury, D. H., 317, 1011.
Nicholls, F. T., 268, 376.
Pegram, J. W., 1144.
Pitts, J. W., 752.
Polk, L., 14, 66.
Post-Office Department, C. S., 971.
Q. M. General's Office, C. S. A., 350, 1173.
Riely, J. W., 290, 388.
Ring, G. P., 1193.
Rosser, T. L., 1080, 1081.
Smith, E. K., 626.
Subsistence Department, C. S. A., 628.
Taylor, R., 828.
Turner, T. P., 1144.
Walthall, J. L., 752.
Ward, W. C., 752.
War Department, C. S., 52, 167, 269, 277, 278,
317, 318, 323, 353, 387, 388, 394, 430, 506, 510, 542,
558, 559, 578, 626, 694, 714, 731, 740, 747, 754, 836,
838, 840, 882, 883, 986, 992, 993, 995, 1012, 1029,
1030, 1061, 1081, 1159, 1174.
Withers, J. M., 517, 753, 817.
Wright, M. J., 537.
Duties, etc., of officers, 169-172, 466-471, 1176, 1177.
Enforcement of conscription acts, 1176, 1177.
Officer of Conscription authorized, 1176, 1177.
Official correspondence, 171, 1177.
Orders, Circulars, series 1864: June 4, 466; July
1, 523; Dec. 23, 971.
Orders, General, series 1862: Nos. 82, 112, 893.
Orders, General, series 1863: Nos. 3, 22, 30, 32,
116, 119, 122, 125, 141, 147, 150, 153, 157,
893.
Orders, General, series 1864: No. 1, 1; No. 2, 3; No.
3, 11; No. 4, 14; No. 6, 27; No. 7, 40; No. 8, 53;
No. 9, 54; No. 10, 64; No. 11, 66; No. 13, 74;
No. 15, 77; No. 16, 83; No. 17, 88; No. 18,
94; No. 19, 104; No. 20, 112; No. 21, 159;
No. 22, 163; No. 25, 174; No. 26, 178; No. 27,
183; No. 28, 186; No. 29, 189; No. 30, 198,
1053; No. 31, 203; No. 32, 207; No. 33,
212; No. 34, 214; No. 35, 229; No. 36, 238;
No. 37, 242; No. 38, 248; No. 39, 249; No. 40,
255; No. 41, 271; No. 42, 297; No. 43, 305;
No. 44, 352; No. 45, 369; No. 47, 389; No. 48,
449; No. 52, 481; No. 53, 491; No. 54, 501;
No. 55, 503; No. 57, 517; No. 59, 534; No. 60,
548; No. 63, 571; Nos. 65, 66, 591; No. 67,
592; No. 68, 605; No. 69, 606; No. 70, 608;
No. 71, 623; No. 72, 642; No. 73, 675; No. 75,
685; No. 76, 712; No. 77, 715; No. 78, 720;
No. 81, 734; No. 82, 741; No. 83, 749; No. 84,
835; No. 86, 897.

Adj't. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A.—Cont'd.

- Orders, General, series 1865: No. 1, 999; No. 3, 1058; No. 4, 1066; No. 6, 1082; No. 7, 1083; No. 8, 1113; No. 10, 1152; No. 11, 1157; No. 12, 1160; No. 14, 1161; No. 15, 1166; No. 16, 1169; No. 17, 1176; No. 18, 1177.
- Orders, Special, series 1864: No. 5, 7; No. 8, 14; No. 26, 66; No. 46 $\frac{1}{2}$ , 169; No. 54, 194; No. 57, 202; No. 60, 209; No. 79, 268; No. 81, 274; No. 83, 281; No. 85, 285; No. 87, 299; No. 91, 309; No. 103, 376; No. 131, 473; No. 159, 535; No. 161, 536; No. 164, 537; No. 169, 543; No. 181, 569; No. 185, 572; No. 203, 608; No. 208, 618; No. 210, 621; No. 212, 625; No. 221, 661; No. 224, 672; No. 225, 676; Nos. 226, 228, 677; No. 232, 694; No. 237, 713; No. 251, 742; No. 254, 746; No. 271, 822; No. 276, 838; No. 277, 840; No. 285, 886; No. 297, 942; No. 306, 966; No. 309, 982.
- Orders, Special, series 1865: No. 72, 1169; No. 73, 1176; No. 78, 1193.
- Organization, etc., 169-172, 943.
- Recruitment of colored troops, 1161.
- Adriatic, Ship, 1057.
- Advance, Steamer.
- Mentioned, 10, 29, 154, 905, 970, 1055, 1056, 1076, 1117.
- Vance-Mallory correspondence, 1055-1058, 1076, 1077.
- Aides-de-Camp.
- Rank, 1125, 1126, 1175.
- Aiken, Hugh K., 166.
- Aiken, W. E., 414.
- Akin, Warren, 1190.
- Alabama.
- Agricultural details, 1104.
- Army records, 299, 300.
- Camp guards, etc., in conscript service Sept. 9, 1864, 634.
- Census statistics, 103.
- Conference of impressment commissioners at Montgomery, 608.
- Conscription supporting force, 224, 225, 251-253.
- Consolidation of organizations, 536, 543, 621, 676.
- Deserters returned to Army, 362, 1109.
- Enforcement of conscription acts, 275, 276, 293, 316, 317, 322, 323, 463, 464, 466, 472, 817-821, 848, 849, 880-883, 1059-1066.
- Establishment of military school at Mobile suggested, 317.
- Estimated percentage of white population furnished, 103.
- Estimate of military resources, 101, 103, 635.
- Exhibits of conscripts enrolled, exempted, detailed, assigned, etc., 103, 362, 1101-1103, 1105, 1109.
- Junior Reserves, 322, 323, 472.
- Liability of exempted men to militia duty, 574.
- Members of C. S. Congress, 1185, 1187-1190.
- Men furnished, 102, 103, 362, 1101.
- Militia, 601, 747.
- Quota impressed slaves, 933.
- Recruiting service, 1042-1044.
- Reserves, 463, 464, 517, 538.
- Resistance to conscription, actual and anticipated, 1042-1044.

Alabama—Continued.

- Schedules of prices for provisions, etc., 686.
- Secret societies, 393-398.
- State officers exempted from conscription on certificate of Governor, 851.
- State troops, 11, 322, 841.
- Supplies for Army of Tennessee, 312.
- Transfer of 1st Alabama Reserves to Provisional Army, 752-754.
- Alabama, Governor of.
- Conference of Governors at Augusta, Ga., 735, 736.
- Correspondence:
- Adj't. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 754.
- Davis, Jefferson, 251, 275, 293, 316, 322, 671.
- Mauzy, D. H., 601, 841.
- North Carolina, Governor of, 685.
- Polk, L., 11, 162.
- Taylor, R., 934.
- War Department, C. S., 3, 34, 37, 463, 466, 472, 476, 477, 574, 618, 820, 821.
- Withers, J. M., 817.
- Impressments private property, 37.
- Iron for repair of agricultural implements, 3, 4, 34.
- Alabama, Mississippi, and East Louisiana, Dept. of.
- Enforcement of conscription acts, 258, 294, 294, 445, 446.
- Organization, strength, etc., of troops:
- June 30, 1864, 520.
- Dec. 1, 1864, 989.
- Mar. 10, 1865, 1182.
- Alabama, Quartermaster-General of.
- Correspondence, Q. M. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 1077.
- Alabama and Tennessee Rivers Railroad.
- Construction for military purposes, etc., 742, 743.
- Government loan for construction purposes, 743.
- Alabama Troops (C.).
- Cavalry—Battalions: 4th, 536; 14th Partisan Rangers, 621, 19th,* 621.
- Cavalry—Regiments: 4th (Russell), 543; 9th, 622; 10th, 676.
- Infantry—Battalions: Lockhart's, 752, 754.
- Infantry—Companies: Stark's (Militia), 818.
- Infantry—Regiments: 1st Reserves, 752, 753; 3d Reserves, 880.
- Albion Lincoln, Bark, 1058.
- Aldrich, A. P., 161, 403.
- Alexander, James H.
- Correspondence. See Jeremy F. Gilmer.
- Alexander, P. C., Bark, 1057.
- Alexander, William F.
- Correspondence. See Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A.
- Alice, Steamer, 114, 161, 351.
- Alien Enemies.
- Citizens of Maryland, 312.
- See also Foreigners.
- Aliens. See Foreigners.
- Allan, Thompson.
- Correspondence, Treasury Dept., C. S., 841.
- Mentioned, 1026.
- Views on subject of taxation, 841-845.
- Allen, A. M.
- Correspondence, S. B. French, 90.
- Mentioned, 89, 90, 720.

* Also known as 2d Battalion.

- Allen, Henry W.
Correspondence. See Louisiana, Governor of.
Mentioned, 112, 217, 400, 432.
- Allen, William, 19.
- Allston, Amy, 662.
- Ambler, John, 725.
- Amons, Mr., 810.
- Anderson, Abney, 662.
- Anderson, Archer.
Correspondence, B. Bragg, 353, 490, 504, 539.
Mentioned, 542.
- Anderson, Clifford.
Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 477.
Mentioned, 1190.
- Anderson, George T.
Correspondence, Governor of Georgia, 372.
- Anderson, Joseph R.
Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 551.
- Anderson, Patton.
Correspondence:
Bragg, B., 517.
Davis, Jefferson, 464.
Mentioned, 1185.
- Anderson, Richard H.
Correspondence:
Hill, A. P., 22.
Perry, E. A., 22.
Mentioned, 21.
- Andersonville, Ga.
Prisoners captured south of Richmond, Va., 369.
- Andres, Theodore, 29.
- Andrews, Benjamin A., 1005.
- Andrews, Garnett.
Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 821.
- Andrews, R. Snowden, 14.
- Annan, Mr., 444.
- Annie, Steamer, 351.
- Antonica, Steamer, 351.
- Appropriations.
Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Dept., C. S. A., 138, 480.
Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 138.
Bureau of Indian Affairs, C. S., 138, 480.
Cherokee Nation, 39, 40.
Engineer Department, C. S. A., 139, 480, 626.
Estimates, 771-779, 1111.
Impressed slaves, deceased, 139.
Legislative, executive, and judicial expenses, 137-139, 479, 480, 486.
Medical Department, C. S. A., 139, 480, 626.
Munitions of war, 138, 139, 480.
Niter and Mining Bureau, C. S. A., 480, 626.
Ordnance Department, C. S. A., 139, 480, 626.
Pay of the Army, 138, 480, 626.
Pro rata distribution to War Department bureaus, 627, 628.
Quartermaster's Dept., C. S. A., 138, 480, 626.
Subsistence Department, C. S. A., 139, 480, 626.
Support of the Army, 138, 480, 626.
- Aralia, Vessel, 351.
- Archer, Hugh.
Correspondence. See Florida, Adjutant and Inspector General of.
- Archer, John N.
Correspondence:
Chilton, C. N., 651.
Harris, S. S., 650, 651.
Upton, J. D., 650.
- Archer, R. P., 726.
- Arcole, Ship, 1058.
- Arizona Territory.
Delegates to C. S. Congress, 1187, 1189, 1191.
Measures to retake, 76, 960-962, 1035, 1036.
Recruiting service, 76, 960-962, 1035, 1036.
- Arkansas.
Members of C. S. Congress, 1185, 1187-1190.
- Armon, N. B. D., 398.
- Armories, C. S.
Transportation of provisions, 175.
- Arms, Ammunition, etc. See Munitions of War.
- Armstrong, Steamer, 956, 957.
- Armstrong, Henry W., 397.
- Army Intelligence Office, C. S. A.
Establishment, organization, etc., 945.
- Army of the Confederate States.
Address of Jefferson Davis, 104, 105.
Appointment R. E. Lee as General-in-Chief, 1058.
Appropriations for support, 137-139, 480, 626.
Condition, needs, etc., 58, 59, 970, 986, 995.
Congressional call for number of men and casualties, 425.
Courts-martial, 192, 193, 238.
Drunkenness, 193.
Estimated percentage of white population furnished by Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Mississippi, and Virginia, 103.
General and Lieutenant-generals, 194.
Men furnished by respective States to January 1864, 96-103.
Military courts, 70, 192, 193.
Military resources, 96-103, 342, 634-636, 1124.
Mortality, 634, 635.
Operations, 1864, 324-327, 756-758, 790-792.
Organization, strength, etc.:
June 30, 1864, 520.
Dec. 31, 1864, 989.
1865, 1182.
Pay, etc., 774-776.
Permanently disabled, 635.
Regulations. See Regulations, C. S. Army.
See also Orgn., Equip., etc., of Army.
- Army Regulations. See Regulations, C. S. Army.
- Arrington, Archibald H., 137, 1188.
- Arrington, James N.
Correspondence, J. M. Withers, 1042.
Mentioned, 1044.
- Arsenals, C. S.
Designation, 298, 609.
Transportation of provisions, 175.
- Arthur, B. F.
Correspondence. See South Carolina, Gov. of.
- Articles of War.
Courts-martial, 192, 238.
Desertion, 255.
Enlistment of deserters, 1178.
Monthly returns, 450.
- Ashcraft, Thomas C.
Authority to raise Mississippi State troops, 307, 308.
Mentioned, 307, 308.
- Ashe, Thomas S., 137, 1188.
- Atkins, John D. C., 137, 1186, 1189, 1191.
- Atlanta, Steamer, 900.
- Atlanta (Ga.) Campaign.
May 1-Sept. 8, 1864, 757, 758, 791.

Atlanta (Ga.) Intelligencer, 968.

Atlantic, Schooner, 1057.

Attorney-General, C. S.

Opinions:

Appointment, removal, etc., of officers, 656.

Appointment of A. R. Lawton as Quartermaster-General, C. S. A., 318-322.

Legal status of general officers, 313-315.

Manufacture of spirituous liquors by C. S. Government, 875-880.

Attorney-General's Office, C. S.

Benjamin, J. P., Attorney-General, 1184.

Bragg, T., Attorney-General, 1184.

Correspondence:

Davis, Jefferson, 313.

Navy Department, C. S., 879.

North Carolina, Governor of, 616, 655.

War Department, C. S., 318, 875, 876.

Davis, G., Attorney-General, 1184.

Keyes, W., Attorney-General, 1184.

Principal officials, 1861-1865, 1184.

Watts, T. H., Attorney-General, 1184.

August, Thomas P.

Acting Supt. of Conscription, C. S. A., 1183.

Correspondence. See Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A.

Medical certificate, 633.

Mentioned, 534, 565, 569, 578, 610, 611, 630, 631, 633, 660, 1183.

Augusta, Ga.

Conference of Governors, 684, 685, 692, 693, 706, 707, 721, 722, 735, 736, 820.

Resolutions conference of Governors, 735, 736, 820.

Augusta (Ga.) Constitutionalist, 840.

Austin, Samuel, 673, 674.

Averell, William W., 807.

Avery, William W., 1186.

Ayer, Lewis M., 1188, 1191.

Aylett, Patrick H., 659, 660.

Badham, Henry A., 24.

Bailey, William.

Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 500.

Mentioned, 499.

Baker, Mr., 444.

Baker, James M., 137, 1187, 1189.

Baker, Lawrence S.

Correspondence, Gov. of North Carolina, 605.

Baldwin, John B.

Correspondence:

Harris, J. T., 845.

War Department, C. S., 547, 563, 846.

Wartmann, W. McK., 845.

Mentioned, 137, 547, 548, 846, 1189, 1191.

Baldwin, John P., 19, 20.

Baldwin, M. A.

Correspondence:

Withers, J. M., 1043.

Yelverton, G. T., 1044.

Ball, Quilter & Co., 155, 703.

Bancroft, George, 132.

Banshee, Steamer, 351, 956.

Barbour, P. P.

Compensation for impressed slaves, 852.

Mentioned, 852.

Barker, William N.

Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 577.

Barker, William N.—Continued.

Mentioned, 578.

Barksdale, Ethelbert, 137, 1188, 1190.

Barksdale, George A., 725, 727.

Barnett, N. C., 244.

Barnewall, William, jr., 351.

Barney, C. R., 698, 702.

Barnwell, Robert W., 137, 1186, 1187, 1190.

Barruel, 695, 699.

Barry, William S., 1186.

Barton, William S., 83, 171.

Bartow, Francis S., 1185.

Bass, Nathan, 1185.

Bat, Steamer, 525, 526.

Bates, Joseph, 520.

Batson, Felix L., 1188, 1190.

Battle, William H., 213.

Baxter, Sydney S.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 376, 378.

Mentioned, 377.

Bayard, James A., 5, 6.

Bayce, Sarah A., Schooner, 1057.

Baylor, C. G., 637.

Baylor, John R.

Authority to recruit regiment in Texas, 1168.

Correspondence:

Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 1168.

War Department, C. S., 960, 1035.

Mentioned, 962, 1191.

Proposition to retake Arizona and recruit for C. S. Army, 960-962, 1035, 1036.

Bayne, Thomas L.

Correspondence:

Hoge, J. B., 166.

Subsistence Department, C. S. A., 783.

Treasury Department, C. S., 370, 589.

War Department, C. S., 155, 167, 240, 301, 365, 370, 417, 423, 565, 574, 778, 1071.

Mentioned, 167, 364, 365, 525, 526, 528, 587, 588, 690, 782-785, 900, 929, 955.

Bay State, Bark, 1057.

Beale, Thomas F.

Authority to enlist company for secret service, 172.

Mentioned, 172.

Beall, John Y.

Authority to destroy enemy's property, 444, 445.

Correspondence, F. W. M. Holliday, 444.

Mentioned, 444, 445.

Beatrice, Steamer, 956, 958.

Beauregard, Steamer, 351.

Beauregard, G. T.

Correspondence:

Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 162, 460.

Davis, Jefferson, 715.

Georgia, Governor of, 1058.

Gilmer, J. F., 459.

Robertson, J. W., 460.

South Carolina, Adj. and Insp. Gen. of, 38.

South Carolina, Governor of, 1058.

Sparrow, E., 168.

Taylor, R., 747.

War Department, C. S., 240, 563.

Mentioned, 25, 28, 38, 39, 61, 83, 100, 410, 458, 461, 511, 520, 631, 694, 743, 745, 748, 751, 989, 990, 1010.

Organization of the Army, 168, 169.

Bee, Hamilton P., 569, 572, 573.

- Bee & Co., 901.
- Belgian Consuls. See Consuls.
- Bell, Caspar W., 1186, 1188.
- Bell, Hiram P., 1190.
- Bell, J. M., 509.
- Bell, William, Pilot-boat, 1057.
- Bellamy, J. C., 507.
- Beltzhoover, Daniel, 317.
- Bender, Walter G., 667, 668.
- Bendigo, Steamer, 351.
- Benjamin, Judah P.
Attorney-General, C. S., 1184.
Correspondence. See State Department, C. S.
Mentioned, 6, 442, 565, 573, 574, 655, 669, 670, 1016, 1037, 1125, 1184.
Secretary of State, C. S., 1184.
Secretary of War, C. S., 1184.
- Bennett, J. M.
Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 531, 532.
- Benning, Henry L.
Correspondence, J. Longstreet, 1093.
- Bentley, William G., 726.
- Berry, Micajah F.
Correspondence, J. H. Miller, 649.
- Bethea, Theo., 322.
- Bibb, T. P. A., 972.
- Billow, Brig, 1057.
- Bird, A. J., Schooner, 1058.
- Black, Jeremiah S., 636-638.
- Blackburn, Joseph C. S.
Authority to enlist company for secret service, 212.
Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 212.
- Blackman, Homer.
Correspondence:
Noppers, J. D., 577.
War Department, C. S., 575.
Mentioned, 576.
- Blackstock, Ro. V.
Correspondence, Q. M. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 748.
- Blackstone, William, 1076.
- Blair, W. B., 974, 975.
- Blake, Edward D.
Correspondence, Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 95.
Estimate of military resources of the Confederate States, 95-103.
Mentioned, 95, 355, 788, 789.
Report on special registration, 95-103.
- Blanford, Mark H., 1190.
- Blenheim, Steamer, 956.
- Bliss, William W. S., 979.
- Blockade.
Evasion through Mexican ports, 565, 566, 569, 572, 573.
- Bloodgood, M. Hildreth.
Correspondence:
Huse, C., 157.
War Department, C. S., 702.
Mentioned, 156, 528, 704.
- Board of Appraisement.
Impressed slaves, 966.
- Boards of Examination.
Conscripts, 66, 182, 183, 1176, 1177.
Hospitals, 721.
Invalid Corps, 214-217, 242, 243, 298, 624, 1083, 1084.
- Boards of Officers.
Appraisement, 966.
Examination, 66, 182, 183, 214-217, 242, 243, 298, 624, 721, 1083, 1084, 1176, 1177.
Survey, 27, 449.
- Boards of Survey.
Lost or damaged ordnance stores, 27, 449.
- Bocock, Nicholas F.
Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 814.
Mentioned, 804, 812.
- Bocock, Thomas S.
Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 285.
Mentioned, 137, 203, 473, 476, 1116, 1187, 1189, 1191.
- Boggs, William R.
Correspondence. See E. Kirby Smith.
- Bolingbroke, Henry St. John, 885.
- Bolton, James, 633.
- Bonaparte, Charles L. N. See Napoleon III.
- Bonaparte, Napoleon. See Napoleon I.
- Bonds. See Finance.
- Bonham, Milledge L.
Correspondence. See South Carolina, Gov. of.
Mentioned, 33, 38, 39, 114, 402-404, 407, 409-413, 432, 735, 820, 879, 904, 1188.
- Boone, R. L., 649.
- Bostick, Edward.
Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1193.
Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 1193.
- Boteler, Alexander R.
Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 257.
Mentioned, 137, 1187, 1189.
- Botts, John M., 809.
- Boudinot, Elias C., 1189, 1191.
- Bounty.
Act of C. S. Congress, Feb. 17, 1864, 178, 184.
Enlisted men in service six months from Apr. 1, 1864, 178, 184.
Payable only to non-conscripts, 1000.
- Boutelle, Charles O., 664.
- Bowman, Harrison, 816.
- Bowman, Tettler & Co., 157.
- Boyce, William W., 137, 1186, 1188, 1191.
- Boyden, Th., 256.
- Boyle, Cornelius.
Correspondence:
Lee, R. E., 606, 612.
Noland, B. P., 606.
War Department, C. S., 604, 605, 624.
Mentioned, 611-613, 615.
- Brabham, J. J., 403.
- Bradford, Alexander B., 1186.
- Bradley, Benjamin F., 1190.
- Bradshaw, ———, 427.
- Bragg, Braxton.
Correspondence:
Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 270, 300, 394, 448, 506, 621, 722.
Anderson, A., 353, 490, 504, 539.
Anderson, P., 517.
Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 568, 609, 618.
Cambell, P., 312.
Davis, Jefferson, 6, 316, 601, 609, 620, 624, 630, 631, 724, 841.
Gardner, W. M., 725.
Harris, S. S., 645.

Bragg, Braxton—Continued.

Correspondence:

Johnston, J. E., 293.

North Carolina, Governor of, 722.

Ordnance Department, C. S. A., 293.

Subsistence Department, C. S. A., 300.

Taylor, R., 645.

Treasury Department, C. S., 664.

Walter, H. W., 393.

War Department, C. S., 312, 353, 354, 729.

Mentioned, 20, 59, 80, 165, 176, 252, 280, 313, 447, 448,

473, 474, 577, 610, 611, 630, 640, 641, 645, 664, 724,

725, 727-729, 787, 900, 948, 979, 989, 1001, 1182.

Organization of general staff, 316.

Reorganization of Bureau of Conscription,

C. S. A., 624, 625, 640, 641.

Bragg, Thomas.

Attorney-General, C. S., 1184.

Commissioner for North Carolina, habeas corpus act, 210, 213, 238.

Correspondence:

Davis, Jefferson, 200.

Pearson, R. M., 214.

War Dept., C. S., 210, 213, 238, 256, 267, 274, 284.

Mentioned, 1184.

Branch, A. M., 1191.*Branch, E. B., 966.*Brand, Fred. B.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 1180.

Brandon, William L.

Correspondence:

Adjutant and Inspector General's Office,
C. S. A., 517, 710, 740, 1162.

Davis, Jefferson, 823.

Harris, W. P., 903.

Mississippi, Governor of, 710, 824, 1034.

Taylor, R., 1179.

War Department, C. S., 645, 821, 902, 965.

Mentioned, 740, 903.

Breckinridge, John C.

Correspondence:

Davis, Jefferson, 31.

War Department, C. S., 240, 863.

See also War Department, C. S.

Mentioned, 262, 289, 290, 812, 864, 922, 989, 1041,

1064, 1072, 1075, 1077, 1081, 1087, 1096, 1099, 1111,

1115, 1116, 1123-1127, 1129, 1136, 1142-1144, 1147-

1150, 1152, 1158, 1159, 1161, 1166-1169, 1173, 1175,

1176, 1179, 1181, 1183, 1184, 1194.

Secretary of War, C. S., 1183, 1184.

Suggests reorganization and concentration of

Kentucky troops, 31-33.

Breckinridge, Robert J., jr.

Authority to recruit in Kentucky, 661.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 601.

Mentioned, 137, 661, 1188.

Brenizer, Addison G., 700.*Brent, A. J.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 519.

Brent, George William.Correspondence. See *Braxton Bragg.Bresser, —, 807.*Brewer, S. B., 643.*Bridgers, Robert R., 137, 1188, 1191.*Briggs, E. B.Asks authority to raise a regiment of colored troops, 846.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 846.

Briscoe, Richard.

Correspondence, G. P. Kane, 512.

Brock, Mr., 444.*Brockenbrough, John W., 1187.*Brooke, John M.

Correspondence:

Jones, C. Ap R., 523.

McCorkle, D. P., 522.

Ramsay, H. A., 521.

Brooke, Walker, 1186.*Brooks, John H., 694.*Brooks, William M.

Correspondence, W. P. Chilton, 415.

Broumore, Ben, 811.*Brown, Mr., 444.*Brown, Albert G., 137, 1187, 1189.*Brown, Charles, 5.*Brown, Clinton I., 1018.*Brown, John A., 317.*Brown, John C., 1042-1044.*Brown, Joseph E.Correspondence. See Georgia, Governor of.

Mentioned, 1, 2, 49, 75, 115, 116, 118, 196, 197, 244, 245,

259, 260, 277, 281, 344-346, 373, 380, 382, 418, 464,

473-476, 502, 530, 531, 536, 537, 550, 556, 560, 569,

580, 601, 636, 637, 670, 715, 735, 745, 748, 820, 832,

850, 867, 869, 912, 968, 979, 1011, 1049, 1111, 1112,

1182, 1187.

Brown, W. C., jr., 395.*Browne, R. H.Correspondence. See *Jones M. Withers.Browne, William M.

Assignments, 269, 274, 281.

Correspondence:

Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 259, 260, 579, 868, 870, 874, 1049.

Cobb, H., 613, 1048.

Davis, Jefferson, 269, 1118.

Georgia, Governor of, 416, 440.

Rowland, A. M., 259.

War Department, C. S., 530.

Mentioned, 274, 281, 285, 371, 462, 464, 475, 476, 478,
579, 580, 640, 871, 981, 1043, 1184.

Secretary of State, C. S., 1184.

Bruce, Ely M., 137, 1188, 1190.*Bruce, Horatio W., 137, 1188, 1190.*Bryan, Council A.

Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 21.

Bryan, E. H.

Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1194.

Correspondence, S. Jones, 1194.

Bryan, Henry, 694.*Bryant, Hamilton G., 19.*Buchanan, Thomas C., 543.*Buchanan, W. Jefferson, 401.*Buck, Dr., 903.*Buckman, Thomas E., 166.*Buckner, Simon B.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 31.

Mentioned, 71, 72, 165.

Buckner, Simon B.—Continued.

Suggests reorganization and concentration of Kentucky troops, 31-33.

Bullock, James D., 156, 158, 525.

Bullock, W. F., Jr.

Correspondence. See Richard Taylor.

Burch, John C.

Correspondence. See Jones M. Withers.

Bureau of Conscription, U. S. A.

Appropriations, 138.

August, T. P., Acting Superintendent, 1183.

Condition, needs, etc., 988.

Correspondence:

Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 445, 447, 542.

Blake, E. D., 95.

Bragg, B., 568, 609, 618.

Browne, W. M., 259, 260, 579, 868, 870, 874, 1049.

Claiborne, J., 350.

Clarke, F., 349.

Davis, Jefferson, 259, 625, 640, 737, 854, 946.

Holmes, T. H., 755.

Johnston, J. C., 33.

Kemper, J. L., 751, 858.

Lay, G. W., 847.

Lee, R. E., 27, 1122.

Mallett, P., 600, 868, 894.

Melton, C. D., 1024.

Miles, W. P., 883.

Mississippi, Governor of, 870.

Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A., 350.

Shields, J. C., 665, 667, 669, 750, 998.

South Carolina, Governor of, 1020.

War Department, C. S., 95, 197, 224, 245, 256, 354, 386, 464, 515, 579, 600, 610, 630, 668, 731, 737, 742, 744, 751, 755, 780, 785, 846, 850, 851, 858, 866, 882, 943, 947, 979, 998, 1018, 1048, 1099, 1112, 1119.

Details, 1101, 1106, 1107.

Digest of laws and orders, 893.

Duffield, C. B., Acting Superintendent, 1183.

Establishment, organization, etc., 944.

Estimate of appropriations, 779.

Exemption regulations, 36, 42.

Expenditures, 988.

Instructions to enrolling officers, 469.

Jurisdiction over the reserves, 519.

Lay, G. W.:

Acting Superintendent, 1183.

Inspector-General of Conscription, 893.

List of officers, 610.

Monthly returns, 853, 854, 940.

Official correspondence, 751, 888, 893.

Operations:

Apr. 16, 1862–February, 1865, 1099–1110.

Jan. 1–Apr. 1, 1864, 334, 335, 354–364.

February–November, 1864, 785–789.

Orders, Circulars, series 1863: Mar. 30, 893.

Orders, Circulars, series 1864: Sept. 30, 999;

Dec. 1, 887; No. 1, 24; No. 2, 34; No. 3, 36;

No. 4, 42; No. 5, 57; No. 6, 77; No. 7, 187;

No. 8, 217; No. 9, 230; No. 10, 238; No.

11, 240; No. 12, 250; No. 13, 257; No. 14,

270; No. 15, 275; Nos. 16, 17, 305; No. 18,

309; No. 19, 311; No. 20, 378; No. 21, 489.

Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A.—Continued.

Orders, Circulars, series 1864: No. 22, 503; No. 23, 507; No. 24, 515; No. 25, 519; No. 26, 534; No. 27, 564, 569; No. 28, 569; No. 29, 578; No. 30, 620; No. 31, 640; No. 32, 654; No. 33, 713; No. 34, 853; No. 35, 896; No. 36, 933; No. 37, 940.

Pay, etc., of employes, 517, 518.

Powers, duties, etc., of officers, 34, 38, 42, 57, 77, 181, 217–224, 230, 231, 485, 568, 611, 618–621, 623, 630–633, 675, 737, 738, 742, 744, 745, 750, 780, 781, 785–789, 887–893, 897, 898, 1177.

Preston, J. S., Superintendent, 1183.

Regulations, 564, 565, 606–608.

Reorganization proposed, 624, 625, 640, 641.

Retention of conscript officers in Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi, 7, 8.

Revision and correction of exemptions, 12, 25, 57.

Special registration, 95.

Supervision and control of recruiting, etc., 83, 84.

Transfer of duties to Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 1176, 1177.

Travel allowances of officers, 564, 569, 579, 580.

Bureau of Indian Affairs, C. S.

Appropriations, 138, 480.

Establishment, organization, etc., 944.

Operations, 342.

Scott, S. S., Commissioner, 1183.

Bureau of War, C. S.

Establishment, organization, etc., 944.

Kean, R. G. H., Chief, 1183.

Burgess, Andrew J., 806.

Burgwyn, Henry K.

Correspondence:

Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A., 748.

War Department, C. S., 616.

Burke, Edmund, 135.

Burke, Theophilus, 393, 396–398.

Burnet, William E., 317.

Burnett, Henry C., 137, 1186, 1187, 1189.

Burnett, Theodore L., 137, 1186, 1188, 1190.

Burnett, William, 807.

Burton, James H., 527.

Burwell, William M.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 226.

Mentioned, 227.

Busteed, Richard, 134.

Butler, Benjamin F., Atty. Gen., 320, 321.

Butler, Benjamin F., General, 68, 132, 335, 336, 756, 757.

Byam, J. H., Jr., 507.

Byers, J. S., 446.

Cabell, D. S., 972.

Cable, David F., 934–939, 1001, 1002.

Cadets.

Examination for promotion, 1157, 1158.

Caldwell, James.

Correspondence, J. O. Heriot, 405.

California.

Recruiting service, 76, 960–962, 1035, 1036.

Callahan, E. H., 807.

Callahan, S. B., 1191.

Calls for Troops.

Act of C. S. Congress, Mar. 13, 1865, 1161.

Calls for Troops—Continued.

Georgia militia, 612, 1058.

Mississippi militia, 590.

South Carolina militia, 1058.

Calvert, J.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 550.

Calvert, John S.

Correspondence, J. W. G. Smith, 538.

Cambell, Parker.

Correspondence, B. Bragg, 312.

Cameron, John W., 211, 675.Cammack, Richard C., 509.Campbell, J. A. P., 1186.Campbell, J. P. H., 687.Campbell, John A.

Assistant Secretary of War, C. S., 1183.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 262, 287, 377, 378, 547, 615, 704, 740, 755, 903, 1005, 1065, 1066, 1120, 1124.

See also War Department, C. S.

Mentioned, 261, 458, 564, 659, 771, 821, 883, 944, 1001, 1058, 1179, 1183.

Camper, John, 810.Camps of Instruction. See *Rendezvous.Canada.

Missions of:

Clay, C. C., jr., 322, 584-587, 636-640.

Holcombe, J. P., 583, 584, 639, 640.

Thompson, J., 278, 322, 639.

Canova, Paul, 19.Cantley, A. G., 972.Caperton, Allen T., 137, 1187, 1190.Cardin, Randall, 807.Carnot, Lazare N. M., 787, 885.Caroline, Steamer, 957.Caroline Goodyear, Schooner, 566, 573.Carrall, Schooner, 1057.Carrie Estell, Brig, 1057.Carrington, Isaac H.

Correspondence, War Dept., C. S., 810, 812, 816, 864.

Mentioned, 1194.

Carrington, L., 235, 237, 244.Carrington, William A.

Correspondence, Surgeon-General's Office, C. S. A., 537, 687.

Carroll, David W., 1190.Carswell, Nathaniel A., 311.Carter, John W., 618.Caruthers, Robert L., 706, 1186.Cary, John B., 726.Cavalry.

Organization, etc., 194.

Transfer of dismounted, to infantry, 499, 503, 571, 572.

Chailé, S. E.

Correspondence, Surg. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 516.

Chalaron, Stephen, 702.Chalmers, James R.

Correspondence, Governor of Mississippi, 8.

Chambers, Henry C., 137, 1188, 1190.Chambers, J. M.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 825, 826.

Chambers, John E.

Correspondence, G. P. Kane, 512.

Chambliss, John R., jr., 137, 858, 1189.Chaplains.

Battalions and general hospitals, 496.

Commutation of rations, 53.

Forage for horses, 194.

Rations, 163.

Chapman, Alfred.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 771.

Charleston and Savannah Railroad.

Threatened destruction by enemy, 969.

Charleston (S. C.) Mercury, 1003.Chase, Salmon P., 6.Cherokee Indians.

Appropriation for benefit of, 39, 40.

Delegates to C. S. Congress, 1189, 1191.

Chesnut, James, jr.

Correspondence:

Davis, Jefferson, 364, 507.

War Department, C. S., 645, 711, 712.

Mentioned, 1186.

Chickamauga, C. S. S.

Mentioned, 1056-1058.

Vessels captured, 1058.

Childress, Stephen, 808.Childress, Tom, 808.Childress, William, 808.Chilton, C. N.

Correspondence, J. N. Archer, 651.

Mentioned, 650.

Chilton, D. Saunders, 274, 392.Chilton, Robert H.

Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 43.

See also Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A.

Establishment of Bureau of Inspection, 43-45.

Mentioned, 268, 542.

Chilton, William P.

Correspondence:

Brooks, W. M., 415.

War Department, C. S., 58, 415.

Mentioned, 137, 1185, 1188, 1190.

Chinn, Mr., 444.Chisman, Samuel R., 746.Choctaw Nation.

Delegates to C. S. Congress, 1189, 1191.

Chrisman, James S., 1188, 1190.Churchill, Thomas J., 989.City of Petersburg, Steamer, 114, 296, 351, 956.Civil Courts.

Co-operation with military authorities, 598.

Injunctions against C. S. officers, 561, 562.

Remarks, Secretary of War, C. S., 965, 966.

Claggett, Henry O., 726.Clairborne, J. H.

Correspondence, Subsistence Dept., C. S. A., 1136.

Clairborne, John.

Correspondence, Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 350.

Mentioned, 610, 611.

Clairborne, Thomas D., 536.Clanton, James H.

Correspondence, L. Polk, 394.

Mentioned, 1059.

Clapp, J. W., 137, 689, 1183.Clark, Charles.Correspondence. See Mississippi, Governor of.

Clark, Charles—Continued.

Mentioned, 278, 308, 309, 432, 602, 710, 735, 740, 790,
820-824, 867, 902-904, 1162, 1163.

Clark, J. N., 972.

Clark, John B., 125, 137, 1186, 1187, 1190.

Clark, William W.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 105.

Mentioned, 137, 1188.

Clarke, Frank.

Correspondence, Bureau of Conscription,
C. S. A., 349.

Mentioned, 350.

Clarke, Thomas E.

Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 21.

Clarkson, John N., 925.

Clay, C. W., 507.

Clay, Clement C., Jr.

Correspondence:

Davis, Jefferson, 322.

State Department, C. S., 584, 636.

Mentioned, 137, 584, 1187.

Mission to Canada, 322, 584-587, 636-640.

Clay, Hugh L.

Correspondence. See Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A.

Mentioned, 171, 387, 840.

Claybrook, R. A.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 519.

Clayton, Alexander M.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 598.

Mentioned, 1186.

Clayton, Samuel.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 1010.

Cleburne, Patrick R.

Memorial urging the freeing and arming of slaves, 1.

Mentioned, 1.

Clements, Nelson.

Correspondence:

Davis, Jefferson, 565.

Hart, S., 566.

Miller, W. D., 572.

Reagan, J. H., 572.

State Department, C. S., 569.

Mentioned, 565, 566.

Clemson, J. C., 702.

Clemson, T. G., 700, 702.

Clopton, David.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 58.

Mentioned, 137, 1188, 1190.

Clothing and Equipage.

Accounts of soldiers, 74.

C. S. colored troops, 1161.

Competition between State and C. S. agents, 11,
64, 65, 152, 153, 672, 690-692.

Deceased soldiers, 572.

Enlisted men, 1033, 1034.

Invalid Corps, 216.

Issues to C. S. Army, July 1, 1864-Jan. 1, 1865, 1039-1041.

Machinery from abroad for manufacture, 210,
211, 683, 684.

Measures to provide supplies, 10, 28, 29, 38, 210,
211, 288, 289, 292, 293, 295-297, 402, 416, 439, 442,
499, 500, 526, 527, 529, 556-558, 565-567, 572-574,
673-675, 683, 684, 1077, 1078, 1096-1099.

Clothing and Equipage—Continued.

Officers, 186, 1033, 1034.

Purchases abroad, 10, 526, 527, 529, 566, 567, 674,
675, 930, 955-958.

Regulations, Q. M.'s Dept., C. S. A., 1033, 1034.

Salé prohibited, 1160.

Soldiers in hospital, 594.

Cloyd, Joseph.

Correspondence, B. P. Noland, 289.

Mentioned, 262, 290.

Cluskey, Michael W., 1191.

Cobb, Mr., 444.

Cobb, Howell.

Correspondence:

Adjutant and Inspector General's Office,
C. S. A., 310, 344, 460, 461, 473, 476, 715, 993.

Browne, W. M., 613, 1048.

Crawford, M. J., 462.

Davis, Jefferson, 532, 580, 1015, 1118.

Georgia, Governor of, 347, 381, 417, 421, 431, 434, 442, 455.

Glenn, J. A., 993.

War Department, C. S., 13, 31, 33, 42, 48, 74, 113,
371, 439, 440, 457, 462, 463, 477, 478, 502, 516, 538,
542, 543, 550, 644, 745, 748, 822, 964, 981, 991, 1009,
1030, 1048.

Whitner, J. C., 1016.

Mentioned, 13, 15, 17, 25, 49, 64, 65, 83, 277, 278, 281,
311, 446, 447, 457, 460, 461, 476, 477, 530, 715, 746,
965, 992, 993, 1015, 1016, 1101, 1180, 1185.

Cobb, Lamar.

Correspondence, M. J. Crawford, 461.

See also Howell Cobb.

Cobb, Thomas R. R.,

Cochran, John, 1043, 1044.

Coke, Edward, 1076.

Coker, J. P., 19, 47.

Cold Harbor, Va.

Operations at and about, May 31-June 12, 1864,
756, 757.

Cole, A. H.

Correspondence:

Paxton, A. M., 65,

Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A., 1087.

Mentioned, 1086.

Cole, Robert G., 61.

Collie, Alexander.

Agreement to furnish army supplies, etc.,
529, 566.

Mentioned, 526, 527, 529, 566, 567, 1117.

Collie, Alexander, & Co., 10, 28, 526, 588, 673, 1117.

Collie, William, 1117.

Collie & Crenshaw, 527.

Collie & Thorburn, 241.

Collier, Charles F., 137, 1189.

Collins, Nathaniel D., 8.

Columbia and Augusta Railroad.

Construction, etc., for military purposes, 226-
229, 969, 970.

Colyar, Arthur S., 1191.

Comanche Indians.

Alliance with Confederate States, 1180.

Comella (Slave), 662.

Commandants of Conscripts.

Duties, etc., 34, 36, 42, 57, 77, 217-224, 230, 231, 489,
623, 675, 1177.

Commerce. See Trade and Intercourse.

Commissaries of Subsistence, C. S. A.

Appointment recommended, 104.

Commissary-General of Prisoners (C.).

Pillow, G. J., appointed and relieved, 1082, 1177.

Ruggles, D., appointed, 1177.

Commissioners.

Habeas corpus, 204, 210-213, 225, 238, 243, 257, 493.

Impressments, 603.

Railroads, 694.

Commissioners of Impressments.

Conference at Montgomery, Ala., and Raleigh, N. C., 608.

Schedules of prices for provisions, etc., 54-57, 262-266, 271-274, 389-392, 704-706, 982-986, 1050-1053, 1169-1173.

Suggestions, Q. M. General, C. S. A., 748.

See also Impressments.

Conduct of the War.

Address of C. S. Congress to people of Confederacy, 126-137, 139, 140.

Remarks:

Davis, Jefferson, 12, 13, 67-70.

Georgia, Governor of, 61-63.

Secretary of War, C. S., 164, 165.

Resolutions:

Congress, C. S., 126.

Congress, U. S., 130.

Georgia Legislature, 12.

Cone, Aurelius F., 725-727.

Cone, Peter, 235, 237, 244.

Confederate States Colored Troops.

Act of C. S. Congress, Mar. 13, 1865, 1161.

Clothing, 1161.

Organization, equipment, etc., 1144, 1161, 1162, 1175, 1178, 1193, 1194.

Pay, etc., 1161.

Rations, 1161.

Recruitment of, authorized, 1144, 1161, 1193, 1194.

Regulations for recruiting, 1161, 1162.

Relation of slaves to owners, 1161.

Remarks:

Benjamin, J. P., 959, 960.

Clayton, S., 1010, 1011.

Cobb, H., 1009, 1010.

Davis, Jefferson, 797-799, 1110, 1133, 1178.

Hancock, F. W., 1193.

Hunter, A., 1007-1009.

Lee, R. E., 1012, 1013, 1175.

Secretary of War, C. S., 693, 694, 761, 762, 768-771.

Turner, T. P., 1194.

Requisition on Governor of Virginia, 1166, 1169.

Confederate States Government.

Alliance with Indians, 1180.

Condition, needs, etc. Remarks, Jefferson Davis, 1130-1136.

Congresses 1861-1865, 1184, 1185.

Declaration of dispositions, principles, and purposes, by C. S. Congress, 486-488.

European sympathy, 424, 425.

Executive officers, 1861-1865, 1184.

Members of Congress, 1861-1865, 1185-1191.

Military resources, 1124.

Confederate Troops.

Cavalry—Battalions: 7th, 1182.

Cavalry—Regiments: 7th, 536.

Engineers—Regiments: 1st, 8d, 858.

Confederate Troops—Continued.

Infantry—Battalions: 1st Foreign, 1083; 8th, 1176.

Congress, C. S.

Abolition of certain officers in Quartermaster's and Subsistence Departments. Remarks, Jefferson Davis, 1126-1128.

Additional officers of artillery for ordnance duties, 475, 497.

Additional quartermasters and commissaries, 495.

Address to people of the Confederate States, 126-137, 139, 140.

Adjustment of impressment claims, 501.

Appointment General-in-Chief C. S. Army, 1058.

Appropriations:

Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Dept., C. S. A., 138, 480.

Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 138.

Bureau of Indian Affairs, C. S., 138, 480.

Cherokee Nation, 39, 40.

Engineer Department, C. S. A., 139, 480, 626.

Impressed slaves, deceased, 139.

Legislative, executive, and judicial expenses, 137-139, 479, 480, 486.

Medical Department, C. S. A., 139, 480, 626.

Munitions of war, 138, 139, 480.

Niter and Mining Bureau, C. S. A., 480, 626.

Ordnance Department, C. S. A., 139, 480, 626.

Pay of the Army, 138, 480.

Quartermaster's Dept., C. S. A., 138, 480, 626.

Subsistence Department, C. S. A., 139, 480, 626.

Support of the Army, 138, 480, 626.

Auxiliary bureaus of War Department west of Mississippi River, 139, 194.

Bonds, C. S., 159-161, 482.

Bounty, 178, 184, 1000.

Bureau of Conscription abolished, 1176, 1177.

Call for number of men and casualties in C. S. Army, 425.

Call for 300,000 troops authorized, 1161.

Capture and destruction of enemy's property, 139.

Cavalry, 194, 490.

Certificates for interest on bonds, 110, 111.

Change of date for assembling, 70.

Chaplains, 194, 496.

Civil and military officers in War Department, etc., 943.

Clothing for officers, 1033.

"Coals of the steamer Advance," 1055.

Coin for furnishing supplies to Army, 1155, 1156.

Commutation value of hospital rations, 175, 498.

Compensation for staff duty, 298, 299.

Compensation of civil officers and employés in President's Office and in Executive and Legislative Departments at Richmond, Va., 194, 195.

Conditions, needs, etc., of Executive Departments, 1095.

Conduct of the war, 126-137, 139, 140.

Conscription, 178-181, 1130, 1176, 1177.

Consolidation of reduced regiments, 1124, 1166, 1167.

Correspondence:

Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 425.

Davis, Jefferson, 29, 49, 429, 835, 850, 948-950, 996, 1015, 1055, 1096, 1099, 1111, 1125, 1136.

Congress, C. S.—Continued.*Correspondence:

- Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A., 1039.
- Treasury Dept., C. S., 941, 962, 1026, 1033.
- War Department, C. S., 104.
- Courts-martial and military courts, 192, 193, 1124.
- Currency of the United States, 82, 83.
- Declaration of dispositions, principles, and purposes relative to existing war, 486-488.
- Destruction of cotton, tobacco, etc., to avoid capture, 1066.
- Diminution of exemptions and details, 1128, 1129, 1133.
- Discharge from military service, 1153.
- Donations to C. S. Treasury by citizens, 1128.
- Drunkenness in the Army, 193.
- Efficiency of the cavalry, 499.
- Election, etc., of members, 35, 36, 465, 466.
- Engineer Corps, C. S. A., 190.
- Engineer troops, C. S. A., 190, 191.
- Ensigns, 190, 492, 1167.
- Exemption of railroads from duties on machinery, etc., 442.
- Exemptions from military service, 179-181, 472, 473, 494, 495, 850, 1112.
- Forage for chaplains' horses, 194.
- Foreign commerce, 80-82, 897, 928, 948-953.
- Free postage on newspapers to soldiers, 1037-1039.
- Furloughs and discharges in hospitals, 175.
- General and lieutenant-generals, 194.
- General staff, 497, 498, 835-838.
- Habeas corpus act, 203, 204, 429.
- Harboring, etc., deserters and enticing desertions, 189.
- Holcombe (S. C.) Legion, 430.
- Hospital accommodations for sick and wounded officers, 174, 496.
- Importation of luxuries, etc., 78-80, 486.
- Impressments of supplies, 198, 199, 249, 1170.
- Increased compensation heads Executive Departments, etc., 485.
- Increase of pay, enlisted men, 492.
- Invalid Corps, 214, 1083.
- Jurisdiction and sovereignty of Virginia over ancient boundaries, 466.
- Manifesto relative to existing war, 486-488.
- Manufacture of spirituous liquors for Army, etc., 481, 482.
- Members, 1187-1191.
- Messages of the President, 29, 49, 67, 107, 114, 365-368, 429, 450, 472, 475, 553, 790-800, 819, 835, 850, 948-953, 996, 1015, 1037-1039, 1055, 1058, 1096, 1099, 1111, 1124-1137, 1154, 1155.
- Military courts, 70, 192, 193, 494, 497, 498.
- Negroes, 208, 996, 997, 1114, 1116, 1161.
- New regiments, etc., 52.
- Niter and Mining Bureau, C. S. A., 492, 493.
- Organization, etc., of forces within enemy's lines, 496, 497.
- Organization, etc., of the Army, 178-181, 183, 184, 1161.
- Partisan rangers, 194.
- Passports, 442, 1014.
- Pay, etc., of general officers, 497.
- Payment of arrears to Army and Navy, 1154.
- Pay of commissioners, habeas corpus act, 493.

Congress, C. S.—Continued.

- Pay of master armorer at Richmond, Va., 64.
- Pay of soldiers and sailors on detailed service, 3, 493.
- Pay of the Army, 962, 963.
- Peace propositions, 1058.
- Preservation of journals, 1015-1018.
- Promotion for skill and valor, 190.
- Promotion of army officers, 1125.
- Purchase of clothing by officers, 186.
- Rank of aides-de-camp, 1125.
- Rank of officers, 29, 30.
- Rations, 186, 481, 930.
- Records of State troops, 189, 190, 496.
- Reduction of the currency, 159-161.
- Regimental commissaries, 491, 492.
- Report House Military Committee on President's message, Mar. 13, 1865, 1144-1147.
- Report Select Committee on President's message, Mar. 13, 1865, 1148-1152.
- Report Senate committee on rank of certain officers, 30.
- Resolution in relation to the war, 126.
- Resolution of Senate respecting appointment of A. R. Lawton as Quartermaster-General, 51.
- Sale of military clothing, 1160.
- Scouts and guards to communicate with Trans-Mississippi Department, 493, 494.
- Sessions, 1185.
- Store-keepers, military, 191, 492.
- Substitutes, 11, 12.
- Supernumerary officers, 163, 494.
- Taxation, 140-152, 479, 482-485.
- Tax in kind, 14, 63, 64, 478.
- Temporary rank, 496.
- Tobacco for the Army, 299.
- Transportation for Members, 481.
- Transportation of officers under orders, 492.
- Transportation sick and wounded officers, 496.
- Treasury notes, C. S., 159-161, 482.
- Veteran Soldiers' Home, 108-110.
- Congress, Provisional, C. S.
  - Members, 1185-1187.
  - Sessions, 1184.
- Congress, U. S.
  - Resolution, conduct of the war, 130.
- Conner, C. C., 543.
- Conner, H. W.
  - Correspondence, H. C. Guerin, 412.
  - Mentioned, 402, 408.
- Conrad, Charles M., 137, 1186, 1188, 1190.
- Conrow, Aaron H., 137, 1186, 1188, 1191.
- Conscription.
  - Acts of C. S. Congress:
    - Feb. 17, 1864, 178-181.
    - Mar. 7, 1865, 1176, 1177.
  - Age limit, 178-181, 183, 212, 231, 238, 240, 256, 257, 268, 269, 295, 376, 447, 463, 507, 630, 712, 713, 715, 1059-1063, 1178, 1179.
  - Bond for agricultural details, 250, 251.
  - Census statistics, 103.
  - Chief of Inspecting Department, 888.
  - Citizens of Maryland, 311, 312, 387, 388, 507, 510-513, 545-547, 550, 551.
  - Deficiency in results, 854-856, 858, 859, 886.
  - Details, 179, 305, 309, 336, 337, 523, 524, 628, 629, 712, 713, 715, 720, 734, 735, 873, 874, 1104-1110.

Conscription—Continued.

- Difficulties attending, 224, 225.
- Duties, etc., of inspectors, 887-896.
- Employés Ordnance Department, C. S. A., 741.
- Employés Shakanoosa Arms Manufacturing Co., Dawson, Ga., 476-478.
- Enforcement, 243, 244, 258-260, 268-271, 275-278, 285, 293-295, 307, 316-318, 322, 323, 349, 350, 353-359, 376, 416, 440, 441, 445-448, 463, 464, 466, 472, 530, 531, 624, 640, 641, 652, 653, 665-669, 710-712, 722, 723, 740, 746, 749, 754, 755, 817-824, 845-849, 880-886, 902-904, 965, 966, 981, 1009, 1010, 1030, 1031, 1043-1050, 1099-1101, 1159-1166, 1176, 1177.
- Enlistment of substitutes prohibited, 11, 24.
- Enrollment of reserves, 212, 257, 270.
- Enrollment of Tennessee and Kentucky conscripts, 34.
- Erroneous returns of exempted North Carolina State officers, 868, 894.
- Examination of conscript officers for field service, 187.
- Examining boards, 66, 182, 183, 1176, 1177.
- Exemption regulations, 181, 182.
- Exemptions, 103, 178-181, 218-224, 240, 359-364, 548, 598-601, 730, 731, 872, 873, 994, 995, 1102, 1103, 1110.
- See also Exemptions from Conscription.
- Exhibits:
  - Agricultural details, 1104, 1110.
  - Camp guards, supporting force, etc., Sept. 9, 1864, 633, 634.
  - Census statistics, 103.
  - Conscripts detailed after Apr. 16, 1862, 1101, 1109.
  - Conscripts enrolled, exempted, detailed, assigned, etc., December, 1863-March, 1864, 359-364.
  - Conscripts enrolled and assigned after Apr. 16, 1862, 1101, 1109, 1110.
  - Details account public necessity, 1104-1106, 1110.
  - Details Executive Depts., etc., 1106, 1107, 1110.
  - Details of contractors, 1107, 1108, 1110.
  - Details of mechanics, etc., 1108-1110.
  - Exemptions after Apr. 16, 1862, 1102, 1103, 1110.
  - Men subject to call, 1864, 103.
  - Persons employed on conscript service in Georgia, 871.
  - Volunteers and conscripts furnished by respective States to January, 1864, 102, 103.
- Extension urged by Jefferson Davis, 114, 115.
- Failure of system, 964, 965, 976-979.
- Former laws repealed, 231.
- Functions of "temporary boards," 503.
- Georgia civil and military officers, 344-349, 381-386, 416-422, 431-444, 455-457, 476, 502, 530-532.
- Hudson, T., assigned commandant of conscripts, Mississippi, 820.
- Inspections, 490, 491, 504-506, 539-542.
- Lee, R. E., recommends strict execution of, 27.
- Liability of Mississippi militia, 172-174.
- Liability of purchasing and transportation agents, 847, 848.
- Liability of Virginia militia, 256, 376.
- Men subject to, 1864, 103.
- Mississippi civil officers, 446, 450.
- Negroes, 208, 209, 230, 231.

Conscription—Continued.

- Non-exemption of persons furnishing substitutes, 12, 24.
- North Carolina militia, 307.
- Organization of "light duty" companies, 896, 897.
- Postal service employés, 52, 53, 71-74, 121-125, 657-661.
- Principals of substitutes, 12, 24, 176, 197, 198, 200, 201, 231.
- Proposed abolition of existing system. Remarks, J. S. Preston, 946-948.
- Registration, 629, 630.
- Regulations, 217-224, 230, 231.
- Remarks:
  - Davis, Jefferson, 796, 1130.
  - Lee, R. E., 27, 604.
  - Secretary of War, C. S., 604, 758-761.
- Resistance to, actual and anticipated, 353, 530, 904, 1042-1044.
- Resolutions Georgia Legislature, 244.
- Revision and correction, 181.
- Signal Corps employés, 624.
- Supervision and control, 675, 737, 738, 750, 854-856, 859-863, 1176, 1177.
- Supporting force, 251-253, 613.
- Trans-Mississippi Department, 231-234.
- Virginia military cadets, 722, 723.
- Within enemy's lines, 238.
- Conscripts.
  - Assignment and organization, 3, 40-42, 163, 166, 181, 185, 230-232, 256, 311, 312, 449, 490, 491, 507, 534, 578, 640, 712, 713, 715, 734, 735, 835, 1153, 1177, 1178.
  - Discharge under habeas corpus act, 659-661.
  - Enlistment of, in Mississippi organizations, 8, 9.
  - Examination, 66, 182, 183, 1176, 1177.
  - Furloughs, 534, 578.
- Consolidation of Reduced Regiments.
  - Act of C. S. Congress, Feb. 23, 1865, 1124, 1166, 1167.
  - Flags, 1168.
  - Order of War Department, C. S., 1166-1168.
- Remarks:
  - Cobb, H., 964, 965.
  - Davis, Jefferson, 797.
  - Lee, R. E., 1143, 1144.
  - Secretary of War, C. S., 764.
- Conspiracies.
  - Habeas corpus act, 203, 204.
- Consuls, Belgian.
  - Atlanta, Ga. See L. de Givé.
  - New Orleans, La. See Joseph Deynoodt.
- Consuls, Prussian.
  - Charleston, S. C. See Hy. Meyer.
- Cook, F. W. C., 311.
- Cook, Henry F., 66.
- Cooke, William M., 1188.
- Cooper, John, 311.
- Cooper, Mark E., 403, 406, 411, 412.
- Cooper, Samuel.
  - Adjutant and Inspector General, C. S. A., 1183.
  - Correspondence. See Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A.
  - Mentioned, 39, 52, 159, 170-172, 184, 215, 242, 270, 275-277, 279, 290, 298, 352, 369, 371, 394, 447, 448, 472, 510, 547, 563, 616, 620, 624, 686, 715, 737, 738, 740, 772, 821, 824, 836, 884, 958, 1083, 1113, 1153, 1157, 1161, 1162, 1168, 1176, 1177, 1183.

- Corkern, James B., 400.
- Corley, James L., 665, 667.
- Correspondence.
 Adj't. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 171, 1177.
 Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 751, 888, 893.
 Relative to army movements prohibited, 642.
 Telegraphic, 835.
 War Department, C. S., 171, 720, 721, 1152.
 With enemy, habeas corpus act, 203, 204.
- Cotton.
 Bonds for purchase or construction of steamers, 6, 7.
 Destruction to avoid capture, 1066, 1067.
 Exchange for supplies, 9, 10, 154, 517, 614, 642, 645, 651, 677-683, 688, 689, 718, 735, 789, 790.
 Exportation, 4, 10, 23, 28, 29, 42, 43, 51, 77, 78, 80, 81, 113, 114, 153, 154, 161, 162, 166, 167, 169, 184, 213, 241, 351, 402, 416, 439, 442, 513, 531, 532, 930, 1169, 1180, 1181.
 Loaned by North Carolina to C. S. Government, 416, 417.
 Payment for supplies with, 364, 365, 370, 371, 423, 424.
 Provision of funds for agents abroad, 587-590.
 Regulations governing exportation, 187-189, 206, 207, 239, 240, 245, 246, 255, 305-307.
 Shipments, 241, 351, 930.
 Trade in Virginia, 285-288.
 Trade on the Mississippi River, 282-284.
 Trans-Mississippi Department, 233.
- Courtney, Thomas E.
 Authority to enlist company for secret service, 202.
 Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 202.
 Mentioned, 202, 581.
- Courts-Martial.
 Modes of procedure, 238.
 Powers, etc., 192, 193.
 Revision of proceedings, 1124.
- Cowardin, John L.
 Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1194.
 Mentioned, 1194.
- Cowper, P., 505, 507.
- Cox, S. J., 543.
- Coxe, John R., 320.
- Crafts, George J., 351.
- Craige, Burton, 1186.
- Crane, A. J., 809.
- Crawford, Martin J.
 Correspondence:
 Cobb, H., 462.
 Cobb, L., 461.
 Mentioned, 458, 1185.
- Crawford, W. H., 972.
- Creek Nation.
 Delegate to C. S. Congress, 1191.
- Crenshaw, Octavius A., 633, 966.
- Crenshaw, William G., 155, 156, 301, 302, 527, 588, 900.
- Crenshaw & Co., 738, 739, 781, 782, 901.
- Crittenden, R. W., 972.
- Crockett, John W., 1188.
- Crowwell, Oliver, 885.
- Cross, William B. B.
 Correspondence, Q. M. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 1089.
 See also Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A.
 Mentioned, 1086.
- Crouse, Mr., 444.
- Cruikshank, M. H., 1190.
- Culberson, Augustus B., 311.
- Cullum, George W., 664.
- Cummings, J. F.
 Correspondence:
 French, S. B., 117.
 Georgia, Governor of, 117, 118, 120.
 Subsistence Department, C. S. A., 115.
 Mentioned, 90, 106, 107, 538.
- Cunningham, George W., 499, 500.
- Currie, John R., 972.
- Curran, David M., 1186, 1188, 1191.
- Curry, Jabez L. M.
 Commissioner for Army of Tennessee (C.), habeas corpus act, 211, 212.
 Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 212.
 Mentioned, 137, 1185, 1188.
- Custin, Robert L.
 Correspondence, H. J. Leory, 804.
- Customs. See Trade and Intercourse.
- D. Ellis, Schooner, 1057.
- Dabney, William H., 311.
- Dahlgren, Ulric, 325, 326.
- Darden, Stephen H., 1191.
- Dargan, Edward S., 137, 1188.
- Daves, Graham, 507.
- Davidson, A. T., 137, 1186, 1188.
- Davidson, James L.
 Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 752.
 Mentioned, 322.
- Davis, B. F.
 Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1194.
 Correspondence, S. Jones, 1194.
- Davis, Benjamin F.
 Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 21.
- Davis, George.
 Attorney-General, C. S., 1184.
 Correspondence. See Atty. Gen.'s Office, C. S.
 Mentioned, 545, 799, 875, 1184, 1186, 1187.
- Davis, H. R., 517.
- Davis, Jefferson.
 Address to people of Confederate States, 1179.
 Address to soldiers, 104, 105.
 Circular letter to Governors of States, on subject of harmony of action with regard to aliens, 670.
 Conduct of the war, 12, 13, 67-70.
- Correspondence:
 Adj't. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 447, 477, 710, 838, 855, 856, 859, 970, 979, 995, 996, 1181.
 Alabama, Governor of, 251, 275, 293, 316, 322, 671.
 Anderson, C., 477.
 Anderson, J. R., 551.
 Anderson, P., 464.
 Attorney-General's Office, C. S., 313.
 Beauregard, G. T., 715.
 Bragg, B., 6, 316, 601, 609, 620, 624, 630, 631, 724, 841.
 Bragg, T., 200.
 Brand, F. B., 1180.
 Brandon, W. L., 823.
 Breckinridge, J. C., 31.
 Breckinridge, R. J., jr., 601.
 Brent, A. J., 519.
 Browne, W. M., 269, 1118.

Davis, Jefferson—Continued.

Correspondence:

Buckner, S. B., 31.
 Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 259, 625, 640, 737, 854, 946.
 Calvert, J., 550.
 Chambers, J. M., 825, 826.
 Chesnut, J., jr., 364, 507.
 Clay, C. C., jr., 322.
 Claybrook, R. A., 519.
 Clayton, A. M., 598.
 Clayton, S., 1010.
 Clements, N., 565.
 Cobb, H., 532, 580, 1015, 1118.
 Congress, C. S., 29, 49, 429, 835, 850, 948-959, 996, 1015, 1055, 1096, 1099, 1111, 1125, 1136.
 Dement, W. F., 545.
 Ellis, J. W., 1041.
 Florida, Governor of, 15, 380, 464, 625, 671, 1110.
 Forsyth, J., 1110.
 Gartrell, L. J., 277.
 Georgia, Gov. of, 12, 402, 446, 538, 545, 671, 1034.
 Glenn, J. A., 714, 992.
 Guerry, T. L., 825, 826.
 Hayes, S. C., 4.
 Hodge, G. B., 517, 683.
 Hudson, T., 820.
 Hunter, R. M. T., 304.
 Johnson, H. V., 552.
 Johnston, J. E., 33.
 Jones, J. B., 634.
 Kane, G. P., 717.
 Lawson, P. A., 967.
 Lee, R. E., 618, 1137, 1166, 1178.
 Lee, S. D., 517.
 Lewis, J. H., 31.
 Lloyd, T. E., 825, 826.
 Macauley, D., 424.
 McNeill, T. E., 1096.
 Magrath, A. G., 652.
 Mann, A. D., 401.
 Mather, J. C., 259.
 Mississippi, Governor of, 525, 736, 1030, 1039.
 Morgan, J. H., 31.
 Navy Department, C. S., 520, 581, 1055.
 Newton, W., 1118.
 Nisbet, R. B., 825, 826.
 North Carolina, Governor of, 11, 51, 77, 104, 153, 203, 217, 254, 260, 671, 724, 945.
 Oldham, W. S., 1078.
 Ordnance Department, C. S. A., 677.
 Phelan, J., 707, 995.
 Pius IX, 401.
 Polk, L., 174, 386.
 Post-Office Department, C. S., 970.
 Seddon, J. A., 1046.
 Shaw, J. D., 1160.
 Smith, E. K., 254, 1078.
 South Carolina, Governor of, 670.
 Sparrow, E., 837.
 State Department, C. S., 1079.
 Stephens, A. H., 840, 934, 1000, 1002.
 Straghan, S. L., 519.
 Stringfellow, J. H., 1067.
 Texas, Governor of, 322.

Davis, Jefferson—Continued.

Correspondence:

Thompson, J., 278, 322.
 Treasury Department, C. S., 901, 953, 1045.
 Turner, T. P., 446.
 Virginia, Governor of, 539, 671, 820, 1152, 1169.
 Virginia Legislature, 1030, 1035.
 War Department, C. S., 1, 6, 13, 14, 32, 49, 52, 197, 247, 276-278, 322-324, 393, 430, 457, 501, 539, 545, 550-552, 565, 581, 602, 610, 634, 677, 714, 717, 718, 724, 756, 802, 816, 824, 836-838, 850, 851, 902, 928, 943, 961, 965, 971, 992, 995, 996, 1014, 1045, 1070, 1082, 1094, 1095, 1099, 1112, 1136.
 Watson, J. W. C., 1125.
 West, F. H., 825, 826.
 Williams, C., 581.
 Withers, J. M., 538.
 Wright, A. R., 825, 826.
 Wright, U., 580.
 Deserters, 69.
 European recognition, 1160.
 General staff of Army, 450-455, 1174.
 Habeas corpus, 69, 70, 200, 201, 429, 430, 1133, 1134.
 Impressments, 1132.
 Mentioned, 6, 14, 15, 21, 29, 30, 33, 50-53, 57, 58, 70, 76, 81-83, 104, 108, 109, 113, 116, 122, 129, 138, 163, 164, 169, 173, 178-180, 183, 190, 192-194, 196-198, 203, 204, 208, 213, 224, 233, 234, 239, 245, 249, 254, 259, 270, 275, 279-281, 294, 295, 300, 303, 305, 306, 313-321, 326, 328, 329, 331-333, 335, 341, 345, 347, 370-374, 382, 383, 398-400, 408, 416, 419, 421, 426, 429, 430, 432, 436-439, 442, 443, 447, 448, 452-454, 456, 463, 464, 472, 475, 477, 486, 492-498, 511, 512, 517, 518, 524, 528, 531, 532, 545, 552, 562, 568, 570, 581, 584, 601, 610, 616, 621, 625, 629, 632, 637, 640, 641, 655-658, 688, 714, 715, 728, 731, 732, 736-738, 745, 748, 754, 769, 778, 780, 788, 808, 812, 817, 823, 825, 836, 837, 840, 847-851, 854, 855, 866, 882, 883, 886, 894, 897, 927, 929, 938, 939, 941, 943, 945, 947, 953, 959, 960, 965, 970, 981, 992, 996, 1008-1010, 1014, 1016, 1030, 1035-1037, 1045-1047, 1055, 1065, 1066, 1070, 1081-1083, 1095, 1099, 1110, 1112, 1116-1118, 1123, 1125, 1126, 1129, 1138, 1139, 1143-1152, 1155, 1156, 1161, 1162, 1166-1168, 1170, 1173, 1174, 1179, 1180, 1182, 1184.
 Messages to Congress, 29, 49, 67, 107, 114, 365-368, 429, 450, 472, 475, 553, 790-800, 819, 835, 850, 948-953, 996, 1015, 1037-1039, 1055, 1058, 1096, 1099, 1111, 1124-1137, 1154, 1155.
 Military courts, 247.
 Negroes as soldiers, 797-799, 1110, 1133.
 Peace propositions, 11, 800, 826-828, 840, 934-940, 1000-1004, 1058, 1134, 1135.
 President of the Confederate States, 1184.
 Proclamation, day of public fasting, humiliation, and prayer, 1037.
 Reorganization of Cabinet, 1046-1048.
 Report House Military Committee on message of Mar. 13, 1865, 1144-1147.
 Report Select Congressional Committee on message of Mar. 13, 1865, 1148-1152.
 Resolutions of confidence in, 94, 1110.
 Secret societies, 67.
 Treason, 67-70.
 Urges extension of conscription, 114, 115.

- Davis, Nicholas, 1185.
Davis, Reuben, 1188.
Davis, William S., 462.
Davis & Fitzhugh, 423, 590, 673, 675, 782.
Dawkins, James B., 1188.
Dawson, Nancy, Schooner, 573.
Dawson, Thomas H.
 Correspondence:
   Noppers, J. D., 577.
   War Department, C. S., 575.
 Mentioned, 576.
Dean, Horace, 807.
Dearing, James, 520.
Deberry, John H., 543.
De Bow, J. D. B., 648.
De Clouet, Alexander, 1186.
De Jarnette, Daniel C., 137, 1189, 1191.
Dement, William F.
 Correspondence:
   Adj't. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 547.
   Davis, Jefferson, 545.
   Lee, R. E., 546.
 Mentioned, 546.
Denegre, Joseph.
 Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 565.
Denham, John, 19.
Denis, Jules C.
 Assigned commandant of conscripts, Mississippi, 376.
 Mentioned, 95, 376.
Deserters.
 Apprehension and delivery, 294, 880, 943, 976, 1113, 1119-1124.
 Enlistment prohibited, 255, 714, 1178.
 Habeas corpus act, 203, 204.
 Harboring, etc., or enticing to desert, 189, 203, 204, 255, 284, 1178.
 Inducements to desert from U. S. Army and Navy, 591, 1041, 1042.
 Measures to secure return of, 707-710.
 Number, Mar. 3, 1865, 1119, 1122.
 Remarks, Jefferson Davis, 69.
 Returned to Army, 363, 1109.
 Rolls of, monthly, 518, 675, 676.
 Union, 376-378, 563, 591, 863-866.
De Vaux & Co., 7.
Devereux, John H., 408, 410, 412, 413.
De Witt, W. H., 1186.
Deynoodt, Joseph, 1181.
Diadem, Schooner, 1057.
Dickins, John R., 8.
Dickinson, James S.
 Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 994.
 Mentioned, 1190.
Dillon, Edward, 399.
Discharge of Enlisted Men.
 Expiration of term, 298.
 Minors, 1153.
 Over forty-five years, 1153.
Dix, John A., 945.
Dixon, Robert E., 1016, 1017.
Dobson, W. W., 397.
Don, Steamer, 4, 10, 23, 28, 29, 113, 154, 351.
Donahoe, Michael.
 Correspondence, G. P. Kane, 512.
Dorsey, Gustavus W., 572.
Dorsey, J. T. B., 725.
Dortch, William T.
 Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 966.
 Mentioned, 137, 1187, 1190.
Dorton, William, 816.
Doughty, Mr., 444.
Doughty, Mr., 444.
Douglas, J. S., 972.
Dowd, Henry A., 746.
Dowd, W. C., 394, 396.
Drewry, C. S. S., 521.
Druid, Vessel, 958.
Dudley, T. U., jr.
 Correspondence. See Subsistence Dept., C. S. A.
Duff, William L., 543.
Duffield, C. B.
 Acting Supt. of Conscription, C. S. A., 1183.
 Correspondence. See Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A.
 Mentioned, 610, 611, 633, 979, 1183.
Dugan, Hammond, 725.
Dumas, Jean Baptiste, 695, 699.
Duncan, J. W., 1017.
Duncan, James A.
 Correspondence, G. F. Pierce, 1118.
Dunmore, John Murray, 132, 133.
Dunn, A. W., 966.
Dupont, Lamot, Schooner, 1057.
Dupont, W. S.
 Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1194.
 Correspondence, S. Jones, 1194.
Dupré, Lucius J., 137, 841, 842, 844, 1188, 1190.
E. F. Lewis, Schooner, 1058.
Early, Jubal A., 520, 757, 857, 989.
East Tennessee, Department of.
 Commissioner, habeas corpus act, 211, 212.
East Tennessee and Georgia Railroad.
 Employés excused from drills, 537.
Echols, John.
 Correspondence:
   Lee, R. E., 1165.
   War Department, C. S., 805, 812.
 Mentioned, 802, 803, 806, 812, 1165, 1182.
Echols, Joseph H., 1190.
Echols, William H.
 Correspondence, Governor of South Carolina, 1025, 1026.
 Mentioned, 1018, 1020, 1022.
Edwards, A. F.
 Correspondence, Subsistence Dept., C. S. A., 402.
 Mentioned, 408.
Elam, J. B., 94.
Elgee, C. Le D., 400.
Elkins, M. S., 19.
Ella, Steamer, 957.
Ellet, Henry T., 1184.
Ellicott, John, 700, 702.
Ellington, Private, 507.
Elliott, E. S., 543.
Elliott, John M., 1186, 1188, 1190.
Ellis, D., Schooner, 1057.
Ellis, John W.
 Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 1041.
Ellyson, H. K., 809.

Elzey, Arnold.

Assignments to command, 248.
Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 269.

Mentioned, 248, 311, 512.

Emma Henry, Steamer, 956.

Emma L. Hall, Bark, 1058.

Empress Theresa, Bark, 1058.

Engineer Corps, C. S. A.

Organization, etc., 190, 944, 1084.

Transfer of officers to engineer troops, C. S. A., 191.

Engineer Department, C. S. A.

Appropriations, 139, 480, 626.

Condition, needs, etc., 975, 980, 981, 1084-1086, 1095.

Correspondence:

Adj't. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 971.

Lee, R. E., 829, 838.

North Carolina, Governor of, 570.

War Department, C. S., 40, 312, 392, 576, 668, 742, 778, 839, 970, 980, 1007, 1019, 1020, 1058, 1084, 1114, 1117.

Details, 1101, 1106-1108.

Direction and control of impressed negroes, 898.

Estimates of appropriation, 778, 779.

Gilmer, J. F., Chief of Bureau, 1183.

Pro rata distribution of appropriations, 627, 628.

Rives, A. L., Acting Chief of Bureau, 1183.

Smith, M. L., Chief of Bureau, 202, 1183.

Engineer Troops, C. S. A.

Organization, strength, etc., 190, 191, 1083, 1084.

Enlisted Men.

Bounty to, in service six months from Apr. 1, 1864, 178, 184.

Clothing, 1033, 1034.

Commutation of rations, 53, 54, 593.

Descriptive lists, 163, 298.

Details, 493, 591.

Discharge, 298, 1153.

Examination of detailed, for field duty, 1153.

Extra duty pay, etc., 591-593, 623, 654.

Furloughs, 163, 175, 749, 999.

Increase of pay, 492.

Invalid Corps, 214-216, 1083.

Pay of detailed, 3.

Promotion for skill and valor, 84, 190, 1167.

Sale of rations prohibited, 686.

Scouts and guards in Mississippi Valley, 493, 494.

Statement of last payment to deceased, 1.

Tobacco ration, 299, 370.

Transportation, 163.

Enrolling Officers.

Congressional district, abolished, 675, 750.

Duties, etc., 40-42, 57, 163, 218-223, 489, 503, 519, 1176, 1177.

Revision and correction of enrollment, 12.

Enrollment and Conscription of C. S. Forces. See Conscription.*Ensigns.

Appointment, etc., 190, 492.

Office abolished, 1167, 1168.

Erlanger, Emile V.

Correspondence, C. J. McRae, 158.

Mentioned, 155.

Erlanger & Co., 158, 241.*Eshleman, Benjamin F., 294.*Estell, Carrie, Brig, 1057.*Estelle, W. N.

Commissioner for Mississippi, habeas corpus act, 257.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 257.

Etta Caroline, Schooner, 1057.*Eubank, G. F., 972.*Eustis, Abram, 320.*Eve, F. Edgeworth, 536.*Ewell, Richard S.*Correspondence:

Adj't. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 747.

Hancock, F. W., 1193.

Post-Office Department, C. S., 972, 974.

Mentioned, 520, 970, 971, 989, 1144, 1182.

Ewing, George W., 137, 1186, 1188, 1190.*Examining Boards for Conscripts.

Appointment, duties, etc., 66, 182, 183, 1176, 1177.

Exchange, Delivery, etc., of Prisoners.*Remarks:

Davis, Jefferson, 797.

Secretary of War, C. S., 335, 336, 764-766.

Executive Departments, C. S.

Condition, needs, etc., 1095.

Increased compensation heads of, etc., 485.

Principal officials, 1861-1865, 1184.

Reorganization of Cabinet, 1046-1048.

Exemptions from Conscription.

Acts of C. S. Congress, 178-181.

Agents, etc., tax in kind, 548.

Agriculturists and overseers, 179, 240, 994, 995.

Apothecaries, 179.

Cattle Battalion in Florida, 730, 731.

Dunkards, 240.

Editors and employes of newspapers, 179, 472, 473.

Exhibits, Apr. 16, 1862-February, 1865, 103, 359-363, 1102, 1103, 1110.

Former laws repealed, 179.

Fraudulent, 25.

Mechanics, Ordnance Dept., C. S. A., 1082, 1083.

Members and officers of C. S. Congress, 179.

Ministers of the Gospel, 179.

Number of State officers on certificate of Governors, 851, 866-870.

Persons and classes, 178-181, 183, 218-224, 238, 239, 494, 495, 515.

Physicians, 179.

Postal employes, 179.

Presidents and teachers of colleges, etc., 179.

Public necessity, 179.

Public Printer and journeymen, 179.

Railroad officials and employes, 179, 598-601.

Regulations, 36, 42, 181, 182, 515, 516.

Religious opinions, 178, 183.

Remarks, Jefferson Davis, 1128, 1129, 1133.

Revision and correction, 12, 25, 57.

Society of Friends, 240.

State officials and Legislatures, 179.

Superintendents, physicians, and nurses of asylums and public hospitals, 179.

Vice-President, C. S., 179.

See also respective States.

Ezzard, William.

Correspondence, L. J. Gartrell, 105.

Mentioned, 105, 106.

Fagan, James F., 989.*Falcon, Steamer, 526, 566.*Falkner, Jefferson, 393, 394, 396-398.

Fannie, Steamer, 161, 351.
 Fant, J. M. F., 604.
 Fariss, Mr., 807.
 Fariss, Robert C.
     Correspondence:
         Treasury Department, C. S., 602.
         War Department, C. S., 603.
     Plan for impressment of supplies, 602-604.
 Farrow, Henry P., 698.
 Farrow, James, 137, 1188, 1191.
 Fayetteville (N. C.) Observer, 153.
 Fearn, Thomas, 1185.
 Feilden, H. Wemyss, 513.
 Fellows, George, 810, 811.
 Fennell, R. A., 972.
 Fenwick, John R., 320.
 Ferguson, J. B., jr.
     Correspondence, Quartermaster-General's Office,
         C. S. A., 674, 684.
     Mentioned, 155, 156, 296, 302, 526, 527, 529, 673, 675,
         683.
 Ferguson, Samuel W., 295.
 Ferguson, William G., 726.
 Finance.
     Bonds, C. S.:
         Acts of C. S. Congress, 110, 159-161, 482.
         Interest certificates, 110, 111.
         Payments for supplies with, 253.
     Certificates of indebtedness, 253-255, 465, 472.
     Coin, Act of C. S. Congress, Mar. 17, 1865, 1155, 1156.
     Cotton bonds for purchase or construction of steamers, 6, 7.
     Deficiency of funds, 941, 942.
     Funds for agents abroad, 154-157, 210, 211, 240-
         242, 296, 297, 301, 302, 525-529, 587-590, 673-675,
         899-902.
     Purchase of currency of United States, 82, 83,
         477, 741, 742.
     Reduction of the currency, 253-255.
     Remarks:
         Davis, Jefferson, 367, 794-796.
         Lee, R. E., 253, 254.
         Secretary of War, C. S., 254, 255.
     Treasury notes:
         Acts of C. S. Congress, 159-161, 482.
         Payments for supplies with, 253, 254.
 Finegan, Joseph, 324.
 Finlayson, John.
     Correspondence, Q. M. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 748.
 Finnie, T. J., 698, 700, 702.
 Fisher, Ephraim S., 823.
 Fitzgerald, Mr., 444.
 Fitzhugh, Edward H., 920.
 Fitzpatrick, Richard, 625, 626.
 Flag-of-Truce Boats.
     Exempted from destruction, 283.
 Flags.
     Consolidated regiments, 1168.
     Disposition of captured, 571.
 Flamingo, Steamer, 526.
 Flanner, Joseph H., 1117.
 Floral Wreath, Schooner, 1057.
 Florida.
     Agricultural details, 1104.
     Alleged irregularities of C. S. impressing
         officers, 46-48, 560, 561.

Florida—Continued.

Conference of impressment commissioners at Montgomery, Ala., 608.
 Deserters returned to Army, 362, 1109.
 Estimate of military resources, 635.
 Exhibits of conscripts enrolled, exempted, detailed, assigned, etc., 362, 1101-1107.
 Exportation of cotton, 166, 167.
 Measures for defense, 625.
 Measures to provide supplies, 499, 500.
 Members of C. S. Congress, 1185, 1187-1190.
 Men furnished, 362, 669, 1101.
 Military affairs in. Remarks:
     Florida, Governor of, 16, 17.
     Hoge, J. B., 166.
     Miller, W., assigned and relieved commandant of conscripts, 66, 569.
     Munitions of war, 45, 83, 111.
     Operations in. See—
         Florida Expedition. Feb. 5-22, 1864.
         Olustee, or Ocean Pond. Engagement, Feb.
         20, 1864.
     Orgn., equip., etc., of vols., 15-17, 21-23, 111, 112.
     Quota impressed slaves, 933.
     Recruitment of Perry's brigade, 15-17, 21-23, 111, 112.
     Reserves, 464, 517.
     Schedules of prices for provisions, etc., 686.
     State officers exempted from conscription on certificate of Governor, 851.
     Supplies for soldiers' families, 14, 15, 18-21, 47, 48.
 Florida, Adjutant and Inspector General of.
     Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 669.
     Orders, General, series 1864: Nos. 11, 14, 625.
 Florida, Governor of.
     Address to people, 625.
     Correspondence:
         Bailey, W., 500.
         Bryan, C. A., 21.
         Clarke, T. E., 21.
         Davis, B. F., 21.
         Davis, Jefferson, 15, 380, 464, 625, 671, 1110.
         Florida, Adj. and Insp. Gen. of, 669.
         Georgia, Governor of, 303.
         Lang, D., 21.
         North Carolina, Governor of, 685, 721.
         Richards, J. R., 47.
         Taylor, D. B., 21.
         Taylor, J. L., 21.
         Tolbert, J. M., 21.
         Walker, N. B., 21.
         Wall, P. G., 47.
         War Department, C. S., 14, 45, 111, 499, 560.
         White, P. W., 18, 19.
         Whitner, B. F., 21.
     Response to call for conference at Augusta,
         Ga., 721.
     Response to Governor Brown's proposition relative to exportation of products, 303, 304, 380.
 Florida Expedition.
     Feb. 5-22, 1864, 324.
 Florida Legislature.
     Impressment of negroes, 905.
     Resolution of confidence in Jefferson Davis,
         1110.
 Florida Railroad.
     Removal of iron, 561.

Florida Troops (C.).

Cavalry—Battalions: 5th, 45, 83, 111; Commissary Battalion, 730, 731.

Cavalry—Regiments: 2d, 17.

Florle, Steamer, 1056.

Floyd, John J., 311.

Floyd, W. J., 8.

Follen, Captain, 123.

Foote, Henry S., 1188, 1191.

Foote, James H., 1157.

Forbes, J. M.

Commissioner for Virginia, habeas corpus act, 257.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 257.

Ford, L. H., 1186.

Foreigners.

Banishment from Georgia, 560.

Circular letter of Jefferson Davis to Governors of States, on subject of harmony of action with regard to, 670.

Emigration of Polish exiles and Scotchmen encouraged, 625, 626.

Enlistment of foreign prisoners of war in C. S. Army, 694, 821, 824, 825, 1011, 1012, 1083.

Foreign element in the North, 4-6.

Inducements to desert from U. S. Army and Navy, 591.

Measures to secure services of, in C. S. Army, 625, 626.

Non-residents entitled to leave the Confederacy, 604.

Passports, 669, 670.

Treatment in North Carolina, 724.

See also Alien Enemies.

Foreign Relations.

Remarks, Jefferson Davis, 792-794.

Foreman, Thomas M., 1185.

Forrest, Nathan B.

Correspondence:

Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 1.

Polk, L., 229, 281, 311.

Mentioned, 66, 324, 590, 758, 989, 1163.

Forsyth, Charles, 1065, 1066.

Forsyth, John.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 1110.

Foster, Ira R.

Correspondence. See Georgia, Q. M. Gen. of.

Mentioned, 120.

Foster, John G., 669.

Foster, Thomas J., 137, 1188, 1190.

Foster, Thomas R.

Correspondence, R. W. N. Noland, 1031.

Mentioned, 1031.

Fowler, William H.

Circular, Alabama Army records, 299, 300.

Mentioned, 299, 300.

Fox, Steamer, 958.

Foy, Henry H., 322.

Francis, John, 807, 808.

Frank (Slave), 661.

Frankenthal, Mr., 1180.

Fraser, James L.

Correspondence. See Samuel Jones.

Fraser, Trenholm & Co., 156, 157, 242, 288, 525, 526, 528, 529, 566, 588, 674.

Frayser, P. P., 972.

Freeman, Thomas W., 1188.

French, M. M., 972.

French, S. Bassett.

Correspondence:

Allen, A. M., 90.

Cummings, J. F., 117.

Subsistence Department, C. S. A., 89, 533, 535, 653, 1136.

Virginia, Governor of, 557.

Mentioned, 21, 91, 115, 268, 291, 738, 781, 782, 899-901, 919.

Fry, A. E., Vessel, 956.

Fry, Hugh N., 660.

Fry, William H., 746, 998.

Fuller, Thomas C., 1191.

Fulton, A. S., 71.

Funk, Jas., Pilot-boat, 1057.

Funsten, David, 137, 1189, 1191.

Furloughs.

Conscripts, 534, 578.

Georgia Legislature, 174.

Officers, Army, 1178.

Regulations, 999.

Reserves, 518, 519.

Sick, convalescent, and wounded soldiers, 175, 749, 999, 1178.

Furman, Charles M., 51, 78.

Gabbett, William.

Correspondence, Niter and Mining Bureau, C. S. A., 195.

Mentioned, 697, 698, 702.

Gaines, R. V., 593.

Gaither, Burgess S., 137, 1188, 1191.

Gardenhire, E. L., 1189.

Gardner, Franklin, 847, 902.

Gardner, John, 816.

Gardner, William M.

Correspondence, B. Bragg, 725.

Mentioned, 64, 65, 692, 724, 727, 728, 730, 747, 821.

Garland, Augustus H., 137, 1185, 1188-1190.

Garland, Rufus K., 1190.

Garlington, A. C.

Correspondence. See South Carolina, Adjutant and Inspector General of.

Garnett, C. F. M., 694.

Garnett, Muscoe R. H., 1189.

Garrison, James L., 543.

Gartrell, Lucius J.

Correspondence:

Davis, Jefferson, 277.

Ezzard, W., 105.

Georgia, Governor of, 197.

War Department, C. S., 105, 196.

Mentioned, 137, 277, 278, 372, 475, 1188.

Gause, William R.

Authority to recruit in Missouri, 713.

Mentioned, 713.

Gayle, Mr., 400.

Gem, Vessel, 351.

General Officers.

Appointment, etc., 194.

Aides-de-camp, 1125, 1126, 1175.

Leaves of absence, 229.

Opinion, Attorney-General, C. S., 313-315.

Pay, etc., 333, 497.

Staff, 316, 352, 353, 450-455, 498, 593, 835-838, 1125, 1126, 1173-1175.

Temporary rank, 457, 496.

Gentry, Meredith P., 1189.

Georgia.

Address of J. Hartridge, et al., to people, 832.

Agricultural details and exempts, 542, 543, 873, 874, 1104.

Alleged irregularities of C. S. impressing officers, 446.

Banishment of aliens refusing to volunteer, 560.

Browne, W. M., assignments as commandant and superintendent of conscripts, 269, 274, 281.

Calls for militia, 612, 1058, 1181.

Camp guards, etc., in conscript service Sept. 9, 1864, 634.

Census statistics, 103.

Commissioner, habeas corpus act, 225.

Competition between State and C. S. agents, 64, 65, 152, 153.

Conference of impressment commissioners at Montgomery, Ala., 608.

Conscription supporting force, 613.

Consolidation of organizations, 536, 537, 822.

Deserters returned to Army, 361, 1109.

Detailed men not liable to militia or State duty, 538.

Distillation of grain, 105-107, 115-120.

Enforcement of conscription acts, 243, 244, 259, 260, 276, 277, 344-349, 371, 372, 381-386, 416-422, 431-444, 446-448, 455-457, 476, 502, 530, 531, 624, 640, 641, 981, 1009, 1010, 1030, 1081, 1048-1050.

Estimated percentage of white population furnished, 103.

Estimate of military resources, 100, 635.

Exhibits of conscripts enrolled, exempted, detailed, assigned, etc., 103, 361, 872-874, 1101-1109.

Exportation of cotton, 402, 416, 439, 442.

Howard's battalion non-conscripts, 457-463, 478.

Measures to provide supplies, 64, 65, 152, 153, 167, 168, 402, 416, 439, 442.

Members of C. S. Congress, 1185, 1187-1190.

Men furnished, 102, 103, 361, 872, 1101.

Men subject to conscription, 1864, 103.

Military affairs in. Remarks, P. A. Lawson, 967, 968.

Militia, 259, 260, 536, 545, 550, 569, 612, 724, 748, 749, 822, 850, 1034, 1058, 1181.

Muster in of old men and boys tendered by Governor, 537.

Operations in. See Atlanta Campaign. May 1-Sept. 8, 1864.

Persons employed in conscript service, 871.

Quota impressed slaves, 933.

Recruiting service, 714, 991-994.

Reorganization of State Guard, 13, 25, 31, 33, 42, 48, 49, 61-63, 164, 165.

Requisition for troops, 25.

Reserves, 196, 197, 344-349, 371, 372, 421, 422, 439, 440, 473-475.

Resolutions G. T. Anderson's brigade, condemning action of Governor Brown and State Legislature, 372-375.

Resources in men and provisions, 74, 75, 113.

Schedules of prices for provisions, etc., 686, 704-706.

State officers exempted from conscription on certificate of Governor, 851, 866-870, 1112.

State troops, 310, 311, 472, 533.

Georgia—Continued.

Supplies for Army of Virginia, 312.

Georgia, Governor of.

Call for the militia, 1181.

Conference of Governors at Augusta, 706, 707, 735, 736.

Correspondence:

Anderson, G. T., 372.

Beauregard, G. T., 1058.

Browne, W. M., 416, 440.

Cobb, H., 347, 381, 417, 421, 431, 434, 442, 455.

Cummings, J. F., 117, 118, 120.

Davis, Jefferson, 12, 402, 446, 538, 545, 671, 1034.

Florida, Governor of, 303.

Gartrell, L. J., 197.

Hood, J. B., 636.

Johnston, J. E., 472, 533.

Jones, S., 1180.

North Carolina, Governor of, 685, 706.

Smith, G. W., 1181.

Stewart, T. R., 1137.

Treasury Department, C. S., 416, 439, 442.

War Department, C. S., 25, 61, 164, 174, 243, 276, 545, 550, 612.

Habeas corpus, 3

Orders, series 1865: Mar. 13, 1138.

Proclamations, 345-347, 536, 560, 569, 636, 724, 832, 850, 1182, 1183.

Proposition relative to exportation of products, 303, 380.

Response to requisitions for troops, 61-63, 164, 165.

Response to resolutions of G. T. Anderson's brigade, condemning action of, 372-375.

Withdraws State militia from command of General Hood, 636.

Georgia, Quartermaster-General of.

Correspondence, War Dept., C. S., 64, 152, 167.

Georgia Legislature.

Convened by Governor, 1182, 1183.

Furloughs to members holding commissions in Army, 174.

Orgn., equip., etc., of vols., 1, 2.

Resolutions:

Conscription act, 244.

Habeas corpus act, 234, 235.

Peace, 235-237, 825.

Prosecution of the war, 12.

Georgia Railroad.

Employés excused from drills, 537.

Georgia Troops (C.).

Cavalry—Battalions: 6th (State), 311; 7th (State), 311; 8th (State), 311; 9th (State), 311; 10th (State), 311; 12th (State), 311; 15th (State), 311; 16th (State), 311; 20th, 536; 30th, 822.

Cavalry—Regiments: 2d (State), 311; 3d (State), 311; 4th (State), 311; 7th, 537; 8th, 536; 9th, 536, 537; 10th, 536, 537; 10th (State), 311; 11th, 822; 62d Partisan Rangers, 536.

Infantry—Battalions: 1st (State), 310, 311; 2d (State), 310, 311; 3d (State), 311; 4th (State), 311; 5th (State), 311; 11th (State), 311; 13th (State), 311; 14th (State), 311; 17th (State), 311; 18th (State), 311; 19th (State), 311; 20th (State), 311; 21st (State), 311; 22d (State), 311; 23d (State), 310, 311; Augusta Arsenal, 474; Howard's, 458-462, 478.

Georgia Troops (C.)—Continued.

Infantry—Regiments: 1st Regulars, 15, 16; 1st Reserves, 746; 1st (State), 311; 2d Reserves, 746; 3d Reserves, 746; 4th Reserves, 746; 5th Reserves, 746; 5th (State), 311; 6th, 857; 6th (State), 311; 7th (State), 311; 8th (State), 311; 9th (State), 311; 11th (State), 311; 12th (State), 311; 36th, 714; 64th, 15.

Miscellaneous: Cherokee Legion (State), 311; Cobb's Legion, 536; Floyd Legion (State), 311; Phillips Legion, 536.

Gholson, Thomas S., 1191.

Gibbon, Israel, 350.

Gibboney, Robert.

Correspondence. See Virginia, Impressment Commissioners of.

Gibson, Mr., 19.

Gibson, Eustace.

Correspondence, J. C. Porter, 666.

Mentioned, 666, 667.

Gillasple, W. M., 1180.

Gilliat, J. K., & Co., 525, 527, 528, 588, 674.

Gilmer, Jeremy F.

Chief of Engineer Bureau, C. S. A., 1183.

Correspondence:

Beauregard, G. T., 459.

Robertson, J. W., 459.

See also Engineer Department, C. S. A.

Mentioned, 202, 453, 664, 666, 669, 840, 898, 899, 1020, 1095, 1114, 1118, 1183.

Gilmer, John A., 1191.

Give, L. de, 538.

Gladiator, Steamer, 570, 573, 574.

Glenaron, Bark, 1057.

Glendy, William J., 289.

Glenn, Jesse A.

Authority to raise mounted brigade in Georgia, 714, 991-994.

Correspondence:

Cobb, H., 993.

Davis, Jefferson, 714, 992.

Mentioned, 991, 992.

Glenn, R. P., 115.

Glenn, Carr & Wright, 115.

Godspeed, Schooner, 1058.

Goldning, H. W., 157.

Goldthwaite, Thomas, 609-611, 631.

Goode, John, jr.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 544.

Mentioned, 137, 1189, 1191.

Goodman, Walter.

Correspondence:

Lee, S. D., 478, 508, 514.

Polk, L., 9.

Mentioned, 646, 651.

Goodwin, J. D., 650.

Goodwyn, T. J., 407.

Goodyear, Caroline, Schooner, 566, 573.

Gordon, Eugene C., 1064.

Gordon, John B.

Correspondence, R. E. Lee, 1096.

Mentioned, 1064.

Gordon, William F., jr., 162, 1143.

Gorgas, Josiah.

Chief of Ordnance Bureau, C. S. A., 1183.

Gorgas, Josiah—Continued.

Correspondence. See Ordnance Dept., C. S. A.

Mentioned, 27, 46, 293, 298, 602, 608, 664, 713, 741, 749, 943, 1136, 1183.

Gorsuch, R. B., 702.

Governors of States.

Circular letter of Jefferson Davis, on subject of harmony of action with regard to aliens, 670.

Conference at Augusta, Ga., 684, 685, 692, 693, 706, 707, 721, 722, 735, 736, 820.

See also Governors of respective States.

Graham, M. D., 137, 1189.

Graham, William A., 1190.

Grant, Henry, 1014.

Grant, U. S.

Correspondence, R. E. Lee, 1135.

Mentioned, 163, 563, 639, 717, 756, 757, 766, 1001, 1042, 1135.

Graves, William C., 666.

Gray, Henry, 1190.

Gray, Peter W., 137, 1189.

Graybill, J. Henry.

Correspondence, C. Terry, 719.

Mentioned, 718.

Greeley, Horace, 584-586, 636.

Green, Captain, 53.

Green, A., 700.

Green, Duff C.

Correspondence. See Alabama, Q. M. Gen. of.

Greer, Elkanah, 231, 232.

Gregg, John, 1186.

Gregg, Kate, Vessel, 958.

Griffin, Joel R., 536.

Guerin, H. C.

Correspondence:

Conner, H. W., 412.

Means, S. C., 411.

Subsistence Department, C. S. A., 408.

Trout, T. B., 408.

Mentioned, 402, 403, 405, 409.

Guerrey, Theodore L.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 825, 826.

Guggenheimer, J. & H., 810.

Gulf, District of the.

Commissioner, habeas corpus act, 211, 212, 243.

Organization, strength, etc., of troops:

June 30, 1864, 520.

Mar. 10, 1865, 1182.

Gwynn, D. W., 45.

Gwynn, James, 543.

Habeas Corpus, Writ of.

Act of C. S. Congress, Feb. 15, 1864, 203, 204.

Commissioner for:

Army of Tennessee (C.), 211, 212.

Department of East Tennessee, 211, 212.

District of the Gulf, 211, 212, 243.

Georgia, 225.

Mississippi, 257.

North Carolina, 210, 213, 238.

Virginia, 257.

Commissioners to investigate cases, 204.

Conspiracies, 203, 204.

Constitutionality of act, 213, 214, 238.

Correspondence with enemy, 203, 204.

Defined, 231, 232.

Habeas Corpus, Writ of—Continued.

- Deserters, 203, 204.
- Destruction of public property, 204.
- Discharge of conscripts, 659–661.
- Enforcement in North Carolina, 104, 256, 267, 268, 274, 275, 284, 556.
- Inciting servile insurrection, 203.
- Limitations, 203.
- Message of Jefferson Davis, 429, 430.
- Pay of commissioners, 493.
- Powers, etc., of commissioners, 493.
- Regulations, 204, 205.
- Remarks:
  - Davis, Jefferson, 69, 70, 200, 201, 429, 430, 1133, 1134.
  - Georgia, Governor of, 374.
  - Secretary of War, C. S., 198.
  - Stephens, A. H., 279.
- Resolutions Georgia Legislature, 234, 235.
- Spies, 203, 204.
- Trans-Mississippi Department, 232.
- Treason, 203, 204.
- Hagedorn, R., 157.
- Hahn, Michael, 400.
- Hahr, F. J., 490.
- Hair, J. S., 404.
- Hale, J. R., 702.
- Hale, Stephen F., 1185.
- Hall, Andy, 808.
- Hall, David P., 808.
- Hall, Emma L., Bark, 1058.
- Hall, W. J., 543.
- Halyburton, James D., 52, 72, 73, 123.
- Hamilton, John, 816.
- Hamilton, Peter.
  - Commissioner for District of the Gulf, habeas corpus act, 211, 212, 243.
  - Correspondence, War Dept., C. S., 212, 243, 267.
- Hamlin, Hannibal, 127.
- Hammet, James P.
  - Correspondence, H. J. Leory, 804.
  - Mentioned, 806.
- Hammond, William M., 1001.
- Hampton, Wade, 325, 326, 758.
- Hampton Roads, Va.
  - Peace conference, 1058.
  - Remarks of Jefferson Davis, 1134, 1135.
- Hamson, Mr., 444.
- Hancock, Francis W.
  - Correspondence, R. S. Ewell, 1193.
- Hancock, N. H., 285.
- Handy, A. H., 902, 1162.
- Hanks, H. T., 543.
- Hanly, Thomas B., 137, 1188, 1190.
- Hannon, John H., 398.
- Hannon, Moses W., 398.
- Hansa, Steamer, 10, 28, 29, 113, 154, 213, 957.
- Hanson, Samuel, 972.
- Hardee, William J., 8, 989, 1041, 1083, 1182.
- Hardeman, Thomas, Jr., 235, 237, 244.
- Hardin, E. J., 504, 507.
- Harman, William, 807.
- Harris, Charles J., 281, 477.
- Harris, David B., 664.

Harris, George, 1055.Harris, Isham G.

Correspondence. See Tennessee, Governor of.
Mentioned, 707.

Harris, John T.

Correspondence, J. B. Baldwin, 845
Mentioned, 846.

Harris, Samuel S.

Correspondence:
Archer, J. N., 650, 651.
Bragg, B., 645.
Oldham, W. H., 649.
White, B. S., 650.
Mentioned, 645.

Harris, Sarah B., Schooner, 1057.Harris, Thomas A., 1079, 1186, 1188.Harris, Wiley P.

Correspondence, W. L. Brandon, 903.
Mentioned, 902, 1186.

Harris, William S., 66, 1089.Harrison, Burton N.

Correspondence. See Jefferson Davis.
Mentioned, 998.

Harrison, Ed., 702.Harrison, Edmund, 702.Harrison, James E., 961, 962.Harrison, James T., 1186.Harrison, William B.

Correspondence. See Virginia, Impressment Commissioners of.
Mentioned, 54, 271, 389.

Hart, Simeon.

Correspondence, N. Clements, 566.
Mentioned, 76, 565, 566, 572, 573.

Hartridge, Julian.

Address to people of Georgia, 832.
Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 105.
Mentioned, 137, 1188, 1190.

Harvie, John B., 725.Hastings, L. W., 76.Hatch, Frank H.

Correspondence:
Hodge, G. B., 681.
Treasury Department, C. S., 677.

Hatch, Lewis M.

Correspondence, Treasury Dept., C. S., 664.
Mentioned, 664.

Hatcher, Robert A., 1191.Hawes, James M., 520.Hawes, Mary A., Schooner, 1057.Hayes, S. C.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 4.
Haynes, Landon C., 137, 1187, 1190.

Heath, J. E.

Correspondence, J. C. Shields, 667.

Hébert, Louis, 428.Heflin, John T., 396.Heflin, R. S., 397.Heiskell, Joseph B., 1189, 1191.Helm, Charles J., 424, 566, 569.Helm, George M., 700.Helmley, William.

Correspondence, G. P. Kane, 512.

Hemphill, John, 1186.

- Henderson, John T., 311.
- Henley, R. S.
Correspondence, J. C. Shields, 667.
- Hennen, William D.
Commissioner for Department of East Tennessee, habeas corpus act, 211, 212.
Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 211, 865.
Mentioned, 865.
- Henry, E. T., 66.
- Henry, Emma, Steamer, 956.
- Henry, Gustavus A., 137, 1187, 1190.
- Henry, Wilkes, 66.
- Herbert, Caleb C., 1189, 1191.
- Heriot, John O.
Correspondence, J. Caldwell, 405.
Mentioned, 403, 404, 412.
- Herndon, Addison C., 682.
- Heroes of America, 806, 808, 810, 816.
- Herring, W. F., 500.
- Hewitt, Thomas M., 668.
- Heyliger, Louis, 288, 716, 783, 902.
- Heyward, Irvine Keith, 1005.
- Higgason, J. A., 702.
- Hight, James, 808.
- Hill, Abner B., 393, 394, 396-398.
- Hill, Ambrose P.
Correspondence:
Anderson, R. H., 22.
Lee, R. E., 23.
Mentioned, 21.
- Hill, Benjamin H.
Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 105, 621.
Mentioned, 137, 1185, 1187, 1189.
- Hill, Daniel H., 945.
- Hill, Henry, 920, 921.
- Hill, L. D., 972.
- Hill, William M.
Correspondence, Niter and Mining Bureau, C. S. A., 1165.
Mentioned, 1164.
- Hilton, Robert B.
Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 1007.
Mentioned, 137, 1188, 1190.
- Hirsch, Hermann, 351.
- Hobart, Edward, 166, 167.
- Hodge, Benjamin L., 1190.
- Hodge, George B.
Correspondence:
Davis, Jefferson, 517, 683.
Hatch, F. H., 681.
Mentioned, 445, 678-680, 682, 1180, 1181, 1186, 1188.
- Hoge, Daniel H., 807, 809.
- Hoge, John Blair.
Correspondence, T. L. Bayne, 166.
See also Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A.
Mentioned, 167, 883.
- Hoke, Robert F., 989.
- Holcombe, James P.
Correspondence, State Department, C. S., 583.
Mentioned, 584, 587, 636, 639, 640, 1189.
Mission to Canada, 583, 584, 639, 640.
- Holden, William W., 88.
- Holder, William D., 137, 1188, 1190.
- Holliday, Frederick W. M.
Correspondence, J. Y. Beall, 444.
Mentioned, 1191.
- Hollis, E., 394, 396.
- Holly, J. J., 394, 396.
- Holmes, F. S., 698, 702.
- Holmes, Theophilus H.
Correspondence:
Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 353.
Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 755.
North Carolina, Governor of, 746, 754.
War Department, C. S., 645.
Mentioned, 313, 354, 788, 840, 868, 894.
- Holt, Hines, 1188.
- Homochitto, District of.
Orders, series 1864: Sept. 13, 682.
Orders, Special, series 1864: No. 11, 682.
- Hood, Arthur, 17.
- Hood, John B.
Correspondence, Governor of Georgia, 636.
Mentioned, 601, 621, 636, 652-654, 685, 714, 813, 880, 989, 1080, 1088.
- Hoof, Jas. Law, 834.
- Hooper, Johnson J., 1015, 1017.
- Hope, Steamer, 955, 956.
- Horses.
Abandoned or captured, 593.
Inspections, 1000.
Wheat for feeding, prohibited, 548.
- Horses, Cavalry and Artillery.
Impressment, 369.
- Hospitals.
Accommodations for sick and wounded officers, 174, 496.
Boards of examination, 721.
Clothing of deceased soldiers, 572.
Clothing to soldiers, 594.
Commutation of rations in private, 53, 593.
Commutation value of rations, 175, 498, 534.
Deficiency of supplies, 718-720.
Descriptive lists for furloughed soldiers, 163.
Details of mechanics, 534.
Duties, etc., of medical officers, 1.
Funds, 28, 175, 498, 518, 534, 718-720.
Payments to sick, convalescent, and wounded soldiers, 298, 1000.
Rations, 54, 175, 534, 592, 593, 721.
Supplies, 54.
Trans-Mississippi Department, 175.
- Hough, Lewis E., 972.
- House, E. D., 19.
- House, James, 320.
- House, John F., 1186.
- Howard, Schooner, 1057.
- Howard, B. S., 972.
- Howard, T. B., Jr., 458, 460-462.
- Howenton, Sarah E.
Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 524.
- Hubard, E. W.
Correspondence. See Virginia, Impressment Commissioners of.
- Hudgins, Mr., 444.
- Hudson, Thomas.
Assigned commandant of conscripts, Mississippi, 820.
Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 820.
- Huger, Daniel E.
Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 752.
- Hughes, John, 401.
- Humphreys, Frederick C., 83, 111.

Humphries, H. G.

Correspondence, H. C. Lockhart, 1061, 1063.
Mentioned, 1059.

Hunt, William Richardson, 34, 700, 702.

Hunt, Williamson, 8.

Hunter, Andrew.

Correspondence:
Lee, R. E., 1007, 1012.
War Department, C. S., 445.

Hunter, David, 757.

Hunter, James D., 667, 668.

Hunter, Robert M. T.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 304.
Mentioned, 137, 208, 473, 476, 1058, 1116, 1184, 1187, 1190.
Secretary of State, C. S., 1184.

Huse, Caleb.

Correspondence:
Bloodgood, M. H., 157.
McRae, C. J., 157.
Mentioned, 154-158, 240, 301, 302, 526-529, 574, 674, 702-704.

Hussey, E. L., 543.

Impressing Officers.

Alleged irregularities of C. S., 46-48, 402-415, 446, 560, 561.
Powers, etc., 198-200, 249, 250.

Impressments.

Acts of C. S. Congress:
Feb. 17, 1864, 249.
Mar. 18, 1865, 1170.
Adjustment of claims, 501, 502, 516, 560, 561, 605.
Alleged irregularities of impressing officers, 46-48, 402-415, 446, 560, 561.

Board of appraisement, 966.

Certificates of indebtedness, 465, 472.

Decision Georgia Supreme Court, 829.

Execution of law in East Tennessee, 353.

Exemptions, 250.

Field transportation, 230.

Horses, 369.

Meat, 249, 250.

Montgomery (Ala.) conference of commissioners, 608.

Negroes, 40, 112, 208, 209, 230, 231, 233, 516, 547, 548, 563, 564, 665-669, 672, 745, 746, 851-853, 897-899, 905, 933, 934, 963, 964, 979, 1018-1026, 1039, 1058, 1059, 1082, 1114-1116, 1139-1143.

Ore, timber, etc., 64.

Plan of R. C. Fariss for procuring supplies, 602-604.

Private property, 37.

Raleigh (N. C.) conference of commissioners, 608.
Regulations, 198-200, 249, 250, 622, 623, 644, 645, 745, 746, 828, 829.

Resolutions North Carolina Legislature, 2.

Schedules of prices for provisions, etc., 54-57, 262-266, 271-274, 389-392, 704-706, 982-986, 1050-1053, 1169-1173.

State quotas of slaves, 933.

Supplies for soldiers' families, 835.

Independent Acceptances.

Views of R. E. Lee, 45.

Indianola, U. S. S., 1181.

Indians.

Alliance with Confederate States, 1180.
Delegates to C. S. Congress, 1187, 1189, 1191.

Indians—Continued.

Ordn., equip., etc., of troops, 464.

See also respective tribes.

Ingram, Porter.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 105.
Mentioned, 137, 1188.

Inspectors.

Powers, duties, etc., 297, 466-471.
Travel allowances, 229.

Intercourse. See Trade and Intercourse.

Invalid Corps, C. S. A.

Act of C. S. Congress, Feb. 17, 1864, 214.

Boards of examination, 214-217, 242, 243, 298, 624, 1083, 1084.

Certificates of retirement, 216, 217, 298.

Clothing, 216.

Commutation of rations, 216.

Descriptive lists, 216.

Organization, etc., 214-217, 298, 1083.

Pay, etc., 214-216, 1083.

Rations, 186, 216, 835.

Regulations, 214-217.

Trans-Mississippi Department, 233, 234.

Isaac, S., Campbell & Co., 155-157, 528, 702, 7 4.

Isaac, Saul, 702.

Isaacson, A. H., 94.

Iverson, Alfred.

Correspondence:
Noppers, J. D., 577.
War Department, C. S., 575.
Mentioned, 310, 576.

Ives, Joseph C.

Correspondence. See Jefferson Davis.

Jack, Thomas M.

Correspondence. See Leonidas Polk.

Jackson, Andrew, 320.

Jackson, Henry R., 310, 372.

Jackson, Joseph, jr., 309, 310, 921.

Jacob (Slave), 662.

Jacobs, E. W., 543.

James, N. A., 96.

James River, Va.

Campaign from the Rapidan to the, May 4-June 12, 1864. See—

Old Harbor, Va. Operations at and about, May 31-June 12, 1864.

North Anna, Pamunkey, and Totopotomoy Rivers, Va. Operations on the line of the, May 22-June 1, 1864.

Spotsylvania Court-House, Va. Operations about, May 8-21, 1864.

Wilderness, Va. Battle, May 5-7, 1864.

Operations on the south side of the, May 4-June 2, 1864. See—

Proctor's Creek and Drewry's Bluff (or Fort Darling), Va. Engagement, May 12-16, 1864.

Jas. Funk, Pilot boat, 1057.

Jas. Littlefield, Ship, 1057.

Jemison, Robert, jr., 137, 1187, 1189.

Jenkins, Albert G., 1189.

Jenkins, Micah, 166.

Jerney & Mueller, 157.

Jewett, William C., 584, 585.

Jilks, J. J.

Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1194.

Correspondence, S. Jones, 1194.

Johnson, Andrew, 88.

Johnson, Bradley T.

Assignments to command, 248.

Mentioned, 248, 311, 325, 512.

Johnson, Charles F., 84.*Johnson, Herschel V.

Correspondence:

Davis, Jefferson, 552.

Stephens, A. H., 278.

Treasury Department, C. S., 594.

War Department, C. S., 105, 621, 662.

Impressments, 594-597, 662, 663.

Mentioned, 137, 279, 662, 663, 1187, 1189.

Johnson, R. B.

Correspondence, Gov. of South Carolina, 1020.

Mentioned, 1019, 1020, 1024, 1025.

Johnson, Robert W., 137, 1185, 1187, 1189.*Johnson, Thomas, 1186.*Johnson, Waldo P., 137, 1078, 1187, 1189.*Johnston, George, 726.*Johnston, Harris H.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 212.

Johnston, J. C.

Correspondence, Bureau of Conscription,

C. S. A., 33.

Johnston, James, 396.*Johnston, John W., 812.*Johnston, Joseph E.

Correspondence:

Bragg, B., 293.

Davis, Jefferson, 33.

Georgia, Governor of, 472, 533.

Lee, R. E., 1175.

War Department, C. S., 240.

Mentioned, 8, 33, 89, 90, 92, 116, 117, 211, 212, 224,

225, 252, 293, 295, 310, 312, 520, 751, 787, 812, 1010,

1065, 1088, 1144, 1164, 1175, 1182.

Johnston, Robert, 137, 1187, 1189, 1191.*Johnston, William.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 968.

Mentioned, 970.

Johnston, William B., 310.*Johnston, William Preston.

Correspondence. See Jefferson Davis.

Joiner, J. W., 395.*Jones, Mr., 413.*Jones, Benjamin F., 645, 646, 648.*Jones, Catesby Ap R.

Correspondence, J. M. Brooke, 523.

Jones, Custis B., 634.*Jones, Edward T., 311.*Jones, George W., 137, 1189.*Jones, H. C., 1185.*Jones, J. B.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 634.

Estimate of military resources of the Confederate States, 634-636.

Jones, James F., 697, 698, 702.*Jones, John E., 311.*Jones, Joseph P., 1001.*Jones, Josiah, 504, 507.*Jones, Robert M., 1189, 1191.*Jones, O. S.

Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1194.

Correspondence, S. Jones, 1194.

Jones, Samuel.

Correspondence:

Bryan, E. H., 1194.

ones, Samuel—Continued.

Correspondence:

Davis, B. F., 1194.

Dupont, W. S., 1194.

Georgia, Governor of, 1180.

Jilks, J. J., 1194.

Jones, O. S., 1194.

Kenedy, G. W., 1194.

Linton, J., 1194.

Parkhill, S., 1194.

Ramsay, H. A., 1194.

Turney, P., 1194.

War Department, C. S., 601, 669, 694.

Yong, M., 1194.

Mentioned, 513, 520, 694, 1182.

Jones, Thomas M., 1186.*Jones, William A., 698.*Jordan, Thomas.

Correspondence. See G. T. Beauregard.

Julia, Steamer, 958.*Jupiter (Slave), 662.*Justice, Department of, C. S.

Opinions. See Attorney-General, C. S.

Principal officials, 1861-1865, 1184.

See also Attorney-General's Office, C. S.

Kane, George P.

Asks authority to raise regiment for special service, 717.

Correspondence:

Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 387, 510.

Briscoe, R., 512.

Chambers, J. E., 512.

Davis, Jefferson, 717.

Donahoe, M., 512.

Helmsley, W., 512.

Kane, T., 512.

Pemberton, J. C., 747.

Mentioned, 388, 747.

Kane, Thomas.

Correspondence, G. P. Kane, 512.

Kate Gregg, Vessel, 958.*Kay, John C.

Authority to enlist company for special service, 210.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 210.

Mentioned, 210.

Kean, Robert G. H.

Chief of the Bureau of War, C. S., 1183.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 448.

See also War Department, C. S.

Mentioned, 771, 1183.

Keeble, Edwin A., 1191.*Keitt, Lawrence M., 1186.*Kelley, David C., 543.*Kelly, W. H., 322.*Kemper, James L.

Assignments, 424.

Correspondence:

Adjutant and Inspector General's Office,

C. S. A., 558, 654, 855, 997, 1158, 1178.

Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 751, 858.

War Department, C. S., 645, 846, 997.

Mentioned, 424, 723, 737, 742, 744, 745, 750, 751, 788,

847, 854, 858, 859, 883, 894, 943, 948, 979, 996, 1031.

Kemper, William S., 725.*Kenan, Augustus H., 1185, 1188.*Kenan, L. H., 235, 237, 244.

- Kenan, Owen R., 137, 1188.
Kenedy, G. W.
 Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1194.
 Correspondence, S. Jones, 1194.
Kenedy, James B., 311.
Kennedy, John T., 537.
Kenner, Duncan F., 565, 574, 1186, 1188, 1190.
Kent, William, 396, 397.
Kentucky.
 Camp guards, etc., in conscript service Sept. 9, 1864, 634.
 Deserters returned to Army, 361.
 Enrollment of conscripts, 34.
 Exhibit of conscripts enrolled, exempted, detailed, assigned, etc., 361.
 Members of C. S. Congress, 1186-1190.
 Men furnished, 361.
 Recruiting service, 601, 602, 661.
 Reorganization and concentration of troops from, 31-33.
Kentucky Troops (C.).
 Cavalry—Regiments: 10th, 1182.
Kershaw, Joseph B.
 Correspondence, J. Longstreet, 1093.
 Mentioned, 166.
Kesshaw, Thomas, 424.
Keyes, Wade.
 Attorney-General, C. S., 1184.
 Correspondence. See Atty. Gen.'s Office, C. S.
 Mentioned, 879, 1184.
Kiedel, Mr., 444.
Kilpatrick, Judson, 325, 326.
Kilpatrick's Expedition against Richmond, Va.
 Feb. 28-Mar. 4, 1864, 324-326.
King, H. W., 289, 290.
King, William H., 322.
Kinzer, John C., 71, 122.
Knox, Mrs., 267.
L. D. Wagner, Brig, 1058.
Lamar, Mr., 416.
Lamar, Albert R., 1016, 1017, 1117.
Lamar, Charles, 158.
Lamar, Lucius Q. C., 565, 574.
Lamb, William.
 Correspondence, J. D. Taylor, 428.
 Mentioned, 428.
Lambert, Thomas, 395, 396.
Lamkin, John T., 1190.
Lammot Dupont, Schooner, 1057.
Lancaster, John L., 972.
Lander, William, 137, 1188.
Lane, Thomas M., 714.
Lang, David.
 Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 21.
Langhorne, M. B.
 Correspondence. See John O. Shields.
Lanier, R. S.
 Correspondence. See Alexander M. Rowland.
Latrobe, Charles H., 698.
Laurel, Steamer, 958.
Lawrence, William B., 132.
Lawson, P. A.
 Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 967.
- Lawton, Alexander R.
 Correspondence. See Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A.
 Mentioned, 14, 46, 49-51, 59, 77, 83, 91, 152, 155, 156, 186, 209, 220, 227, 241, 309, 318-322, 350, 351, 364, 392, 448, 528, 558, 592, 593, 600, 610, 617, 627, 628, 644, 672, 717, 724, 729, 730, 746, 817, 831, 898, 899, 962, 975, 1000, 1073, 1075, 1095, 1100, 1136, 1183.
 Quartermaster-General, C. S. A., 49, 1183.
Lay, George W.
 Acting Supt. of Conscription, C. S. A., 1183.
 Correspondence, Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 847.
 See also Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A.
 Inspector-General of Conscription, 893.
 Mentioned, 52, 610, 611, 619, 620, 630, 631, 633, 893, 1183.
Leach, James M., 1191.
Leach, James T., 1191.
Leaves of Absence.
 Officers, 229, 623, 624.
 Regulations, 229.
Le Conte, John, 698, 702.
Le Conte, Joseph, 702.
Lee, Charles H., 171.
Lee, G. W. Custis, 116.
Lee, George W., 311.
Lee, Robert E.
 Appointment General-in-Chief Army of the Confederate States, 1058.
 Correspondence:
 Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 261, 546, 720, 1124.
 Boyle, C., 606, 612.
 Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 27, 1122.
 Davis, Jefferson, 618, 1137, 1166, 1178
 Dement, W. F., 546.
 Echols, J., 1165.
 Engineer Department, C. S. A., 829, 838.
 Gordon, J. B., 1096.
 Grant, U. S., 1135.
 Hill, A. P., 23.
 Hunter, A., 1007, 1012.
 Johnston, J. E., 1175.
 Niter and Mining Bureau, C. S. A., 1175.
 Noland, B. P., 285.
 North Carolina, Governor of, 612, 718, 1114.
 Pendleton, W. N., 546.
 State Department, C. S., 1079.
 Taylor, W. H., 660.
 Thorburn, H. C., 659, 660.
 War Department, C. S., 45, 84, 154, 158, 202, 207, 245, 246, 253-255, 261, 604, 660, 822, 824, 1029, 1081, 1121, 1136, 1143, 1175.
 York, Z., 1029.
 Mentioned, 15-17, 21-23, 59, 88, 89, 91, 111, 133, 174, 247, 261, 293-295, 312, 457, 511, 520, 546, 547, 606, 612, 613, 621, 624, 625, 641, 653, 658, 659, 661, 672, 685, 717, 751, 758, 766, 783, 784, 804, 839, 840, 847, 851, 852, 854, 884, 900, 906, 959, 966, 989, 998, 1009-1011, 1030, 1032, 1039-1042, 1058, 1073, 1085, 1087, 1089, 1090, 1093, 1119, 1120, 1123, 1124, 1135-1137, 1139, 1146, 1149, 1161-1165, 1174, 1176, 1182, 1194.
 Negroes as soldiers, 1012, 1013.

- Lee, Robert E.—Continued.
Promotions for skill and valor, 84.
Strict execution of conscription acts, 27.
- Lee, Stephen D.
Correspondence:
Davis, Jefferson, 517.
Goodman, W., 478, 508, 514.
McVea, J., 508.
Mississippi, Governor of, 9.
War Department, C. S., 513, 517.
Mentioned, 8, 520, 646, 647, 651, 758, 995, 996.
- Leftwich, ———, 658, 660, 661.
- Leopard, Schooner, 1057.
- Leory, Henry J.
Correspondence:
Custin, R. L., 804.
Hammet, J. P., 804.
War Department, C. S., 805, 806, 812.
Mentioned, 802, 803, 805, 808, 812, 814.
- Lester, George N., 311, 1190.
- Letcher, John, 723, 853.
- Let-Her-B, Steamer, 1056.
- Lewis, David P., 1185.
- Lewis, David W.
Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 105.
Mentioned, 137, 1188.
- Lewis, E. F., Schooner, 1058.
- Lewis, J. Newton, 972.
- Lewis, John W., 1187.
- Lewis, Joseph H.
Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 31.
Reorganization and concentration of Kentucky troops, 31–33.
- Lincoln, Abraham, 87, 127, 130, 132, 133, 136, 235, 236, 366, 406, 412, 585, 586, 636–639, 757, 769, 840, 938, 939, 1001–1004, 1011, 1012, 1042, 1058, 1134.
- Lincoln, Albion, Bark, 1058.
- Linton, J.
Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1194.
Correspondence, S. Jones, 1194.
- Liquor Traffic.
Act of C. S. Congress, 481, 482.
Opinion, Attorney-General, C. S., 875–880.
- Little Ada, Steamer, 402, 416, 439.
- Littlefield, Jas., Ship, 1057.
- Little Hattie, Steamer, 956.
- Lloyd, Thomas E.
Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 825, 826.
- Loans to C. S. Government. See Finance.
- Locke, J. L., 116.
- Lockhart, Harrison C.
Correspondence:
Humphries, H. G., 1061, 1063.
Polk, L., 251.
Withers, J. M., 819, 880, 1059, 1062.
Mentioned, 275, 276, 362, 463, 817, 818, 882, 1060, 1062, 1063, 1065, 1066.
Orders, Circulars, series 1864: Dec. 6, 1063.
- Lofton, William A., 311.
- Logan, George W., 1191.
- Long, John, 406, 411.
- Longstreet, James.
Correspondence:
Benning, H. L., 1093.
Kershaw, J. B., 1093.
Pickett, G. E., 1093.
War Department, C. S., 240.
- Longstreet, James—Continued.
Mentioned, 34, 205, 211, 293, 692, 1135.
- Louisa (Slave), 662.
- Louisiana.
Consolidation of organizations, 838.
Deserters returned to Army, 1109.
Enforcement of conscription acts, 349, 350.
Exhibits of conscripts enrolled, exempted, detailed, assigned, etc., 1101–1103, 1105, 1106.
Measures for defense, 217.
Members of C. S. Congress, 1186–1190.
Men furnished, 1101.
Militia, 217.
Mounted men as conservators of the peace, 514.
Operations in. See Red River Campaign.
Mar. 10–May 22, 1864.
Quota impressed slaves, 933.
Reserves, 517.
Schedules of prices for provisions, etc., 686.
State officers exempted from conscription on certificate of Governor, 851.
Trade with the enemy, 677–682.
- Louisiana, Governor of.
Correspondence:
Pond, P., jr., 398.
War Department, C. S., 93, 514.
Orders, General, series 1864: No. 2, 217.
- Louisiana Legislature.
Call into State service of free colored persons, 112.
Prosecution of the war, 94.
Resolution of confidence in Jefferson Davis, 94.
Transfer of enrolled free colored persons to Confederate Government, 112.
- Louisiana Troops (C.).
Artillery, Light—Battalions: Washington Artillery, 293, 857.
Cavalry—Battalions: 18th, 838.
Cavalry—Regiments: Powers', 838.
- Love Bird, Schooner, 573.
- Low, James H., 739.
- Lucy, Steamer, 351.
- Ludington, Samuel C., 289, 290.
- Lynchburg, Va.
Engagement, June 17–18, 1864, 757.
- Lynchburg (Va.) Campaign. May 26–June 29, 1864.
See—
Lynchburg, Va. Engagement, June 17–18, 1864.
Piedmont, Va. Engagement, June 5, 1864.
- Lynham, John A., 610, 611.
- Lyon, Francis S.
Correspondence. See Congress, C. S.
Mentioned, 1188, 1190.
- Lyons, James, 137, 1189.
- McAnerney, John, jr., 972.
- Macauley, Duncan.
Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 424.
- McCallum, James, 1191.
- McCardle, W. H., 308, 309.
- McCaw, James A., 322.
- McClellan, George B., 637–639, 840, 938, 939, 1001–1004.
- McClure, Mr., 406.
- McCorkle, David P.
Correspondence, J. M. Brooke, 522.
Mentioned, 520.
- McCrady, Edward, Jr., 568.

- McCulloh, R. S.
 Authority to destroy enemy's property, 37, 38.
 Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 37.
 Mentioned, 1079.
- McDaniel, Z.
 Authority to enlist company for secret service, 177.
 Mentioned, 177, 1079.
- McDonell, Thaddeus A., 568.
- McDowell, Thomas D., 137, 1186, 1188.
- Macfarland, W. H., 1187.
- McGee, John W., 311.
- McGill, Thomas.
 Correspondence, War Dept., C. S., 806, 810, 816.
 Mentioned, 807-811, 816.
- McGrim, Mr., 444.
- Machen, Willis B., 137, 1188, 1190.
- McIntosh, David G.
 Correspondence, R. L. Walker, 546.
- McIntyre, Archibald T., 311.
- Mackay, Dr., 639.
- McKay, James (Asst. Q. M.), 19, 48.
- McKay, James (Com. Agent), 19, 20.
- McKee, L., 398.
- McKinsie, Colin.
 Correspondence. See Caleb Huse.
- McKnight, Mr., 1180.
- McLean, J. R., 137, 1188.
- McMaster, James A., 5.
- McMullen, Fayette, 1191.
- Macmurdo, Richard C., 726.
- McNair, S. T., 972.
- McNeil, John, 132.
- McNeill, Thomas E.
 Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 1096.
- Macon, Arthur, 19.
- McQueen, John, 137, 1188.
- McRae, Colin J.
 Correspondence:
   Erlanger, E. V., 158.
   Huse, C., 157.
   Q. M. General's Office, C. S. A., 296, 673.
   Slidell, J., 158.
   Waller, R. P., 156.
   War Department, C. S., 6, 154, 155, 525, 566, 702.
 Mentioned, 211, 240-242, 301, 302, 529, 588, 590, 674, 683, 702, 704, 1185.
- McRae, John J.
 Correspondence, Q. M. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 748.
 Mentioned, 137, 1188.
- McVea, John.
 Correspondence, S. D. Lee, 508.
- Macwillie, Marcus H., 137, 1189, 1191.
- Magnolia, Schooner, 1057.
- Magrath, Andrew G.
 Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 652.
 See also South Carolina, Governor of.
 Mentioned, 964, 969, 970, 979, 980, 1004, 1005, 1018, 1019, 1024, 1058.
- Magruder, John B.
 Correspondence:
   Nichols, E. B., 268.
   Smith, E. K., 126, 253.
   Texas, Governor of, 24, 40, 253, 258, 268, 271, 278.
 Mentioned, 566, 572.
- Mahone, William, 857.
- Major, Minor, 174.
- Mallet, John W., 527.
- Mallett, Peter.
 Correspondence:
   Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 600, 868, 894.
   Webb, T., 599.
 Mentioned, 256, 353, 490, 504-507, 755.
- Mallory, Stephen R.
 Correspondence. See Navy Department, C. S.
 Mentioned, 93, 161, 213, 242, 305, 371, 381, 411, 493, 521, 528 592, 695, 697, 799, 1055, 1072, 1184.
 Secretary of the Navy, C. S., 1184.
- Malone, James C., jr., 621.
- Manlove, C. A., 66.
- Manly, Matthias E., 213.
- Mann, A. Dudley.
 Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 401.
- Mausfield, La.
 Battle, Apr. 8, 1864, 756.
- Mark, D. H., 1180.
- Mark L. Potter, Bark, 1058.
- Marlborough, John C., 885.
- Marmaduke, John S., 989.
- Marshall, Charles.
 Correspondence. See Robert E. Lee.
- Marshall, Henry, 1186, 1188.
- Marshall, Humphrey, 1190.
- Martin, Alfred M.
 Correspondence, Q. M. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 748.
- Martin, David B.
 Correspondence, E. K. Smith, 257.
- Martin, H. N., 649, 650.
- Martin, James G., 428, 822, 823, 989, 1182.
- Martin, John M., 137, 1188.
- Mary A. Hawes, Schooner, 1057.
- Maryland.
 Conscription of citizens, 311, 312, 387, 388, 507, 510-513, 545-547, 550, 551.
 Consolidation of organizations, 572.
 Maryland Line, 248, 312, 387, 388, 507, 510-513, 550, 551.
 Orgn., equip., etc., of vols., 248.
 Retention in service of members 1st Battery, 545-547.
- Maryland Troops (C.).
 Artillery, Light—Batteries: 1st, 545, 546; 2d (Baltimore Light), 858; 4th (Chesapeake), 857.
 Cavalry—Battalions: 1st, 572.
- Mason, James M., 11, 1187.
- Mason, Wylie W.
 Correspondence, Q. M. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 748.
- Mather, J. C.
 Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 259.
 Mentioned, 464.
- Matthews, J. H., 702.
- Matthews, James M., 204, 1033, 1156, 1170.
- Maury, Dabney H.
 Correspondence:
   Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 317, 1011.
   Alabama, Governor of, 601, 841.
   Mississippi, Governor of, 841, 847, 863.
   Thomas, B. M., 753.
   War Department, C. S., 239.
   Withers, J. M., 753.
 Mentioned, 212, 243, 520, 522, 577, 590, 591, 1061, 1182.
 Suggests establishment of military school, 317.
- Maury, Matthew F.
 Electro-magnetic torpedo exploders, 1117, 1118.
 Mentioned, 1117, 1118.

- Maxey, Samuel B., 464.
Maximilian, Emperor, 86.
Maxwell, Augustus E., 137, 1187, 1189.
Maynard, George F., 725, 988.
Maynard, John C., 725, 726.
Meagher, Thomas F., 5.
Means, S. C.
 Correspondence, H. C. Guerin, 411.
 Mentioned, 402, 403, 408.
- Mechanics.
 Demands for skilled, 520-523, 696.
 Details, 305, 534, 1108, 1109.
 Employment of aliens, 670, 671, 696.
 Ordnance Department, exempted from conscription, 1082, 1083.
 Union deserters, 863-866.
- Medical Department, C. S. A.
 Appropriations, 139, 480, 626.
 Care of impressed negroes, 898.
 Condition, needs, etc., 975, 1064, 1073-1076, 1095.
 Details, 363, 1101, 1106-1109.
 Estimates for foreign supplies, 589, 590.
 Estimates of appropriations, 777, 1111.
 Moore, S. P., Surgeon-General, 1183.
 Organization, etc., 943.
 Pro rata distribution of appropriations, 627, 628.
 Regulations, 548.
- Medical Examinations.
 Conscription, 66, 182, 183, 1176, 1177.
 Hospitals, 721.
 Invalid Corps, 214-217, 242, 243, 298, 624, 1083, 1084.
- Medical Officers, C. S. A.
 Attention to impressed negroes, 898.
 Examining boards, 66, 182, 183, 214-217, 242, 243, 298, 624, 721, 1083, 1084, 1176, 1177.
 Leaves of absence, 623.
 Pay, etc., of contract, 623.
 Personal reports, 548.
 Property returns, 548.
 Surgical operations, 402.
 Transfer of supplies, 548.
- Medical Supplies.
 Alcoholic stimulants, 537, 538.
 Deficiency, 718-720.
 Indigenous remedies, 402, 533.
 Manufacture of soap from wheat-straw ashes, 687.
 Manufacture of whisky from sorghum seed, 712.
 Measures to provide, 481, 682, 687, 712, 789, 790, 1180, 1181.
 Purchases abroad, 526, 930, 955-958.
 Transfer, 548.
- Meem, Gilbert S.
 Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 847.
- Mell, Patrick H., 311.
- Melton, C. D.
 Correspondence, Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 1024.
 Mentioned, 1018, 1019.
- Melton, Samuel W.
 Correspondence. See Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, U. S. A.; also War Department, C. S.
 Mentioned, 171, 172.
- Memminger, Christopher G.
 Correspondence. See Treasury Department, U. S.
 Mentioned, 7, 184, 195, 201, 213, 282-284, 292, 293, 303, 367, 370, 371, 423, 424, 465, 482-484, 525, 528, 595, 627, 628, 784, 962, 1184, 1186.
 Secretary of the Treasury, C. S., 1184.
- Mendenhall, George, 661.
- Mendenhall, George, Mrs., 662.
- Menees, Thomas, 137, 1188, 1191.
- Meredith, John A., 660.
- Meridian, Miss.
 Expedition, etc., Feb. 3-Mar. 6, 1864, 324.
- Meriwether, Minor.
 Correspondence, R. Taylor, 742.
 Mentioned, 312, 694.
- Mexico.
 Evasion of blockade via, 565, 566, 569, 572, 573.
 Overland commerce, 206, 207, 239, 240, 246, 306.
 Recruiting service, 960-962.
 Seizure of U. S. Army supplies, 566, 573.
- Meyer, Hy., 669, 670.
- Michle, James M., 659.
- Middleton, Henry.
 Correspondence, State Department, U. S., 133.
 Mentioned, 133.
- Miles, William Porcher.
 Correspondence, Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 883.
 See also Congress, U. S.
 Mentioned, 137, 1186, 1188, 1191.
- Military Courts.
 Assignment of judges, 70.
 Details of army officers, 193.
 Powers, etc., 192, 193, 246, 247, 254, 494, 497, 498, 503.
 Remarks:
 Davis, Jefferson, 247.
 Lee, R. E., 246, 247.
 Secretary of War, C. S., 247, 254, 331, 332.
 Revision of proceedings, 1124.
- Military Store-Keepers, C. S. A.
 Appointment, etc., 191, 492.
 Examination, 749.
- Militia.
 Alabama, 601, 747.
 Georgia, 259, 260, 536, 545, 550, 569, 612, 724, 748, 749, 822, 850, 1034, 1058, 1181.
 Liability of exempted men to duty, 574.
 Liability to conscription, 172-174, 256, 376.
 Mississippi, 172-174, 590, 747, 1034, 1041.
 North Carolina, 307.
 Remarks, Jefferson Davis, 1133.
 Virginia, 256, 268, 269, 376, 1039.
- Milledgeville (Ga.) Union, 260.
- Miller, Jo. H.
 Correspondence, M. F. Berry, 649.
- Miller, Middleton, 606.
- Miller, Samuel A.
 Correspondence. See Congress, U. S.
 Mentioned, 137, 1189, 1191.
- Miller, W. D.
 Correspondence, N. Clements, 572.
- Miller, William.
 Assigned and relieved commandant of conscripts, Florida, 66, 569.

Miller, William—Continued.

Mentioned, 66, 569.

Milroy, Robert H., 132.*Milton, John.Correspondence. See Florida, Governor of.
Mentioned, 18, 19, 21-23, 83, 380, 499, 556, 905.Ministers, United States.England. See Charles Francis Adams.Russia. See Henry Middleton.Ministers of the Gospel.

Addresses to the people, 1118.

Exemption from conscription, 179.

Missionary operations in the Army, 942.

Minors.

Discharge, 1153.

Minter, Joseph F., 574.*Mississippi.

Agricultural details, 1104.

Arms for militia, 590, 591, 602.

Camp guards, etc., in conscript service Sept. 9, 1864, 634.

Census statistics, 103.

Commissioner, habeas corpus act, 257.

Conference of impressment commissioners at Montgomery, Ala., 608.

Consolidation of organizations, 543, 838.

Co-operation of civil courts with military authorities, 598.

Denis, J. C., assigned commandant of conscripts, 376.

Deserters returned to Army, 363, 1109.

Destitution of people, 978.

Enforcement of conscription acts, 446, 450, 710, 740, 821-824, 902-904, 965, 966, 1162-1164.

Enlistment of conscripts in State organizations, 8, 9.

Estimated percentage of white population furnished, 103.

Estimate of military resources, 102, 635.

Exhibits of conscripts enrolled, exempted, detailed, assigned, etc., 103, 363, 1101-1103, 1105-1107.

Impressment of slaves, 1039.

Liability of militia to conscription, 172-174.

Members of C. S. Congress, 1186-1190.

Men furnished, 101-103, 363, 1101.

Men subject to conscription, 1864, 103.

Militia, 172-174, 590, 747, 1034, 1041.

Operations in. See Meridian. Expedition, etc., Feb. 3-Mar. 6, 1864.

Quota impressed slaves, 933.

Reserves, 517, 525.

Resistance to conscription, actual and anticipated, 904.

Schedules of prices for provisions, etc., 262-266, 686.

State officers exempted from conscription on certificate of Governor, 851, 866-870.

State troops, 307-309, 710, 740, 821-824, 841.

Trade with the enemy, 645-651, 677-683, 688, 689, 718, 735, 789, 790.

Transfer of militia to C. S. service, 1034.

Transfer of State troops to C. S. service, 229, 261, 1041.

Unauthorized military organizations, 689.

Unlawful seizures of private property, 689.

Mississippi, Adjutant and Inspector General of.

Orders, General, series 1864: No. 7, 308.

Orders, Special, series 1863: No. 25, 308.

Mississippi, Governor of.

Call for militia, 590.

Conference of Governors at Augusta, Ga., 735, 736.

Correspondence:

Brandon, W. L., 710, 824, 1034.

Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 870.

Chalmers, J. R., 8.

Davis, Jefferson, 525, 736, 1030, 1039.

Lee, S. D., 9.

Maury, D. H., 841, 847, 863.

North Carolina, Governor of, 685.

Polk, L., 229, 261, 307.

Taylor, R., 1041.

War Department, C. S., 172, 446, 450, 590, 591, 602.

Mississippi Central Railroad.

Construction, etc., for military purposes, 9, 10, 478, 508, 514.

Mississippi Troops (C.).Cavalry—Battalions: 19th, 543; 23d, 838.Cavalry—Regiments: 1st Partisan Rangers, 543; 2d Partisan Rangers, 9; 3d (State), 9; 7th, 8th, 543; Jeff Davis Legion, 536, 537.Missouri.

Members of C. S. Congress, 1186-1191.

Recruiting service, 713.

Representation in C. S. Congress, 35, 36.

Missouri Troops (C.).Cavalry—Regiments: 2d, 858.Mitchel, Charles B., 137, 1187, 1189.*Mitchell, L. B., 66.*Mobile and Girard Railroad.

Resolutions of stockholders, 576.

Union Springs and Montgomery connection, 575-577.

Monroe, James, 320, 321.*Monroe, Thomas B., 1186.*Montague, C.

Correspondence, Gov. of South Carolina, 406.

Mentioned, 403, 404, 407, 411, 412.

Montague, Robert L., 1191.*Montgomery and West Point Railroad.

Incapacity for requirements of C. S. Government, 312.

Montgomery Convention of Seceding States.

Preservation of records, 1015-1018.

Moore, G. D.

Correspondence, Q. M. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 748.

Moore, James W., 137, 1188, 1190.*Moore, John, 94.*Moore, P. W., 543.*Moore, Samuel P.Correspondence. See Surg. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A..
Mentioned, 23, 28, 106, 109, 159, 183, 215, 242, 298, 449, 481, 534, 548, 623, 875, 876, 898, 933, 999, 1074, 1075, 1084, 1153, 1183.

Surgeon-General, C. S. A., 1183.

Morehead, Mr., 444.*Morehead, Charles S., 573.*Morehead, John M., 1186.*Morfit, Clarence, 725, 741.*Morgan, Mr., 806.

Morgan, John H.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 81.
Mentioned, 520, 803.

Suggests reorganization and concentration of Kentucky troops, 31-33.

Morgan, Simpson H., 1191.*Morris, Charles, 726.*Morton, Jackson, 1185.*Morton, Richard.

Correspondence, Niter and Mining Bureau,
C. S. A., 832.

See also Niter and Mining Bureau, C. S. A.

Mentioned, 700, 702, 1136, 1164, 1165, 1183.

Superintendent of Niter and Mining Bureau,
C. S. A., 1183.

Morton, Robert C., 698, 702.*Moseley, Edgar F., 618.*Moses, R. J.

Correspondence, Subsistence Dept., C. S. A., 828.
Mentioned, 931.

Munford, George W.

Correspondence. See Virginia, Secretary of State.

Munitions of War.

Annual report, Ordnance Department, C. S. A., 733, 734.

Appropriations for purchase, etc., 139, 480, 626.

Arms manufactured in the North, 676, 677.

Assessment for lost or damaged, 27, 449.

Bayonets, 28.

Manufactured and captured, 733, 734, 987.

Measures to provide, 64, 245, 448, 520-523, 527,
565-567, 569, 570, 572-574, 986-988, 1054, 1055,
1175, 1176.

On hand at arsenals, etc., November, 1864, 986.

Prices, 230.

Purchases abroad, 930, 955-958, 986.

Seizure by Mexican Government, 566, 573.

Munnerlyn, Charles J., 137, 730, 1188.*Murrah, Pendleton.

Correspondence. See Texas, Governor of

Mentioned, 126, 253, 254, 268.

Murray, E.

Correspondence, H. Savage, 905.

Mentioned, 1055.

Murray, John P., 1191.*Muster out of Volunteers.

South Carolina six-months' State troops, 38, 39.

Mustian, J. L.

Correspondence:

Noppers, J. D., 577.

War Department, C. S., 575.

Mentioned, 576.

Myers, Rev. Dr., 1118.*Myers, Abraham C., 51, 318-320.*Myers, E. T. D., 392, 694.*Myers, Frank.

Correspondence.

Rutland, J. M., 414.

Trout, T. B., 413, 414.

Mentioned, 403, 404, 408, 409, 414.

Nancy Dawson, Schooner, 573.*Nap., 414.*Napoleon I, 86, 133.*Napoleon III, 86.*Napor, Schooner, 1058.*Nash, James H., 1117.*Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad.

Employés excused from drills, 537.

"Native Georgian."

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 693.

Navy Department, C. S.

"Coals of the steamer Advance," 1055-1057, 1076,
1077, 1081, 1082.

Correspondence:

Attorney-General's Office, C. S., 879.

Davis, Jefferson, 520, 581, 1055.

North Carolina, Gov. of, 970, 1055, 1076, 1081.

War Department, C. S., 174, 581.

Details, 305, 363, 1101, 1106-1108, 1178.

Mallory, S. R., Secretary of the Navy, 1184.

Principal officials, 1861-1865, 1184.

Navy of the Confederate States.

Seamen in Invalid Corps, 214.

Neely, Richard, 322.*Neeson, James, 660.*Negroes.

Abolition of slavery urged, 1067-1070.

Appraisement of value of impressed, 898.

Appropriation for impressed slaves, deceased,
139.

Board of appraisement, 966.

Cleburne, et al., memorial urging the freeing and arming of slaves, 1.

Compensation for impressed slaves, 112.

Direction and control of impressed, 898, 899.

Employment as soldiers, 693, 694, 761, 762, 768-771,
797-799, 846, 959, 960, 981, 1007-1013, 1079, 1093,
1096, 1110, 1133, 1137, 1152, 1161.

Employment as teamsters, laborers, etc., in Army, 208, 209, 230, 231, 829-831, 838-840, 1114-1116.

Estimate of cost for impressed slaves, 40.

Impressment, 40, 112, 208, 209, 230, 231, 233, 516, 547,
548, 563, 564, 665-669, 672, 745, 746, 851-853, 897-
899, 905, 933, 934, 963, 964, 979, 1018-1026, 1039,
1058, 1059, 1082, 1114-1116, 1139-1143.

Organization, etc., as colored troops. See Confederate States Colored Troops.

Passports for emancipated slaves, 661, 662.

Pay, etc., of enrolled or impressed, 208, 209, 716,
717, 933, 1115, 1139.

Release of slave labor on fortifications, 162.

Requisition, Governor of Virginia, for slave
labor, 1138, 1139.

Resolution C. S. Congress, impressment of slaves, 996, 997.

Treatment. Remarks, Governor of North Carolina, 945, 946.

Withdrawal of slaves from within enemy's lines, 25-27, 41, 42.

Nesbitt, William, 8.*Neva, Brig, 1057.*New Market, Va.

Engagement, May 15, 1864, 757.

New Mexico Territory.

Recruiting service, 960-962, 1035, 1036.

Newsom, John F., 543.*Newton, Willoughby.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 1118.

New York Herald, 158.*New York News, 638.*New York Times, 637.

New York Tribune, 586.

Nicholls, Francis T.

Correspondence:

Adj't. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 268; 376.
Virginia, Governor of, 268.

Nichols, E. B.

Correspondence, J. B. Magruder, 268.

Night Hawk, Steamer, 739.

Nininger, Peter, 811.

Nisbet, Eugenius A.

Commissioner for Georgia, habeas corpus act, 225.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 225.

Mentioned, 968, 1185.

Nisbet, Ro. B.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 825, 826.

Niter.

Measures to provide, 695, 696.

Production and expenditures, 698.

Niter and Mining Bureau, C. S. A.

Appropriations, 480, 626.

Assignment and organization of employes, 94, 95, 195.

Casualties, 697.

Condition, needs, etc., 695-697, 975, 981, 1095.

Conscription of employes, 741.

Correspondence:

Gabbett, W., 195.

Hill, W. M., 1165.

Lee, R. E., 1175.

Morton, R., 832.

Turpin, A., 535.

War Dept., C. S., 34, 589, 695, 742, 835, 981, 1164.

Details, 363, 1101, 1106-1109.

Establishment, organization, etc., 492, 493, 944.

Estimates for foreign supplies, 589, 590.

Estimates of appropriation, 779.

Force employed, 696.

Furnaces in Virginia, 832-835.

Interference with employes, 95, 195, 196.

Iron and general mining service, 700.

List of officers, 702.

Measures to provide supplies, 1164, 1165, 1175, 1176.

Military organization, 697.

Morton, R., Superintendent, 1183.

Nitriaries, 699.

Operations, 1864, 695-702.

Productions of iron, copper, lead, etc., 989-991.

Pro rata distribution of appropriations, 627, 628.

Protection to employes, 95, 195.

Regulations, 195, 196.

St. John, I. M., Superintendent, 1183.

Trans-Mississippi service, 697.

Niter and Mining Corps, C. S. A. See Niter and Mining Bureau, C. S. A.

Noel, R. L., 972.

Noland, B. P.

Correspondence:

Boyle, C., 606.

Cloyd, J., 289.

Lee, R. E., 285.

Noland, R. W. N., 1006, 1031.

Subsistence Dept., C. S. A., 290, 687, 1006, 1032.

War Department, C. S., 261, 287.

Mentioned, 245, 605, 612, 688, 1045.

Noland, R. W. N.

Correspondence:

Foster, T. R., 1031.

Noland, B. P., 1006, 1031.

Taylor, C. S., 1005.

Mentioned, 1032, 1045.

Nölting, A. W.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 559.

Noppers, Joseph D.

Correspondence:

Blackman, H., 577.

Dawson, T. H., 577.

Iverson, A., 577.

Mustian, J. L., 577.

Norred, Robert T., 322.

Norris, William.

Chief of Signal Corps, C. S. A., 1183.

Mentioned, 577, 1183.

North America, Schooner, 1057.

North Anna, Pamunkey, and Totopotomoy Rivers, Va.

Operations on the line of the, May 22-June 1, 1864, 756, 757.

North Carolina.

Affairs in, 203.

Agricultural details, 1104.

Camp guards, etc., in conscript service Sept. 9, 1864, 634.

Census statistics, 103.

Commissioner, habeas corpus act, 210, 213, 238.

Conference of impressment commissioners at Raleigh, 608.

Consolidation of organizations, 536, 537, 840, 841.

Cotton loaned to C. S. Government, 416, 417.

Depredations on private property by C. S. troops in Wilkes County, 177, 201, 202.

Deserters returned to Army, 360, 1109.

Disaffection of people and troops, 104, 1114.

Distillation of grain, 23, 24, 1063, 1064.

Enforcement of conscription acts, 176, 197, 198, 200, 201, 285, 307, 318, 353, 354, 375, 376, 425-429, 530, 555, 556, 746, 754, 755.

Estimated percentage of white population furnished, 103.

Estimate of military resources, 98, 99, 635.

Exemption of State officers from conscription, 375, 376, 425-429, 530, 555, 556.

Exhibits of conscripts enrolled, exempted, detailed, assigned, etc., 103, 360, 1101-1105, 1107-1109.

Exportation of cotton, 4, 10, 28, 29, 42, 43, 113, 114, 153, 154, 169, 184, 213.

Foreigners, 724.

Habeas corpus act, 104, 256, 267, 268, 274, 275, 284, 556.

Inspections, conscription service, 490, 491, 504-506, 539-542.

Junior Reserves, 353, 354.

List of conscript officers, 507.

Measures for defense, 958.

Measures to provide supplies, 671, 672, 690-692.

Members of C. S. Congress, 1186-1188, 1190, 1191.

Men furnished, 98, 102, 103, 360, 722, 1101.

Men subject to conscription, 1864, 103.

Military and civil appointments, etc., in, 260.

North Carolina—Continued.

- Militia, 307.
- Principals of substitutes, 176, 197, 198, 200, 201.
- Quota impressed slaves, 933.
- Recruiting service, 995.
- Reserves, 718.
- Resistance to conscription, actual and anticipated, 353, 530.
- Schedules of prices for provisions, etc., 686.
- Secret societies, 802-820.
- State officers exempted from conscription on certificate of Governor, 851, 866-868.
- State troops for defense of Wilmington, 612.
- Stoppage of blockade-running, 1117.
- Trade with the enemy, 614, 642.

North Carolina, Department of (C.).

- Organization, strength, etc., of troops:
  - Jan. 31, 1865, 989.
  - Apr. 17, 1865, 1182.

North Carolina, Governor of.

- "Coals of the steamer Advance," 1055-1057, 1076, 1077, 1081, 1082.

- Conference of Governors at Augusta, Ga., 684, 685, 735, 736.

Correspondence:

- Alabama, Governor of, 685.
- Attorney-General's Office, C. S., 616, 655.
- Baker, L. S., 605.
- Bragg, B., 722.
- Davis, Jefferson, 11, 51, 77, 104, 153, 203, 217, 254, 260, 671, 724, 945.
- Engineer Department, C. S. A., 570.
- Florida, Governor of, 685, 721.
- Georgia, Governor of, 685, 706.
- Holmes, T. H., 746, 754.
- Lee, R. E., 612, 718, 1114.
- Mississippi, Governor of, 685.
- Navy Department, C. S., 970, 1055, 1076, 1081.
- Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A., 38.
- South Carolina, Governor of, 684, 692.
- Tennessee, Governor of, 685.
- Treasury Department, C. S., 177.
- Virginia, Governor of, 685.
- War Department, C. S., 2, 4, 10, 23, 28, 42, 113, 153, 154, 169, 176, 184, 197, 201, 213, 285, 307, 318, 375, 416, 425, 530, 555, 671, 958, 1063, 1118, 1156.
- White, J., 1117.
- Whiting, W. H. C., 428, 685.

Impressment of supplies, 2, 3.*Proclamations, 958.*Protest against distillation of grain, 1063, 1064.*Request for copy of secret Executive correspondence, 1156, 1157.*Treatment of impressed slaves, 945, 946.*North Carolina, Western District of.

- Organization, strength, etc., of troops:
  - July 1, 1864, 520.
  - Dec. 18, 1864, 989.
  - Mar. 10, 1865, 1182.

North Carolina and Southern Virginia, Dept. of.

- Organization, strength, etc., of troops, June 30, 1864, 520.

North Carolina Legislature.

- Care, etc., of sick, convalescent, and wounded soldiers, 958, 959.
- Impressment of supplies, 2.

North Carolina Railroad.

- Conscription of employes, 598-601.

North Carolina Troops (C.).

- Cavalry—Battalions: 12th, 536; 12th Partisan Rangers, 537; 16th, 537.

- Cavalry—Regiments: 4th, 536.

- Infantry—Battalions: 1st Junior Reserves, 840, 841; 4th Junior Reserves, 840; 7th Junior Reserves, 840; 8th Junior Reserves, 840, 841; Mallett's, 491.

- Infantry—Regiments: 2d Junior Reserves, 840; 3d Junior Reserves, 840; 50th, 177, 201.

Northern Virginia, Army of.

- Orders, Circulars, series 1863: (Cole) Dec. 28, 61.
- Orders, General, series 1864: (Lee) No. 23, 606; No. 62, 567.

Organization, strength, etc.:

- June 30, 1864, 520.

- Dec. 31, 1864, 989.

- Feb. 20, 1865, 1182.

Northrop, Lucius B.

- Com. Gen. of Subsistence, C. S. A., 1183.

Correspondence. See Subsistence Dept., C. S. A.

- Mentioned, 15, 19, 59, 77, 84, 107, 117, 170, 220, 249, 250, 275, 283, 284, 287, 289, 292, 300, 481, 590, 601, 607, 629, 642, 643, 687, 783, 875, 975, 1028, 1045, 1151, 1183.

Norton, N. L., 1191.*Noyes, A. B., 19, 20.*Noyes, James B., 698.*Nurses.

- Exemption from conscription, 179.

- Rations, 175, 534.

Nutt, T., 543.*O'Brien, Smith, 5.*Ochiltree, William B., 1186.*Odin, John M., 401.*Officers, Army.

- Additional, of artillery for ordnance duties, 475, 497, 608, 609.

- Appointment, removal, etc., of officers State troops, 616, 655-657.

- Chaplains, 53, 163, 194, 496.

- Clothing, 186, 1033, 1034.

- Compensation for staff duty, 298, 299.

- Consolidated regiments, 1166-1168.

- Details for military courts, 193.

- Effects of deceased, 1.

- Engineer Corps, C. S. A., 190, 191.

- Examination of conscript officers, for field service, 187.

- Forage, 186, 194.

- Furloughs, 1178.

- General, 194, 229, 313-315, 333, 497.

- General, with temporary rank, 457, 496.

- General staff, 316, 352, 353, 450-455, 497, 498, 593, 835-838, 1125, 1126, 1173-1175.

- Hospital accommodations, 174, 496.

- Invalid Corps, 214, 219, 242, 243, 298, 1083, 1084.

- Leaves of absence, 225, 623, 624.

- Members Georgia Legislature, 174.

- Military store-keepers, 191, 492.

- Official correspondence, 171, 720, 721, 751, 888, 893, 1152.

- Opinions, Attorney-General, C. S., 313-315, 318-322, 656.

Officers, Army—Continued.

- Personal reports, 163, 242, 243, 623, 624, 999.
- Prices for subsistence stores purchased, 686.
- Promotion for skill and valor, 190.
- Rations, 163, 175, 186, 333, 481, 721.
- Reserves, 369, 378, 517.
- Scouts and guards in Mississippi Valley, 493, 494.
- Supernumerary, 163, 494.
- Transportation, 492, 496, 534, 623.
- Travel allowances, 534, 564, 569, 571, 579, 580.

Officers, Marine Corps.

- Clothing, 1033, 1034.
- Invalid Corps, 1083.

Officers, Navy.

- Clothing, 1033, 1034.
- Invalid Corps, 1083.
- Rations, 481.
- Transportation, 492.

Offutt, H. St. George, 972.*Old Dominion, Steamer, 956.*Oldham, W. H.

- Correspondence, S. S. Harris, 649.

Oldham, Williamson S.

- Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 1078.
- Mentioned, 137, 1186, 1187, 1190.

Oldridge, B. M., 507.*Oliveros, J. B., 311.*Olustee, C. S. S. See Tallahassee, C. S. S.*Olustee, or Ocean Pond, Fla.

- Engagement, Feb. 20, 1864, 166, 324.

Ord, Edward O. C., 1135.*Ordnance Department, C. S. A.

- Appropriations, 139, 480, 626.
- Casualties, 734.

Condition, needs, etc., 975, 1064, 1071, 1095.

Conscription of employes, 741.

Correspondence:

Adams, S., 676.

Bragg, B., 293.

Davis, Jefferson, 677.

Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A., 46.

Surgeon-General's Office, C. S. A., 589.

War Department, C. S., 18, 46, 83, 167, 448, 589, 703, 704, 733, 742, 986, 1054, 1071.

Details, 363, 1101, 1106-1108.

Establishment, organization, etc., 943, 944.

Estimates for foreign supplies, 589, 590.

Estimates of appropriations, 777.

Gorgas, J., Chief of Ordnance Bureau, 1183.

Measures to provide supplies. See Munitions of War.

Mechanics exempted from conscription, 1082, 1083.

Operations, 1864, 733, 734.

Pro rata distribution of appropriations, 448, 627, 628.

Reduction of field artillery, 293, 294.

Reorganization, 608, 609.

Ordnance Depots, C. S. A.

Transportation of provisions, 175.

Ordnance-Sergeants, C. S. A.

Commutation of rations, 53, 593.

O'Reilly, J. T., 1055.*Orgain, George C., 726.*Organization, Equipment, etc., of Army.*Acts of C. S. Congress:

Mar. 6, 1861, 313.

May 8, 1861, 313.

May 11, 1861, 313.

Sept. 18, 1862, 315.

Oct. 6, 1862, 315.

Oct. 13, 1862, 313-315.

Feb. 17, 1864, 178, 183, 184, 208, 214, 315.

May 23, 1864, 491.

May 31, 1864, 492, 496.

June 4, 1864, 492.

June 7, 1864, 489.

June 9, 1864, 493.

June 10, 1864, 493, 496, 497.

June 14, 1864, 494, 495, 497.

Feb. 23, 1865, 1166, 1167.

Mar. 13, 1865, 1161.

Additional officers of artillery for ordnance duties, 475, 476, 497, 608.

Additional quartermasters and commissaries, 495.

Aides-de-camp, 1125, 1126, 1175.

Artillery, 293, 294.

Cadets, 1157, 1158.

Calls for troops, 590, 612, 1058, 1161.

Captured commands, 229, 297.

Cavalry, 194.

Chaplains, 496.

Colored troops. See Confederate States Colored Troops.

Consolidation of reduced regiments, 764, 797, 964, 965, 1124, 1143, 1144, 1166-1168.

Dismounted cavalymen to serve with infantry, 186.

Employment of negroes as teamsters, etc., 208, 209, 230, 231, 829-831, 838-840, 1114-1116.

Engineer Corps, C. S. A., 190, 191, 944, 1084.

Ensigns, 190, 492, 1167, 1168.

Exchange of cotton and tobacco for supplies, 154.

General officers, 194, 313-315, 457, 496.

General staff, 316, 352, 353, 450-455, 497, 498, 593, 835-838, 1125, 1126, 1173-1175.

Indians, 464.

Interstate transfers, 178, 183, 184.

"Light duty" companies, 896, 897.

Military store-keepers, 191, 492.

Minimum strength artillery, cavalry, and infantry companies, 297, 298, 370.

New organizations, 52.

Partisan rangers, 194, 261.

Promotion for skill and valor, 84, 190.

Reduction of field artillery, 293, 294.

Regimental commissaries, 491, 492.

Remarks:

Beauregard, G. T., 168, 169.

Davis, Jefferson, 796-799, 1178.

Lee, R. E., 1175.

Secretary of War, C. S., 52, 327-331, 758-771.

Scouts and guards, 493, 494.

Secret or special service organizations, 172, 177, 202, 210, 212, 491.

Supernumerary officers, 163, 494.

Transfer of dismounted cavalry to infantry, 499, 503, 571, 572.

Organization, Equipment, etc., of Army—Cont'd.

Trans-Mississippi Department, 231-234.

Within enemy's lines, 496, 497.

See also—

Army of the Confederate States.

Engineer Troops, C. S. A.

Invalid Corps, C. S. A.

Recruiting Service.

Reserves.

Signal Corps, C. S. A.

And respective States.

Orr, James L., 137, 403, 412, 413, 1148, 1186, 1187, 1190.

Orr, Jehu A., 1186, 1190.

Otey, Kirkwood.

Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1193.

Mentioned, 1193, 1194.

Otter Rock, Schooner, 1058.

Ould, Robert.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 336, 742.

Mentioned, 336.

Oury, Granville H., 1187.

Overseers.

Exemption tax of $500, 994, 995.

Owen, L., 577.

Owens, James B., 1185.

Owl, Steamer, 525, 526, 675, 957.

P. C. Alexander, Bark, 1057.

Packer, Robert E., Schooner, 1057.

Palfrey, Edward A.

Correspondence. See Adjutant and Inspector

General's Office, C. S. A.

Mentioned, 171.

Palmer, John B., 520.

Panama, H. I. H. S., 573.

Parish, S. M., 504, 507.

Parker, S. H.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 531, 532.

Parkhill, John H., 726.

Parkhill, S.

Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1194.

Correspondence, S. Jones, 1194.

Parsons, L. E., 394, 398.

Parsons, Mosby M., 989.

Partisan Rangers.

Disbandment, 261.

Organization, etc., 194.

Passports.

Emancipated slaves, 661, 662.

Foreigners, 669, 670.

Persons liable to conscription, 1014, 1015.

Paster, John H., 396.

Paul, Alfred, 377.

Paxton, A. M.

Correspondence:

Cole, A. H., 65.

War Department, C. S., 282.

Mentioned, 283, 284, 508, 514.

Paxton, James G., 665.

Paylor, Private, 507.

Payments to Troops.

Detailed men, 298.

On descriptive lists, 229, 230, 1000.

Sick and wounded soldiers, 298.

Pay of the Army.

Appropriations, 138, 480, 626.

Arrears, 1154, 1155.

C. S. colored troops, 1161.

Pay of the Army—Continued.

Chaplains, 496.

Detailed men, 3.

Engineer troops, C. S. A., 191.

Enlisted men, 492.

Ensigns, 190.

Estimates of appropriations, 774-776.

General officers, 333, 497.

Increase, 492.

Invalid Corps, 214-216, 1083.

Master armorer at Richmond, Va., 64.

Military store-keepers, 191, 492.

Niter and Mining Bureau, C. S. A., 492, 493.

Remarks, G. A. Trenholm, 962, 963.

Scouts and guards, 494.

Tax to meet increased pay of soldiers, 479.

Peace Propositions.

Chicago convention, 638.

Davis-Stephens correspondence, 840, 934-940, 1000-1004.

Hampton Roads conference, 1058, 1134, 1135.

Niagara Falls conference, 584-587, 636.

Publication of Davis-Vance correspondence, 51, 77, 153.

Remarks:

Davis, Jefferson, 11, 800, 826-828, 1134, 1135.

Ruffin, F. G., 84-88.

Stephens, A. H., 279.

Resolutions Georgia Legislature, 235-237, 826-828.

Peace Society. See Secret Societies.

Pearce, John W., 702.

Pearl, Schooner, 1057.

Pearson, D. C., 214.

Pearson, Richmond M.

Constitutionality of habeas corpus act, 213, 214.

Correspondence, T. Bragg, 214.

Mentioned, 176, 198, 200, 201, 213, 214, 238, 427, 755.

Peay, Nicholas A., 408, 413, 414.

Peck, Elisha, 320.

Pegram, James W.

Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1144.

Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 1144.

Pemberton, John C.

Correspondence:

Kane, G. P., 747.

War Department, C. S., 747.

Mentioned, 8, 313, 747.

Pendleton, Dudley D.

Correspondence. See William N. Pendleton.

Pendleton, William N.

Correspondence:

Lee, R. E., 546.

Walker, R. L., 546.

Mentioned, 294, 546.

Penn, G. T., 543.

Pennington, T. J., 398.

Perkins, John, jr., 137, 1186, 1188, 1190.

Perry (Slave), 662.

Perry, Andrew J., 819.

Perry, B. F., Appraiser.

Correspondence, Q. M. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 748.

Perry, B. F., Sergt., 972.

Perry, Edward A.

Correspondence, R. H. Anderson, 22

Mentioned, 15-17, 21, 22, 111.

Perry, J. R., 8.

- Perry, L. S., 507.
Perryman, David A., 397.
Persons, A. W., 1001.
Pet, Steamer, 351.
Petersburg (Va.) Register, 586.
Petrie, E. B., 816.
Pettit, James T., 700.
Pettus, John J., 8.
Peyton, Robert L. Y., 1186, 1187.
Peyton, Thomas G., 723.
Phelan, James.
 Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 707, 995.
 Mentioned, 137, 710, 1187.
Phillips, William, 311.
Physicians.
 Exemption from conscription, 179.
Pickett, George E.
 Correspondence:
 Longstreet, J., 1093.
 War Department, C. S., 240.
 Mentioned, 93, 262, 857.
Piedmont, Va.
 Engagement, June 5, 1864, 697.
Piedmont Railroad.
 Construction, etc., for military purposes, 392, 393.
Pierce, George F.
 Correspondence:
 Duncan, J. A., 1118.
 Smith, W. A., 1118.
 Mentioned, 1118.
Pierson, C. I., 256.
Pike, Albert.
 Correspondence, E. K. Smith, 1180.
Pillow, Gideon J.
 Assignments, 1082.
 Mentioned, 8, 95, 96, 102, 224, 225, 252, 323, 634, 641,
 752, 787, 1082, 1101, 1123.
Pinckney, Thomas.
 Correspondence: See Bureau of Conscription,
 C. S. A.
 Mentioned, 610, 611.
Pinkney, Robert F.
 Correspondence, J. A. Willard, 1056.
 Mentioned, 1056, 1076, 1081, 1082.
Pitts, John W.
 Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 752.
Pius IX.
 Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 401.
 Mentioned, 401.
Platt, Charles A., 311.
Pleasant Hill, La.
 Engagement, Apr. 9, 1864, 756.
Pleasants, Edwin, 972.
Polhill, J. J., 19.
Polk, Leonidas.
 Correspondence:
 Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 14, 66.
 Alabama, Governor of, 11, 162.
 Clanton, J. H., 394.
 Davis, Jefferson, 174, 386.
 Forrest, N. B., 229, 281, 311.
 Goodman, W., 9.
 Lockhart, H. C., 251.
 Mississippi, Governor of, 229, 261, 307.
Polk, Leonidas—Continued.
 Correspondence:
 Surgeon-General's Office, C. S. A., 59.
 War Department, C. S., 10, 240, 258, 266, 294.
 Mentioned, 66, 224, 293, 445, 1181.
Pond, Preston, Jr.
 Correspondence, Governor of Louisiana, 398.
Porcher, Fred. A.
 Correspondence, State Department, C. S., 959.
Porter, John C.
 Correspondence:
 Gibson, E., 666.
 Richards, W. B., jr., 666.
 Shields, J. C., 667.
Postal Service.
 Condition, needs, etc., 971-974.
 Conscription of employes, 52, 53, 71-74, 121-125,
 657-661.
 Employment of ladies suggested, 974.
 Exemption of employes from conscription, 179.
Post-Office Department, C. S.
 Controversy with War Department, C. S., 52, 53, 70-74, 121-126.
 Correspondence:
 Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 971.
 Davis, Jefferson, 970.
 Ewell, R. S., 972, 974.
 War Department, C. S., 52, 70, 121, 124, 126, 574,
 657, 661.
 Details, 1101, 1106-1108.
 Principal officials, 1861-1865, 1184.
 Reagan, J. H., Postmaster-General, 1184.
Potter, Mark L., Bark, 1058.
Potts, Richard.
 Correspondence, Surgeon-General's Office,
 C. S. A., 682, 712.
 Mentioned, 1075, 1180.
Poulson, John S., 1014.
Powell, John W., 407.
Power, Low & Co.
 Correspondence, F. G. Ruffin, 739.
 Mentioned, 738, 739, 781-785, 900, 1056, 1076.
Pratt, Nathaniel A., 702.
President, C. S. See Jefferson Davis.
Preston, John S.
 Correspondence. See Bureau of Conscription,
 C. S. A.
 Mentioned, 8, 25, 34, 36, 42, 57, 67, 77, 187, 224, 231,
 239, 240, 251-253, 258, 259, 270, 275, 276, 305, 309,
 312, 378, 440, 462, 489, 503, 507, 516, 518, 519, 599,
 601, 610, 611, 630, 640, 654, 669, 710, 839, 855-857,
 883, 897, 1019, 1020, 1112, 1121, 1183.
 Proposed abolition of existing system of conscription, 946-948.
 Superintendent of Conscription, C. S. A., 1183.
Preston, John T. L.
 Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 1093.
Preston, Walter, 137, 1187, 1189.
Preston, William B., 1187.
Price, Hawkins F., 311.
Price, Linville, 816.
Price, Sterling, 713, 961.
Price, W. H. C., 698, 702.
Princesse Royale, Steamer, 295.
Prioleau, William H.
 Correspondence, Surg. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 533.

Prisoners of War.

Commutation of rations of unexchanged, on furlough, 53, 88, 593.

Enlistment in C. S. Army, 694, 821-825, 1011, 1012, 1029, 1030, 1083.

Transportation for escaped Confederate, from Canada, 583, 640.

See also Exchange, Delivery, etc., of Prisoners.

Private Property.

Act of C. S. Congress, capture, etc., of enemy's, 139.

Depredations on, by C. S. troops in Wilkes County, N. C., 177, 201, 202.

Destruction, 139, 202, 210, 212.

Impressment, 37, 198-200.

Liability to seizure for public use, 562.

Unlawful seizures, 689.

Proclamations of the President.

Day of public fasting, humiliation, and prayer, 1037, 1125.

Remarks, Jefferson Davis, 1125.

Proctor's Creek and Drewry's Bluff (or Fort Darling), Va.

Engagement, May 12-16, 1864, 757.

Prussian Consuls. See Consuls.*Pryor, Roger A., 1187, 1189.*Public Property.

Act of C. S. Congress, capture, etc., of enemy's, 139.

Destruction, 37, 38, 125, 139, 174, 202, 204, 210, 212, 239, 444, 445, 580-583, 1078, 1079.

Pugh, James L., 137, 1147, 1188, 1190.*Puryear, R. C., 1186.*Putney, Stephen, 725.*Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A.

Correspondence:

Adj't. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 350, 1173.

Alabama, Quartermaster-General of, 1077.

Blackstock, R. V., 748.

Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 350.

Burgwyn, H. K., 748.

Cole, A. H., 1087.

Congress, C. S., 1039.

Cross, W. B. B., 1089.

Ferguson, J. B., jr., 674, 684.

Finlayson, J., 748.

McRae, C. J., 296, 673.

McRae, J. J., 748.

Martin, A. M., 748.

Mason, W. W., 748.

Moore, G. D., 748.

North Carolina, Governor of, 38.

Ordinance Department, C. S. A., 46.

Perry, B. F., 748.

Sharp, T., 210, 683.

Sims, F. W., 91, 92, 227, 258, 598, 617, 1091.

Surgeon-General's Office, C. S. A., 60.

Walker, N. S., 295.

Waller, R. P., 211, 288, 351, 674.

War Department, C. S., 17, 18, 65, 91, 227, 258, 292, 293, 499, 500, 556, 557, 589, 599, 617, 618, 626, 672, 690, 716, 726, 741, 800, 974, 1053, 1078, 1086.

Wilkinson, U. B., 748.

Orders, Circulars, series 1864: Aug. 8, 574; Sept. 15, 643.

Orders, Circulars, series 1865: Jan. 23, 1033.

Quartermasters, C. S. A.

Appointment recommended, 104.

Quartermaster's Department, C. S. A.

Appropriations, 138, 480, 626.

Condition, needs, etc., 628, 974, 975, 1064, 1086-1093, 1095.

Control of railroad transportation, 77.

Details, 309, 363, 1101, 1106-1108.

Establishment, organization, etc., 943.

Estimates for foreign supplies, 589, 590.

Estimates of appropriations, 772-774.

Inspections, 725, 726.

Issues of clothing to C. S. Army, July 1, 1864-Jan. 1, 1865, 1039-1041.

Lawton, A. R., Quartermaster-General, 49, 1183.

Measures to provide supplies, 499, 500.

Opinion, Attorney-General, C. S., appointment of A. R. Lawton as Quartermaster-General, 318-322.

Powers, duties, etc., of officers, 724-730.

Pro rata distribution of appropriations, 627, 628. Regulations, 643, 644.

Quattlebaum, Paul J., 317.*Questine, Henry, 806, 807.*Quilter, Ball & Co., 156, 157.*Railroads.

Alabama and Tennessee Rivers, 742, 743.

Charleston and Savannah, 969.

Columbia and Augusta, 969, 970.

Commissioners, 694.

Connections urged by W. M. Burwell, 226.

Construction, etc., for military purposes, 251, 312, 339, 340, 392, 393, 562, 570, 571, 575-577, 694, 742, 743, 968-970, 1006, 1007, 1053, 1054, 1085, 1086, 1095, 1096, 1114.

Control of transportation by Q. M.'s Dept., 77. Details, 363.

East Tennessee and Georgia, 537.

Employés excused from drills, 537.

Exemption from duties on machinery, etc., 442.

Exemption of officials and employés from conscription, 179, 598-601.

Florida, 561.

Georgia, 537.

Government loans, 743.

Measures to prevent destruction, 1113.

Military possession, 226, 258, 339, 340, 561.

Mississippi Central, 9, 10, 478, 508, 514.

Mobile and Girard, 575-577.

Montgomery and West Point, 312.

Nashville and Chattanooga, 537.

North Carolina, 598-601.

Operation and management, 9, 10, 89-93, 209, 226-229, 258, 339, 340, 478, 508, 514, 598-601.

Piedmont, 392, 393.

Rates for transportation, 616-618.

Richmond and Danville, 226, 227.

Rolling-stock, 226, 228.

South Carolina, 969.

South Side, 226.

Transportation regulations, 643, 644.

Union and Spartanburg, 969.

Virginia and Tennessee, 226.

Virginia Central, 226.

Wilmington, Charlotte and Rutherford, 570.

Wilmington and Manchester, 570, 571.

- Rains, Gabriel J., 491.
Rains, George W., 527.
Ralls, John P., 1188.
Ramsay, H. A.
 Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1194.
 Correspondence, S. Jones, 1194.
Ramsay, H. Ashton.
 Correspondence, J. M. Brooke, 521.
 Mentioned, 520.
Ramsay, James G., 1191.
Randolph, George W.
 Mentioned, 1184.
 Secretary of War, C. S., 1184.
Rankin, D., 725, 1034.
Ransom, Robert, jr., 726.
Rations.
 Army officers, 163, 175, 186, 333, 481, 721.
 C. S. colored troops, 1161.
 Commutation value, 53, 54, 88, 175, 216, 593.
 Estimated cost per hundred, 777.
 Hospital, 54, 175, 534, 592, 593.
 Invalid Corps, 186, 216, 835.
 Sale prohibited, 686.
 Sick, convalescent, and wounded soldiers, 594, 721.
 Tobacco, 299, 370.
Ravesies, Paul F., 681.
Read, Henry E., 137, 1188, 1190.
Read, Isaac, 698, 702.
Reade, Edwin G., 137, 1187.
Reagan, John H.
 Correspondence, N. Clements, 572.
 See also Post-Office Department, C. S.
 Mentioned, 71, 561, 573, 661, 799, 1038, 1150, 1184, 1186.
 Postmaster-General, C. S., 1184.
Reardon, H. F., 698, 702.
Recruiting Officers.
 Special authorities revoked, 83, 84, 298.
Recruiting Service.
 Alabama, 1042-1044.
 Arizona Territory, 76, 960-962, 1035, 1036.
 California, 76, 960-962, 1035, 1036.
 Colored troops. See Confederate States Colored Troops.
 Enlistment of deserters prohibited, 255, 714, 1178.
 Enlistment of prisoners of war in C. S. Army, 694, 821-825, 1011, 1012, 1029, 1030, 1083.
 Georgia, 714, 991-994.
 Kentucky, 601, 602, 661.
 Mexico, 960-962.
 Missouri, 713.
 New Mexico Territory, 960-962, 1035, 1036.
 North Carolina, 995.
 Special authorities revoked, 83, 84, 298.
 Texas, 1168, 1169.
 Within enemy's lines, 14, 66.
Recruits.
 Assignment and organization, 84, 750, 1059-1063.
 Collection, instruction, etc., 270.
Red River (La.) Campaign.
 Mar. 10-May 22, 1864, 756, 790.
 See also—
Manassas, La. Battle, Apr. 8, 1864.
Pleasant Hill, La. Engagement, Apr. 9, 1864.
Redwood, Richard H., 322.
Reed, Mr., 444.
Reed, William B., 972.
Reese, George, 396.
Register and Advertiser, 1110.
Regulations, C. S. Army.
 Courts-martial, 238.
 Leaves of absence, 229
 Revocation of certain paragraphs, 53, 54.
Reid, A. C., 543.
Reid, C. H., & Co., 525, 528.
Reid, John C., 1059.
Reid, S. V., 738, 739, 782.
Rendezvous.
 Abolished, 1177.
 Camp guards, etc., 386, 387, 633, 634.
 Camp Holmes, N. C., 490, 491, 504-506.
 Camps of instruction, 33, 34, 490, 491, 504-506, 1177.
 Collection, instruction, etc., of recruits, 270.
Reserves.
 Age limit, 212, 223, 378.
 Assignment and organization, 270.
 Enrollment, 212, 257, 270.
 Furloughs, 518, 519.
 Light duty companies, 896, 897.
 Officers, 369, 378, 517.
 Organization, etc., 178, 196, 197, 212, 223, 232, 257, 258, 270, 347-349, 369, 370, 378, 386, 387, 415, 421, 422, 424, 439, 440, 463-465, 473-475, 507, 513, 517, 518, 525, 538, 558, 559, 571, 593, 685, 686, 718, 1113, 1153, 1158, 1159.
 Remarks, J. L. Kemper, 1158, 1159.
 Restrictions to service within respective States, 841.
 Supervision and control, 518, 685, 686.
 Transfers to general service, 1153, 1177-1179.
 Trans-Mississippi Department, 536, 685.
 See also respective States.
Restless, Schooner, 1057.
Reveley, W. W., 512.
Reynolds, Thomas C., 1187, 1189.
Rhett, B. Barnwell, sr., 1186.
Rhett, Thomas S., 14, 154, 713.
Richards, A., Brig, 1057.
Richards, John R.
 Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 47.
 Mentioned, 46.
Richards, William B., jr.
 Correspondence, J. C. Porter, 666.
 Mentioned, 666.
Richardson, Robert V., 543.
Richardson, William H.
 Correspondence. See Virginia, Adj. Gen. of.
Richmond, Va.
 Prisoners captured south of, to be sent to Andersonville, Ga., 369.
Richmond, Department of.
 Organization, strength, etc., of troops:
 June 20, 1864, 520.
 Dec. 80, 1864, 989.
 Mar. 20, 1865, 1182.
Richmond and Danville Railroad.
 Connections and extensions, 226-228.
Richmond (Va.) Enquirer, 210, 243, 289.
Richmond (Va.) Examiner, 586.

Richmond (Va.) Sentinel, 5.

Riely, John W.

Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 290, 388.

See also Adj't. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A.

Mentioned, 171, 972.

Ring, George P.

Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1193.

Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 1193.

Ripley, Roswell S., 511, 513.

Rison, Captain, 445.

Rives, Alfred L.

Acting Chief of Engineer Bureau, C. S. A., 1183.

Correspondence. See Engineer Dept., C. S. A.

Mentioned, 1183.

Rives, William C., 1187, 1191.

Roan, Brig, 1057.

Robert E. Packer, Schooner, 1057.

Robertson, James W.

Correspondence:

Beauregard, G. T., 460.

Gilmer, J. F., 459.

Mentioned, 458-460.

Robertson, John E.

Correspondence, Gov. of South Carolina, 407.

Mentioned, 403-405, 408, 409, 413, 414.

Robertson, R. L., 397.

Robertson, Wyndham.

Correspondence. See Virginia Legislature.

Robinson, Cornelius, 1185.

Robinson, M. D., 398.

Robinson, William H., 311.

Roddey, Philip D., 66.

Rogers, S. St. George, 1190.

Rosecrans, William S., 576.

Rosenberg & Haiman, 590, 673.

Rosser, Thomas L.

Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 1080, 1081.

Mentioned, 1081.

Roulhac, Joseph B., 19.

Rousseau, Lovell H., 1017.

Rowland, Alexander M.

Correspondence, W. M. Browne, 259.

Rowsie, Gottlieb, 806, 807.

Royston, Grandison D., 1188.

Rucker, William P., 811.

Ruffin, Frank G.

Correspondence:

Power, Low & Co., 739.

Subsistence Department, C. S. A., 738, 781.

War Department, C. S., 84, 283, 899, 941.

Mentioned, 901, 932.

Ruffin, Thomas, 1186.

Ruggles, Daniel.

Assignments, 1177.

Mentioned, 1177.

Rusk, James E., 311.

Russell, Charles W., 137, 1187, 1189, 1191.

Russell, Daniel L., jr., 375, 376, 425-428, 530, 555, 556, 755.

Rust, Albert, 1185.

Ruthven, A. S., 573.

Rutland, J. M.

Correspondence:

Myers, F., 414.

Trout, T. B., 405.

Rutland, J. M.—Continued.

Mentioned, 403, 408, 409, 413, 414.

St. John, Isaac M.

Com. Gen. of Subsistence, C. S. A., 1183.

Correspondence. See Niter and Mining Bureau, C. S. A.; also Subsistence Department, C. S. A.

Mentioned, 702, 1095, 1100, 1136, 1183.

Superintendent of Niter and Mining Bureau, C. S. A., 1183.

Saint-Just, Antoine Louis Leon de, 127.

Saint Mary's, Steamer, 166.

Sale, John B.

Correspondence. See Brazton Bragg.

Salisbury, William L., 311.

Salisbury (N. C.) Arsenal.

Designated, 609.

Saltville, Va.

Action, Oct. 2, 1864, 697.

Sanders, George N., 584, 585, 587, 639.

Sanders, B. B., 543.

Sanders, R. W.

Correspondence, R. Taylor, 789.

Sanderson, John P., 1185.

Sandridge, John M., 398.

Sands, Alexander H., 660.

Sarah A. Bayce, Schooner, 1057.

Sarah B. Harris, Schooner, 1057.

Sarah Louisa, Schooner, 1057.

Savage, Henry.

Correspondence, E. Murray, 905.

Mentioned, 1055.

Savannah (Ga.) Arsenal.

Designated, 298.

Savannah (Ga.) Morning News, 259.

Scotia, Steamer, 351.

Scott, George W., 45, 83.

Scott, John S., 509, 510.

Scott, Robert E., 1187.

Scott, S. S.

Commissioner of Indian Affairs, C. S., 1183.

Mentioned, 342, 767, 944, 1183.

Scott, William S., 633.

Screven, John, 1053.

Secret Societies.

Alabama, 393-398.

North Carolina, 802-820.

Remarks, Jefferson Davis, 67.

Tennessee, 802-820.

Virginia, 802-820.

Seddon, James A.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 1046.

See also War Department, C. S.

Habeas corpus, 198.

Impressments, 767, 768.

Leave of absence, 501.

Mentioned, 4, 8, 14, 20, 27, 28, 39, 44, 46, 56, 67, 83, 93, 107-110, 120, 125, 150, 151, 156, 157, 161, 170, 171, 175, 179, 180, 186, 189-196, 202-205, 208, 209, 211, 214, 234, 244, 245, 249, 251, 252, 260, 268-270, 273-277, 281, 284, 285, 290, 293, 296, 297, 299-301, 303, 309, 310, 323, 365, 368, 369, 376, 377, 387, 388, 390, 402, 415, 437, 444, 445, 460, 461, 473, 475-477, 479, 480, 486, 493-495, 497, 498, 500, 501, 506, 510-512, 516, 519, 524, 532, 534, 535, 537, 539, 543, 545, 547, 548, 557, 561, 568, 569, 572, 574, 585, 587, 592, 597, 600, 602, 603, 606, 608, 618, 622-625, 627-629, 631-633, 649, 655, 656, 659, 661, 662, 669, 675-678, 680.

Seddon, James A.—Continued.

Mentioned, 686, 694, 703, 704, 711, 713-716, 720, 721, 723-725, 728, 729, 731, 732, 737, 742, 743, 746, 748, 750, 751, 754, 771, 772, 780-784, 796, 797, 819, 821-823, 829, 834, 835, 838, 839, 841, 846-848, 850, 852, 854, 870, 871, 879-881, 883-886, 893, 894, 897, 898, 901, 903, 904, 913, 927, 929, 933, 934, 940, 942, 944, 946, 948, 951, 953, 962, 966, 971, 973, 974, 977, 984, 986, 992, 993, 996-998, 1001, 1011, 1012, 1014, 1019, 1020, 1039, 1052, 1064, 1075, 1183, 1184, 1187.

Negroes as soldiers, 693, 694, 761, 762, 768-771.

Secretary of War, C. S., 1183, 1184.

Seibels, John J., 394, 396.

Seixas, J. M., 153, 184, 588.

Seminole Nation.

Delegate to C. S. Congress, 1191.

Semmes, A. G., 678.

Semmes, Thomas J.

Correspondence, A. H. Stephens, 840.

Mentioned, 137, 840, 939, 1187, 1189.

Servine, Morris & Co., 157.

Seward, William H.

Correspondence. See State Department, U. S.

Mentioned, 132, 637, 1058.

Sexton, Frank B., 137, 1189, 1191.

Seymour, Horatio, 638.

Seymour, Thomas H., 638.

Shannon, William M., 410.

Sharp, Thomas.

Agent for purchase of machinery, etc., abroad, 210.

Correspondence, Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A., 210, 683.

Mentioned, 211, 289, 351, 527, 673-675, 684.

Shaw, J. D.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 1160.

Mentioned, 572.

Shelby, Isaac, 84.

Sheldon, A. D., 650, 651.

Sheliha, Victor von, 317.

Shenandoah Valley, Maryland, and Pennsylvania.

Operations in, June 23-Aug. 3, 1864, 757.

Shepherd, V. E.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 864.

See also War Department, C. S.

Sheppard, Edwin, 972.

Sheridan, Philip H., 757.

Sherman, William T., 639, 652, 664, 791, 828, 832, 844, 967, 969, 991, 1042.

Shewmake, John T., 1190.

Shields, James W., 289.

Shields, John C.

Correspondence:

Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 665, 667, 669, 750, 998.

Heath, J. E., 667.

Henley, R. S., 667.

Porter, J. C., 667.

Mentioned, 666, 742, 746, 751, 788, 998, 1178.

Orders, Circulars, series 1864: Oct. —, 997; No. 60, 666; No. 70, 745; No. 77, 894.

Orders, Circulars, series 1865: Mar. 31, 1178.

Shinn, S. R.

Correspondence, T. P. Turner, 1194.

Shooting Star, Ship, 1058.

Shorter, John Gill, 1185.

Showalter, Daniel, 960.

Sick, Convalescent, and Wounded Soldiers.

Care, etc., 59-61, 107-110, 174, 175, 402, 496, 498, 533, 718-720, 958, 959.

Commutation of rations, 53, 54, 498, 534, 593.

Descriptive lists, 1000.

Furloughs, 175, 749, 999, 1178.

Hospital accommodations for officers, 174, 496.

Payments, 298, 1000.

Rations, 175, 534, 594, 721.

Transfers, 999.

Sigel, Franz, 757.

Signal Corps, C. S. A.

Conscription of employes, 624.

Establishment, organization, etc., 577, 578, 944.

Norris, W., Chief, 1183.

Sikes, Jesse H., 536.

Simmons, ———, 1162.

Simmons, John W., 322.

Simms, William E., 137, 1187, 1189.

Simon, A. G., 551.

Simons, K. L., 412.

Simpson, William D., 137, 1188, 1191.

Sims, F. W.

Correspondence:

Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A., 91, 92, 227, 258, 598, 617, 1091.

War Department, C. S., 91, 184.

Mentioned, 90, 91, 184, 227, 618, 1087, 1095.

Sinclair, Hamilton & Co., 566.

Singleton, Otho R., 137, 1188, 1190.

Siren, Steamer, 351.

Slavery.

Abolition urged, 1067-1070.

Remarks, W. H. Seward, 132.

See also Negroes.

Slaves. See Negroes.

Slidell, John.

Correspondence, C. J. McRae, 158.

Mentioned, 155, 570, 573.

Smith, A. B., 507.

Smith, C. M., 725.

Smith, Caraway, 17, 562.

Smith, E. B., 397.

Smith, E. Kirby.

Correspondence:

Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 626.

Davis, Jefferson, 254, 1078.

Magruder, J. B., 126, 253.

Martin, D. B., 257.

Pike, A., 1180.

Texas, Governor of, 35, 258.

War Department, C. S., 76, 231.

Mentioned, 209, 520, 574, 626, 962, 975, 989, 1036, 1088, 1115, 1116, 1182.

Smith, F. H., 698, 700, 702.

Smith, Francis H.

Correspondence, Adj. Gen. of Virginia, 722.

Mentioned, 722, 1093.

Smith, Gustavus W.

Correspondence, Governor of Georgia, 1181.

Mentioned, 520, 636, 1138, 1184.

Secretary of War, C. S., 1184.

Smith, J. W. G.

Correspondence, J. S. Calvert, 538.

- Smith, James M., 1190.
- Smith, Larkin.
Correspondence. See Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A.
Mentioned, 111, 817.
- Smith, Madison, 808.
- Smith, Martin L.
Chief of Engineer Bureau, C. S. A., 202, 1183.
Mentioned, 202, 1183.
- Smith, Robert H., 1185.
- Smith, W. H., 89, 90, 92.
- Smith, William.
Correspondence. See Virginia, Governor of.
Mentioned, 162, 268, 269, 309, 418, 432, 539, 547, 556, 558, 624, 723, 735, 806, 820, 876, 923, 959, 1039, 1138-1140, 1142, 1143, 1166, 1182, 1189.
- Smith, William A.
Correspondence, G. F. Pierce, 1118.
Mentioned, 1118.
- Smith, William E.
Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 1006.
Mentioned, 1190.
- Smith, William N. H.
Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 614, 642.
Mentioned, 137, 615, 1186, 1188, 1191.
- Smith, William R., 137, 1188, 1190.
- Smith, William T., 397.
- Smoot, L. R., 531.
- Smylie, James J., 646.
- Snead, Thomas L., 1190.
- Snead, Thomas T. L., 1139.
- Snelling, J. J., 19.
- Sons of Liberty, 639.
- South Carolina.
Agricultural details, 1104.
Alleged irregularities of C. S. impressing officers, 402-415.
Army records, 310.
Assignment and organization of conscripts, 166, 185.
Call of General Beauregard for all available forces, 1058.
Camp guards, etc., in conscript service Sept. 9, 1864, 634.
Census statistics, 103.
Conference of impressment commissioners at Montgomery, Ala., 608.
Deserters returned to Army, 360, 1109.
Discharge of soldiers appointed to military academies, 33, 39, 185, 205.
Enforcement of conscription acts, 652, 653.
Estimated percentage of white population furnished, 103.
Estimate of military resources, 100, 635.
Exhibits of conscripts enrolled, exempted, detailed, assigned, etc., 103, 360, 1101-1103, 1105-1109.
Exportation of cotton, 51, 77, 78, 114, 161, 162.
Holcombe Legion, 430.
Impressment of slave labor, 963, 964, 979, 1018-1026, 1058, 1059.
Measures for defense, 205.
Measures to provide supplies, 51, 77, 78, 161, 162.
Members of C. S. Congress, 1186-1188, 1190, 1191.
Men furnished, 99, 100, 102, 103, 360, 1101.
Men subject to conscription, 1864, 103.
- South Carolina—Continued.
Muster out of six-months' State troops, 38, 39.
Quota impressed slaves, 933.
Reserves, 364, 465, 507, 513.
Schedule of prices for provisions, etc., 686.
State officers exempted from conscription on certificate of Governor, 851.
- South Carolina, Adjutant and Inspector General of.
Correspondence:
Beauregard, G. T., 33.
War Department, C. S., 1004.
- South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida, Dept. of.
Orders, Special, series 1865: No. 38, 1083.
Organization, strength, etc., of troops:
June 30, 1864, 520.
Nov. 20, 1864, 989.
Apr. 17, 1865, 1182.
- South Carolina, Governor of.
Conference of Governors at Augusta, Ga., 692, 693, 735, 736.
Correspondence:
Beauregard, G. T., 1058.
Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 1020.
Davis, Jefferson, 670.
Echols, W. H., 1025, 1026.
Johnson, R. B., 1020.
Montague, C., 406.
North Carolina, Governor of, 684, 692.
Robertson, J. E., 407.
War Department, C. S., 33, 39, 51, 77, 161, 166, 185, 205, 404, 465, 513.
- South Carolina Legislature.
Exemption of State officers from C. S. service, 979, 980, 1004, 1005.
Militia, 904.
Slave labor, 963, 964, 979.
- South Carolina Troops (C.).
Miscellaneous—Holcombe Legion, 430.
- South Side Railroad.
Rolling-stock, 226.
- Southwestern Kentucky, Department of.
Enforcement of conscription acts, 749.
- Sparrow, Edward.
Correspondence:
Beauregard, G. T., 168.
Davis, Jefferson, 837.
Mentioned, 137, 139, 838, 1186, 1187, 1189.
- Speedwell, Bark, 1058.
- Spencer, James, 424.
- Spies.
Habeas corpus act, 203, 204.
- Spokane, Schooner, 1057.
- Spotsylvania Court-House, Va.
Operations about, May 8-21, 1864, 756, 757.
- Sprigg, B. L., 702.
- Stag, Steamer, 957.
- Stanton, Edwin M., 636, 637.
- Staples, Waller R., 52, 71, 137, 1187, 1189, 1191.
- State Department, C. S.
Benjamin, J. P., Secretary of State, 1184.
Browne, W. M., Secretary of State, ad interim, 1184.
Correspondence:
Clay, C. C., Jr., 584, 636.
Clements, N., 569.
Davis, Jefferson, 1079.

State Department, C. S.—Continued.

Correspondence:

Holcombe, J. P., 583.

Lee, R. E., 1079.

Porcher, F. A., 959.

Thompson, J., 322.

War Department, C. S., 625.

Hunter, R. M. T., Secretary of State, 1184.

Principal officials, 1861-1865, 1184.

Toombs, R., Secretary of State, 1184.

State Department, U. S.

Correspondence:

Adams, C. F., 132.

Middleton, H., 133.

Stedman, Mr., 444.

Steele, Major, 120.

Steele, Theophilus.

Authority to recruit in Kentucky, 661.

Mentioned, 661.

Stephens, Alexander H.

Confederate Administration, 279-281.

Correspondence:

Davis, Jefferson, 840, 934, 1000, 1002.

Johnson, H. V., 278.

Semmes, T. J., 840.

Habeas corpus, 279.

Mentioned, 130, 179, 347, 1058, 1184, 1185.

Peace propositions, 279, 840, 934-940, 1000, 1004.

Vice-President of the Confederate States, 1184.

Stephens, John T., 311.

Stephens, Linton, 234, 235, 279, 311, 826.

Sterrett, W. B., 157.

Stevens, H. D., 659.

Stevens, Walter H., 40, 966, 1139.

Stewart, Thomas R.

Correspondence, Governor of Georgia, 1137.

Mentioned, 311.

Stoddard, William J., 266.

Stoneman, George, 576, 1175.

Stout, S. H.

Correspondence:

Surgeon-General's Office, C. S. A., 719.

Terry, C., 719.

Stovall, B. A., 702.

Stragglers.

Measures to prevent straggling, 369.

Strange, Robert.

Correspondence. See Braxton Bragg.

Straughan, Samuel L.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 519.

Strickland, Hardy.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 105.

Mentioned, 1188.

Stringer, E. P., 525.

Stringfellow, J. H.

Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 1067.

Strother, John M.

Correspondence, Subsistence Dept., C. S. A., 1128.

Mentioned, 901.

Stuart, Buchanan &amp; Co., 925.

Stubbs, Charles F., 19, 20.

Subsistence.

Cattle, bacon, and pork on hand Apr. 1, 1863, and Apr. 1, 1864, 379.

Competition between State and C. S. agents, 932.

Deficiency of supply, 738, 739, 781-785, 930-932.

Subsistence—Continued.

Measures to provide supplies, 266, 289-292, 300, 312, 337-339, 379, 380, 402-415, 533, 535, 536, 549, 614, 615, 621, 642, 645-651, 653, 654, 662, 663, 677-682, 688, 718, 735, 738, 739, 781-785, 899-902, 930-932, 941, 1031, 1032, 1045, 1063, 1064, 1096-1099, 1113, 1114, 1155, 1156.

Purchases abroad, 930, 955-958.

Remarks, Jefferson Davis, 1131-1133.

Subsistence Department, C. S. A.

Appropriations, 139, 480, 626.

Authority to purchase currency of United States, 477.

Condition, needs, etc., 974, 975, 1005, 1006, 1027-1029, 1031, 1032, 1045, 1064, 1076, 1095, 1128, 1137.

Correspondence:

Adj't. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 628.

Bayne, T. L., 783.

Bragg, B., 300.

Claiborne, J. H., 1136.

Cummings, J. F., 115.

Edwards, A. F., 402.

French, S. B., 89, 533, 535, 653, 1136.

Guerin, H. C., 408.

Moses, R. J., 828.

Noland, B. P., 290, 687, 1006, 1032.

Ruffin, F. G., 738, 781.

Strother, J. M., 1128.

Surgeon-General's Office, C. S. A., 59.

War Department, C. S., 46, 91, 106, 107, 379, 402-404, 477, 533, 535, 549, 589, 603, 615, 687, 688, 719, 720, 730, 742, 785, 930, 974, 1027, 1032, 1064, 1076, 1136, 1137.

Wellford, P. A., 1113.

Williams, T. G., 1136.

Details, 77, 275, 363, 1101, 1106-1108.

Establishment, organization, etc., 943.

Estimates for foreign supplies, 589, 590.

Estimates of appropriations, 776, 777.

Northrop, L. B., Commissary-General, 1183.

Orders, Circulars, series 1863: Apr. 15, 290.

Orders, Circulars, series 1864: Mar. 1, 629, Aug. 8, 574; Sept. 5, 622; Sept. 15, 642.

Pro rata distribution of appropriations, 627, 628.

Regulations, 622, 623, 642, 643, 828, 829.

St. John, I. M., Commissary-General, 1183.

Substitutes.

Conscription of principals, 12, 24, 25, 176, 197, 198, 200, 201, 231.

Enlistment prohibited, 11, 24.

See also Conscription.

Suliate, Bark, 1057.

Summer, A. G., 19, 20.

Surface, John, 71, 122.

Surgeon-General's Office, C. S. A.

Care of sick and wounded, 59, 61.

Correspondence:

Carrington, W. A., 537, 687.

Chaille, S. E., 516.

Ordnance Department, C. S. A., 589.

Polk, L., 59.

Potts, R., 682, 712.

Prioleau, W. H., 533.

Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A., 60.

Stout, S. H., 719.

Subsistence Department, C. S. A., 59.

Surgeon-General's Office, C. S. A.—Continued.

Correspondence:

War Dept., C. S., 23, 589, 719, 742, 1073, 1111.

Orders, Circulars, series 1864: No. 8, 402.

Surget, Eustace.

Correspondence, R. Taylor, 1078.

See also Richard Taylor.

Mentioned, 1078.

Swan, William G.Correspondence. See Congress, C. S.

Mentioned, 137, 1189, 1191.

Syren, Steamer, 958.*Tait, Peter, 526.*Taliaferro, V. H., 536, 537.*Talisman, Steamer, 956.*Tallahassee, C. S. S.

Mentioned, 1055-1058.

Vessels captured, 1057, 1058.

Tannahill, Robert, 262.*Tarborough, A. R., 972.*Taxation.

Acts of C. S. Congress:

Jan. 30, 1864, 63.

Feb. 17, 1864, 140-152.

June 10, 1864, 479.

June 14, 1864, 482-485.

Classification, 141-152, 483-485.

Exemptions, 152, 483, 484.

Incomes, 145-147, 484, 485.

Payment of increased compensation of soldiers, 479.

Proposed reduction of rates, 1026, 1027.

Registration, 140, 141.

Tax in kind, 148-152, 479.

Views of T. Allan, 841-845.

Wages of detailed soldiers not liable, 140.

Tax in Kind.

Acts of C. S. Congress:

Feb. 17, 1864, 148-152.

June 10, 1864, 479.

Agents, etc., over forty-five years of age not liable to conscription, 548.

Assignment and organization of employes, 1000.

Collection, 449, 479, 535, 536, 572, 574, 575, 800-802, 816, 817.

Corn, 479.

Crops destroyed, 479.

Exemptions, 479.

Hogs, 479.

Quartermasters for each Congressional district, 495.

Salt pork an equivalent for bacon, 14.

Tobacco, 63, 64.

Transportation, 449.

Wool, 478.

Taylor, Charles S.

Correspondence, R. W. N. Noland, 1005.

Mentioned, 1006, 1032.

Taylor, D. B.

Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 21.

Mentioned, 23.

Taylor, J. M., 47.*Taylor, J. T., 972.*Taylor, John, 877.*Taylor, John D.

Correspondence, W. Lamb, 428.

Taylor, Junius L.

Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 21.

Taylor, Richard.

Correspondence:

Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 828.

Alabama, Governor of, 934.

Beauregard, G. T., 747.

Bragg, B., 645.

Brandon, W. L., 1179.

Meriwether, M., 742.

Mississippi, Governor of, 1041.

Sanders, R. W., 789.

Surget, E., 1078.

War Department, C. S., 688, 718, 735, 1078.

Mentioned, 340, 740, 823, 989, 996, 1030, 1041, 1065, 1072, 1078, 1085, 1163, 1182.

Taylor, Walter H.

Correspondence, R. E. Lee, 660.

See also Robert E. Lee.Taylor, Zachary, 968, 979.*Temple, R. H., 698, 702.*Templeton, William C., 637.*Tennessee.

Agricultural details, 1104.

Camp guards, etc., in conscript service Sept. 9, 1864, 634.

Camps of instruction, 33, 34.

Conference of impressment commissioners at Montgomery, Ala., 608.

Consolidation of organizations, 543.

Deserters returned to Army, 361, 1109.

Enrollment of conscripts, 34.

Execution of impressment law, 353.

Exhibits of conscripts enrolled, exempted, detailed, assigned, etc., 361, 1101-1103, 1105-1109.

Members of C. S. Congress, 1186-1188, 1190, 1191.

Men furnished, 361, 1101.

Orgn., equip., etc., of vols., 1.

Quota impressed slaves, 933.

Representation in C. S. Congress, 465, 466.

Schedules of prices for provisions, etc., 1050-1053.

Secret societies, 802-820.

State officers exempted from conscription on certificate of Governor, 851.

Tennessee, Army of (C.).

Commissioner, habeas corpus act, 211, 212.

Organization, strength, etc.:

June 30, 1864, 520.

Jan. 20, 1865, 989.

Apr. 17, 1865, 1182.

Tennessee, Governor of.

Correspondence, Gov. of North Carolina, 685.

Tennessee Troops (C.).Artillery, Light—Batteries: Rhett, 857; Tobin's, 1062.Cavalry—Battalions: 26th, 543.Cavalry—Regiments: 3d (Forrest), 543; 14th (Neely), 543; 15th (Stewart), 543; 16th (Logwood), 543; 18th, 543.Terry, Carlisle.

Correspondence:

Graybill, J. H., 719.

Stout, S. H., 719.

Mentioned, 718, 720.

Terry, David S., 76, 960.*Terry, Tom W., 808.*Texada, ———, 400.

Texas.

- Enforcement of conscription acts, 263, 271, 278, 322.
- Members of C. S. Congress, 1186, 1187, 1189-1191.
- Recruiting service, 1168, 1169.
- Reorganization of troops, 40.
- State troops, 253, 254, 257, 258, 268, 271, 278, 1078.
- Status of State troops, 24.
- Transfer of State troops to C. S. service, 126.
- Troops for defense of Indian frontier, 35.
- Texas, Governor of.
  - Correspondence:
    - Davis, Jefferson, 322.
    - Magruder, J. B., 24, 40, 253, 258, 268, 271, 278.
    - Smith, E. K., 35, 258.
- Thom, James R., 972.
- Thomas, Mr., 444.
- Thomas, Bryan M.
  - Correspondence, D. H. Maury, 753.
- Thomas, J. H., 1186.
- Thomas, John J., 1186.
- Thomas, L. A., 543.
- Thomas, S. B., 19.
- Thomas & Hollams, 528.
- Thomason, Hugh F., 1185.
- Thomason, Zach., 622.
- Thompson, Major, 253.
- Thompson, Dexter B., 311.
- Thompson, Jacob.
  - Correspondence:
    - Davis, Jefferson, 278, 322.
    - State Department, C. S., 322.
  - Mentioned, 584, 585, 587, 636, 637, 639, 640.
  - Mission to Canada, 278, 322, 639.
- Thompson, James, 808.
- Thompson, Thayer & Adams, 682.
- Thorburn, Henry C.
  - Correspondence, R. E. Lee, 659, 660.
- Tibbs, William H., 1189.
- Tobacco.
  - Destruction to avoid capture, 1066, 1067.
  - Exchange for army supplies, 154.
  - Exportation, 80, 81, 1169.
  - Rations for the Army, 299, 370.
  - Regulations governing exportation, 187-189, 206, 207, 239, 240, 245, 246, 255, 305-307.
  - Seizure of, belonging to Belgian consul, 538, 545.
  - Tax in kind, 63, 64.
  - Trade in Virginia, 285-288.
  - Trans-Mississippi Department, 233.
- Tobin, Thomas F., 1062.
- Tolbert, J. M.
  - Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 21.
- Toombs, Robert.
  - Mentioned, 311, 1184, 1185.
  - Secretary of State, C. S., 1184.
- Tracy, Michael O., 1011.
- Trade and Intercourse.
  - Accounts of foreign agents, 154, 155, 528, 702-704.
  - Acts of C. S. Congress:
    - Feb. 6, 1864, 78-82.
    - June 14, 1864, 486.
  - Cotton, 9, 10, 80-82, 241, 351, 513, 517, 614, 642, 645-651, 677-683, 688, 718, 735, 789, 790, 930, 1169, 1180, 1181.
  - Foreign commerce, 552-555.

Trade and Intercourse—Continued.

- Importation of luxuries, etc., 78-80, 486.
- North Carolina and Tennessee, 261, 262.
- Passports, 661, 662, 669, 670, 1014, 1015.
- Purchase and construction of ocean steamers abroad, 525-527, 529.
- Regulations, foreign commerce, 187-189, 239, 245, 305-307, 897, 928, 929, 948-955.
- Regulations, overland commerce, 208, 207, 239, 240, 246, 305-307.
- Remarks:
  - Davis, Jefferson, 552, 553, 948-953.
  - Johnson, H. V., 596.
  - Lee, R. E., 285-287.
  - Secretary of Treasury, C. S., 953-955.
  - Secretary of War, C. S., 928, 929.
- Resolutions C. S. Congress, Dec. 5, 6, 1864, 897.
- Shipments of cotton, 241, 351, 930.
- Trans-Mississippi Department, 232, 233.
- Virginia and Maryland, 245, 246, 255, 261, 262.
- With the enemy, 508-510, 614, 642, 645-651, 677-683, 688, 689, 718, 735, 789, 790.
- Trans-Mississippi Department.
  - Auxiliary bureaus of War Department, 193, 194, 233.
  - Conscription, 231-234.
  - Discharge of supernumerary officers, etc., 175.
  - Employment of negroes in Army, 233.
  - Exportation of cotton, 233.
  - Functions of commanding general under habeas corpus act, 205.
  - General for command, 194.
  - Habeas corpus act, 232.
  - Hospital rations, 175.
  - Invalid Corps, 233, 234.
  - Military resources, 341, 342.
  - Operations in, 340-342.
  - Orders, Circulars, series 1864: (Maxey) June 1, 464.
  - Orders, General, series 1864: (Smith) No. 75, 685; (Greer) No. 15, 536.
  - Organization, equipment, etc., of Army, 231-234.
  - Organization, strength, etc., of troops:
    - June 30, 1864, 520.
    - Dec. 31, 1864, 989, 1182.
  - Recruiting service, 84.
  - Reserves, 536, 685.
  - Scouts and guards to communicate with, 493, 494.
  - Supervision and control of reserves, 685.
  - Tobacco, 233.
  - Trade and intercourse, 232, 233.
- Transportation of the Army.
  - Impressment, 230.
  - Officers, 492, 496, 534, 623.
  - Operation and management of railroads, 89-93, 209, 226-229.
  - Provisions in transitu to arsenals, etc., 77, 175.
  - Railroad, under control of Q. M.'s Dept., 77.
  - Regulations, 643, 644.
  - Remarks, Secretary of War, C. S., 339, 340.
  - Tax in kind, 449.
- Treason.
  - Habeas corpus act, 203, 204.
  - Remarks, Jefferson Davis, 67-70.

Treasury Department, C. S.

Condition, needs, etc., 941, 942, 1033, 1045, 1096.

Correspondence:

Allan, T., 841.

Bayne, T. L., 370, 589.

Bragg, B., 664.

Congress, C. S., 941, 962, 1026, 1033.

Davis, Jefferson, 901, 953, 1045.

Fariss, R. C., 602.

Georgia, Governor of, 416, 439, 442.

Hatch, F. H., 677.

Hatch, L. M., 664.

Johnson, H. V., 594.

North Carolina, Governor of, 177.

War Department, C. S., 177, 364, 465, 472, 587, 663, 678, 680, 975, 1028, 1029, 1032.

Details, 1101, 1106-1109.

Donations by citizens, 1128.

Measures for relief of, 1033, 1045.

Memminger, C. G., Secretary of the Treasury, 1184.

Principal officials, 1861-1865, 1184.

Regulations, foreign commerce, 187-189.

Regulations, overland commerce, 206, 207.

Trenholm, G. A., Secretary of the Treasury, 1184.

Treasury Notes. See Finance.Trenholm, George A.Correspondence. See Treasury Department, C. S.

Mentioned, 559, 567, 597, 616, 662, 663, 673, 674, 681, 719, 783, 784, 794-796, 899, 900, 951, 952, 981, 1017, 1027, 1028, 1072, 1096, 1128, 1132, 1151, 1152, 1155, 1156, 1169, 1184.

Secretary of the Treasury, C. S., 1184.

Trent, T. H., 285.Triplett, George W., 1190.Trippe, Robert P., 968, 1188.Trout, T. B.

Correspondence:

Guerin, H. C., 408.

Myers, F., 413, 414.

Rutland, J. M., 405.

Mentioned, 402-404, 407, 408, 410, 411, 413.

Trueheart, Daniel, 317.Tucker, Beverly, 85, 587.Tucker, Joseph W.

Authority to destroy enemy's property, 125, 239.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 125, 239.

Mentioned, 239.

Tucker, Julius G.

Authority to recruit Union prisoners of war, 1083.

Mentioned, 1029, 1030, 1083.

Tuggles, Dr., 396.Turnbull, William, 966.Turner, Josiah, jr., 1191.Turner, Thomas P.

Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1144.

Correspondence:

Adj't. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 1144.

Davis, Jefferson, 446.

Shinn, S. R., 1194.

Turney, Peter.

Correspondence, S. Jones, 1194.

Turpin, Archer.

Correspondence, Niter and Mining Bureau, C. S. A., 535.

Tuttle, D. K., 698, 702.Tyler, George.

Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 687.

Mentioned, 687.

Tyler, John, 1187.Union and Spartanburg Railroad.

Removal of iron, 969.

Upton, J. D.

Correspondence, J. N. Archer, 650.

Vaden, Thomas, jr., 659, 660.Vallandigham, Clement L., 638.Valley District.

Organization, strength, etc., of troops, June 30, 1864, 520.

Vance, Zebulon B.Correspondence. See North Carolina, Gov. of.

Mentioned, 23, 28, 98, 99, 358, 417, 432, 616, 655, 690-692, 735, 755, 820, 867, 932, 958, 979, 1055, 1056, 1114, 1156, 1187.

Van Dorn, Earl, 280.Vardenon, Parton, 395.Vaughn, John C., 697.Venable, A. W., 1186.Venable, C. W., 289.Vest, George G., 137, 1186, 1188, 1189, 1191.Veteran Soldiers' Home.

Act of C. S. Congress, 107.

Remarks, Jefferson Davis, 107, 108.

Vice-President, C. S.

Exemption from conscription, 179.

Vidocq, Eugene F., 787.Villéré, Charles J., 137, 1188, 1190.Virginia, C. S. S., 522.Virginia, Steamer, 957.Virginia.

Agricultural details, 1104.

Army records, 309, 310.

Camp guards, etc., in conscript service Sept. 9, 1864, 633.

Census statistics, 103.

Commissioner, habeas corpus act, 257.

Conference of impressment commissioners at Raleigh, N. C., 608.

Consolidation of organizations, 535, 572, 618, 677, 840.

Deficiency in results of conscription, 854-856, 858, 859.

Deserters returned to Army, 359, 1109.

Destitution of people, 285, 845-847.

Direction and control of conscription, 854-856.

Enforcement of conscription acts, 256, 268, 269, 376, 665-669, 722, 723, 845-847, 906-913.

Estimated percentage of white population furnished, 103.

Estimate of military resources, 97, 635.

Exhibits of conscripts enrolled, exempted, detailed, assigned, etc., 103, 359, 857, 1101-1109.

Exportation of cotton, 114, 531, 532.

Impressment of negroes, 40, 547, 548, 563, 564, 665, 669, 672, 745, 746, 851-853.

Iron furnaces, 832-835.

Jurisdiction and sovereignty over ancient boundaries, 466.

Liability of militia to conscription, 256.

Measures to provide supplies, 556-558, 605, 606, 611-613, 615, 624.

Members of C. S. Congress, 1187, 1189-1191.

Virginia—Continued.

- Men furnished, 98, 102, 103, 359, 654, 655, 857, 1101.
 Men subject to conscription, 1864, 103.
 Military affairs in. Remarks, Governor of Virginia, 905-926.
 Militia, 1039.
 Minute men, 202, 207.
 Operations in. See—
   James River. Campaign from the Rapidan to the, May 4—June 12, 1864.
   James River. Operations on the south side of the, May 4—June 2, 1864.
   Kilpatrick's Expedition against Richmond. Feb. 28—Mar. 4, 1864.
   Lynchburg Campaign. May 26—June 29, 1864.
   New Market. Engagement, May 15, 1864.
   Saltillo. Action, Oct. 2, 1864.
   Shenandoah Valley, Maryland, and Pennsylvania. Operations in, June 23—Aug. 3, 1864.
 Quota impressed slaves, 933.
 Remarks, schedules of prices. 538, 539, 544, 549-552, 559.
 Requisition for C. S. colored troops, 1166, 1169.
 Reserves, 424, 558, 559, 654, 655.
 Schedules of prices for provisions, etc., 54-57, 271-274, 389-392, 686, 982-986, 1169-1173.
 Secret societies, 802-820.
 Sinking fund, 531, 532.
 State officers exempted from conscription on certificate of Governor, 851.
Virginia, Adjutant-General of.
 Correspondence:
   Smith, F. H., 722.
   Virginia, Governor of, 722.
Virginia, Governor of.
 Authority over C. S. troops in Virginia, 1182.
 Conference of Governors at Augusta, Ga., 735, 736.
 Correspondence:
   Davis, Jefferson, 539, 671, 820, 1152, 1169.
   French, S. B., 557.
   Nicholls, F. T., 268.
   North Carolina, Governor of, 685.
   Virginia, Adjutant-General of, 722.
   War Dept., C. S., 102, 256, 611, 613, 615, 1182.
 Message to State Legislature, 905-926.
 Recommends formation of a State guard, 913, 926-928.
 Requisition for slave labor, 1138, 1139.
Virginia, Impressment Commissioners of.
 Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 54, 271, 389, 982, 1169.
Virginia, Secretary of State.
 Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 531, 532.
Virginia and Tennessee Railroad.
 Rolling-stock, 226.
Virginia Central Railroad.
 Connections and extensions, 226.
 Rolling-stock, 226.
Virginia Legislature.
 Assignment of R. E. Lee to command of Armies of Confederate States, 1030.
 Correspondence:
   Davis, Jefferson, 1030, 1035.
   War Department, C. S., 25, 41.
 Employment of negroes as soldiers, 1152.

Virginia Legislature—Continued.

- Impressment of slave labor, 1139-1143.
 Message of the Governor, 905-926.
 Release of slave labor on fortifications, 162.
 Resolutions, jurisdiction and sovereignty over ancient boundaries, 466.
 Restrictions on transportation of food supplies to Richmond and Petersburg, 1035.
 Withdrawal of slaves from within enemy's lines, 25-27, 41, 42.
Virginia Military Institute.
 Conscription, 722, 723.
Virginia Reserve Forces.
 Orders, Special, series 1864: No. 102, 723.
Virginia Troops (U.).
 Artillery, Light—Battalions: 1st, 618.
 Artillery, Light—Batteries: Botetourt, 858; Fluvanna, 857; Goochland, 857; Jackson's, 858; Levi's, 858; Lewis', 857; McComas, 857; Martin's, 857; Norfolk Blues, 857; Parker's, 809; Powhatan, 858; Richmond Howitzers (Companies), 1st, 2d, 3d, 857; Rockbridge, 857; Southside, 857.
 Artillery, Light—Regiments: 1st, 618.
 Cavalry—Battalions: 13th Reserves, 1182; 27th, 535, 858; 34th, 858; 35th, 840.
 Cavalry—Regiments: 1st, 572, 858; 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 21st, 22d, 23d, 24th, 858; 25th, 535.
 Infantry—Battalions: 1st, 857; 2d (Local Defense), 618; 3d (Local Defense), 677; 6th (Local Defense), 618; 22d, 23d, 857; 30th (Sharpshooters), 857.
 Infantry—Regiments: 1st, 2d, 857; 2d (Local Defense), 618; 3d, 857; 3d (Local Defense), 677, 972; 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 857; 15th, 610, 857; 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 857; 19th (Militia), 913; 21st, 857; 22d, 811, 857; 23d, 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th, 28th, 29th, 30th, 31st, 32d, 33d, 34th, 36th, 37th, 38th, 40th, 41st, 42d, 44th, 45th, 46th, 47th, 48th, 49th, 50th, 51st, 52d, 53d, 857; 54th, 807, 811, 857; 55th, 56th, 57th, 58th, 59th, 60th, 857.
 Miscellaneous: Military Institute Cadets, 922.
Voss, Zilman, 543.
Vulture, Steamer, 957.
Wade, James, 289, 290.
Wagner, L. D., Brig, 1058.
Wagner, William F., 94.
Walker, Henry H., 665.
Walker, J. J., 37, 90.
Walker, Leroy P.
 Mentioned, 1184.
 Secretary of War, C. S., 1184.
Walker, N. B.
 Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 21.
Walker, Norman S.
 Correspondence, Q. M. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 295.
 Mentioned, 783, 902, 1117.
Walker, R. Lindsay.
 Correspondence:
   McIntosh, D. G., 546.
   Pendleton, W. N., 546.

Walker, Richard W., 1185, 1189.

Walker, W. L., 972.

Wall, H. C., 171.

Wall, P. G.

Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 47.

Waller, Richard P.

Correspondence:

McRae, C. J., 156.

Q. M. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 211, 288, 351, 674.

Mentioned, 154-156, 210, 241, 297, 302, 527, 673, 674, 683, 716.

Wallis, John S., 1072.

Walter, H. W.

Correspondence:

Bragg, B., 393.

Watson, J. W. C., 976.

Walthall, Junius L.

Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 752.

Mentioned, 322.

Wang, Mr., 508, 514.

Ward, George T., 1185.

Ward, James E., 6, 7, 525.

Ward, William C.

Correspondence, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 752.

Ward, William H., 1058.

War Department, C. S.

Additional legislation for increasing Army urged, 58, 59.

Auxiliary bureaus in Trans-Mississippi Department, 193, 194, 233.

Benjamin, J. P., Secretary of War, 1184.

Breckinridge, J. C., Secretary of War, 1183, 1184.

Campbell, J. A., Asst. Secretary of War, 1183.

Condition, needs, etc., 975, 1064, 1071, 1073-1076, 1084-1096, 1124, 1136, 1137.

Controversy with Post-Office Department, C. S., 52, 53, 70-74, 121-126.

Correspondence:

Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A., 52, 167, 269, 277, 278, 317, 318, 323, 353, 387, 388, 394, 430, 506, 510, 542, 558, 559, 578, 626, 694, 714, 731, 740, 747, 754, 836, 838, 840, 882, 883, 986, 992, 993, 995, 1012, 1029, 1030, 1061, 1081, 1159, 1174.

Alabama, Governor of, 3, 34, 37, 463, 466, 472, 476, 477, 574, 618, 820, 821.

Attorney-General's Office, C. S., 318, 875, 876.

Baldwin, J. B., 547, 563, 846.

Baxter, S. S., 376, 378.

Baylor, J. R., 960, 1035.

Bayne, T. L., 155, 167, 240, 301, 365, 370, 417, 423, 565, 574, 778, 1071.

Beauregard, G. T., 240, 563.

Bennett, J. M., 531, 532.

Blackburn, J. C. S., 212.

Blackman, H., 575.

Bloodgood, M. H., 702.

Bocock, N. F., 814.

Bocock, T. S., 285.

Boteler, A. R., 257.

Boyle, C., 604, 605, 624.

Bragg, B., 312, 353, 354, 729.

Bragg, T., 210, 213, 238, 256, 267, 274, 284.

Brandon, W. L., 645, 821, 902, 965.

War Department, C. S.—Continued.

Correspondence:

Breckinridge, J. C., 240, 863.

Briggs, E. B., 846.

Browne, W. M., 530.

Bureau of Conscription, C. S. A., 95, 197, 224, 245, 256, 354, 386, 464, 515, 579, 600, 610, 630, 668, 731, 737, 742, 744, 751, 755, 780, 785, 846, 850, 851, 858, 866, 882, 943, 947, 979, 998, 1018, 1048, 1099, 1112, 1119.

Burgwyn, H. K., 616.

Burwell, W. M., 226.

Campbell, J. A., 262, 287, 377, 378, 547, 615, 704, 740, 755, 903, 1005, 1065, 1066, 1120, 1124.

Carrington, I. H., 810, 812, 816, 864.

Chapman, A., 771.

Chesnut, J., jr., 645, 711, 712.

Chilton, W. P., 53, 415.

Clark, W. W., 105.

Clopton, D., 58.

Cobb, H., 13, 31, 33, 42, 48, 74, 113, 371, 439, 440, 457, 462, 463, 477, 478, 502, 516, 538, 542, 543, 550, 644, 745, 748, 822, 964, 981, 991, 1009, 1030, 1048.

Congress, C. S., 104.

Courtney, T. E., 202.

Curry, J. L. M., 212.

Davis, Jefferson, 1, 6, 13, 14, 32, 49, 52, 197, 247, 276-278, 322-324, 393, 430, 457, 501, 539, 545, 550-552, 565, 581, 602, 610, 634, 677, 714, 717, 718, 724, 756, 802, 816, 824, 836-838, 850, 851, 902, 928, 943, 961, 965, 971, 992, 995, 996, 1014, 1045, 1070, 1082, 1094, 1095, 1099, 1112, 1136.

Dawson, T. H., 575.

Denegre, J., 565.

Dickinson, J. S., 994.

Dortch, W. T., 966.

Echols, J., 805, 812.

Engineer Department, C. S. A., 40, 312, 392, 576, 668, 742, 778, 839, 970, 980, 1007, 1019, 1020, 1058, 1084, 1114, 1117.

Estelle, W. N., 257.

Fariss, R. C., 603.

Florida, Governor of, 14, 45, 111, 499, 560.

Forbes, J. M., 257.

Gartrell, L. J., 105, 196.

Georgia, Governor of, 25, 61, 164, 174, 243, 276, 545, 550, 612.

Georgia, Q. M. General of, 64, 152, 167.

Goode, J., jr., 544.

Hamilton, P., 212, 243, 267.

Hartridge, J., 105.

Hennen, W. D., 211, 865.

Hill, B. H., 105, 621.

Hilton, R. B., 1007.

Holmes, T. H., 645.

Howenton, S. E., 524.

Hunter, A., 445.

Ingram, P., 105.

Iverson, A., 575.

Johnson, H. V., 105, 621, 662.

Johnston, H. H., 212.

Johnston, J. E., 240.

Johnston, W., 968.

Jones, S., 601, 669, 694.

Kay, J. C., 210.

Kean, R. G. H., 448.

War Department, C. S.—Continued.

Correspondence:

- Kemper, J. L., 645, 846, 997.
 Lee, R. E., 45, 84, 154, 158, 202, 207, 245, 246, 253–255, 261, 604, 660, 822, 824, 1029, 1081, 1121, 1136, 1143, 1175.
 Lee, S. D., 513, 517.
 Leory, H. J., 805, 806, 812.
 Lewis, D. W., 105.
 Longstreet, J., 240.
 Louisiana, Governor of, 93, 514.
 McCulloh, R. S., 37.
 McGill, T., 806, 810, 816.
 McRae, C. J., 6, 154, 155, 525, 566, 702.
 Maury, D. H., 239.
 Meem, G. S., 847.
 Mississippi, Gov. of, 172, 446, 450, 590, 591, 602.
 Mustian, J. L., 575.
 "Native Georgian," 693.
 Navy Department, C. S., 174, 581.
 Nisbet, E. A., 225.
 Nitier and Mining Bureau, C. S. A., 34, 589, 695, 742, 835, 981, 1164.
 Noland, B. P., 261, 287.
 Nölting, A. W., 559.
 North Carolina, Governor of, 2, 4, 10, 23, 28, 42, 113, 153, 154, 169, 176, 184, 197, 201, 213, 285, 307, 318, 375, 416, 425, 580, 555, 671, 958, 1063, 1118, 1156.
 Ordnance Department, C. S. A., 18, 46, 83, 167, 448, 589, 703, 704, 733, 742, 986, 1054, 1071.
 Ould, R., 336, 742.
 Parker, S. H., 531, 532.
 Paxton, A. M., 282.
 Pemberton, J. C., 747.
 Pickett, G. E., 240.
 Polk, L., 10, 240, 258, 266, 294.
 Post-Office Department, C. S., 52, 70, 121, 124, 126, 574, 657, 661.
 Preston, J. T. L., 1093.
 Quartermaster-General's Office, C. S. A., 17, 18, 65, 91, 227, 258, 292, 293, 499, 500, 556, 557, 589, 599, 617, 618, 626, 672, 690, 716, 726, 741, 800, 974, 1053, 1078, 1086.
 Ruffin, F. G., 84, 283, 899, 941.
 Shepherd, V. E., 864.
 Sims, F. W., 91, 184.
 Smith, E. K., 76, 231.
 Smith, W. E., 1006.
 Smith, W. N. H., 614, 642.
 South Carolina, Adj. and Insp. Gen. of, 1004.
 South Carolina, Governor of, 33, 39, 51, 77, 161, 166, 185, 205, 404, 465, 513.
 State Department, C. S., 625
 Strickland, H., 105.
 Subsistence Department, C. S. A., 46, 91, 106, 107, 379, 402–404, 477, 533, 535, 549, 589, 603, 615, 687, 688, 719, 720, 730, 742, 785, 930, 974, 1027, 1032, 1064, 1076, 1136, 1137.
 Surgeon-General's Office, C. S. A., 23, 589, 719, 742, 1073, 1111.
 Taylor, R., 688, 718, 735, 1078.
 Treasury Department, C. S., 177, 364, 465, 472, 587, 663, 678, 680, 975, 1028, 1029, 1032.
 Tucker, J. W., 125, 239.
 Tyler, G., 687.
 Virginia, Gov. of, 162, 256, 611, 613, 615, 1182.

War Department, C. S.—Continued.

Correspondence:

- Virginia, Impressment Commissioners of, 54, 271, 389, 982, 1169.
 Virginia, Secretary of State, 531, 532.
 Virginia Legislature, 25, 41.
 Whiting, W. H. C., 556, 604.
 Williams, J. B., 806, 810, 816.
 Winder, J. H., 377.
 Withers, J. M., 645, 848, 881, 1060, 1064.
 Wright, M. J., 694.
 Young, B. H., 491.
 Details of employes, 305, 336, 337.
 Direction and control of impressed negroes, 898.
 Establishment, organization, etc., 943, 944.
 Estimates of appropriations, 771–779.
 Exportation of cotton from North Carolina, 4, 10, 28, 29, 113, 114, 153, 154, 169, 184, 213.
 Impressment of supplies in North Carolina, 2, 3.
 Impressment regulations, 644, 645.
 Kean, R. G. H., Chief of Bureau of War, 1183.
 Official correspondence, 171, 720, 721, 1152.
 Operations, 1864, 324–344, 756–771.
 Orders, Circulars, series 1865: Feb. 7, 1064.
 Principal officials, 1183, 1184.
 Purchase U. S. currency, 741, 742.
 Randolph, G. W., Secretary of War, 1184.
 Regulations, foreign commerce, 187–189, 305–307.
 Regulations, overland commerce, 206, 207, 305–307.
 Remarks, Secretary of War, writ of habeas corpus, 198.
 Requisitions on the Treasury, 1861–1865, 1094.
 Seddon, J. A., Secretary of War, 1183, 1184.
 Smith, G. W., Secretary of War, 1184.
 Walker, L. P., Secretary of War, 1184.
 Waring, J. Fred., 537.
 Warren, William F., 726.
 Wartmann, William McK.
 Correspondence, J. B. Baldwin, 845.
 Washington, George, 1008.
 Watkins, W. W., 1185.
 Watson, Hugh P., 101.
 Watson, John W. C.
 Correspondence:
 Davis, Jefferson, 1125.
 Walter, H. W., 976.
 Mentioned, 172, 173, 904, 1189.
 Watts, L. G., 567.
 Watts, Thomas H.
 Attorney-General, C. S., 1184.
 Correspondence. See Alabama, Governor of.
 Mentioned, 34, 101, 224, 276, 299, 323, 432, 463, 477, 478, 557, 655, 656, 735, 752, 754, 817, 819, 820, 848, 849, 1077, 1184.
 Waul, Thomas N., 1186.
 Wayne, Henry C., 1180.
 Webb, Lewis N., 726.
 Webb, Thomas.
 Correspondence, P. Mallett, 599.
 Weir & Co., 583.
 Weisiger, O. F., 725.
 Weisiger, W. W., 725.
 Weller, John B., 638.
 Wellford, Beverly R., jr.
 Correspondence. See War Department, C. S.
 Wellford, Philip A.
 Correspondence, Subsistence Dept., C. S. A., 1113.

- Welsh, Israel, 137, 1188, 1190.
 West, A. A., 397.
 West, Doctor M., 311.
 West, Fred. H.
   Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 825, 826.
 West, James F., 726.
 Westcott, James D., 19, 20.
 Western Virginia and East Tennessee, Dept. of.
   Organization, strength, etc., of troops:
     Aug. 1, 1864, 520.
     Nov. 10, 1864, 989.
     Feb. 28, 1865, 1182.
 Wheeler, Mr., 444.
 Wheeler, Joseph.
   Mentioned, 967, 968, 989.
   Organization, strength, etc., of command:
     Jan. 2, 1865, 989.
     Apr. 7, 1865, 1182.
 Whitaker, Daniel K., 985, 1173.
 White, B. S.
   Correspondence, S. S. Harris, 650.
 White, Daniel P., 1186.
 White, Granville, 1180.
 White, John.
   Correspondence, Gov. of North Carolina, 1117.
 White, John J., 19.
 White, P. W.
   Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 18, 19.
   Mentioned, 16, 46, 730.
 White, Robert, 311.
 Whitehead, Archer, 311.
 Whitfield, Robert H., 1191.
 Whitfield, Humphries & Sherman, 790.
 Whiting, William H. C.
   Correspondence:
     North Carolina, Governor of, 428, 685.
     War Department, C. S., 556, 604.
   Mentioned, 28, 29, 262, 375, 426, 428, 530, 755.
 Whitner, B. Frank.
   Correspondence, Governor of Florida, 21.
 Whitner, John C.
   Correspondence, H. Cobb, 1016.
   Mentioned, 1015, 1016.
 Whitworth, B., & Bro., 157.
 Wickham, Williams C., 1191.
 Widgeon, Isaac, 19-21.
 Wigfall, Francis H., 1080, 1081.
 Wigfall, Louis T., 137, 1186, 1187, 1190.
 Wilcox, John A., 1189.
 Wilderness, Va.
   Battle, May 5-7, 1864, 756, 757.
 Wild Rover, Steamer, 900, 957.
 Wilkes, Peter S., 1191.
 Wilkinson, J. R., 972.
 Wilkinson, John, 1058.
 Wilkinson, U. B.
   Correspondence, Q. M. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 748.
 Willard, J. A.
   Correspondence, R. F. Pinkney, 1056.
   Mentioned, 1081, 1082.
 Willcoxon, John B., 311.
 William Bell, Pilot-boat, 1057.
 Williams, Mr., 807.
 Williams, C.
   Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 581.
   Mentioned, 580.
   Plan for destruction of enemy's vessels, 581-583.
 Williams, John B.
   Correspondence, War Dept., C. S., 806, 810, 816.
 Williams, P. M., 543.
 Williams, Thomas G.
   Correspondence, Subsistence Dept., C. S. A., 1136.
   See also Subsistence Department, C. S. A.
 Williams, W. R., 840.
 Williamson, J. A., 543.
 Will-o'-the-Wisp, Steamer, 739.
 Wilmington, Charlotte and Rutherford Railroad.
   Removal of iron, 570, 571.
 Wilmington and Manchester Railroad.
   Construction, etc., for military purposes, 570, 571.
 Wilson, James H., 757.
 Wilson, W. R., 17.
 Wilson, William A., 311.
 Wilson, William S., 1186.
 Winder, John H.
   Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 377.
   Mentioned, 388, 448, 1001-1003.
 Wise, Frank, 972.
 Wise, Henry A., 857.
 Withers, John, 171.
 Withers, Jones M.
   Correspondence:
     Adjutant and Inspector General's Office,
       C. S. A., 517, 753, 817.
     Alabama, Governor of, 817.
     Arrington, J. N., 1042.
     Baldwin, M. A., 1043.
     Davis, Jefferson, 538.
     Lockhart, H. C., 819, 880, 1059, 1062.
     Maury, D. H., 753.
     War Department, C. S., 645, 848, 881, 1060, 1064.
   Mentioned, 464, 472, 752, 754, 819, 820, 880-883, 1044,
     1062, 1065.
 Withers, Thomas J., 1186.
 Witherspoon, J. K., 413.
 Witherspoon, James H., 1191.
 Wood, James, 395, 396.
 Wood, John Taylor, 901, 1057.
 Wood, William D., 726.
 Wragg, George.
   Correspondence. See Harrison C. Lockhart.
 Wren, William, 446.
 Wright, Ambrose R.
   Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 825, 826.
   Mentioned, 825.
 Wright, Augustus R., 1185, 1188.
 Wright, Gilbert J., 536, 537.
 Wright, Henry G., 311.
 Wright, John V., 1189, 1191.
 Wright, Marcus J.
   Correspondence:
     Adj. and Insp. Gen.'s Office, C. S. A., 537.
     War Department, C. S., 694.
   Mentioned, 694, 706, 707.
 Wright, Uriel.
   Correspondence, Jefferson Davis, 580.
 Wright, William B., 1189.
 Writ of Habeas Corpus.
   Act of C. S. Congress, Feb. 15, 1864, 203, 204.
   Commissioner for:
     Army of Tennessee (C.), 211, 212.
     Department of East Tennessee, 211, 212.
     District of the Gulf, 211, 212, 243.
     Georgia, 225.

Writ of Habeas Corpus—Continued.

- Commissioner for:
  - Mississippi, 257.
  - North Carolina, 210, 213, 238.
  - Virginia, 257.
- Commissioners to investigate cases, 204.
- Conspiracies, 203, 204.
- Constitutionality of act, 213, 214, 238.
- Correspondence with enemy, 203, 204.
- Defined, 231, 232.
- Deserters, 203, 204.
- Destruction of public property, 204.
- Discharge of conscripts, 659-661.
- Enforcement in North Carolina, 104, 256, 267, 268, 274, 275, 284, 556.
- Inciting servile insurrection, 203.
- Limitations, 203.
- Message of Jefferson Davis, 429, 430.
- Pay of commissioners, 493.
- Powers, etc., of commissioners, 493.
- Regulations, 204, 205.
- Remarks:
  - Davis, Jeff., 69, 70, 200, 201, 429, 430, 1133, 1134.
  - Georgia, Governor of, 374.
  - Secretary of War, C. S., 198.
  - Stephens, A. H., 279.

Writ of Habeas Corpus—Continued.

- Resolutions Georgia Legislature, 234, 235.
- Spies, 203, 204.
- Trans-Mississippi Department, 232.
- Treason, 203, 204.
- Yancey, William L., 1187.
- Yarborough, Christopher C., 311.
- Yeiser, James G., 311.
- Velverton, G. T.
  - Correspondence, M. A. Baldwin, 1044.
  - Mentioned, 1043.
- Yniestra, Brunaugh F., 322.
- Yong, M.
  - Authority to recruit C. S. colored troops, 1194.
  - Correspondence, S. Jones, 1194.
- Yonge, C. C., 18.
- York, Zebulon.
  - Correspondence, R. E. Lee, 1029.
  - Mentioned, 825, 1029.
- Young, Andrew, 822.
- Young, Bennett H.
  - Authority to enlist company for special service, 491.
  - Correspondence, War Department, C. S., 491.
  - Mentioned, 491.
- Young, Pierce M. B., 537.

3 5282 00412 8263

✓ 3 5282 00412 8263

